Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many abortions have been performed in (a) Great Britain and (b) Essex under the Abortion Act 1967 as amended by section 37 of the Human Fertilisation and Embryology Act 1990; how many and what percentage of such abortions were performed (i) to save the life of the mother, and (ii) where the child would have been seriously handicapped. [64208]

Caroline Flint: The number of abortions performed in England and Wales on residents of England and Wales in the 37 years, 1968 to 2004 was 5.10 million. Of these 23,598 (0.5 per cent.) were performed under sections 1(l) (c) and 1(4) of the Abortion Act 1967. These are cases where the continuance of the pregnancy would involve risk to the life of the pregnant woman, greater than if the pregnancy were terminated, or where the termination is immediately necessary to save the life or to prevent grave permanent injury to the physical or mental health of the pregnant woman. 66,374 abortions (1.4 per cent. of the total) were performed under section l(l) (d) ; that there is a substantial risk that if the child were born it would suffer from such physical or mental abnormalities as to be seriously handicapped.

Due to boundary changes, it is not possible to give the total number of abortions performed in Essex in the years 1968 to 2004.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether it is her policy to promote (a) abortion and (b) the morning-after pill as a way to reduce the rate of teenage pregnancies; and if she will make a statement. [64016]

Caroline Flint: The teenage pregnancy strategy aims to help young people delay early sex through improved sex and relationships education and support for parents in discussing relationship and sexual health issues with their children. However, it is very important that teenagers who are sexually active have access to contraception, including emergency contraception, and sexual health advice to minimise the risk of pregnancy or sexually transmitted infections.

Health professionals provide contraception and advice on abortion to young people within an established legal framework which involves assessing the young person's competence to understand the choices they are making and encouraging them to talk to their parents.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent assessment she has made of the impact of the morning-after pill on the overall abortion rate in England; and if she will make a statement. [64017]

Caroline Flint: We are not aware of any studies which have been able to predict the effect the availability of emergency contraception through pharmacies or the national health service has on unintended pregnancy rates or abortions.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which organisations in the field of reproductive health are funded by her Department; how much her Department plans to give to each organisation in the next two years; whether account is taken of an organisation's position on abortion when allocating public funds; and if she will make a statement. [64368]

Caroline Flint: The Department funds the Family Planning Association and Brook. The Department will confirm their funding for the next two financial years shortly. When allocating funding account is taken of the extent to which organisations work to further the Department's health and social care objectives, including those for sexual and reproductive health.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the operation of statutory instruments (a) 1976/15 and (b) 1980/1724. [64369]

Caroline Flint: The statutory instruments 1976/15 and 1980/1724 were revoked and replaced by the Abortion Regulations 1991.

Administration Spending

Dr. Pugh: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what average percentage of budget acute trusts spent on administration in 2004–05. [34202]

Jane Kennedy: In 2004–05 expenditure on administration by all national health service trusts in England as a percentage of total income was 7 per cent.

Animal Insulin

Jessica Morden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps have been taken to ensure the availability of animal insulin in light of the announcement by Novo Nordisk that they intend to discontinue supply. [61895]

Jane Kennedy: The other supplier of animal insulin to the United Kingdom, Wockhardt UK, has assured the Department of its commitment to continue the supply of its products. It has also given assurance that it will be able to meet any increased demand when Novo Nordisk's products are no longer available.

Audiology

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what (a) the three-month vacancy rate and (b) the three-month vacancy number was for audiologists (i) in England and (ii) in each hospital trust in March 2006; and if she will make a statement. [62626]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 18 April 2006]: The results from the 2006 vacancy survey have yet to be published. The latest published three-month vacancy rate for audiologists in England and in each hospital trust in March 2005 is available in the Library.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many qualified audiologists were employed (a) in England and (b) in each hospital trust in September 2005; and if she will make a statement. [62627]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 18 April 2006]: The results from the September 2005 census will be published on the 24 April 2006.

Data on the number of qualified audiology staff in post in England and in each hospital trust as at September 2004 has been placed in the Library.

Cancer Treatment (Children)

Mr. Vaizey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment her Department has made of the effect of the EU Clinical Trials Directive, and implementing UK legislation, on the development of treatments for children with cancer. [57783]

Jane Kennedy: The directive acknowledges the need for clinical trials involving children to improve the treatments available to them. In conjunction with the aims of the directive to protect trial subjects, particular emphasis is laid on the issue of informed consent for trials involving minors. The Government are committed to making an assessment of the effects of implementation of the directive as soon as reliable evidence is available. The Medicines and Health products Regulatory Agency, which acts as the licensing authority for all clinical trials within the directive's scope, has asked the United Kingdom clinical research collaboration to review the evidence to date, consider how to reduce any adverse regulatory impact, including the perceived extra bureaucracy involved, and agree plans for long-term monitoring. Additionally, Cancer Research UK and the national clinical research network have undertaken initial assessments of opinion about the effect of the directive on cancer clinical trials across the UK. Other assessments are being carried out at the European level with the Federation of European Cancer Societies.

Care Homes

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether she plans to introduce regulations obliging (a) general practitioners and (b) other health workers commissioned by a primary care trust who also have an equity interest in care homes to disclose those details to the trust. [48182]

Jane Kennedy: There are no present plans to make regulations on this matter.

Chronic Hepatitis B

Joan Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what funding has been made available for research into the hepatitis B virus. [60235]

Jane Kennedy: The main agency through which the Government support medical and clinical research is the Medical Research Council (MRC). The MRC is an independent body funded by the Department of Trade and Industry via the Office of Science and Technology.

Expenditure by the MRC on research directly concerned with hepatitis B infection has been as follows:

£ million

	Amount
2001–02	1
2003–04[1]	1.2

[1] Information in respect of later years is not yet available.

The research undertaken by the MRC on hepatitis generally and hepatitis C may also be of relevance.

The Department funds research to support policy and to provide the evidence needed to underpin quality improvement and service development in the national health service. The Department's national research programme spend since 2001 on projects related to hepatitis B has been £81,000.

Over 75 per cent. of the Department's total expenditure on health research is devolved to and managed by NHS organisations. Details of individual projects, including a number concerned with hepatitis B infection, can be found on the national research register on the Department's website at www.dh.gov.uk/research.

Clinical Standards for Food, Fluid and Nutritional Care

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she will publish NHS draft clinical standards for food, fluid and nutritional care for public consultation. [64271]

Caroline Flint: 'Standards for Better Health', the national standards for the national health service published in July 2004, includes the following core standard.

C15. Where food is provided, health care organisations have systems in place to ensure that patients are provided with a choice and that it is prepared safely and provides a balanced diet; and patients' individual nutritional, personal and clinical dietary requirements are met, including any necessary help with feeding and access to food 24 hours a day.

The draft of 'Standards for Better Health' was publicly consulted on from February to May 2004.

Clinical Trials

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) males and (b) females took part in clinical trials in each year since 1996, broken down by health authority. [60848]

Jane Kennedy: The information requested is not held centrally at present. The Government's new national health research strategy "Best Research for Best Health", published on 25 January 2006, included plans to strengthen the information systems that support health research.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what legislation governs clinical trials in hospitals in England and Wales; and if she will make a statement. [60927]

Jane Kennedy: The legislation that governs clinical trials of drugs is the Medicines for Human Use (Clinical Trials) Regulations 2004. The Medical Device Regulations 2002 govern the trials of medical devices. These regulations apply to trials conducted in hospitals as well as to trials conducted in units attached to hospitals or elsewhere. One requirement of the regulations governing clinical trials is that anyone conducting a trial does it in accordance with the conditions and principles of good clinical practice.

The Research Governance Framework for Health and Social Care (Department of Health, 2005) applies the same principles across all health and social care research which relate to the responsibilities of the Secretary of State for Health. A core standard for health care organisations is that they have systems to ensure the principles and requirements of this framework are consistently applied. National health service bodies have to take this standard into account in discharging their duty, under the Health and Social Care (Community Health and Standards) Act 2003, to put and keep in place arrangements for the purpose of monitoring and improving the quality of health care.

The clinical negligence scheme for trusts is a scheme established under the National Health Service and Community Care Act 1990 for meeting losses and liabilities of health service bodies in England and Wales. Health Service Guidelines HSG(96)48 set out the scope of NHS Indemnity, which includes the liability of NHS bodies for negligent harm to subjects of clinical research.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the hospitals in England in which clinical trials take place; and if she will make a statement. [60930]

Jane Kennedy: Clinical trials take place at all national health service hospital trusts in England with the exception of Calderstones NHS Trust.

The information requested is collected on a trust basis and not by individual hospital.

Colonoscopy

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what her Department's target waiting time is for an urgent colonoscopy. [48912]

Jane Kennedy [holding answer 7 February 2006]: There are no specific waiting time targets for urgent colonoscopies. However, where a patient needs an urgent colonoscopy following urgent referral by their general practitioner for suspected cancer, the whole patient pathway from referral to commencing treatment should not exceed 62 days.

Outside of the cancer pathway, by 2008, there will be a maximum 18-week pathway from referral to treatment. This will include time spent waiting for diagnostic tests.

Dentistry

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) adults and (b) children were registered with an NHS dentist in West Chelmsford constituency in 1997. [63321]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The number of adults and children registered with a national health service dentist in West Chelmsford Constituency as at 31 December 1997 is shown in the table.

	Number
Children	21,086
Adults	62,889
Total	83,975

Departmental Policies

Emily Thornberry: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will set out, with statistical information relating as directly as possible to Islington, South and Finsbury constituency, the effects on Islington, South and Finsbury of her Department's policies and actions since 2 May 1997. [60732]

Jane Kennedy: The Government have put in place a programme of national health service investment and reform since 1997 to improve service delivery in all parts of the United Kingdom. There is significant evidence that these policies have yielded considerable benefits for the Islington South and Finsbury areas.

For example:

At the end of January 2006, the number of people waiting more than six months for in-patient treatment within Islington Primary Care Trust (PCT) has fallen to zero from 479 in June 2002.

At the end of December 2005, the number of patients waiting over 13 weeks for out-patient treatment within Islington PCT has fallen to one from 1,413 in June 2002.

Figures for December 2005 show that all patients within Islington PCT were able to be offered an appointment with a general practitioner within two working days, an improvement from 69.7 per cent. in June 2002.

Islington PCT's financial allocation increased to £299 million for 2005–06, a real terms increase of 6.9 per cent. By 2007–08, the PCT's financial allocation will increase to £363.9 million.

Between September 1997 and June 2005, the number of consultants at Great Ormond Street Hospital for Children NHS Trust has increased from 137 to 224. The number of nurses increased from 784 in September 1997 to 1,101 in September 2004.

In the Islington local authority area, death rates from coronary heart disease per 100,000 in 1997 165.5 in 2004 154.1.

Five primary care premises in Islington have been identified for redevelopment through the Islington and Camden Local Improvement Finance Trust (LIFT) scheme. Islington and Camden was chosen as one of the first LIFT sites in the country because of the high health needs among the local people and because of the poor state of many primary care premises. The first two schemes have now achieved full business case approval and work has started on site. This provides a unique opportunity to develop 21st century primary care premises in Islington and Camden both immediately and in the future.

Electricity Pylons

Willie Rennie: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment her Department has made of the possible health risks to (a) children, (b) the elderly and (c) those who have suffered cancer of residing near electricity pylons. [63405]

Caroline Flint: The Health Protection Agency's (HPA) radiation protection division has the responsibility for providing advice on exposure to electromagnetic fields (EMF). As part of its policy of ongoing evaluation of scientific evidence it reviewed its advice in 2004 on limiting exposure to EMF including that from electric and magnetic fields from power lines (extremely low frequency or ELF). The currently adopted restrictions on exposure are designed to prevent adverse health effects for members of the public of all ages and of varying health status. The HPA's advice is available on its website at www.hpa.org.uk/radiation

At the request of the Department, the HPA's radiation protection division addressed the issues of uncertainty in the science and aspects of precaution. The HPA's advice noted that an association between prolonged exposures to power frequency fields and childhood leukaemia has been found, the scientific reasons for which are presently uncertain. In the light of these findings and the requirement for additional research the HPA proposed that

> "the need for further precautionary measures should be considered by Government"

In response, the stakeholder advisory group on ELF EMF (SAGE) was set up to explore the implications for a precautionary approach and make practical recommendations for precautionary measures. SAGE is currently developing its advice and is expected to report later this year. Details of this process can be found on RK Partnership's website at: www.rkpartnership.co.uk/sage

Health Care (Patient Control)

Mr. Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research her Department has commissioned on the relationship between the amount of control the individual patient has over his or her healthcare and the efficacy of that care. [58923]

Jane Kennedy: The Department funds research to support policy and to provide the evidence needed to underpin quality improvement and service development in the national health service and through its service delivery and organisation and health technology assessment programmes, has funded a number of projects of relevance to the hon. Member's question. These include:

A study of patients' and carers' views and choices in their use of primary care services;

A scoping exercise to identify the extent and nature of both current NHS policy and the literature concerned with patient choice and the organisation and delivery of health services;

A randomised controlled trial to assess the impact of a package comprising a patient-orientated, evidence-based self-help guidebook and patient-centred consultations on disease management and satisfaction in inflammatory bowel disease;

A systematic review and economic evaluation of the clinical and cost-effectiveness of patient education models for diabetes; and

A multicentre randomised controlled trial assessing the costs and benefits of using structured information and analysis of women's preferences in the management of menorrhagia.

Health Services (Gloucestershire)

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the proposed reductions in health services in Gloucestershire. [63778]

Caroline Flint [holding answer 18 April 2006]: It is the responsibility of the primary care trusts (PCTs) in Gloucestershire to commission the necessary national health service for the treatment and care of their local populations. Local PCTs have the local knowledge and expertise to plan and review services as necessary, and it is not appropriate for my Department to intervene.

The NHS is in receipt of record increases in resources. Funding of the NHS has increased from £34.7 billion in 1997–98 to £69.7 billion in 2004–05. By 2007–08 spending on the NHS will have increased to over £97 billion. With this level of investment all NHS bodies should be able to plan and achieve financial balance every year. However, NHS organisations need to continue to look at the way they provide services to ensure that they are delivering the best possible value for money. In some areas, they will need to make tough decisions to ensure funding is used in the best possible way.

Hospitals (Targets)

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps she is taking to help hospitals failing to meet the Government's targets for (a) cancer, (b) MRSA infections and (c) waiting times. [32767]

Jane Kennedy: The NHS Cancer Plan sets out the Government's plans to reduce waiting times for diagnosis and treatment. A target of a maximum two-month wait from urgent general practitioner referral to first treatment for all cancer patients was put into place at the end of December 2005 and should be met for all cancer patients treated from 1 January 2006.

The quarter's data, for the period January to March 2006, will be used to assess performance against this target and will be available in June 2006. The 62-day target is challenging but has been achieved for breast cancer and for other cancers in other parts of the country. The national health service is working hard to ensure that this target will shortly be met for all cancer patients.

The national cancer waits project team are working with those trusts and health authorities who are finding it challenging to understand the pathways their patients experience, and who need to improve their services to deliver these targets. This work will continue until we are sure that the changes they are making are delivering, and are sustainable.

We have also made guidance available to cancer networks, trusts and clinical teams on the 10 "High Impact Changes" that will most help them to deliver cancer waiting times and improve the patients' experience and we are sharing examples of best practice.

We have set up a methicillin-resistant Staphylococcus aureus (MRSA) improvement programme, with specialist teams providing tailored support for trusts that have significant challenge in meeting their target and are monitoring the trusts' performance. Work has begun with three trusts that were first to volunteer to pilot the support programme; Sandwell and West Birmingham, Northumbria, and Aintree NHS Trusts. These teams, which comprise a programme manager, analyst and specialists in infection control, will move on to support up to 17 further trusts during 2006–07. Selection will depend on progress towards the MRSA target and other factors. I will announce the additional trusts to join the programme at stages, during 2006.

The NHS now has an operating standard of six months for inpatient treatment. At the end of February 2006, less than 100 NHS patients were waiting more than six months for treatment. The Healthcare Commission is responsible for assessing NHS organisations against these standards annually and the Department will continue to scrutinise performance on waiting times, taking action through strategic health authorities if issues arise in relation to waiting times for patients.

Malignant Disease

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the contribution of (a) environmental factors and (b) longevity to the incidence of malignant disease; and if she will make a statement. [62162]

Caroline Flint: There are many different types of cancer, the causes of which are multifactorial rather than there being a single cause for any particular type of cancer, and this should be recognised. It is known that lifestyle factors such as smoking, consumption of alcoholic beverages, physical activity/obesity, and also occupational exposure to certain chemicals in the past, especially asbestos, have a major influence on cancer incidence. It is very difficult to estimate the burden due to environmental factors but some of the available data is summarised as follows.

Exposure to ionizing radiation is known to produce leukaemia and other cancers, although there is little direct data available on the burden of disease from this cause. Exposure to radon, a naturally occurring radioactive gas, is a cause of lung cancer and there is a markedly increased risk in smokers. It has been estimated that about two per cent. of cancer deaths in Europe may be due to radon.

Exposure to ultraviolet radiation from sunlight increases the risk of skin cancer. Skin cancer is one of the most common cancers in the United Kingdom and the incidence of the disease is rising rapidly. However, up to 80 per cent. of cases could be avoided.

There is little convincing evidence to indicate that environmental exposure to chemicals in the UK causes cancer. However, exposure to environmental tobacco smoke (passive smoking) is known to be associated with a 10 to 30 per cent. increase in lung cancer.

Additionally, dietary factors are estimated to account for approximately 30 per cent. of cancers in industrialised countries—making diet only second to tobacco as a preventable cause of cancer. In particular, obesity is associated with an increase in risk of some cancers such as colorectal and breast cancers while increasing the intake of fruit and vegetables and physical activity is associated with decreased risk.

Cancer is predominantly a disease of the elderly, with the incidence of the disease increasing markedly with age. Longevity of an individual is therefore associated with an increased risk of developing cancer, and the aging of the population is associated with an increasing number of cancer cases overall.

Medical Research

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the (a) budget of the Medical Research Council and (b) the NHS research and development budget has been in each year since 1997–98 in (i) real and (ii) nominal terms. [63109]

Jane Kennedy: The information requested is shown in the table.

Medicines and Healthcare Products Regulatory Agency

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what average time it has taken for an application for (a) a new and (b) a variation of a medicine to be approved by the Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency. [49842]

Jane Kennedy: The most recent full-year figures for new medicines approval times by the Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency (MHRA) are for 2004–05. These show an average approval time, from receipt of the application to grant of the licence, of 288 calendar days. This period however includes the time taken by applicants to supply any necessary new or correcting information following the initial assessment of their application. When this is taken into account the actual number of net working days taken by the MHRA reduces to an average of 122 days.

For the relatively small number of completely new medicines, for example those containing new drugs and with the potential for meeting unmet medical needs in major diseases, the MHRA, during the same period, has maintained its record of assessing these in under 40 days.

For all types of variations to product licences, whether straightforward or complex, and again in the most recent full year for which figures are available, 2004–05, the average time taken to approve, from receipt of the application to grant of the variation, was 67 calendar days. This includes time taken waiting for the company to provide any further information needed.

More recent figures show a lengthening of assessment and approval times. For example, for the first seven months of 2005–06 (April to October) the approval time for new product licences had increased to 153 net working days or 404 gross calendar days.

These exceed the MHRA's assessment and approval target times and it is well aware of the impact this is having on pharmaceutical company business. This lengthening of assessment and approval times has been caused by a combination of adverse factors including increases in workload, difficulties in recruiting professional assessment staff, especially medically-qualified staff, and transitional implementation problems during the introduction of a new information management system.

The MHRA is taking a number of steps to improve service levels. These include organisational restructuring, additional recruitment, re-training of staff, voluntary schemes for extended working hours, and information system performance enhancements.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the methods used by the Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency to approve new medicines. [49844]

Jane Kennedy: The Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency (MHRA) approves new medicines for marketing in the United Kingdom and is required to follow procedures set out in European legislation. The basis of its licensing decisions is its assessment of the data provided by companies attesting to the quality, safety and efficacy of their new product. This assessment is carried out by professionally qualified and experienced staff in the fields of medicine, toxicology, pharmacy and other scientific disciplines relevant to the product under review. The MHRA is a benchmark agency within the European Community for the quality of its assessments and processes and is recognised as a leading player in European medicines licensing.

The MHRA assessment process and decision-making is supported by internationally recognised technical guidelines and, where necessary, by external expert advice.

The MHRA's business procedures are subjected to internal and external audit as part of its risk management and corporate governance procedures. The MHRA's directors and managers are required to keep their processes under constant review and to strive to make year-on-year efficiency and effectiveness improvements.

NHS Debt

Anne Main: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the level of pre-existing debt is within the NHS; what her Department's plans are for reducing it; and if she will make a statement. [61123]

Jane Kennedy: The overall audited net national health service deficit position for 2004–05 was around £250 million. This represents around 0.4 per cent. of overall NHS resources. At 2005–06 month six, the NHS was forecasting a net deficit of £620 million. This forecast deficit amounts to less than 1 per cent. of the funding available.

We are taking action with the minority of organisations that are underperforming to ensure that the position improves and financial balance is restored in the NHS by the end of 2006–07.

For the organisations with the biggest problems we have sent in financial and management specialists (turnaround teams) to help the organisations address their problems of poor financial management.

The turnaround teams will support the NHS in identifying opportunities to deliver services with greater cost-effectiveness and to make financial savings. They will help the local NHS ensure that the NHS delivers both its key targets and financial balance.

NHS Expenditure

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much the NHS has spent per head of the population in (a) Lancashire and (b) Ribble Valley in each year since 1997. [63198]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 18 April 2006]: The information is not available in the format requested. However, the following table shows expenditure per capita by all relevant health authorities, strategic health authorities (SHA) and primary care trusts (PCTs) within the current Lancashire and Cumbria SHA area.

Total expenditure per head by organisations within the Cumbria and Lancashire SHA area

	Expenditure (£)
1997–98	614.10
1998–99	679.92
1999–2000	819.63
2000–01	894.22
2001–02	1,021.73
2002–03	1,215.84
2003–04	1,277.22
2004–05	1,260.32

Notes:

1. Figures for 1997–98 to 2001–02 have been prepared using gross expenditure figures. Figures for 2002–03 and 2003–04 have been adjusted to eliminate expenditure which would be double counted where an authority acts as a lead in commissioning healthcare or other services.
2. The significant decrease in expenditure in 2004–05 is because student grants unit expenditure by the Cumbria and Lancashire SHA (£369 million was included in the authority's accounts in 2003–04) was transferred to the NHS Pensions Agency in 2004–05.

3. Data is shown from 1997–98 to 2004–05, which is the latest year for which information is available.
4. Expenditure is taken as the total expenditure of the strategic health authority, predecessor health authorities and PCTs within the SHA area.
5. Expenditure on general dental services and pharmaceutical services accounted for by the Dental Practice Board and Prescription Pricing Authority, respectively, are excluded. This expenditure cannot be included within the figures for the individual health bodies as they are not included in commissioner accounts.

Audited summarisation schedules of primary care trusts 2000–01 to 2004–05
Audited summarisation forms of Cumbria and Lancashire SHA 2002–03 to 2004–05

John Hemming: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the expected (a) turnover, (b) fixed capital costs as a proportion of turnover, (c) fixed costs and (d) financial out-turn is for each NHS hospital trust for 2005–06. [62509]

Jane Kennedy: The information requested on turnover, fixed capital costs as a proportion of turnover and financial out-turn for 2005–06 for each national health service trust has been placed in the Library.

The turnover and forecast out-turn position for 2005–06, as submitted by both NHS trusts and primary care trusts at the mid-year point (month six), is available in the Library. Copies of this information is also available on the Department's website at:

www.dh.gov.uk/publicationsandstatistics/freedomofinformation/classesofinformation/fs/en

Obesity

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the cost to the national health service of weight loss surgery was in each year since 1997; and if she will make a statement. [63605]

Caroline Flint: Information on the cost of delivering weight loss surgery is not collected centrally.

Public Interest Reports

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) at what point and by whom it is determined in relation to any NHS body that a public interest report needs to be (a) compiled, (b) issued and (c) published; [63864]

(2) how many public interest reports have been issued across all NHS bodies, broken down by strategic health authority, in (a) 2002–03, (b) 2003–04, (c) 2004–05 and (d) 2005–06; [63865]

(3) which NHS bodies have had relevant public interest reports issued in the current financial year 2005–06 and in relation to which NHS bodies consideration is being given to the issuance of a public interest report in 2006–07. [63866]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 18 April 2006]: Auditors appointed by the Audit Commission to audit the accounts of national health service bodies have the discretionary power under section 8 of the Audit Commission Act 1998 to issue a report in the public interest.

Section 8 of the Act requires auditors in auditing the accounts to consider whether, in the public interest, they should report on any matter coming to their notice in the course of the audit, in order for it to be considered by the body concerned or brought to the attention of the public. The auditor can issue an immediate report if the public interest requires it, or can issue a report at the conclusion of the audit.

The Audit Commission issued revised guidance in 2004 to auditors on the circumstances when a Public Interest Reports (PIR) might be issued. The guidance requires auditors to consult on the draft report with the body, other local stakeholders (including the strategic health authority (SHA)), and any other interested parties. The Department is also given the opportunity to comment on the draft report. However, the decisions as to whether a public interest report should be issued, what it should say and when it should be issued, are made by the auditor.

2002–03
Bedfordshire and Hertfordshire	1
West Yorkshire	1
2003–04
Avon, Gloucestershire and Wiltshire	1
2004–05

In 2005–06, the following NHS bodies were issued with PIRs under section eight of the Audit Commission Act 1998:

Cambridge City PCT and South Cambridgeshire PCT

Central Suffolk, Ipswich and Suffolk Coastal PCTs

Cheshire West PCT

Hampshire and Isle of Wight SHA

Hillingdon PCT

Hounslow PCT

Kennet and North Wiltshire PCT

Maidstone and Tunbridge Wells NHS Trust
New Forest PCT
North Somerset PCT
North Tees and Hartlepool NHS Trust
Queen Elizabeth Hospital NHS Trust
Royal West Sussex NHS Trust
Royal Wolverhampton Hospitals NHS Trust
Scarborough and North East Yorkshire NHS Trust
Selby and York PCT
Shrewsbury and Telford Hospitals NHS Trust
South Tees Hospitals NHS Trust
Southampton University Hospitals NHS Trust
Suffolk West PCT
Surrey and Sussex SHA
Thames Valley SHA
Trafford Healthcare NHS Trust
West Wiltshire PCT
Weston Area Health NHS Trust

In 2006–07, the following organisation was also issued with PIRs:

George Eliot Hospitals NHS Trust

The following organisations have received draft reports and the auditors are considering when/whether to issue them:

Dacorum PCT
Hammersmith Hospitals NHS Trust
Hertsmere PCT
Kensington and Chelsea PCT
St. Albans and Harpenden PCT
University Hospital of North Staffordshire NHS Trust
Watford and Three Rivers PCT
West Hertfordshire PCT

St. Richard's Hospital

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the reasons for the deficit at St. Richard's hospital, Chichester; and if she will make a statement. [63957]

Caroline Flint: Strategic health authorities (SHAs) are responsible for managing the financial position for their local health communities, which includes assessing the reasons for organisations incurring deficits. SHAs are charged with ensuring that every organisation achieves financial balance.

Royal West Sussex national health service trust was forecasting, at month six, a deficit of £16.7 million for the financial year 2005–06.

In order to assist the NHS organisations that have the greatest financial problems, the Secretary of State announced turnaround teams in a written ministerial statement on 1 December 2005.

The first stage of this is a baseline assessment, the aim of which is to ensure there is an agreed understanding of the local financial problem and that actions are in hand to address this. In this assessment, Royal West Sussex NHS trust was rated as needing urgent intervention to drive turnaround. In conjunction with the SHA, the team is agreeing a tailored package of turnaround support with the organisation.

Turnaround Teams

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what the estimated cost is in the financial year ended 31 March (a) 2006 and (b) 2007 of the employment of turnaround teams and external accountancy and management advice for the 18 NHS trusts named in her announcement of 25 January 2006; [62889]

(2) what proportion of the estimated costs of the turnaround teams in the NHS in North Staffordshire will be borne by (a) the Department, (b) the Shropshire and Staffordshire strategic health authority and (c) the relevant NHS trusts; [62890]

(3) what the estimated costs are of the employment of turnaround teams in the NHS in (a) North Staffordshire and (b) the area of the Shropshire and Staffordshire strategic health authority. [62891]

Jane Kennedy: The turnaround teams were announced by the Secretary of State in a written ministerial statement on 1 December 2005, Official Report, column 35WS.

The first stage of this is a baseline assessment, the aim of which is to ensure there is an agreed understanding of the local financial problem and that actions are in hand to address this. University Hospitals of North Staffordshire NHS Trust, North Stoke primary care trust and Shrewsbury and Telford Hospital NHS Trust were included in the assessment. This was funded by the Department.

Following the assessment, the local NHS will identify the actions needed to return the organisations to financial balance and what tailored support is needed to support local management. The strategic health authority (SHA) provides advice and support to the procurement of support for the most challenged organisations, including University Hospitals of North Staffordshire NHS Trust and Shrewsbury and Telford Hospital NHS Trust. The costs of these are met locally but for each organisation, the Department has provided funding equivalent to the first three months of a turnaround director.

The Department has contracted for turnaround directors to work alongside the transition SHA leaders which in the case of Shropshire and Staffordshire, means across the West Midlands area.

The Department has a budget of £6 million for turnaround work in 2005–06 covering its work with all organisations in the turnaround cohort. The budget for 2006–07 has not yet been finalised.

The turnaround teams will be needed to the end of 2006–07, when it is expected that the NHS will have returned to financial balance.

Written Answers to Questions

Thursday 20 April 2006

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Energy Efficiency

13. Mr. Rogerson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions she has had with the Deputy Prime Minister on improving the energy efficiency of households; and if she will make a statement. [63740]

Mr. Morley: I and my ministerial colleagues have had a number of discussions with the Deputy Prime Minister and his ministerial team on the energy efficiency of households and other related issues.

Single Farm Payments

14. Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs pursuant to the oral answer from the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of 9 March 2006, Official Report, column 941, on single farm payments, when the Parliamentary Under-Secretary became aware that it would not be possible to make the bulk of payments by the end of March. [63741]

Margaret Beckett: I and fellow Ministers were made aware of this on 14 March, which as the hon. Member will be aware led to the removal of the RPA Chief Executive on the 16 March and the appointment of Mark Addison as Acting Chief Executive.

Climate Change

15. Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on her plans for meeting the target for carbon dioxide reduction by 2010. [63742]

18. Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the Government's UK carbon dioxide targets. [63746]

Margaret Beckett: The Government published the 2006 climate change programme on 28 March. The policies and measures in the programme are expected to reduce UK carbon dioxide emissions by 15 to 18 per cent. by 2010 compared with 1990 levels.

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the climate change review. [63737]

Mr. Morley: A new climate change programme was published on 28 March. It will advance progress to tackle climate change domestically and to reduce global greenhouse gas emissions.

Flood Defences

17. Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the provision of flood defences for Lewes. [63744]

Mr. Morley: Following the floods in 2000, the Environment Agency has completed a flood risk management strategy for the Sussex Ouse and £1.8 million has been spent on reducing flood risk in the Mailing area of Lewes. The Environment Agency Regional Flood Defence Committee is planning further works between the Phoenix Causeway and Cliffe Bridge and in the Cliffe cell.

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the security of flood prevention in and around the Thames Estuary. [63747]

Mr. Morley: London and the Thames Estuary have one of the best tidal defence systems in the world, which provides a high standard of protection from flooding.

The Environment Agency is currently developing a major flood risk management strategy—Thames Estuary 2100—to look at how we can manage flood risk to London over the next 100 years, taking into account future predicted impacts of climate change.

Water Efficiency

20. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps she is taking to encourage greater water efficiency in the home. [63748]

Mr. Morley: We have established the new Water Saving Group with key water stakeholders, which has agreed and is making progress on a comprehensive action plan; we are going to consult in summer on regulatory changes to secure improved water efficiency in new housing; and all stakeholders are seeking to educate customers to act responsibly in the use of water.

Paul Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how her Department plans to improve water efficiency in housing growth areas. [63743]

Mr. Morley: We announced on 28 March that we will consult on proposals to mandate minimum standards of water efficiency in new housing, which will include new housing development in the four growth areas.

Milk Prices

21. Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the average farmgate price for milk was in 2005 and 1997. [63749]

Jim Knight: The average farmgate price for milk delivered in 1997 was 21.96 pence per litre, while in 2005, it was 18.46 pence per litre.

Recycling and Waste

22. Mr. Mackay: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the performance of local councils in meeting their recycling and waste targets. [63750]

Mr. Bradshaw: Levels of recycling by local authorities have improved dramatically from the appalling record under the previous Conservative Government. In 1997 only 8 per cent. of household waste was recycled. This year we expect local authorities will achieve the target we set them of 25 per cent.—a more than trebling of recycling since Labour come to power.

Farm Incomes

23. Anne Snelgrove: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the average level of farm income was in (a) 1997 and (b) 2005. [63751]

Jim Knight: UK Total Income from Farming per full-time person equivalent was £12,500 in 2005 compared to £14,600 in 1997 (when expressed in real terms at 2005 prices).

CFC Recovery

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) how many licensed CFC recovery sites are still operational in the UK; and how many of these achieve greater than 300g of CFC recovery per domestic refrigerator or freezer; [63850]

(2) what the average CFC recovery level was per domestic refrigerator or freezer for each year since 2002. [63851]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 18 April 2006]: A number of facilities hold Waste Management Licences for the treatment of waste refrigerators. Not all licensed facilities are operational. Typically, there are a dozen specialist facilities recovering CFCs from domestic refrigerators. Some facilities also treat panels from commercial refrigeration equipment.

Operators of fridge treatment plants are not required to report CFC recovery on a grammes per fridge basis. CFC recovery data for 2005 is currently being assessed and collated and will be available to report to the European Commission by the reporting deadline of 30 June this year.

A detailed audit of fridge treatment facilities in 2004 concluded that the quantity of controlled substances recovered from the refrigerant and blowing agent equated to approximately 236g per fridge/freezer treated in England and Wales during 2003.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the UK's position in European CFC recovery league tables. [63852]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 18 April 2006]: Recovery of CFCs/HCFCs (chlorofluorocarbons/hydrochlorofluorocarbons) in the UK in 2004 (the last year for which figures are available) represented some 25 per cent. of the total CFC/HCFCs estimated to have been recovered in the EU. The UK figure also includes CFC/HCFCs recovered from imported waste refrigerators from elsewhere in the EU.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) how many tonnes of the CFCs recovered by the UK's licensed facilities have been (a) destroyed and (b) processed to render them harmless to the environment in each year since 2002; [63845]

(2) what amount of CFC was recovered from domestic and commercial appliances in each of the last 10 years; and what estimate she has made for 2006; [63846]

(3) how many tonnes of CFC were recovered in 2005; what estimate she has made of the amount which will be recovered in 2006; and if she will make a statement; [63848]

(4) what plans she has to address falling levels of CFC recovery in the UK. [63849]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 18 April 2006]: The following information is available on the recovery of chlorofluorocarbons (CFC) from all equipment:

	Tonnes
2002	387

The requirement to recover CFCs and other ozone depleting substances from domestic refrigerators did not come into force until 2002. Recovery levels were not reported or collated for any previous year. CFC recovery data for 2005 is currently being assessed and collated. This will be available in time to meet the European Commission's reporting deadline of 30 June.

It is not possible to know in advance the levels of CFC recovery from domestic or commercial refrigeration equipment in 2006. The amount available for recovery will be influenced by the number of fridges and freezers presented for treatment, the proportion that contained CFCs when manufactured, and the proportion of CFCs lost in use, storage or transit. Recovery figures for 2006 will be reported during 2007.

CFCs recovered at fridge treatment plants are converted/destroyed on site or sent to specialist facilities for destruction.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what guidance her Department has issued on the recovery of controlled substances in refrigerators and freezers; what assessment she has made of the impact of the guidance on CFC recovery rates in the UK; and if she will make a statement. [63847]

Mr. Morley: The Environment Agency and Scottish Environment Protection Agency "Guidance on the Recovery and Disposal of Controlled Substances Contained in Refrigerators and Freezers" was published in 2002. The Agencies intend to review this guidance when the Waste Electrical and Electronic Equipment Directive is implemented.

The publication of guidance is only one factor which may influence the amount of CFCs recovered in the UK. Other major factors include the number of fridges and freezers presented for treatment, the proportion that contained CFCs when manufactured, and the proportion of CFCs that are lost in use, storage or transit.

Genetically Modified Foods

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent representations she has received on the cultivation of genetically modified foods; and if she will make a statement. [63624]

Mr. Morley: Over recent weeks Defra has received representations on various issues to do with GM crops. These include the coexistence of GM and non-GM crops, the ongoing WTO case on GMOs, and the use of Genetic Use Restriction Technologies (GURTs).

Scout Moor Windfarm

Janet Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of whether the development of the Scout Moor windfarm will meet the provisions of the Commons Bill in respect of the protection of and public access to common land. [63419]

Jim Knight: These applications are made under section 147 of the Inclosure Act 1845. Consideration is given under these provision to the effect of the exchange on the general public's legal right of access over the land. The future provisions in the Commons Bill are not relevant.

Water Industry Act

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the operation of section 76 of the Water Industry Act 1991. [64215]

Mr. Morley: Section 76 of the Water Industry Act 1991, allows water companies to ban or restrict the use of hosepipes to water private gardens or wash private motor cars. Powers can be used if a company believes there is a serious risk to the amount of water available for distribution to customers.

A water company imposing a ban or restriction has to give public notice before it comes into force, including details of when it will take effect. Anyone who contravenes a ban or restriction could be fined.

Water Leakage Rates

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what action has been taken to reduce leakage rates from water pipes in (a) Southend, (b) Essex, (c) the Three Valleys water area and (d) Hertfordshire. [64214]

Mr. Morley: Water companies are under a duty to develop and maintain efficient and economical water supply systems. Ofwat assesses their performance against leakage targets and reports progress each year.

The areas that you asked about are covered by three different water companies. In 2004–05, Essex and Suffolk Water, which cover areas (a) and (b) met their leakage target and operated below their Economic Level of Leakage (ELL), which is the level of leakage at which it would cost more to make further reductions than to produce water from another source. Three Valleys Water, which covers area (c) and part of area (d), met their leakage target and operated at their ELL. Thames Water, which covers part of area (d), reduced its overall leakage for the first time since 1999–2000, but failed its leakage target of 905 Megalitres/day by 10 Megalitres/day (1.1 per cent.).

It is the responsibility of Ofwat to set and enforce leakage targets. If necessary, Ofwat now has powers to fine companies for leakage failures.

TREASURY

Correspondence

Sir Gerald Kaufman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) when he will reply to the letter dated 14 February from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton, with regard to Julie Reid; [62435]

(2) when he expects to answer the letter of 14 February from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton, with regard to Mrs. C Hayes. [63930]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Paymaster General will reply to the right hon. Member very shortly.

QinetiQ

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what reasons underlay the decision by his Department not to adjust the estimated profile of repayments, when the revenue expected from the QinetiQ loan, as referred to in the National Audit Office Audit of Assumptions for Budget 2006, pages five and six, was not received in 2004–05. [63627]

Mr. Des Browne: The estimated profile of repayments on the Aquila Chertsey Loan Note was based on routine data supplied to HM Treasury. For the pre-Budget report 2005 this reflected the slippage out of 2004–05. HMT did not adjust the later years of the profile until MOD were able to confirm the repayments in 2005–06. This was done for Budget 2006.

TRANSPORT

Cycling

Stephen Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many local authorities have included targets for cycling in their local transport plans; and what the targets are for each such authority. [63658]

Derek Twigg: The final second round Local Transport Plans, covering the years 2006–11, were received by the Department on 31 March and the process of assessment has only just commenced. Once this process has been completed, I will write to the hon. Member.

Dartford Crossing

Mr. Holloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the income from user-charges for the Dartford crossing has been in each of the last five years; and how the surplus after operating costs have been deducted was spent. [64191]

Dr. Ladyman: Prior to 1 April 2002 the concessionaire operating the Dartford-Thurrock River Crossing retained all toll income.

Gross toll income received at the crossing for the year to 31 March 2003 amounted to £69.34 million. Under the provisions of the legislation applying to toll income at that time (the Dartford-Thurrock Crossing Act 1988) all revenue had to be used for the operation and maintenance of the crossing.

Under the provisions of the Transport Act 2000 a road user-charging scheme has been in operation at the crossing since 1 April 2003. The gross income received is as follows:

	£ million
2003–04	[1]68.12
2004–05	[1]69.02

[1] Includes rental income and/or interest received.

The accounts for the period from 1 April 2005 to 31 March 2006 are being prepared and will be published in due course.

Under the Transport Act 2000, during the 10 year period which started when the scheme came into force, net proceeds may only be used for the purpose of directly or indirectly facilitating the achievement of any policies or proposals relating to transport. All net revenue from the charging scheme therefore accrues to the Department for Transport to support overall expenditure on transport projects.

Mr. Holloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of (a) the number of accidents and (b) the congestion caused by vehicles queuing to pass through the toll booths at the Dartford Crossing. [64192]

Dr. Ladyman: The agents managing the day-to-day operations of the crossing review injury accident data obtained from the police, every six months and submit a report to the Highways Agency. From this report accident cluster sites are identified and studies commissioned to identify possible mitigating actions.

The layout of the toll plaza is not designed for free flow conditions, and the toll plazas perform an important safety role in controlling the volume of traffic and speed of vehicles both through the tunnels and away from the bridge.

The level of congestion at and around the Dartford Crossing is included in the baseline assessment of the Department for Transport's PSA reliability target.

Rail Services (Wales)

Mrs. James: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many representations his Department has received on the First Great Western Trains December 2006 proposed timetable; and how many related to the proposed termination of the 1515 London Paddington to Swansea service at Cardiff. [60811]

Derek Twigg: The Department has received approximately 600 representations on the First Great Western's proposed timetable for December 2006. One was related to the proposed termination of the 15.15 Paddington to Swansea service at Cardiff.

WALES

Departmental Staff

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many and what proportion of (a) staff and (b) new staff employed in his Department in each of the last three years for which data are available were registered as disabled. [61388]

Mr. Hain: The Wales Office has a small number of staff with disabilities. For privacy reason the numbers are confidential, in line with guidance issued by the Cabinet Office which states that Departments are not required to provide figures on the number of disabled staff where it is less than five in the department.

Grievance Procedures

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) how many grievance procedures have been initiated in his Department in each of the last three years; [63558]

(2) how many complaints of (a) bullying and (b) sexual harassment have been investigated in his Department in each of the last three years; and how many complaints have been upheld. [63559]

Mr. Hain: None.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Cricket

Mr. Khan: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what support her Department is providing for cricket in 2006–07; and if she will make a statement. [64522]

Mr. Caborn: The Government, through Sport England, continue to provide financial support to the England and Wales Cricket Board (ECB) to assist in the delivery of both the professional and amateur game.

Cricket is one of Sport England's 10 priority sports and they will be investing £8.5 million during 2006–07. Around £4 million will be provided directly to the ECB to support a number of initiatives including the ECB's four year strategic plan, PE School Sport and Club Links (PESSCL) strategy, Step Into Sport volunteer programme, UK Coaching Certificate programme and the hire of English Institute of Sport facilities. The remaining funding will be provided direct to the sport through schemes such as the Community Club Development Programme, Chance to Shine Programme, County Sports Partnership Funding and Community Funding, and through the National Sports Foundation.

Football (Homophobia)

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what discussions she has had with football (a) authorities and (b) clubs on tackling homophobia. [64619]

Mr. Caborn: There has been no ministerial discussion with either the football authorities or clubs on tackling homophobia in football.

The Government believe that there is no place for homophobia in football or in wider society and we fully support the campaign being led by the Football Association against homophobic abuse in football in England.

Through their "Football For All" programme, the FA is publicly committed to making football inclusive and open to all and to eradicate homophobia in the sport through education, effective reporting structures and communication and awareness training.

Olympic Games

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what funding the Olympic Trust Fund will receive from (a) the Exchequer, (b) the National Lottery and (c) private sources; and if she will make a statement. [62943]

Mr. Caborn: The Government and the Lottery distributors have initially made £35 million available to establish the trust. We will be looking, over time, to attract significant funding from the private sector to support the trust's projects.

HEALTH

Dentistry

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she plans to make of the provision of national health service dentistry in areas where large numbers of dentists have not signed the new NHS dental contract; and if she will make a statement. [63567]

Ms Rosie Winterton: As of 1 April, primary care trusts (PCTs) have devolved responsibility and funding for the commissioning of primary dental services. This means that, if a dentist ceases to provide national health service dentistry, the resources will remain with the PCT to be re-invested in local dental services.

The dental reforms will give PCTs greater flexibility to develop services in ways that reflect the needs of their local populations.

The national implementation group that has been established to monitor the impact of the reforms will be able to review the experience of PCTs in re-commissioning services where it is necessary to do so.

Dorset and Somerset Strategic Health Authority

Mr. Jeremy Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much funding was allocated to Dorset and Somerset strategic health authority in each year since 2001. [64305]

Caroline Flint: The information in the following tables shows the funding allocation for health authorities and primary care trusts (PCTs) since 2001. From 2003, funding allocation was made to individual PCTs.

Revenue allocations to HAs in Dorset and Somerset strategic health authority 2001–02 and 2002–03

General Practitioners

Mr. Jeremy Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) general practitioners and (b) NHS dentists there were per head of population in (i) England and (ii) Taunton constituency in each year since 1997. [64308]

Caroline Flint: Population data at constituency level is not available. The numbers of general medical practitioners (excluding retainers and registrars) and dentists per 100,000 population have been provided for England and Taunton Deane Primary Care Trust (PCT) are shown as follows.

General medical practitioners (excluding retainers and registrars)[1] per 100,000 population in England and the specified organisations, 1997–2004

	England	Taunton Deane PCT

Sexual and Reproductive Health

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 27 March 2006, Official Report, column 805W on sexual and reproductive health, how many officials provide the secretariat for the advisory group; what the grade is of each is, and what the cost was to her Department in each year since 2003–04. [64206]

Caroline Flint: The secretariat for the Independent Advisory Group on Sexual Health and HIV is shared between vice chairs of the group, with support from the Department as required, mainly in facilitation of the quarterly meetings of the group.

The cost of the support from the Department is less that £15,000 per annum.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Citizens Advice Bureaux

Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the effect of the closure of Citizens Advice Bureaux on local communities. [63275]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The Department is not responsible for local Citizens Advice Bureaux each of which is an independent charity. The DTI provide £23.6 million in grant aid to Citizens Advice in 2005–06. The DTI has made no assessment of the effect of the closure of Citizens Advice Bureaux on local communities.

Energy Pre-Payment (Domestic Customers)

Mr. Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will take steps to address the additional charges levied on domestic energy customers using pre-payment meters; and if he will make a statement. [64229]

Malcolm Wicks: The charges applied to pre-payment meters reflect the additional costs of the meter itself and the infrastructure required to support it. Any enforced reduction in the charges applied to pre-payment meters would have to be cross-subsidised by other customers, including pensioners and the fuel poor, the majority of whom do not use pre-payment meters. Pre-payment tariffs of individual suppliers vary, and, where customers prefer to retain a pre-payment meter, they may be able to reduce their expenditure by switching supplier.

Fuel Poverty Initiatives

Mark Lazarowicz: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of social programmes aimed at alleviating fuel poverty offered by the six major domestic energy supply companies; [63600]

(2) what role he expects the six major domestic energy supply companies to play in tackling fuel poverty, beyond their energy Efficiency Commitment Priority Group obligations; and if he will make a statement; [63601]

(3) what criteria are used by an energy supply company to class a tariff as a social tariff. [63602]

Malcolm Wicks: Each of the major domestic energy suppliers offer a number of programmes that assist vulnerable customers in various ways. The actual definition of a social tariff varies from company to company but is generally a lower price tariff directed towards a subset of vulnerable customers. It is for suppliers, not the Government, to design and set such tariffs.

Although information from individual suppliers about take-up of particular schemes is commercially confidential, an annex to the Government's UK Fuel Poverty Strategy Fourth Annual Progress Report, to be published later this year, will include information about the overall impacts of company schemes in 2004 and 2005. This will include information about actions companies have taken in 2004 and 2005 beyond their Energy Efficiency Priority Group obligations.

We continue to encourage energy companies to consider their most vulnerable consumers when considering price or service changes. I therefore welcome the trust funds and social tariffs announced, but continue to urge energy companies to do more.

Heating Fuel Costs

Willie Rennie: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry by how much the cost of heating fuel has changed in each year since 1997. [64422]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 18 April 2006]: Percentages real terms year-on-year price changes for those fuels used in the domestic sector are shown in the following table.

Year-on-year percentage price changes since 1997

	Fuel

Home Computing Initiative

Mr. Gauke: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions the Department has had with the Treasury on the abolition of Home Computing Initiative tax relief. [62453]

Alan Johnson [holding answer 30 March 2006]: My Department has had a number of discussions with the Treasury on Budget issues relevant to DTI, including the Home Computing Initiative.

Noise Induced Hearing Loss Claims

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much has been paid to (a) Beresfords, (b) UDM, (c) Vendside, (d) Wake Smith and (e) AMS Law for noise-induced hearing loss claims in each year since 2000; and what the average payment was in each case. [64452]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 19 April 2006]: The costs payments made are set out in the table:

	Solicitor	Solicitor payments made	Total solicitors costs (£)	Average (£)
2000	Beresfords	61	52,330	858
2001	Beresfords	1,314	902,897	687

2006	AMS Law	3	2,569	856

[1] 2006 figures reflect the position up to 16 April 2006

[2] The Union of Democratic Mineworkers register claims on behalf of their members. Vendside operate a claims handling company on behalf of the UDM and as such administration of claims is processed via Vendside Limited

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many claimants have been paid for noise-induced hearing loss in (a) Bassetlaw and (b) Nottinghamshire since 1999. [64453]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 19 April 2006]: The number of claimants paid for noise-induced hearing loss since 1999 is 1,389 in Bassetlaw and 11,163 in Nottinghamshire[1].

[1] Nottinghamshire covers the constituencies of Ashfield, Bassetlaw, Broxtowe, Gedling, Mansfield, Newark, Nottingham East, Nottingham North, Nottingham South, Rushcliffe and Sherwood

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what agreements on costs have been reached for noise-induced hearing loss claims with (a) Beresfords, (b) Wake Smith, (c) AMS Law, (d) UDM and (e) Vendside; and when each agreement (i) began and (ii) will end. [64454]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 19 April 2006]: The Department's agreement on costs for noise-induced hearing loss claims with Beresfords was reached in December 2000 and ended in March 2002. The current agreement with the UDM was reached in May 2003, is ongoing, and covers claims originating with the Union but submitted by either their claims handling company, Vendside, or the solicitors AMS Law. We do not have an agreement with Wake Smith.

Social Tariffs

Mr. Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions (a) he and (b) his officials have had with representatives of gas and electricity supply companies on improving the information on social tariffs provided to customers. [64379]

Malcolm Wicks: DTI officials and I have regular contact with all of the major energy supply companies and their trade organisation, the Energy Retail Association, on a wide range of issues, including the introduction of social tariffs by energy companies. With DTI's encouragement, the energy suppliers established the Home Heat helpline, which, among other things, provides customers with advice on the most appropriate tariff, including information on social tariffs. It is for individual suppliers to determine how best to market their tariffs.

Telephone Preference Service Regulations

Mr. Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many letters the Information Commissioner's Office has sent to date to (a) companies that have had in excess of 50 complaints made against them under telephone preference service regulations and (b) to companies breaching telephone preference service regulations. [62238]

Alun Michael: The Information Commissioner is responsible for administering the Privacy and Electronic Communications (EC Directive) Regulations 2003. Regulation 21 of these regulations relates to unsolicited direct marketing telephone calls. It should be note that complaints received by his office about breaches of Regulation 21 concern calls made to Telephone Preference Service (TPS) registered numbers and also organisation not to make marketing calls to that number.

Due to the nature of the casework management system used by the Information Commissioner's Office he is unable to identify companies about which more than 40 complaints have been received about alleged breaches of Regulation 21 and is therefore unable to identify how many letters have been sent to companies about which more than 50 such complaints have been received.

To date, the Information Commissioner has written to organisations in 1,754 cases regarding an alleged breach of Regulation 21.

So far the Information Commissioner has been able to deal with complaints relating to alleged breaches of Regulation 21 of the Privacy and Electronic Communications (EC Directive) Regulations 2003, through informal resolution with the organisations concerned. Information Commissioner has not needed to initiate formal enforcement action against any organisation for breaching Regulation 21. As most cases have been resolved at any early stage of their proceedings.

Telephone Service Providers

Mr. Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many complaints about telephone cold calling were made against (a) the Labour party, (b) the Conservative party, (c) the Scottish National party and (d) the Green party since the introduction of the Privacy and Electronic Communications (EC Directive) 2003; and on how many occasions the Information Commissioner has initiated formal action in response to these complaints. [61652]

Alun Michael: The Information Commissioner is responsible for administering the Privacy and Electronic Communications (EC Directive) Regulations 2003. Regulation 21 of these regulations relates to unsolicited direct marketing telephone calls. It should be noted that complaints received by his office about breaches of Regulation 21 concern not just calls made to Telephone Preference Service (TPS) registered numbers but also calls made to numbers where the subscriber has directly asked the calling organisation not to make marketing calls to that number. Also, Regulation 19 relates to the use of unsolicited direct marketing automated telephone calls.

The number of complaints about telephone cold calling made against the parties since the introduction of the Privacy and Electronic Communications (EC Directive) in 2003 is as follows:

[2] In 2005 the Information Commissioner issued one enforcement notice under Regulation 19 against the Scottish National party.

Note:

The term 'Upheld' also includes cases where the Information Commissioner decided that enforcement action was not appropriate even though there may have been some breach of the regulations.

Mr. Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) against how many UK companies more than 50 complaints have been made under the Privacy and Electronic Communications (EC Directive) Regulations 2003; [61653]

(2) on how many occasions the Information Commissioner has taken against firms in breach of telephone preference service rules; and whether the Information Commissioner has taken action against firms about which he has received more than 50 complaints. [61654]

Alun Michael: The Information Commissioner is responsible for administering the Privacy and Electronic Communications (EC Directive) Regulations 2003. Regulation 21 of these regulations relates to unsolicited direct marketing telephone calls. It should be note that complaints received by his office about breaches of Regulation 21 concern calls made to Telephone Preference Service (TPS) registered numbers and also organisation not to make marketing calls to that number.

Information Commissioner has not needed to initiate formal enforcement action against any organisation for breaching Regulation 21. As most cases have been resolved at any early stage of their proceedings.

Vibration White Finger

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many miners' claims for (a) vibration white finger and (b) chronic obstructive pulmonary disease have been pursued by solicitors through common law since 1999. [64439]

Malcolm Wicks: Since 1999, 178 vibration white finger and 25 chronic obstructive pulmonary disease claims have been pursued through common law.

DEFENCE

Courts Martial

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the average waiting time was for a case to go to court martial in the (a) Army, (b) Royal Navy (c) Royal Air Force in 2005. [57472]

Mr. Touhig [pursuant to the reply, 13 March 2006, Official Report, c. 1945W]: The following notes should have appeared after the list.

Notes:

1. Royal Navy figure shows the average delay between charge and appearing at court martial and the year in which court martial was convened.
2. Army figure shows the average delay between the date of the offence and appearing at court martial and the year in which the court martial was convened.
3. Royal Air Force figure shows the average delay between the point that the case papers are received by the Court Administration Unit (which administers arrangements for the court martial) to the trial date and appearing at court martial) and the cases that commenced in 2005.

Defence Intelligence and Security Centre

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the Government Departments which sent officials on courses run by the Defence Intelligence and Security Centre in 2004–05. [63393]

Mr. Ingram: The Defence Intelligence and Security Centre provides training primarily for the armed forces and the Ministry of Defence. In 2004–05, the following Government Departments sent officials on courses run by the Defence Intelligence and Security Centre:

Foreign and Commonwealth Office

Home Office

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many US personnel are based at the Defence Intelligence and Security Centre. [63455]

Mr. Ingram: There are two US personnel based at the Defence Intelligence and Security Centre.

Qinetiq

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the terms were of the loan agreed with Qinetiq, referred to in the National Audit Office Audit of Assumptions for Budget 2006, pages five and six. [63628]

John Reid: The detailed terms of the loan are contained in the Aquila/Chertsey loan note, a copy of which will be placed in the Library of the House. Qinetiq's payments to the Ministry of Defence were staged in line with the sale receipts received. The loan has now been repaid in full.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the 'specific properties' were on which the Qinetiq loan referred to on page five of the National Audit Office Audit of Assumptions for Budget 2006 was secured. [63677]

John Reid: The properties were the sites at Aquila (Bromley) and Chertsey. Further details can be found in the Aquila/Chertsey Loan Note, a copy of which will be placed in the Library of the House.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the loan taken out by Qinetiq referred to in pages 5 and 6 of the National Audit Office Audit of Assumptions for Budget 2006 was first made public. [63678]

John Reid: The loan note was first made public during the Defence Select Committee evidence session of 21 January 2003 on the Qinetiq PPP, (para. 91 of the Defence Committee Minutes of Evidence of 21 January 2003 refers), as the note was to form part of the consideration for the sale of Qinetiq to Carlyle in February 2003.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what penalties were incurred by Qinetiq for failure to pay the 2004–05 repayments on the loan referred to on pages 5 and 6 of the National Audit Office's Audit of Assumptions for Budget 2006; [62398]

(2) what the timetable is for Qinetiq's repayment of the remaining £46 million of the loan referred to on page seven of the National Audit Office Audit of Assumptions for Budget 2006; [63626]

(3) for what reasons Qinetiq did not meet the expected timetable of repayments in 2004 for the loan note secured on the sale of 'specific properties', referred to on pages five and six of the National Audit Office Audit of Assumptions for Budget 2006. [63676]

John Reid [holding answer 30 March 2006]: There were no penalties, and no fixed term for the repayment of the loan referred to in the National Audit Office's Audit. This was the Aquila/Chertsey Loan Note, between the Ministry of Defence (MOD) and Qinetiq, which formed part of the receipt from the initial sale of a minority equity interest in Qinetiq to Carlyle in 2003. The loan note was secured against the sale of Qinetiq property at Aquila (Bromley) and Chertsey. No firm schedule of repayments could be laid down as the income from the sale was conditional on the achievement of various stages of planning permission, and so the Budget assumptions were based on estimates of time scales for this planning permission. These original estimates were not achieved, and hence payments to be made by Qinetiq to the MOD slipped.

The loan note has been repaid in stages with the bulk of the money, some £43.5 million being paid in September 2005, and the final outstanding amount, some £2.5 million being paid at the end of March 2006.

Macedonia

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the bid by Macedonia to join NATO; and if he will make a statement. [64488]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: I have been asked to reply.

The UK welcomes Macedonia's bid to join NATO. Macedonia is a member of NATO's Partnership for Peace and has a Membership Action Plan. We look forward to her eventual membership. But, as for all applicants, Macedonia must first meet the membership criteria in full. Good progress is being made in defence reform, although further work is needed. Political conditionality is also important. This includes full implementation of the Ohrid Framework Agreement, and reform of the economy and the judiciary. The proper conduct of parliamentary elections later this year will be an important element in meeting the political conditionality requirements.

Nuclear Equipment (Waste)

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the total amount of waste produced by nuclear submarines and their reactors has been over the last 30 years. [63780]

Mr. Ingram: No central records are held on the total amount of waste produced by nuclear submarines and their reactors over the last 30 years. However, records held by individual sites in the UK involved in the nuclear submarine programme show that since 1988, the earliest date for which records are available, 3,344 m^3 of Low Level Radioactive Waste (before treatment and super-compaction) and 114 m^3 of Intermediate Radioactive Waste has been produced.

The "United Kingdom Radioactive Waste Inventory" to which the Ministry of Defence contributes provides periodic snapshots on all radioactive waste stocks, including levels of waste, location and whether the waste is held in temporary or permanent storage. The inventory has previously been published to show snapshots of waste stocks in 1984,1985,1986,1987,1988,1989, 1991, 1994, 1998 and 2001, and a copy of the most recent inventory, for 2004, is available on Nirex's website at http://www.nirex.co.uk/foi/ukinvent/.

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the total amount of waste produced from nuclear warheads that have been decommissioned has been over the last 30 years. [63781]

Mr. Ingram: The amount of waste arising specifically from the decommissioning of nuclear warheads is not recorded separately from waste arising from other phases of the programme. The information requested cannot therefore be provided.

Records of radioactive wastes for the totality of the nuclear warhead programme are published periodically by NIREX in the Nuclear Waste Inventory sponsored by DEFRA. The latest issue is dated 19 January 2006 and is available at http://www.nirex.co.uk.

Pensions

Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to the answer to question 61540, on pension rights, what employment status members of the reserve forces are classed as having. [64084]

Mr. Touhig: Members of the reserve forces are part of the armed forces of the Crown and the power to maintain them is found in section 1 of the Reserve Forces Act 1996. That Act provides a number of different forms of service which reservists may undertake. The conditions of service which reservists serve under reflect the form of service undertaken.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make it his policy to advise relatives of deceased armed services personnel to seek independent legal advice before signing pensions contracts; and if he will make a statement. [64040]

Mr. Touhig: Dependants of deceased service personnel do not have to sign a pension contract to receive death benefits from the armed forces pension schemes. The benefits are paid in accordance with the terms of the appropriate pension scheme. The only requirement is for the dependant to confirm they are an eligible beneficiary and to sign a claim form to that effect. The Ministry of Defence already advises in its explanatory armed forces pension booklets that, if individuals require financial or legal advice regarding pension matters, they should seek independent advice.

Submarines (Astute Class)

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects Astute class submarines (a) HMS Ambush and (b) HMS Artful to come into service. [64245]

Mr. Ingram: HMS Ambush is expected to enter service in 2010, and HMS Artful in 2012.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Renewable Energy

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what renewable energy projects his Department is supporting in developing countries. [62475]

Mr. Thomas: DFID is committed to increasing access to reliable and affordable energy as an essential catalyst for reducing poverty and increasing economic growth in developing countries. We agree that renewable energy has an increasingly important role to play in helping developing countries make progress towards the Millennium Development Goals.

DFID is working with international networks such as the Global Village Energy Partnership (GVEP) and the EU energy initiative (EUEI) to promote access to affordable energy services, drawing on the full menu of technology options, including renewable energy.

DFID has supported the creation of a new €220 million EU energy facility, which will invite calls for proposals later this year. This grant fund aims to improve access to reliable and affordable energy, especially in Africa, and is encouraging viable renewable energy proposals.

We are also encouraging the World Bank and other development partners to give renewable energy greater attention as part of their efforts to improve access to energy.

The World Bank is scaling up its financial support for renewable energy and energy efficiency and announced in December 2005, a rise to $299 million for the year to June 2005, compared to an average of $209 million per annum over the previous three years. These figures exclude large hydropower projects and exceed the commitment they made in 2004 to increase their renewable energy and energy efficiency investments by 20 per cent. per annum over the next five years. We very much welcome this increased investment by the World Bank on clean energy.

DFID has provided around £3.4 million for renewable energy research projects in the last eight years. This was spent on the development and promotion of renewable energy, especially for rural communities. It has included a wide range of technologies such as wind, small hydropower, solar and biomass.

Sri Lanka

Mr. Khan: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what contribution the UK is making towards the efforts to destroy landmines in Sri Lanka. [63116]

Mr. Thomas: The United Kingdom is a major contributor to mine action in Sri Lanka. We have provided £1 million through the United Nations to support demining and mine awareness in conflict affected areas. A further £669,766 has been committed to two non governmental organisations (NGOs), the Mine Action Group and the HALO Trust, for mine action between 2004 and 2007.

The programmes, together with those from the wider international community, have been successful. Deaths from mines have been largely eliminated, although there are still a small number of casualties each year, especially in the far north of Sri Lanka. Nevertheless the Government estimate that some 700,000 to 1,000,000 mines remain to be cleared.

Given the dependence upon mines in militarily significant areas, it will be many more years before Sri Lanka will be landmine free, and before the Government will feel able to sign the Ottawa Treaty. The Government of Sri Lanka is planning to create within the Sri Lankan army, a national capability to pursue mine action work after 2008. DFID will review progress during 2007 and, in the light of this, consider further support.

World Cup (Complimentary Tickets)

Mr. Hands: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many complimentary tickets his Department has received for games taking place at the FIFA World Cup 2006 in Germany. [63911]

Hilary Benn: None.

LEADER OF THE HOUSE

Media Briefing

Norman Baker: To ask the Leader of the House under what circumstances Ministers are permitted to release material to media outlets in advance of a statement being made to Parliament, when the House is sitting. [63155]

Mr. Hoon: Paragraph 7.1 of the Ministerial Code makes it clear that

> "When Parliament is in session, the most important announcements of Government policy should be made, in the first instance, in Parliament."

WORK AND PENSIONS

Financial Assistance Scheme

Jenny Willott: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the (a) average, (b) highest and (c) lowest payment made to individuals under the Financial Assistance Scheme has been; what the equivalent figures are for recipients living in Wales; and if he will make a statement. [64133]

Mr. Timms: The Financial Assistance Scheme will provide a qualifying member with assistance that will top up their scheme pension to a level broadly equivalent to 80 per cent. of their expected pension. Payments are subject to a de minimis level and a cap. Initial payments, when made, provide a top up to 60 per cent. of expected pension.

The following monthly payments have been made, before deduction of income tax.

(a) average	190.34
(b) highest	629.84
(c) lowest	50.08

The equivalent figures for recipients living in Wales are

(a) average	196.21
(b) highest	629.84
(c) lowest	50.08

Jobcentre Plus

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will list the (a) public, (b) private and (c) voluntary sector organisations which have contracts with Jobcentre Plus. [61415]

Margaret Hodge: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the chief executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lesley Strathie:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question asking if he will list the (a) public (b) private and (c) voluntary sector organisations which have contracts with Jobcentre Plus. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

Information on contracts awarded prior to September 2005 is not broken down in the way in which you have requested and could only be obtained at disproportionate cost. However, I am able to provide a list of organisations to which Jobcentre Plus has awarded contracts since September 2005, broken down by legal status, and this is set out in the attached table.

I hope this is helpful.

Pension Service

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether it is the policy of the Pension Service to refuse to accept telephone call claims for pension credit from citizens advice bureaux' advisers on behalf of clients. [64503]

Mr. Timms: The Pension Service welcomes calls from Citizens Advice Bureaux and any third parties acting on behalf of our customers. Third party callers are expected to confirm their client's security identity and their authority to speak on the client's behalf. Once this has been confirmed, the application is taken as normal.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Colin Worton

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment he has made of the police handling of the Colin Worton case. [63445]

Mr. Hanson: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has reviewed Mr. Worton's case and taken account of the assessment made by the trial judge and the Police Ombudsman and has concluded that there is no evidence of serious default by the police. The Secretary of State has written to Mr. Worton advising him of the decision in his case.

Illegal Drugs

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland pursuant to the answer of 1 March 2006, Official Report, column 778W, on illegal drugs, how many of those convicted for drug-related offences served custodial sentences. [59610]

Mr. Hanson: The table provides the number of those convicted of drug-related offences who were sentenced to immediate custody from 2000 to 2003. Sentence data beyond 2003 are currently not available.

The Northern Ireland Office

IntertradeIreland

Sammy Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will commission an independent review into the management and operation of IntertradeIreland. [58936]

Angela E. Smith: I am aware of recent anonymous allegations about the financial management and other matters in IntertradeIreland. The Department of Enterprise, Trade and Investment, in conjunction with the Southern co-sponsor Department and the Board of IntertradeIreland, has already initiated urgent inquiries into the issues raised in the letter.

Saville Report

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when the Saville Report will be published. [64300]

Mr. Hanson: The independent Bloody Sunday Inquiry has informed me that they are now engaged in compiling their final report. Due to the vast amount of evidence that must be considered this is a very time consuming process and it is difficult at this stage to be precise about when the report will be presented to the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH OFFICE

Acholi People

Mr. Jeremy Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps the Government are taking to assist the Acholi people of Uganda who have been internally displaced and are living in camps. [64029]

Ian Pearson: The Acholi are one of the biggest communities affected by the long-running and brutal conflict in northern Uganda. In some of the affected districts over 90 per cent. of the population are displaced by the conflict and in total 1.7 million Ugandans are living in camps for internally displaced people.

The Ugandan Government have primary responsibility to protect its citizens and to deal with the conflict and its humanitarian consequences. The UK has helped lead international efforts to address the underlying causes of the problems in northern Uganda and to provide humanitarian assistance to those affected, including the Acholi.

Over the last 12 months we have provided over £20 million in humanitarian assistance; this includes £10.7 million to the World Food Programme to provide food and £6.8 million to support a UN inter-agency programme to address health problems in the camps. We have recently agreed to channel an additional £4.9 million over two years to the United Nations Children's Fund's (UNICEF) programmes covering water and sanitation and the provision of emergency requirements, such as shelter and protection.

Arab League Summit

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the outcome of the recent Arab League summit in Khartoum; and if he will make a statement. [64489]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: The Arab League summit took place in Khartoum on 28–29 March. The summit covered a wide range of issues but focussed on the situation in Darfur and the Middle East Peace Process.

We welcome the focus of the recent Arab League summit on the situation in Darfur. It is important that the Arab League and its member states do all they can, in co-ordination with the rest of the international community, to help resolve the conflict in Darfur. In particular, we call on them to use their influence to press the Government of Sudan and the rebel movements to reach a peace deal by the deadline of 30 April as set by the African Union.

The Arab League's re-endorsement of the Beirut Declaration at the Arab summit in Khartoum is also a welcome step. We look forward to working with the Arab League, Israel and the Palestinian Authority towards a comprehensive, just and lasting peace based on a two state solution with Israeli and Palestinian states living side by side in peace.

Ascension Island

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions (a) he and (b) officials from his Department have had on the future of Ascension Island since 14 March 2006; and with whom the discussions were held. [63679]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has not held discussions on the future of Ascension Island since 14 March 2006.

Officials in London have met with the following interlocutors to discuss a range of issues related to Ascension Island:

21 March 2006

The Administrator of Ascension Island

A member of the public and constituent of Mr. Cable

22 March 2006

Representatives of the User Organisations on Ascension Island

(Permanent Joint Headquarters (Ministry of Defence), VT

Merlin, Government Communications Headquarters, Cable and Wireless, Crown Counsel Designate, St Helena)

28 March 2006

Overseas Territories Department (Foreign and Commonwealth Office) internal meeting

29 March 2006

Managing Director and Director, Richard James International

30 March 2006

Director of Finance, Ascension Island

The administrator on Ascension Island met the US base commander and his immediate superior from Patrick air force base on 4 April 2006.

Belarus

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on how many occasions the UK Government has made representations to the Government of Belarus in the past 12 months regarding oppression of people on the grounds of religious belief in that country. [63268]

Mr. Douglas Alexander [holding answer of 18 April 2006]: The Government continues to raise human rights issues with the Belarusian authorities, both bilaterally and together with EU partners. During the past 12 months we raised the case of one Protestant church on four separate occasions and restrictions on freedom of worship in general on at least 12 occasions. Freedom of worship was also referred to in a resolution critical of Belarus' human rights record sponsored by the EU at the April 2005 UN Commission on Human Rights. Our ambassador in Minsk also met with leaders of churches under pressure from the authorities to hear their concerns.

Burma (IDPs)

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the number of internally displaced persons in Burma; and if he will make a statement. [64491]

Ian Pearson: It is estimated that there are at least 540,000 internally displaced persons in Burma, though detailed information is hard to obtain. We are aware of renewed large-scale displacements in northern Karen State. In addition to this, there are approximately 500,000 refugees in neighbouring countries. We continue to monitor the situation closely.

Falun Gong

Sammy Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the treatment of Falun Gong prisoners in China; and what representations the Government has made to the government of China about the alleged practices at the Chinese Sujiatun camp. [64059]

Ian Pearson: We regularly raise human rights with the Chinese government, including the treatment of individual Falun Gong practitioners. Individual Falun Gong cases were raised with the Chinese government at the last round of the EU-China Human Rights Dialogue in October 2005.

The Government have seen no evidence to substantiate the reports circulating about the treatment of Falun Gong practitioners in Sujiatun camp. We have not made representations to the Chinese government about these reports. However, I raised concerns on 7 April with the Chinese government about the general practice of organ harvesting from death row prisoners and the trade in their organs.

The Government welcome the announcement by the Chinese Ministry of Health of a new regulation to come into effect on 1 July, to ban the sale of organs and introduce medical standards for organ transplants.

Foreign Policy Centre

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs for what purposes his Department provides funding to the Foreign Policy Centre; and how much has been provided in each year since 1997. [63247]

Mr. Straw: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) has not provided any funding to the Foreign Policy Centre in this period. We define 'funding' as payments made to an organisation which are not in respect of goods or services that the organisation has or will be providing to the FCO, but are instead made to support the organisation in its work.

A number of payments have been made to the Foreign Policy Centre during this period, but all such payments have been for goods and/or services provided by this organisation. The following payments over £100 were made:

2003	Consultancy Work	8,125
2003	Organising Consular Seminar	10,060
2003	Consultancy work for the Community Relations Unit	26,300
4 April 2004	Glasgow Discussion Sheets for Partnerships and Networks Development Unit (now UK Outreach)	2,500
7 July 2004	Part payment for organisation of a meeting at Ditchley Park	35,000
15 September 2004	Part payment for organisation of a meeting at Ditchley Park	35,000
27 January 2005	Chinese New Year Event List for Partnerships and Networks Development Unit (now UK Outreach)	3,950
29 January 2005	Africa List for Partnerships and Networks Development Unit (now UK Outreach)	3,950
25 February 2005	Part payment for organisation of a meeting at Ditchley Park	23,095
13 April 2005	Welsh List for Partnerships and Networks Development Unit (now UK Outreach)	3,950
30 October 2005	Contribution to the cost of design and production of 1,500 "Europe in a Global Age" pamphlets	1,615
17 March 2006	Payment for organising a foreign policy seminar	26,950

France (Rioting)

Stephen Hesford: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he has had discussions with the French Government about the recent riots. [64318]

Ian Pearson: No.

General Ratko Mladic

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the recent disclosure by the government of Serbia, that Serbian intelligence and army officials conspired to conceal the movements of General Ratko Mladic; and if he will make a statement. [64492]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: We have noted the public disclosure from the Supreme Defence Council in February, based on a military security service report, that elements of the Serbia and Montenegro military had sheltered Mladic until June 2002. The UK expects all those involved in sheltering Mladic to be fully investigated and prosecuted. Full co-operation with the International Criminal Tribunal for Yugoslavia remains a fundamental requirement for Serbia and Montenegro to move closer to Euro-Atlantic integration.

Guatemala

Tom Levitt: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent assessment he has made of (a) human rights and (b) the rule of law in Guatemala. [64510]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: The Human Rights situation in Guatemala has improved since the signing of the Peace Accords in 1996, following 36 years of conflict. However, we continue to be concerned by the growth of organised crime, the activities of gangs, called maras, and widespread impunity which threaten the rule of law in Guatemala. We are also concerned by attacks on human rights defenders and the increase in violence against women.

Our Embassy in Guatemala City works closely with human rights organisations and will continue to press the Guatemalan authorities to implement in full the 1996 Peace Accords, investigate reports of human rights abuses thoroughly and tackle impunity.

Tom Levitt: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the likelihood of bringing to justice those responsible for mass killings in Guatemala in the 1980s; and if he will make representations to the government of Guatemala on this matter. [64511]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: The signing of the Guatemalan Peace Accords in 1996 brought an end to 36 years of conflict. The Peace Accords provided a blueprint for the Guatemalan authorities to pursue a process of social reforms, including the capacity to bring those responsible for human rights abuses to justice.

Though we have noted the progress made by the Guatemalan government in implementing the Peace Accords, that progress is slow and there is still much to be done. Many perpetrators of human rights violations continue to escape justice due to a weak judicial system.

The United Kingdom will continue to encourage the Guatemalan government to implement in full the 1996 Peace Accords, which covers improvements to the Guatemalan Judicial System. We will continue to monitor the efforts made by the Guatemalan authorities to bring those responsible for human rights violations to justice.

Holy See (British Ambassador)

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs who the British ambassador to the Holy See was in each year since 1983; what relevant specialist qualifications the present incumbent holds; and what the details of his career are to date. [64209]

Ian Pearson: Since 1983, the British ambassador to the Holy See has been:

1982–1985	Mark (later Sir Mark) Heath
1985–1988	David Lane
1988–1991	John Bradley
1991–1995	Andrew Palmer
1995–1998	Maureen MacGlashen
1998–2002	Mark Pellew
2002–2005	Kathryn Colvin
2005 to date	Francis Campbell

The ambassador to the Holy See needs to be a high-calibre individual, with proven political and strategic awareness, diplomatic and interpersonal skills, have an in-depth knowledge of Government, be able to deal with complex issues, be able to build effective and lasting relationships and be able to communicate in Italian and French to a high standard.

The present ambassador's particular knowledge and understanding of the mechanics of Government, his background in diplomacy, his experience outside the Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO), his work with faith organisations and civil society in the UK and internationally make him ideally placed to promote and develop the UK's International Priorities with regard to the Holy See. The details of the ambassador's career are:

Curriculum Vitae

Full name	Mr. Francis Martin-Xavier Campbell
Date of birth	20 April 1970
2005	Senior Policy Director, Amnesty International

Jericho Prison

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what observations in relation to (a) living standards for prisoners, (b) visits to prisoners and (c) locking of doors at night were made by the British Independent Monitors at Jericho Prison. [61002]

Dr. Howells: The monitors observed a set list of conditions to determine if the six detainees were secluded continuously. These conditions did not include examining the living conditions. The monitors observed the numbers of visitors, the time of the visits and if the visitors were searched. Monitors were unable to verify if all the doors were locked at night.

Joseph Kony

Mr. Jeremy Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether it is the policy of his Department to bring Joseph Kony before the International Crime Court. [64031]

Ian Pearson: Yes. The International Criminal Court (ICC) issued warrants for the arrest of five Lord's Resistance Army (LRA) commanders, including Joseph Kony, in October 2005. Responsibility to effect the arrest warrants lies in the first instance with the states on whose territory the five LRA commanders are believed to be, in this case Uganda, Sudan and the Democratic Republic of the Congo (DRC).

The UK is a strong supporter of the work of the ICC in its efforts to bring to justice the perpetrators of war crimes and crimes against humanity. We have stressed to the Governments of Uganda, Sudan and the DRC their obligations to detain the LRA commanders facing arrest warrants.

Kosovo

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent assessment he has made of levels of ethnic tension in northern Kosovo between ethnic Serbs and Albanians; and if he will make a statement. [64490]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: The situation throughout Kosovo remains tense but broadly stable as the United Nations-led final status process continues. I strongly condemn the criminal acts that have taken place in northern Kosovo in recent weeks. The Government fully supports the efforts of the Kosovo Police Service and the United Nations Mission in Kosovo to bring those responsible for such acts to justice.

The London Contact Group Ministerial statement of 31 January 2006 made clear that a final status settlement must be underpinned by principles that promote a multi-ethnic society. A copy of the statement has been placed in the Library of the House. In the context of the final status process we expect community leaders to continue to engage in creating a climate conducive to bridging the ethnic divide not only in northern Kosovo but the entire territory.

Lords Resistance Army

Mr. Jeremy Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the strength of the Lord's Resistance Army in Uganda. [64030]

Ian Pearson: There are no authoritative figures available for the current operational strength of the Lord's Resistance Army (LRA). It is likely that the total number has declined in recent years and current estimates put the number of combatants in hundreds rather than thousands.

The largest concentration of LRA fighters is thought to be currently based in the Garamba National Park in north-eastern Democratic Republic of the Congo. Elsewhere it is thought that the LRA has a presence in southern Sudan as well as northern Uganda, where it operates in relatively small groups and is highly mobile.

Pakistan

Mr. Jeremy Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent assessment he has made of the political situation in Pakistan; and if he will make a statement. [64072]

Dr. Howells: The political situation in Pakistan is continuously evolving. Despite occasional outbreaks of sectarian and other violence, the appalling bomb explosion in Karachi on 11 April being the most recent example, the country remains generally stable and Pakistan is an important partner for achieving UK strategic objectives. Officials in both London and Pakistan meet regularly with members of the Pakistani Government, opposition parties and members of civil society to ensure that we remain abreast of developments. We continue to work towards ensuring that the 2007 elections are both free and fair, thus helping Pakistan's return to full democracy.

Principal Civil Service Pension Scheme

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what proportion of members of the Principal Civil Service Pension Scheme in his Department joined the scheme before the age of (a) 20, (b) 25, (c) 30, (d) 35, (e) 40, (f) 45 and (g) over 45 years old. [62015]

Mr. Straw: The information is not currently available as my Department would need to review its pension records manually and this would incur disproportionate cost. We are currently upgrading our IT systems and I will write to the hon. Member should this information become available.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Connexions

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many hits the Connexions website received in each month since its inception. [64200]

Maria Eagle: The Connexions Direct website www.connexions-direct.com was launched on 21 October 2002.

The following table details monthly visits to the Connexions Direct website.

Correspondence

Sir Gerald Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills when she will reply to the letter dated 23 February 2006 from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton with regard to Dr. Arnandi Ramamudthy. [62437]

Ruth Kelly: My apologies to the right hon. Member for the delay in responding to his letter. This was due to a technical systems problem with the Department's correspondence handling system. I replied to this letter on 19 April 2006.

Departmental Policies

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will set out with statistical evidence relating as closely as possible to West Lancashire constituency the effects in West Lancashire of changes to her Department's policies since 1997. [64235]

Maria Eagle: The West Lancashire constituency lies within Lancashire local authority. The most recent Key Stage 2 and GCSE and equivalent results showing information for pupils attending schools in West Lancashire are given in the following tables:

Key Stage 2 results of 11-year-old pupils attending schools in the West Lancashire constituency—Percentage of pupils gaining level 4 and above

	1997	2005	Percentage point improvement 1997–2005
West Lancashire

[1] Parliamentary constituency figures are based only on all maintained schools(including City Technology Colleges and, from 2003, Academies) and from 2000 onwards have been adjusted in respect of pupils recently arrived from overseas.
[2] England figures are based on all schools and have not been adjusted in respect of pupils recently arrived from overseas.

GCSE and equivalents[1] results of 15-year-old pupils[2] attending schools in the West Lancashire constituency—Percentage of 15-year-olds gaining 5 + A-C and 5 + A*-G*

	1997	2005	Percentage point improvement 1997–2005
West Lancashire

National average
5 + A*-C	45.1	56.3	11.2
5 + A*-G	86.4	89.0	2.6

[1] From 2004 results incorporate GCSEs, GNVQs and a wide range of other qualifications approved pre-16. Prior to 2004 results are based on GCSEs and GNVQs only.
[2] As standard the results reported relate to pupils aged 15 at the start of the academic year, i.e. 31 August, and therefore reaching the end of compulsory education at the end of the school year.
[3] Parliamentary constituency figures are based only on all maintained schools (including City Technology Colleges and, from 2003, Academies) and from 2000 onwards have been adjusted in respect of pupils recently arrived from overseas.
[4] England figures are based on all schools and have not been adjusted in respect of pupils recently arrived from overseas.

At national level, standards have improved across all key stages. The Primary and Secondary National Strategies, together with the measures we have taken to help schools in the toughest areas are continuing to deliver better results.

Further information by constituency, is provided within the Department's 'In Your Area' website available at http://www.dfes.gov.uk/inyourarea. Where information is not available at the constituency level it has been provided at local authority level.

This website allows users to access key facts and local information about education and skills based on postcodes. The data available within the site offers comparisons between 1997 and the latest available year and covers five geographies. These are parliamentary constituency, ward, local authority district, local authority and Government office region. England figures are also provided. The information available within the website is grouped in a number of broad categories including literacy and numeracy at age 11, literacy and numeracy at age 14, GCSE and equivalent results, pupils with special educational needs, school initiatives, school workforce, school funding and resources, children's social services, early years, class sizes, post-16, higher education and adult education.

Additional information could be provided only at disproportionate cost. However, my Department is investigating ways in which we can disseminate more information about the effects of our policies at a local level.

Education Finance

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the average expenditure on education per pupil was in the (a) primary and (b) secondary sector in (i) Southend and (ii) Essex local education authority in each year since 1976. [64253]

Jacqui Smith: The following tables contain the information requested:

n/a = Figures are not available.

[1] The expenditure data to 1998–99 are drawn from the annual 'RO1' spending returns which local authorities submitted to the Department of Environment, Transport and the Regions (now the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister). Figures for 1999–00 to 2001–02 are drawn from Section 52 (Table 3) Outturn statements which local authorities submitted to the DfES. Figures for 2002–03 onwards are taken from the recasted Section 52 (Table A) Outturn statements. The change in sources is shown by the blank rows.

[2] Local Government Reorganisation (LGR) took place on the 1 April 1998. What was previously defined as Essex local authority pre LGR was split into Essex, Southend and Thurrock local authorities for the start of the 1998–99 financial year.

[3] School based expenditure includes only expenditure incurred directly by local authority schools. This includes the pay of teachers and school-based support staff, school premises costs, books and equipment, and certain other supplies and services, less any capital items funded from recurrent spending and income from sales, fees and charges and rents and rates. This excludes the central cost of support services such as home to school transport, local authority administration and the financing of capital expenditure. The pupil data are drawn from the DfES Annual Schools Census adjusted to be on a financial year basis.

[4] From 2002–03 the school based expenditure calculation is broadly similar to the calculation in previous years. However, 2001–02 and earlier years includes all premature retirement compensation (PRC) and Crombie payments, mandatory PRC payments and other indirect employee expenses, while from 2002–03 only the schools element of these categories is included. In 2001–02 this accounted for approximately £70 per pupil of the England total, while the schools element of these categories accounted for approximately £50 per pupil of the England total in 2002–03. Also, for some LAs, expenditure that had previously been attributed to the school sectors was reported within the LA part of the form from 2002–03 and would therefore be excluded, though this is not quantifiable from existing sources.

[5] Combined local authority and school based expenditure includes all expenditure on the education of children in local authority maintained establishments and pupils educated by the authority other than in maintained establishments. This includes both school based expenditure and all elements of central LA expenditure except youth and community and capital expenditure from revenue (CERA). From 2002–03 onwards, certain elements of central local authority expenditure cannot be attributed to a particular phase of education and consequently a sector breakdown is no longer available. Pupil figures include all pre-primary pupils, including those under 5s funded by the authority and being educated in private settings (only available from 1999–00), pupils educated in maintained mainstream schools and any other local authority maintained pupils. All pupil numbers are adjusted to be on a financial year basis.

[6] Expenditure was not distinguished between the pre-primary and primary sectors until the inception of Section 52 for financial year 1999–00.

[7] Spending in 1997–98 reflects the transfer of monies from local government to central government for the nursery vouchers scheme. These were returned to local government from 1998–99.

[8] The expenditure data for 1999–00 onwards reflect the return of grant maintained schools to local authority maintenance.

[9] 2004–05 data is subject to change by the local authority.

Note:

Figures are rounded to the nearest £10.

GCSEs

Mr. Jeremy Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what percentage of pupils achieved (a) one or more A* to C, (b) five or more A* to C and (c) five or more A* to G grades at GCSE in (i) England, (ii) Somerset and (iii) Taunton constituency in each year since 1997. Higher Education

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many people under the age of 30 were participating in higher education in each year since 1995; how many are expected to do so in each year to 2015; and what these figures represent as a proportion of the relevant age cohort. [62728]

Bill Rammell: The Higher Education Initial Participation Rate (HEIPR) is the measure that the Department uses to assess progress in participation. The HEIPR time series is available for 1999/2000 to 2004/05 and is shown in the following table.

HEIPR for English-domiciled first time participants in HE courses at UK higher education institutions and English further education colleges 1999/2000 to 2004/05

[1] Provisional.

Source:
Statistical First Release 14/2006: Participation Rates in Higher Education: Academic Years 1999/2000 to 2004/2005 (provisional).

The Department's expenditure plans allow for a continuing increase in HEIPR in the period to 2007–08, but we do not publish forecasts for individual years as these depend on the Spending Review settlements.

Our target remains to make progress towards a 50 per cent. participation rate by 2010, and we believe that progress will be made. There are a number of things that will help including continuing progress in attainment at age 18; the opening up of vocational routes into higher education, and the closer co-operation between universities and further education colleges we signalled in the recent FE White Paper; the new "train to gain" projects for employer-led higher education, and a continuing expansion of foundation degrees; and the package of support for part-time study that we announced last autumn.

House of Lords

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether any (a) employee of her Department, (b) person engaged by her Department as a consultant and (c) paid adviser to her Department is a member of the House of Lords; and if she will make a statement. [52892]

Bill Rammell: The Department does not employ any member of the House of Lords directly. Information about consultants and advisors to the Department is not collected centrally and can be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Pathfinder Schools

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what resources have been allocated to support Pathfinder schools in each of the next five years; [50252]

(2) how much has been awarded to Pathfinder schools in each of the past two years, broken down by local authority. [50253]

Jacqui Smith: The following table shows for each local authority the amount of money allocated to pathfinder projects in schools in the last two years. The figures shown for Building Schools for the Future pathfinder schools for 2005–06 are the amounts notified to local authorities and schools, but will be spent over the next three years. Information on resources for other Pathfinder schools over the next five years is not currently available.

School Performance Tables

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) when it was decided to remove the schools performance tables for the years prior to 2001 from her Department's website; [64273]

(2) if she will restore the performance tables for the years prior to 2001 to her Department's website; [64274]

(3) for what reasons the schools' performance tables for the years prior to 2001 were removed from her Department's website. [64275]

Jacqui Smith: It has not been possible to access the Achievement and Attainment Tables prior to 2001 from the Department's website because of a technical problem. In the interim anyone wishing to obtain the data can do so by contacting the Public Enquiry Unit. However, we expect the Tables prior to 2001 to be made available on the website again by mid May.

School Trusts

Paul Holmes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether the liability for paying contractors will remain with the local education authority in cases where schools becoming trusts are part of private finance initiative schemes. [64254]

Jacqui Smith: Yes. It is the local authority which signs the contract with the private sector PFI contractor and which therefore is liable for the payment of the unitary charge for the length of the contract. Schools will remain liable for the agreements they have made with the authority for contributing to the unitary charge. The governing body of each school included in a PFI contract must sign such an agreement before the PFI contract' can be signed. This commitment does not change if the school changes status.

Schools (Southend, West)

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what proportion of children attending schools in Southend West constituency come from outside the borough; and how many children who live in Southend West constituency attend a school in another local authority area. [64366]

Jacqui Smith: The information requested has been provided in the following table:

Secondary Transfer Appeals

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many and what percentage of secondary transfer appeals were (a) lodged, (b) heard and (c) successful in (i) inner London, (ii) each outer London borough and (iii) England in 2004–05. [64088]

Jacqui Smith: The latest available information on appeals lodged by parents against non-admission of their children to maintained Secondary schools is shown in the table. Information on appeals relating to 2004–05 will be available in June.

[1] Includes all pupils, irrespective of age, who joined a school at any time during September to January of the relevant academic year.
[2] Findings from a consultation indicate that the total number of appeals lodged by parents against non-admission of their children could be misleading. Some appeals are resolved before they reach a panel hearing (a place at an alternative school is accepted after an appeal has been lodged; the same parent can lodge appeals for more than one school but will not pursue them all). The number of appeals heard by an appeal panel is deemed to be the more reliable and critical indicator.
[3] Number of appeals heard by a panel expressed as a percentage of the number of appeals lodged by parents.
[4] Number of appeals decided in favour of the parents expressed as a percentage of the number of appeals heard by a panel.

Student Plagiarism

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many cases of serious plagiarism by under-graduate and post-graduate students were reported in the latest academic year for which data are available, broken down by university; and how many students had their degree consequently (a) withheld and (b) withdrawn. [64929]

Bill Rammell: This information is not held centrally. We recognise that plagiarism is a serious matter but higher education institutions as autonomous bodies are responsible for detecting plagiarism and determining what disciplinary action to take. The Quality Assurance Agency's Code of Practice and the Joint Information Systems Committee provide advice and guidance to institutions on dealing with this issue.

Truancy

Ms Diana R. Johnson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what assessment she has made of truancy levels in schools in (a) Hull North constituency, (b) Kingston upon Hull and (c) England; [64099]

(2) how many hours of school were missed due to truancy in each academic year between 1997 and 2005 in (a) Hull North constituency, (b) Kingston upon Hull and (c) England. [64101]

Jacqui Smith: The Department does not hold data on the number of hours of school missed due to truancy or the levels of truancy. In 2005, the proportion of half day sessions missed due to unauthorised absence (of which truancy forms a part) in maintained primary schools in Kingston upon Hull North Constituency was 0.60 per cent. and for maintained secondary schools 1.31 per cent. For Kingston upon Hull local authority 0.57 per cent. of half days were missed in primary schools and 2.78 per cent. in secondary schools. The comparative figures for England were 0.43 per cent. for primary schools and 1.23 per cent. for secondary schools. In September 2005, the Government announced a drive against pupils with high unauthorised absences in 146 secondary schools which account for 1 in 5 of all instances of unauthorised absence across the country. We have now extended this to cover 198 secondary schools and an estimated 13,000 pupils. This drive will provide an intensive package of support and challenge to these pupils and their families.

University Principals

John Penrose: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether (a) the Government or (b) any of its agencies have power to direct the governing body of (i) a university to dismiss a vice-chancellor or (ii) a college of higher education to dismiss a principal. [64462]

Bill Rammell: All universities and colleges of higher education are legally independent corporate bodies. Therefore, neither the Government nor any of its agencies have the power to direct the governing body of such an institution in any of its internal affairs, including dismissal of staff.

Youth Opportunity Fund

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what estimate she has made of the resources to be made available to West Lancashire District Council under her Youth Opportunity Fund initiative. [64227]

Maria Eagle: The Youth Opportunity Fund (YOF) and the Youth Capital Fund (YCF), which was also announced in the 'Youth Green Paper: Youth Matters', were allocated to local authorities from April 2006. The funds are designed to enable local authorities to develop new approaches to strategic investment in youth facilities, particularly in deprived neighbourhoods. Extra resource was made available for the YOF and YCF in the Chancellor's pre-Budget report in December 2005. A total of £115 million is available for both funds over 2006–08.

The allocation for both funds for Lancashire local authority is £657,899 a year for two years for the Youth Opportunity Fund and £569,031 a year for two years for the Youth Capital Fund. The funds are ring fenced and can only be spent on activities and facilities that young people want.

Each local authority is responsible for disseminating the funds within in its area. Therefore, I am unable to provide information about the amounts allocated below local authority level to show the funding for West Lancashire district council.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Carbon Dioxide Emissions

Norman Baker: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what estimate his Department has made of the carbon dioxide emissions resulting from (a) new house-building and (b) the retrofitting and reuse of buildings; and if he will make a statement. [55797]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 3 March 2006]: In support of the Government response to the Barker Review of Housing Supply, the department has carried out Sustainability Impact Study. This study includes an assessment of the embodied energy associated with new house building and of the energy used within new homes. A report of the findings of this study was published in December 2005 and is available on the ODPM website.

The BRE's Environmental Assessment Method (BREEAM) can be used to rate the environmental impact of building materials used and to assess the amount of carbon dioxide emitted in use for new and refurbished buildings.

Council Tax

Anne Milton: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many properties in (a) Guildford, (b) Waverley and (c) Surrey are eligible for a 50 per cent. council tax rebate. [64352]

Mr. Woolas: There were 30 properties in Guildford, 115 properties in Waverley and a total of 1,901 properties in the 11 local authorities in Surrey that were eligible for a 50 per cent. council tax discount as at 19 September 2005.

The figures are as reported by local authorities to the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister on the CTB1 and CTB1(S) forms.

Hugh Bayley: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the (a) average and (b) band D council tax was in each local authority in Yorkshire in (i) 2002–03 and (ii) 2006–07. [64319]

Mr. Woolas: Details of the council tax levels in each local authority in Yorkshire in 2002–03 and 2006–07 are published on the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's website. The details can be found under "Information For Taxpayers" at "Council Taxes" at: http://www.local.odpm.gov.uk/finance/ct.htm. This includes the average council tax per property and the average band D council tax.

Haven Gateway

Mr. Carswell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what percentage of the total amount of public money spent on the Haven Gateway Partnership up to 31 March 2006 was spent on (a) direct and indirect salaries, (b) public relations and communications, (c) capital infrastructure and (d) consultancy fees; and how much public funding has been allocated to the Partnership to 31 March 2006. [64265]

Alun Michael: I have been asked to reply.

Since its formation in May 2001 until 31 March 2006, the Haven Gateway Partnership has, received £1.641 million of funding to support its role as a Sub Regional Economic Partnership. As a percentage of this funding the expenditure breakdown is as follows: 20.5 per cent. on salaries, 18.4 per cent. on public relations and communications, 32.3 per cent. on capital infrastructure and 2.8 per cent. On consultancy fees.

Housing Act

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister (1) if he will make a statement on the role of NowMedical in determining the vulnerability of those applying as homeless under part VII of the Housing Act 1996; [32540]

(2) whether the Homelessness and Housing Support Directorate has encouraged local authorities to use NowMedical to determine the vulnerability of those applying as homeless under part VII of the Housing Act 1996; [32541]

(3) if he will commission research into the accuracy of decisions being made by private companies providing paper-based assessments of the vulnerability of homeless applicants. [32542]

Yvette Cooper: It is for local housing authorities to satisfy themselves whether individual housing applicants may be owed a duty under part 7 of the Housing Act 1997, and, if so which duty. As part of this, they will need to decide whether an applicant who is eligible for assistance has a priority need for accommodation. In cases where the applicant may have a priority need because of vulnerability due to a medical condition, the authority, may wish to seek a specialist medical opinion to help inform their decision, and should have regard to any medical or social services advice obtained. We have no plans to commission research into the accuracy of such advice at present.

Officials in the Homelessness and Housing Support Directorate work with local authorities to encourage good practice on preventing and administering homelessness. This includes sharing information on a wide range of specialist advisory services which other authorities have found useful. In providing this factual information, officials are advised to avoid making recommendations of any kind, and to stress that it is for authorities to decide which services to use and which providers to employ. Where an authority seeks specialist advice from any organisation to assist in making such decisions, they will need to satisfy themselves that the advice is soundly-based and reliable. Whatever advice is received the ultimate decision on vulnerability must rest with the local authority.

Applicants have the right to request an authority to review certain decisions, including a decision that the applicant does not have priority need because he or she is not vulnerable. If they are dissatisfied with a decision on review (or a review decision is not made within the prescribed time scale) they have the right to appeal to the county court on a point of law.

Housing

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the capital receipts from the sale of local authority housing stock in Tamworth were in each of the last 10 years; and what proportion of this income was (a) received by the borough council and (b) passed to his Department. [42075]

Yvette Cooper: Capital receipts from the sale of local authority housing stock, as reported by Tamworth are tabled immediately as follows. The receipts are net of discounts and are from Right to Buy and other sales to sitting tenants and owner occupiers.

Local authority housing capital receipts: Tamworth

Until 1 April 2004, with-debt local authorities were required to set-aside a proportion of their total housing receipts for repayment of debt. The amount of total housing receipts for both dwelling and non-dwelling disposals is given in the following table, along with the amount set-aside from those housing receipts. In April 2004 the set-aside regime was replaced by pooling in order to address the fact that the distribution of receipts was widely unequal across the country. Neither set-aside or pooling separately identify the amount set-aside or pooled from specific types of receipt.

[1] No data

The proportion of the housing capital receipt that a local authority retains is not simply the gross receipt less the set-aside or pooling liability. Local authorities may reduce the value of the capital receipt by, for instance, the cost of the administration fees involved in the disposal of the asset or other costs, for instance improvements to the asset in the preceding years, before calculating their set-aside or pooling obligation. Hence in the table above the amount retained will not be gross receipts less set-aside or pooled amount but rather gross receipts less deductions (for which we have no data) less set-aside or pooling obligations.

Since 1997 the Government have consistently invested more in housing than they have received in pooled receipts. In 2004–05 the amount paid to Government from all housing receipts (not just Right to Buy) was £1.7 billion. The amount invested in housing was £4.1 billion ie almost two and a half times the amount received in receipts. The ratio is expected to increase substantially in the future.

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will list the capital receipts from the sale of local authority housing stock in Islington for each of the last

10 years; and what proportion of the income was (a) received by the borough council and (b) posted to his Department. [39924]

Yvette Cooper: Capital receipts from the sale of local authority stock, as reported by Islington are tabled as follows. The receipts are net of discounts and are from Right to Buy and other sales to sitting tenants and owner occupiers.

P1AB returns from local authority to ODPM

Until 1 April 2004, with-debt local authorities were required to set-aside a proportion of their total housing receipts for repayment of debt. The amount of total housing receipts for both dwelling and non-dwelling disposals is given in the following table, along with the amount set-aside from those housing receipts. In April 2004 the set-aside regime was replaced by pooling in order to address the wide inequality in receipts between areas. Neither set-aside or pooling separately identify the amount set-aside or pooled from specific types of receipt.

Financial year	Housing capital receipts (£000)	Set-aside/ pooled (£000)	Percentage set-aside/ pooled
1996–97	10,375	7,062	68
1997–98	14,339	10,084	70
1998–99	21,717	12,606	58
1999–2000	34,519	22,427	65
2000–01	47,900	29,598	62
2001–02	63,775	36,930	58
2002–03	68,730	29,598	43
2003–04	80,202	[1]—	n/a
2004–05	90,560	48,316	54

The proportion of the housing capital receipt that a local authority retains is not simply the gross receipt less the set-aside or pooling liability. Local authorities may reduce the value of the capital receipt by, for instance, the cost of the administration fees involved in the disposal of the asset or other costs, for instance improvements to the asset in the preceding years, before calculating their set-aside or pooling obligation. Hence in the table above the amount retained will not be gross receipts less set-aside or pooled amount but rather gross receipts less deductions (for which we have no data) less set-aside or pooling obligations.

Since 1997 the Government have consistently invested more in housing than they have received in housing receipts. In 2004–05 the amount paid to Government from all housing receipts (not just Right to Buy) was £1.7 billion. The amount invested in housing was £4.1 billion ie almost two and a half times the amount received. The ratio of amount invested to amount received is expected to increase substantially in the future.

Parliamentary Questions

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister when he will reply to Question (a) 32540, (b) 32541 and (c) 32542 from the hon. Member for Norwich, North tabled on 23 November 2005. [49230]

Yvette Cooper: I have answered the hon. Member's questions today. I apologise for the delay in replying.

Planning Inspectorate

Mr. Chope: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make it the policy of the Government that there should be a public and open register of the qualifications, experience and training of members of the Planning Inspectorate. [62852]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 18 April 2006]: Although not currently made available in a register or list, the Inspectorate provides details of individual Planning Inspectors' qualifications and previous experience when requested. Following an analysis of requests received under the Freedom of Information Act 2000, the Inspectorate is considering how best to make more information about Inspector recruitment, relevant qualifications and training and the decision-making process more widely available.

There are no plans to publish details of the qualifications, experience or training of the Inspectorate's administrative staff.

Regional Government

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what powers county councils have to hold a local referendum on a local issue across the county area; and which tier of government would pay for the cost of the referendum. [62293]

Mr. Woolas: Any local authority may hold a consultative referendum on matters relating to services provided in pursuance of the authority's functions, expenditure on such services, or any other matter which relates to the authority's power to promote the well-being of its area.

The tier of local government which holds a referendum would meet the cost of that referendum.

CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

Electoral Reform

James Duddridge: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what options she is considering for the introduction of (a) electronic and (b) internet-based measures to reform the electoral process, broken down by stage of the electoral process; and if she will make a statement. [53886]

Bridget Prentice: We are considering how modern technology can be used to support and develop the electoral process. This could include registration, voting itself and the counting of ballots. Pilots to occur at the May 2006 local elections will include e-counting and the use of electronic electoral registers to support our investigation of how such technology might be employed in the future. Information Technology may also be valuable in providing information to voters during an election period and between elections to promote and facilitate democratic engagement and participation.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Car-jacking

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will introduce legislation to provide for the specific offence of car-jacking; and if he will make a statement. [64213]

Hazel Blears: The Government have no plans to introduce a specific offence of car-jacking. We are satisfied that car-jacking would inevitably involve the commission of one or more serious criminal offences. The exact charge would depend on the circumstances of the particular case, but the following offences are relevant:

Robbery contrary to section eight of the Theft Act 1968, for which the maximum custodial sentence is life imprisonment.

Taking a conveyance without authority contrary to section 12 of the Theft Act 1968, for which the maximum custodial sentence is six months.

Aggravated Vehicle Taking contrary to section 12A of the Theft Act 1968, for which the maximum custodial sentence is two years, or 14 years where a death occurs.

Kidnapping, a common law offence for which there is no limit fixed for the period of imprisonment.

Chewing Gum

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many fines have been issued to the public by the police for chewing-gum related offences in 2006; and how many were issued in the last 10 years. [63098]

Hazel Blears: Chewing-gum related offences are classified as littering offences and Fixed Penalty Notices are issued by local authority officials. Records of Fixed Penalty Notices issued to the public by local authority officials for littering offences are not notified to the Home Office.

Counter-terrorism (Canary Wharf)

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what (a) operations and (b) investigations (i) were undertaken and (ii) are being conducted related to the alleged attempted attack on Canary Wharf on 23 November 2004. [64387]

Hazel Blears: It is our policy not to comment on the details of alleged attempted terrorist attacks in the UK. These are operational matters for the police service.

DNA Database

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for what percentage of the population of West Lancashire the police hold a record on their DNA database. [64121]

Hazel Blears: It is not possible to provide the information requested for West Lancashire as the DNA subject sample records held on the National DNA Database (NDNAD) relate to police force area, not local authority area, but some data is available for Lancashire. Data from Census 2001 indicates that the population of Lancashire is 1,134,976. At the end of February 2006, there were 90,405 individuals with a profile on the NDNAD taken by Lancashire police.

These individuals would have been arrested, detained in a police station and had a DNA sample taken in Lancashire, but would not necessarily be resident in Lancashire. Using the previous figures, the percentage of persons who have a profile on the NDNAD taken by Lancashire police relative to the population of Lancashire is 7.9 per cent.

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the merits of establishing an independent body, with ethical and lay input, to oversee the working of the National DNA Database; and if he will make a statement. [64173]

Hazel Blears: The Government recognises the need for, and is committed to establishing, arrangements for ethical review of the policy and decision-making of the National DNA Database Board through an ethics committee. The Government believe that independent ethical advice and input is necessary to ensure that appropriate account of a wide set of views, and protection of individual rights, is retained in the decision-making of the Board.

Mr. Leigh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people have samples on the National DNA Database who have not been (a) charged with and (b) convicted of an offence. [59533]

Hazel Blears: Data are not readily available on the number of persons who have a DNA profile on the database who have been charged with, convicted of or acquitted of an offence. This data are not held on the National DNA Database (NDNAD), but can be obtained from the Police National Computer (PNC). There is an electronic link between PNC and the NDNAD which transmits certain information only. Home Office officials are working with colleagues in the Police Information and Technology Organisation (PITO) which is responsible for PNC and with police service staff to develop a process to routinely report this and other statistical information that is held on either NDNAD or PNC. This work is under way and I will write to the hon. Member as soon as the work has been completed.

Graffiti Removal Notices

Anne Snelgrove: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many graffiti removal notices have been issued in England since 2003. [64057]

Hazel Blears: Section 48–52 of the Anti-social Behaviour Act 2003 which introduced Defacement Removal Notices nationwide came into force on 6 April 2006. Since the 6 April the Home Office has not received any details of Defacement Removal Notices being issued.

Identity Cards

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make it his policy to provide the Information Commissioner with comprehensive powers to check the data protection compliance of the National Identity Card Scheme. [62560]

Andy Burnham: The Identity and Passport Service complies with the Data Protection Act, and this will continue once ID cards are issued, and the register is operational. The Information Commissioner is already responsible for ensuring compliance with the Data Protection Act, and he will continue to exercise this function in respect of the Identity and Passport Service. The Information Commissioner therefore has the power to ensure that the Identity Card Scheme complies with the Data Protection Act, and does not require further powers in order to carry out this function.

Indefinite Leave to Remain

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many applications for indefinite leave to remain under the provisions of the European Community Association Agreement there have been since February 2005; and how many have been completed. [64046]

Mr. McNulty [holding answer 18 April 2006]: Since February 2005, IND has received 2,577 applications for indefinite leave to remain under the European Community Association Agreements. Following resumption of consideration of this ECAA category on 14 February 2005, some 850 have been completed of which 109 relate to applications received since February 2005. This information is provisional management information and may be subject to change.

Inmate Repatriations

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will list the (a) occasions, (b) destinations, (c) prisons and (d) prison governor grade staff who have replaced prison officer grades in accompanying inmate repatriations outside the United Kingdom in each of the last five years; [63352]

(2) for what reasons and in what circumstances prison governor grade staff would accompany inmate repatriations outside the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement. [63353]

Fiona Mactaggart: The information is only available for the last two years since the creation of a dedicated repatriation group. In the last two years four governor grades have been involved in travelling abroad to escort repatriated prisoners back to the United Kingdom. One governor travelled to Japan, two to Australia, and one to Antigua making three occasions. All were governor grades from Wandsworth, which is the prison dedicated to repatriation cases. All occasions were in 2004–05.

These cases represent only a small percentage of the total number of repatriations.

The governor at Wandsworth operates the policy that governor grades should take part in repatriations only when there is an overriding operational reason to do so.

Motoring Offences

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the number of (a) males and (b) females who have received a fixed penalty for committing an offence under Section 14(3) of the Road Traffic Act 1988 (a) once, (b) twice, (c) three times and (d) four times and over; and if he will make a statement. [64024]

Hazel Blears: The information requested is not available.

National Offender Management Service

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the lines of accountability are under the National Offender Management Service in Wales for the delivery of the reducing reoffending action plan. [49058]

Fiona Mactaggart: The reducing reoffending action plan applies to England but the principles and broad approach to reducing reoffending is taken into account in 'Joining Together in Wales: an Adult and Young People's Strategy to Reduce Re-offending'. The strategy was published jointly between the Welsh Assembly Government and the Home Office and, following the outcome of the consultation, there will be a joint action plan to reflect the roles and responsibilities in Wales of the Welsh Assembly Government and the National Offender Management Service.

Otley Police Station

Greg Mulholland: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what guidance he has given to West Yorkshire police on the provision of 24-hour helpdesk services at Otley police station; [64406]

(2) what assessment he has made of the effects that the proposed closure of the 24-hour helpdesk at Otley police station will have on the residents of Otley, with particular reference to those without adequate access to public transport necessary to reach easily the nearest police station. [64408]

Hazel Blears: The management of the police estate and allocation of resources are matters for each police authority and the chief officer, who are responsible for assessing local needs. The ownership of police stations is vested in the local police authority, not the Home Office. Their use is a matter for local decisions.

Greg Mulholland: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what factors underlay the decision to close the 24-hour helpdesk at Otley police station. [64407]

Hazel Blears: The management of the police estate and allocation of resources are matters for each police authority and the chief officer, who are responsible for assessing local needs. The ownership of police stations is vested in the local police authority, not the Home Office.

Their use and disposal are a matter for local decisions. West Yorkshire police have informed me that research has been commissioned to investigate the number of visitors attending every front counter help desk in their force area. Decisions to close helpdesks or reduce hours of opening have been taken after consideration of the results of this research.

Prisons

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 12 October 2005, Official Report, column 490W, on the Prison Service, what proportion of the prison population has no recorded religious beliefs; and how many prisons have a multi-faith chaplaincy team that (a) includes and (b) does not include a representative of non-religious beliefs. [64076]

Fiona Mactaggart: At the end of February 2006, 32 per cent. of prisoners in prison establishments in England and Wales were recorded as having no religious affiliation. Chaplaincy teams include chaplains from a range of faith traditions depending on need and local circumstances. They would not normally include a representative of non religious beliefs. Chaplaincy teams provide pastoral support to prisoners and staff of all faiths, and none. Prisons provide a range of other support services and activities for those who do not wish to avail themselves of chaplaincy services.

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 8 July 2005, Official Report, column 557W, on prison food, what steps his Department has taken to ensure that only halal meat is served to Muslim prisoners in all Prison Service establishments. [64077]

Fiona Mactaggart: Prisons are required to offer a multi-choice menu. When a halal meat or poultry menu is offered, an alternative non-halal meat or poultry choice must be provided and clearly identified on a published menu.

Probation Service

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many complaints have been made about (a) Essex and (b) Southend probation services in each year since 1997; and how many of those complaints have been upheld in each year. [48870]

Fiona Mactaggart: A National Complaints Procedure, agreed by the Secretary of State, enables local probation areas to handle complaints. Unresolved local complaints are escalated to the independent Prison and Probation Ombudsman. The following table lists complaints made against Essex Probation and the number upheld in each year from 2001. Information is not available for the Southend probation service.

The following table shows the numbers of complaints received in total by Essex probation area since 1 September 2001 for each completed time period. The figures contain both formal and informal complaints. The number upheld column refers to the number of complaints where the area has accepted validity in the complaint and action has been taken. The following figures are not comparable to the figures collected by the independent Prison and Probation Ombudsman.

	Number received	Number upheld
September 2001-March 2002	8	1
April 2002-March 2003	23	2
April 2003-December 2003	24	2
January 2004-December 2004	21	3
January 2005-December 2005	13	2

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people in (a) England and Wales and (b) Lancashire were returned to prison after violating their probation conditions in each year since 2000. [61330]

Hazel Blears [holding answer 27 March 2006]: The table shows the number of recalls to custody for the whole of England and Wales, for each fiscal year since 1 April 2000 to 31 March 2005. The figures include recalls of those released on the Home Detention Curfew Scheme. The information is not broken down by county and to do so would incur disproportionate cost.

	Total number of recalls
2001–02	5,086
2002–03	8,388
2003–04	11,215
2004–05	11,081

Schools (Sexual Harassment)

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many sexual harassment cases have been recorded in secondary schools in (a) Romford, (b) Havering, (c) Greater London and (d) England and Wales in each of the last 10 years. [62979]

Bill Rammell: I have been asked to reply.

The Department for Education and Skills does not record the information that you have requested.

Serious Organised Crime and Police Act

Martin Linton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many protests have been granted permission by the police under the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 since it came into force. [64833]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Commissioner of the Metropolis is responsible for the day-to-day operational management of the force. I have passed your question to him and asked him to respond to you directly. I will arrange for a copy of the reply to be placed in the House Library.

Vandalism

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many instances of vandalism were reported in (a) Southend and (b) Essex in each year since 1990. [64365]

Hazel Blears: The requested information is given in the tables. Offences of vandalism are recorded within the criminal damage group classification. Crime statistics for Southend are recorded at Crime and Disorder Reduction Partnership (CDRP) level; and for the offence of criminal damage are available from 2000–01 to 2004–05.

Table 1: Recorded offences of criminal damage—1990 to 1997

Number

Period	Southend CDRP	Essex police force area
1990	—	14,265
1991	—	15,631
1992	—	16,959

Period	Southend CDRP	Essex police force area
2002–03	3,598	30,337
2003–04	4,210	34,253
2004–05	4,308	32,406

Note:
The data in this table takes account of the introduction of the National Crime Recording Standard in April 2002. These figures are not directly comparable with those for earlier years.

Violent Crime

Philip Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 12 January 2006, Official Report, columns 838–9W, on violent crime, if he will break down the information provided in the categories of (a) other assault and (b) other violence against the person, including the number of rapes. [46010]

Fiona Mactaggart: In the period January 1999 to December 2005 the National Offender Management Service has been notified of three rapes committed while the offender was subject to the HOC scheme. To break down further the cases listed under the categories of other assault and other violence against the person would incur disproportionate cost.

Wandsworth Council

Mr. Khan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much was provided to Wandsworth council to tackle antisocial behaviour in the last year for which figures are available. [64134]

Hazel Blears: A wide range of funding streams across government have a positive impact on tackling antisocial behaviour at a local level. For example, Neighbourhood Renewal programmes which focus on the most deprived areas and give practitioners and local communities a real opportunity to turn their neighbourhoods around; the Department for Education and Skills (DFES) through their work on schools and parenting contribute to preventing problems escalating and ensuring families get the support they need.

The Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (Defra) and their work in tackling litter and fly tipping which can often blight neighbourhoods where antisocial behaviour and crime can take hold; and the Department for Culture, Media and Sport (DCMS) who provide the opportunity to divert young people from the destructive and damaging involvement in antisocial behaviour.

The Departmental for Constitutional Affairs (DCA) also contributes to ensure a swift and effective criminal justice system for dealing with the perpetrators of anti-social behaviour activity. In relation to specific Home Office funding to tackle anti-social behaviour in the last two financial years we have allocated £25,000 to every CDRP in both England and Wales to fund an antisocial behaviour co-ordinator. This amounts to £9.4 million per annum. Funding for 2005–06 was part of the Safer, Stronger Communities Fund (SSCF) and this arrangement will continue for the next two years (2006–07 and 2007–08).

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Asda

Mr. Davidson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs on what date meetings have taken place between her Department and representatives of Asda, including Asda's parent company, Wal-Mart, in the last 12 months; and if she will list the participants. [59959]

Jim Knight: Given the very wide range of goods and outlets involved, the retail sector is affected by more regulations than any other sector. Consequently, major retailers will have regular contact with many departments and may also be involved in working and consultative groups. To list every meeting would involve disproportionate cost, so the following information relates to key meetings only.

In the last 12 months, meetings between DEFRA officials and Asda/Wal-Mart took place on 22 July 2005, 11 November 2005, 8 February 2006 and 3 March 2006. In addition, a meeting with DEFRA Ministers took place on 8 December 2005. Data privacy legislation makes it inappropriate to list the participants in those meetings.

Biological Diversity

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the conclusions of the eighth Conference of Parties on Biological Diversity. [64043]

Jim Knight: The eighth Conference of Parties to the CBD was held in Curitiba, Brazil from 20–31 March 2006. I attended the High Level Segment (HLS) from 26–28 March. During this period I co-hosted, with the Brazilian Deputy Environment Minister, Claudio Langone, a breakfast with business representatives attended by over 40 Ministers. I also had bilateral discussions with other Ministers and met representatives of UK stakeholders.

The COP adopted decisions on over 30 issues, including a new work programme on island biodiversity, and gave new impetus to capacity building for implementation of the convention in developing countries. Other key outcomes included:

an agreement to analyse and explore options for preventing and mitigating impacts of activities on deep seabed genetic resources in areas beyond national jurisdiction a renewed call for urgent action to tackle destructive fishing practices an invitation to the UN General Assembly to follow up work on the conservation and sustainable use of marine biodiversity in areas beyond national jurisdiction, including assessing the need for an implementing agreement under the UN Convention on the Law of the Sea a decision on access and benefit sharing of genetic resources to progress rapidly the negotiation of an international regime, with a view to completing the work before the 10th Conference of the Parties in 2010 the adoption of a global framework of targets and indicators to be reviewed after 2010 which will provide for a structured assessment of the 2010 biodiversity target actions to engage business in minimising the impact of its activities on biodiversity a number of actions relating to climate change and biodiversity including follow up with other biodiversity conventions recognition of the need to consider biodiversity in development-planning systems including poverty reduction strategies recommendation of approaches to addressing gaps in the international regime for tackling invasive alien species a streamlined and outcome orientated approach to national reporting which will support future editions of the global biodiversity outlook strengthened activities in the forest work programme relating to Sustainable Forest Management (SFM), Forest Law Enforcement Governance and Trade (FLEGT) and a precautionary approach to the use of GMO trees a decision on agricultural biodiversity including elements on food and nutrition, soil biodiversity and Genetic Use Restriction Technology (GURTS) which reaffirmed the precautionary approach to GURTS taken in decision V/5, adopted in 2000.

Pollution

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the levels of (a) carbon dioxide emissions and (b) greenhouse gas emissions were in the UK in each year since 1990; what the percentage change was in each year on (i) 1990 and (ii) 1997 levels; and what the breakdown in each year in emissions was between (1) industry, (2) transport, including separately (A) cars, (B) planes, (3) households, (4) the commercial sector, (5) the service sector and (6) other sources. [64384]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 20 April 2006]: UK net emissions of carbon dioxide—all sources minus all sinks—and total greenhouse gas emissions for 1990–2004 are presented in the table, along with the percentage change for each year compared to 1990 and 1997. The data exclude emissions from the overseas territories that are associated with the UK's ratifications of the UN Framework Convention on Climate Change and the Kyoto Protocol. The sector breakdown is consistent with that presented in the UK's climate change programme published in March 2006. Total UK greenhouse gas emissions from international aviation are also shown, but do not contribute towards the UK total in accordance with international guidelines.

Farming

Mr. Jeremy Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate she has made of the total number of farms in (a) England, (b) the South West, (c) Somerset and (d) Taunton constituency. [64066]

Jim Knight: Based on data from the June 2005 agricultural survey, the number of registered agricultural and horticultural holdings is as follows:

	Number
(a) England	195,908
(b) South West	49,714
(c) Somerset constituency	8,551
(d) Taunton constituency	1,915

Mr. Rogerson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions she has had with the banking industry on the provision of financial support to farmers who do not receive single farm payments by the end of March. [58353]

Jim Knight: My noble Friend Lord Bach met the British Bankers Association and other representatives of the major lending banks on 30 March to discuss the situation of farmers awaiting payment under the single payment scheme.

After the meeting, the following joint statement was issued:

"We have agreed that we will continue to work closely together in ensuring that farmers awaiting payment are offered support and help wherever possible. We recognise that these are difficult times for many farmers and that a flexible approach on all sides is required.

Lord Bach confirmed the new steps being taken by the RPA to speed up the validation and authorisation of payments, which the banks welcomed.

The banks re-emphasised that no viable business is being refused additional financial support and, as a result, no viable businesses are failing because of uncertainty about the payments timetable."

Traveller-related Crime

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions she has had with the Home Office on Traveller-related crime in rural areas. [64728]

Jim Knight: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister (ODPM) is the lead Department for issues relating to Gypsies and Travellers, and DEFRA welcomes its work on a range of initiatives, including provision of sites and law enforcement.

There are regular discussions between DEFRA and the Home Office at official and ministerial levels about all aspects of crime in the rural community. Our discussions cover all those living in rural areas—both the travelling and the settled communities. For example, DEFRA is working with colleagues across government on a Home Office initiative to reduce hate crime.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

Crown Prosecution Service

Vera Baird: To ask the Solicitor-General whether he plans to provide Crown prosecutors with electronic equipment to enable them to update the case management system at court as recommended in the National Audit Office report, HC 798 2005–06. [64862]

The Solicitor-General: The National Audit Office recommended that prosecutors should use palmtops to update the case management system while they are presenting cases at court. The Crown Prosecution Service is exploring the practical and technical issues raised by the recommendation. The CPS is making better use of information technology through the COMPASS programme and the COMPASS case management system. Prosecutors at most magistrates courts have access to information technology and the case management system.

Vera Baird: To ask the Solicitor-General what steps he plans to take to improve the way in which the Crown Prosecution Service prepares and brings cases to court in order to achieve better value for money from magistrates court hearings. [64888]

The Solicitor-General: The Crown Prosecution Service welcomed the recommendations contained in the recent National Audit Office report on the effective use of magistrates court hearings by the CPS. The CPS is already taking forward work on the recommendations, which focus on improving joint working with other criminal justice agencies, maintaining proper oversight of cases, and making more prosecutor time available for review and preparation. By their nature, each of the NAO recommendations is aimed at improving value for money.

Many of the recommendations go with the grain of performance improvement activity already in train, both internally within the CPS and externally with other criminal justice partners. Chief Crown Prosecutors continue to take the lead at a local area level in setting up arrangements with the police and courts to improve the efficiency of prosecution of magistrates court cases—for example, optimising the deployment of designated caseworkers at the magistrates court, a more focused approach to case progression, and an internal CPS structural exercise seeking to get the best match between the size of police divisions and magistrates court catchment areas in order to develop a more efficient model of CPS administration for standard application across all operational units and provide proper oversight of cases.

Vera Baird: To ask the Solicitor-General what steps he plans to take to improve the Crown Prosecution Service's performance in ensuring that trials and hearings in magistrates courts go ahead at the time allocated. [64889]

The Solicitor-General: The Crown Prosecution Service is involved at a local and national level in a number of projects and programmes to improve the effectiveness of trials and other court hearings. The CPS has contributed to the successful roll-out of the "Effective Trial Management Programme" across all 42 areas and to a continuing reduction in the number and proportion of ineffective trials.

More recently, the CPS has been contributing to a review of the magistrates court led by Lord Justice Thomas, the Senior Presiding Judge, which is focused on streamlining cases through magistrates courts. The CPS is playing an active part in this project, part of the "Criminal Justice, Simple, Speedy, Summary Initiative", recently announced by the Lord Chancellor.

Due to performance improvement flowing from the joint police/CPS charging initiative, and changes to the process applied by the court at the start of proceeding, it is intended that many more cases will be ready to proceed at the first hearing. This will rely on the right charge having been preferred; victim and witness needs assessments having been undertaken; witnesses' dates to avoid having been obtained should they be required to give evidence; any special measures having been identified; and advance information having been served on the defence and the court.

The revised process is about to be trialled at four magistrates court centres, prior to wider roll-out, following evaluation. The process should incentivise the guilty defendant to enter a plea at the earliest possible stage. In those cases where the defendant intends to contest the allegations, the process should also enable the court to isolate the triable issues with the parties and adjourn the case for trial, with the shared expectation that it will proceed to trial on the date fixed without further adjournment.

Vera Baird: To ask the Solicitor-General if he will make a statement on the report by the National Audit Office (HC 798 2005–06) that £24 million of losses occasioned in the magistrates courts in 2005 were caused by the Crown Prosecution Service. [64890]

The Solicitor-General: The National Audit Office report estimated that ineffective trials and hearings cost the criminal justice system £173 million. Of that sum it is suggested that the CPS was responsible for £24 million, the defence for £96 million, the police for £24 million, the courts for £21 million and the police and the CPS together for a further £8 million. Criticisms about the CPS's management and handling of cases are being addressed. The NAO found examples of good practice and the recommendations will help improve performance. The CPS is working with the police and the courts to improve performance in magistrates courts. The proportion of ineffective trials has declined from 31 per cent. in 2002 to 21 per cent. in September 2005.

Public Prosecution Service (Northern Ireland)

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Solicitor-General how many people are employed by the Public Prosecution Service in Northern Ireland; and how many are expected to be employed by the end of 2006. [65407]

The Solicitor-General: The Public Prosecution Service currently has some 450 staff. By August 2006 it is expected that the number of staff will increase to 500 as new accommodation in Belfast becomes available. In 2007, when the service is fully operational throughout Northern Ireland, it is expected that the number of staff will be in the region of 600.

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Solicitor-General what steps are being taken to ensure that there will be a reasonable cross-section of the community at large in each of the regional offices of the Public Prosecution Service in Northern Ireland. [65408]

The Solicitor-General: All staff for the Public Prosecution Service are recruited by the Northern Ireland Civil Service. Recruitment is on merit and carried out through open competition in accordance with fair employment and equal opportunities best practice and guidance as issued by the Northern Ireland Civil Service Commissioners.

WALES

Climate Change

Peter Law: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how the proposals to deliver Government strategies to mitigate and adapt to the effects of climate change as set out in the United Kingdom Climate Change programme, Cm 6764, will be implemented in Wales. [64302]

Mr. Hain: The Government and the devolved administrations published an updated UK climate change programme on 28 March. It proposes a range of measures to take forward our national response to climate change. These include supporting increased generation from renewable sources, encouraging the installation of energy efficiency measures in households, providing more reliable consumer product information, supporting more sustainable transport choices, introducing higher standards for efficiency in buildings and financing energy efficiency measures for public sector organisations.

The Welsh Assembly Government's environment strategy for Wales and its accompanying action plan, to be published shortly, will provide further details of steps to be taken to address climate change in Wales.

Departmental Websites

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list (a) the websites operated by his Department and (b) the reports placed on the internet in March 2006, indicating in each case whether paper copies were also made available. [65198]

Mr. Hain: The Wales Office operates www.walesoffice.gov.uk and its parallel Welsh language site www.swyddfa.cymru.gov.uk

No reports were placed by the Wales Office on the internet in March 2006.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Business Links

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how his targets on diversity and equality apply to contractors to the Business Links scheme. [63108]

Alun Michael: As from April 2005, responsibility for the local delivery of Business Link services was transferred from the Small Business Service to the regional development agencies. Regional development agencies are independent bodies. As scheduled bodies under the Race Relations (Amendment) Act 2000, the public sector race duty requires regional development agencies to have a duty to make race equality a central part of their functions. Similar duties are being introduced for gender and disability.

Business Incorporation

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the forms required to start a business in (a) 1990 and (b) 2005. [64174]

Barry Gardiner: To incorporate a company in 1990 applicants had to file the following forms and documents on paper with Companies House:

Form 10—statement of first directors and secretary and intended situation of registered office

Form 12—declaration of compliance

Memorandum of Association

Articles of Association

The same information had to be filed in 2005.

Not all businesses choose to incorporate. For example, sole traders and partnerships do not have to complete these forms.

Over 85 per cent. of companies are now incorporated electronically. The electronic process can take a matter of minutes and costs £15; the equivalent paper service cost £50 in 1990.

Computer Access (Disadvantaged Groups)

Peter Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans he has to bring forward schemes to assist disadvantaged groups to gain access to computers; and what involvement he anticipates the private sector will have in the delivery of these schemes. [63835]

Alun Michael: Discussions are already taking place between my Department, the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister and other Government Departments on addressing the important issue of digital inclusion.

The Government digital strategy, "Connecting the UK", sets out a number of actions that contribute to digital inclusion and encourage and facilitate participation in a digital society. We need to now find workable solutions for those hard to reach groups that most need assistance.

This is quite clearly a complex question and I believe the appropriate approach is to engage with all the relevant stakeholders, including those representing excluded and vulnerable groups, before arriving at conclusions about the best way forward.

Conditional Fee Agreement Regulations 2000

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether reference has been made to the Serious Fraud Office about breaches of section 4(2)c of the Conditional Fee Agreement Regulations 2000. [64514]

Malcolm Wicks: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave him on 6 March 2006, Official Report, column 1154W.

Contracts (Voluntary Sector)

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many contracts are let by his Department to voluntary sector organisations; of those how many are let on an annual basis; and of those how many had received finalised contracts for 2006–07 by 31 March. [63213]

Alan Johnson: This information is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Correspondence

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he expects to reply to the letter from the hon. Member for Maldon and East Chelmsford of 20 December 2005 on behalf of Ms Michelle Langton of Galleywood, Chelmsford. [63771]

Alan Johnson: My hon. Friend the Minister for Employment Relations responded to the hon. Member on 16 January 2006.

Defence Export Services Organisation

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what percentage of the staff of the Defence Export Services Organisation are engaged in facilitating sales to (a) Israel and (b) Saudi Arabia; and if he will make a statement. [64465]

Mr. Ingram: I have been asked to reply.

The Defence Export Services Organisation implements Government policy in respect of supporting legitimate defence exports by industry to a range of countries, including Israel and Saudi Arabia. Export licensing policy requires the Government to take into account concerns that proposed defence exports might be used for internal repression or international aggression, risks to regional stability, or other considerations.

Currently, less than 1 per cent. of DESO staff are engaged in export-related business to Israel and around 40 per cent. to Saudi Arabia. The latter figure includes staff in the Saudi Project Office who undertake a range of tasks principally associated with the performance of existing contracts.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many and what proportion of (a) staff and (b) new staff employed in (i) his Department and (ii) each of the agencies for which he has responsibility were registered as disabled in each of the last three years for which data are available. [61386]

Alan Johnson: The Cabinet Office collects and publishes annually statistical information on the civil service by Department. These include data on the number of staff in departments who have declared a disability.

The latest available information at April 2004 is available in the Libraries of the House and on the civil service website at the following addresses:

http://www.civilservice.gov.uk/management/statistics/publications/xls/disability_apr04_4nov04.xls

for data relating to 1 April 2004, and

http://www.civilservice.gov.uk/management/statistics/archive/index.asp

for previous reporting periods.

Between 1 April 2003 and 1 March 2006, 2.6 per cent. of new staff employed by DTI chose to declare a disability. Declaration of a disability is voluntary.

Information is not available for DTI agencies and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Astronomy Projects

Robert Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is the cost to (a) the UK and (b) each participating country of the (i) EU Extremely Large Telescope project and (ii) design study for the EU ELT project; which agency is responsible for the UK's contribution to the costs of the project; and if he will make a statement on the progress of the project. [62416]

Barry Gardiner: The Particle Physics and Astronomy Research Council is responsible for UK participation in astronomy research projects.

The international astronomical community is currently reviewing options for the building of an extremely large telescope with a diameter of between 40 and 60 metres. The total cost of a European ELT project would be about €750 million. The UK would have access to this ELT through its membership of the European Southern Observatory.

The share of costs in the project is still to be finally determined, but if it is funded through the ESO subscription the UK's share of the costs would be about 20 per cent.

The design study required for the European ELT project involves 30 organisations from 11 countries, and a total of €30 million has been provided for this phase of the project. This includes €12 million from the 30 organisations involved in the project, of which PPARC is investing a total of €2.4 million (spread over four years until 2008–09), €9.5 million from ESO, and €8.5 million from the European Union. It is not possible to give a more detailed breakdown of the investments made by each of the countries involved in the project.

Entrepreneurs (South-West)

Alison Seabeck: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will break down by city in the south west the figures produced for the percentage of would-be entrepreneurs aged 16 to 24 years and 16 to 64 years in the south west as set out in the Small Business Service Household Survey of Entrepreneurship 2003. [63366]

Alun Michael: A breakdown of the Small Business Service Household Survey of Entrepreneurship 2003 results by city is not possible since there are too few interviews in many cities to provide statistically reliable estimates.

However, the percentages of would-be entrepreneurs for the whole of the south west, and for all of England, are available.

Of those aged 16 to 24 years in the south west Government Office region, it is estimated that 19 per cent. are would-be entrepreneurs, compared with an England average of 14 per cent.

Of those aged 16 to 64 years in the south west Government Office region, it is estimated that 11 per cent. are would-be entrepreneurs, the same as the England average of 11 per cent.

EU Social Chapter

Chris Huhne: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) if he will list the occasions on which the UK has voted against the adoption of measures under the social chapter of the treaty on European Union since 1997; [63855]

(2) if he will list the directives and regulations with which the UK must comply in order to meet the requirements of the social chapter of the treaty on European Union; [63856]

(3) if he will list the statutory instruments that have given effect to the directives and other EU legislation passed in consequence of the adoption of the social chapter of the treaty on European Union; [63857]

(4) if he will list the changes to (a) working hours, (b) holidays, (c) maternity and paternity leave and (d) other terms and conditions of employment resulting from the UK's adoption of the social chapter of the treaty on European Union. [63858]

Mr. Sutcliffe: In 1991, in what was then the social chapter, the EU provided for member states to reach agreement on certain aspects of social policy. In 1997 the UK ended its opt out from the social chapter, which was then fully incorporated into the Amsterdam treaty in June 1997, coming into force in May 1999.

Since 1997 the Government have not voted against the adoption of any measures introduced as a result of the social chapter.

Directives introduced as a result of the social chapter, UK implementing legislation, and their effect are:

The burden of proof in cases of discrimination based on sex directive

Implemented in the UK by the Sex Discrimination (Indirect Discrimination and Burden of Proof) Regulations 2001. These provide that once a prima facie case has been made in an employment tribunal claim, the burden of proof is placed on the defendant (usually the employer) who will need to demonstrate that sex discrimination has not occurred.

The part-time workers directive

Implemented in the UK by the Part-time Workers (Prevention of Less Favourable Treatment) Regulations 2000. These provide for entitlement of part-time workers to the same pro-rata terms and conditions of employment as full-time workers;

The fixed term work directive

Implemented in the UK by the Fixed-term Employees (Prevention of Less Favourable Treatment) Regulations 2002. These provide equal treatment and prevent abuse of fixed term contracts;

National information and consultation directive

Implemented in the UK by the Information and Consultation of Employees Regulations 2004. These provide for new minimum standards for workforce consultation and involvement in firms with 50 or more employees;

Parental leave directive

Implemented in the UK by the Maternity and Parental Leave etc. Regulations 1999. These provide for parents to have the right to 13 weeks unpaid leave at the birth or adoption of a child;

European Works Council directive

Implemented in the UK by the Transnational Information and Consultation of Employees Regulations 1999. These require companies with at least 1,000 employees in total across the member states and at least 150 workers in each of two or more of those member states, to establish structures for consulting workers on issues that affect them.

Directive amending the 1976 directive on equal treatment for men and women in employment and vocational training

This directive incorporates European Court of Justice case law and strengthens the principle of equal treatment and the way it works in practice. Implemented in the UK by the Employment Equality (Sex Discrimination) Regulations 2005, these amend the Sex Discrimination Act and Equal Pay Act in respect of employment and vocational training.

Consumer Protection (Holidays)

Mr. Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps he has taken to ensure that British holidaymakers are able to seek some form of financial redress in appropriate instances where travellers are not undertaking a traditional package holiday; and if he will make a statement on the responsibilities of travel operators providing non-package holidays to ensure that compensation is made available for customers in the event of problems with that provision. [64395]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The Package Travel, Package Holidays and Package Tours Regulations 1992 (SI 1992/3288) place certain liabilities on businesses which fall within the regime for the proper performance of the contract, and requires them to provide sufficient evidence of security for the refund of money and repatriation in the event of insolvency. The regulations apply to businesses which organise, or sell, or offer to sell, at an inclusive price a pre-arranged combination of at least two of the following elements: travel; accommodation; and, other tourist services.

The regulations implement the Package Travel Directive (90/314/EEC) which is one of eight consumer facing directives currently undergoing review by the European Commission. We have not yet received any proposals for change to this directive from the Commission.

Holidaymakers who choose to make their own arrangements for travel and accommodation as separate items do not benefit from the provisions of the regulations, as there is no third party putting together a package of arrangements for them. However, those individual businesses with whom the holidaymaker contracts for services are obliged to meet their contractual obligations to the holidaymaker in the normal manner.

The Air Travel Organisers Licence (ATOL) scheme provides financial protection for package holiday travellers, including protection against airline bankruptcy. ATOL does not cover independently booked flights. For these flights, several airlines have agreed voluntary repatriation measures to ensure that stranded passengers are returned home at moderate cost. As regards refunds, several airlines now offer insurance against insolvency, and include notices on their websites highlighting the benefits of such insurance. The Government have also recently stressed the need for travellers to take out insurance against a range of misfortunes or expenses which can occur abroad.

Mr. Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much was spent by consumers on (a) package holidays and (b) non-package holidays in each of the last 20 years. [64394]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The Office for National Statistics holds records of the type requested in respect of overseas visits by UK residents only, for the years 1993 to 2004 inclusive. These are reproduced in the following table. I am not aware of any similarly extrapolated figures for package and non-package trips by UK residents within the UK.

International passenger survey

Home Computing Initiative Scheme

Jo Swinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many small businesses enrolled in the Home Computing Initiative Scheme in each year since 1999, broken down by region. [64164]

Alun Michael [holding answer 18 April 2006]: I am unable to provide a statistical breakdown of how many small businesses enrolled in the Home Computing Initiative Scheme in each year since 1999 or by region because this information is not available. However, recent figures provided by the Office of Trading tell us that nearly 4,000 approvals or HCI Group Directions under s101 (8) Consumer Credit Act (CCA) 1974 had been issued by OFT since January 1999. We are unable to break this list down by region or by size of business.

ICSTIS

Mr. Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many fines were imposed by ICSTIS in each of the last five years; what the maximum fine imposed during each of the last five years was; and what the total value of fines imposed by ICSTIS has been to date. [64396]

Alun Michael: ICSTIS's current method of providing statistics on fines goes back to 2001. The table provides figures back to 2001.

Fines issued

	Number of fines	Maximum fine imposed (£000)
2001	142	100
2002	214	75
2003	211	75
2004	155	100
2005	145	100

The total value of fines imposed from 2001–05 was £9,456,800.00.

Invoicing

Clive Efford: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the practice of naming individual company directors of small and medium sized businesses on invoices for the provision of goods and services to circumvent the protection of being a company limited by guarantee; and what powers companies have to require invoices to be directed to the company rather than individual directors. [63438]

Alun Michael: I have made no such assessment.

Section 349 of the Companies Act 1985 provides that the company's name must appear on its invoices.

Section 305 of the Companies Act 1985 provides that either all, or none, of the directors' names must appear on business letters where the company's name appears.

Both of these provisions apply to both companies limited by shares and by guarantee.

Minimum Wage

Mr. Jeremy Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate he has made of the number of people in (a) England, (b) the South West, (c) Somerset and (d) Taunton constituency who are earning less than the minimum wage. [64070]

Mr. Sutcliffe: For England there are approximately 1 million employees earning under the national minimum wage, and for the south west approximately 110,000 (the data come from ASHE 2005)

We are able to provide figures only for government regions and not constituencies.

Noise-induced Hearing Loss (Mining)

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the total value is of cost payments that have been refused for noise-induced hearing loss claims to his Department due to breaches of section 4(2)c of the Conditional Fee Agreement Regulations 2000. [64516]

Malcolm Wicks: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave him on 6 March 2006, Official Report, columns 1156–57W.

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what (a) average and (b) range of costs have been paid for miners' noise-induced hearing loss claims by his Department in each year since 1999. [64441]

Malcolm Wicks: Solicitors costs paid in miners' hearing loss claims since 1999 are as follows.

	Solicitor payments made	Total solicitors costs (£)	Average (£)	Min[1] (£)	Max[2] (£)
1999	499	394,329	790	85	15,198
2000	4,082	2,875,714	704	17	26,203
2001	8,534	6,152,368	721	11	9,382
2002	5,261	3,880,791	738	20	11,500
2003	3,371	2,773,995	823	3	8,000
2004	3,197	3,684,052	1,152	12	17,537
2005	4,132	4,884,638	1,182	17	10,020
2006	1,052	1,321,832	1,256	11	6,465
Total	30,128	25,967,721	862	—	—

[1] The lowest costs are part-payments of expenses with remainder recovered separately.
[2] The highest costs paid each year relate to claims pursued though litigation.

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry in how many claims to his Department by solicitors for miners' hearing loss an amount has been paid in costs for (a) work done by Melex Ltd., (b) fees to Vendside Ltd., (c) barristers' fees, (d) insurance premiums and (e) claimant loan interest costs. [64442]

Malcolm Wicks: There have been 10,376 noise induced hearing loss claims submitted by the UDM/Vendside since January 1997, for which costs have been paid to Vendside in 9,389 totalling £6.3 million.

The remaining information is not readily available. Miners' hearing loss claims are not schemed so solicitors' costs for each claim are dealt with on their own merits. Concerns relating to particular aspects of the costs would be raised as part of the negotiations on the appropriate level of costs for any given claim.

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry in how many claims to his Department by solicitors for miners' hearing loss an amount has been paid in costs for a referral fee to Beresfords solicitors, where a solicitor other than Beresfords has submitted the claim. [64443]

Malcolm Wicks: This information is not readily available. Miners' hearing loss claims are not schemed so solicitors' costs for each claim are dealt with on their own merits. However, we would not generally pay such a referral fee.

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the average (a) settlement and (b) costs paid for miners' noise-induced hearing loss cases has been in each year since 1999. [64445]

Malcolm Wicks: Compensation and costs paid for miners' hearing loss claims since 1999 are set out in the table:

	Average damages	Average solicitors costs
2000	2,357	704
2001	2,394	721
2002	2,286	738
2003	2,007	823
2004	2,392	1,152
2006	2,070	1,256

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry in what percentage of noise-induced hearing loss cases disputed due to breaches of rule 4(2)c of the Conditional Fee Agreement Regulations 2000, what percentage of cases included a disbursement payment to (a) Vendside, (b) Beresfords solicitors, (c) Melex Ltd., (d) Dr. Yeoh, (e) NIG, (f) Composite Legal Expenses and (g) Bank of Scotland. [64512]

Malcolm Wicks: This information is not readily available. Miners' hearing loss claims are not schemed so solicitors' costs for each claim are dealt with on their own merits. Concerns relating to a breach of regulation 4 of the conditional fee regulations would be raised as part of the negotiations on the appropriate level of costs for any given claim.

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many costs payments are being negotiated for noise-induced hearing loss claims to his Department due to breach of section 4(2)c of the Conditional Fee Agreement Regulations 2000; and how many involve Beresfords solicitors. [64513]

Malcolm Wicks: This information is not readily available. Miners' hearing loss claims are not schemed so solicitors' costs for each claim are dealt with on their own merits. Concerns relating to a breach of regulation 4 of the conditional fee regulations would be raised as part of the negotiations on the appropriate level of costs for any given claim.

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many individual claimants have been informed by his Department that their case is being delayed due to negotiations over costs payments for noise-induced hearing loss to his Department due to breaches of section 4(2)c of the Conditional Fee Agreement Regulations 2000. [64515]

Malcolm Wicks: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave him on 6 March 2006, Official Report, columns 1153–54W.

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many costs payments have been refused to solicitors for noise-induced hearing loss claims to his Department due to breach of section 4(2)c of the Conditional Fee Agreement Regulations 2000 in (a) 2005 and (b) 2006. [64517]

Malcolm Wicks: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave him on 6 March 2006, Official Report, columns 1156–57W.

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many costs payments have been refused to (a) Beresfords solicitors, (b) Bakewell solicitors, (c) Heptonstall solicitors, (d) Brown and Co. solicitors, (e) Ollerenshaw solicitors and (f) UDM/ Vendside for noise-induced hearing loss claims to his Department due to breach of section 4(2)c of the Conditional Fee Agreement Regulations 2000. [64518]

Malcolm Wicks: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave him on 9 March 2006, Official Report, column 1731W.

Postal Services

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much post was (a) undelivered and (b) lost in each of the last five calendar years. [64010]

Barry Gardiner: This is an operational matter for Royal Mail plc. Adam Crozier, the chief executive, has been asked to reply direct to the hon. Member.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make it his policy to link increases in postal charges to the performance of Royal Mail; and if he will make a statement. [65018]

Barry Gardiner: Under the Postal Services Act (PSA 2000) the Government introduced a strong regulator, Postcomm, to monitor Royal Mail's performance against agreed quality of service targets and to manage postal charges under price controls, which are subject to public consultation.

Export Licences

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the export licences granted for the supply of (a) communication and (b) technical components to the United States for incorporation into Predator Unmanned Aerial Vehicles since 2000. [64360]

Malcolm Wicks: Information on the exporter, end-user and expected end-use of the exports in question is commercially confidential and as such is exempt from disclosure.

The Government publish information on export licences granted by destination, including for transfers to the United States, in its Annual Reports on Strategic Export Controls, available from the Libraries of the House. The Government also publish quarterly licensing and performance information on the Export Control Organisation website, www.dti.gov.uk/export. control. Relevant entries in these reports include components for unmanned air vehicles, components for military aero-engines, components for military aircraft communications equipment, components for military navigation equipment and components for military radar.

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the export licences for components for use in Predator Unmanned Aerial Vehicles granted to Radstone Technology plc. since 2000. [64361]

Malcolm Wicks: Information on the Government's individual export licensing decisions is commercially confidential and I am therefore neither able to confirm nor deny whether Radstone Technology plc has been granted any export licences for components for Predator Unmanned Aerial Vehicles since 2000.

The Government publish information on export licences granted by destination, including for transfers to the United States, in its Annual Reports on Strategic Export Controls, available from the Libraries of the House. The Government also publish quarterly licensing and performance information on the Export Control Organisation website, www.dti.gov.uk/export. control. Relevant entries in these reports include components for unmanned air vehicles, components for military aero-engines, components for military aircraft communications equipment, components for military navigation equipment and components for military radar.

Regional Selective Assistance

Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether it is his policy that (a) the use of best available techniques and (b) compliance with the integrated pollution prevention and control regime (i) is and (ii) should be a condition of the award of regional selective assistance for industrial developments. [64143]

Alun Michael: The use of best available techniques and compliance with the integrated pollution prevention and control regime (IPPC) is not a condition of the award of assistance for industrial developments, as industry should be meeting all relevant regulatory obligations including IPCC as a matter of course.

From 1 April 2004 in England the Regional Selective Assistance scheme was re-launched as the Department of Trade and Industry's Selective Finance for Investment business support product. Support, which is discretionary, normally takes the form of a grant, which helps to fund new capital investment projects that lead to sustainable improvements in productivity, skills and employment. All applications are judged against specific product criteria, which include: need, eligibility, productivity, skills, job creation or safeguarding, viability, quality, national and regional benefit and additionality.

Sellafield

Jenny Willott: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much and what types of (a) additional hazardous waste and (b) spent nuclear fuel was discovered at Sellafield recently; and if he will make a statement. [64316]

Malcolm Wicks: Work at the Sellafield plant continues in order to gain a full understanding of the nature and extent of hazardous waste on the site. Recent detailed examination of one particular part of the Sellafield complex, the B30 pond, has shown that the volume of sludge is approximately 1,200 cubic metres, which is around 20 per cent. higher than previously thought. There has been no discovery of additional spent nuclear fuel.

A full inventory of the type and amount of nuclear waste in the UK is published by Nirex in conjunction with Defra and is available on their website.

Sunday Working

Anne Main: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent representations he has received from trades unions on the level of pay to shop workers working on Sundays. [64008]

Mr. Sutcliffe: We have been asking for views on the impact of further relaxation of the restrictions on Sunday shopping. USDAW (Union of Shop, Distributive and Allied Workers) and the GMB (Britain's General Union) have both responded with reference to the level of pay for shop workers on Sundays.

USDAW and the GMB are intending to publish their responses to the DTI's review on their respective websites: www.usdaw.org.uk and www.gmb.org.uk In addition, their officials will be happy to be contacted directly to discuss their evidence.

Anne Main: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the extent to which those who work on Sundays are paid extra; what trends in the level of payment his Department has identified; and if he will make a statement. [64009]

Mr. Sutcliffe: In January, we appointed independent consultants, Indepen, to produce an economic cost-benefit analysis of the impact of further relaxation of the restrictions on Sunday shopping. As part of this analysis they are researching Sunday premium payments for retail workers. We will publish Indepen's economic cost-benefit analysis in due course.

Tidal Energy

Jenny Willott: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate the Department has made of the price per kilowatt hour of electricity produced from (a) tidal lagoon and (b) multi-pooled tidal lagoon schemes; and if he will make a statement. [64417]

Malcolm Wicks: In common with other forms of energy generation the cost of energy from a tidal generating station will vary on a case-by-case basis.

Between 1978 and 1994 the Government supported the most comprehensive programme of research and development on tidal energy in the world at an overall cost in excess of £20 million. These studies considered schemes at a number of potential sites, the largest being in the Severn Estuary. The results of the Severn study were reported in Energy Paper 57 HMSO 1989 (ISBN 0 11 412952 5). The unit cost of generation for the Severn scheme was estimated to be 7.5p/kWh at a discount rate of 8 per cent. (based upon 1994 prices).

The most recent study of the Severn scheme carried out by the Severn Tidal Power Group (available at www.dti.gov.uk/energy/renewables/publications/Severnbarrage.shtml) estimated the unit cost of generation to be 6p/kWh (capital and operating cost).

The DTI has previously commissioned an independent assessment of a proposed tidal (single) lagoon scheme in Swansea Bay. That assessment suggests the unit cost of generation to be around 16p/kWh at a discount rate of 8 per cent.

TRANSPORT

A3 Hindhead

Mr. Arbuthnot: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what cost-benefit analysis he has made of (a) delays to date and (b) possible future delays in implementing the A3 Hindhead improvement scheme; [64725]

(2) what assessment has been made of the impact on the environmentally sensitive areas of the (a) Surrey Hills Area of Outstanding Natural Beauty, (b) Devil's Punch Bowl Site of Special Scientific Interest and (c) environmentally sensitive areas of Hindhead Common if a decision to progress the A3 Hindhead improvement scheme were not made in spring 2006; [64836]

(3) what assessment he has made of the potential impact on the number of accidents on the A3 if the A3 Hindhead improvement scheme were not to be progressed as soon as possible. [64838]

Dr. Ladyman: It would not be appropriate to comment on these issues while the inspector's report and recommendations remain under consideration following the public inquiry on the scheme.

Mr. Arbuthnot: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received in support of making progress with the A3 Hindhead improvement scheme as soon as possible from constituents of North-East Hampshire constituency. [64837]

Dr. Ladyman: Over 50 representations have been received between 1 January and 14 April 2006 that have been overwhelmingly in favour of the scheme. We have not analysed which constituency the representations have been made from.

Biodiesel

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps he is (a) taking and (b) plans to take to promote the use of biodiesel; and if he will make a statement. [65485]

Dr. Ladyman: The Government's main support for biodiesel has, since 2002, come in the form of a 20p per litre fuel duty incentive. This has been sufficient to stimulate sales of several million litres a month. We announced last year, however, that we will introduce from 2008 a renewable transport fuels obligation, which will require all suppliers of transport fuels in the UK to ensure that a certain percentage of their total annual sales is made up of biofuels (or, in the longer term, some other renewable transport fuel). The level of the obligation will rise from 2.5 per cent. in the financial year 2008–09 to 3.75 per cent. in 2009–10 and 5 per cent. in 2010–11. This should ensure that, by 2010, biodiesel sales in the UK will amount to over 1 billion litres a year—a 20-fold increase from where we are today.

Drink Driving (Lancashire)

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many drink driving accidents there were in (a) Ribble Valley and (b) Lancashire in each year since 1997. [65297]

Dr. Ladyman: Estimates of drink drive accidents in Great Britain as a whole are published each year in an article in "Road Casualties Great Britain—Annual Report". Estimates below Government office region level are not available.

Drivers (Smoking Ban)

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will introduce legislation to ban smoking while driving. [64618]

Dr. Ladyman: There are no plans to introduce legislation to ban smoking while driving.

Road traffic legislation already places responsibility on all drivers to have proper control of their vehicles. Any motorist who fails to do so, for whatever reason, such as smoking, or eating and drinking, is liable to prosecution.

Rule 126 of the current edition of the Highway Code highlights the need to concentrate and avoid distractions while driving. The consultation paper published in February 2006 on the revision of the code proposes the addition of "smoking" in the list of potential distractions to be avoided.

Driving Instructors (Sexual Assault)

Willie Rennie: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what provisions exist for the (a) suspension and (b) banning of driving instructors (i) accused and (ii) convicted of sexual assault. [65406]

Dr. Ladyman: Part 5 of the Road Traffic Act 1988 (as amended) requires professional car driving instructors to be registered.

One of the conditions of registration is that the instructor is, and remains,

"a fit and proper person to have his name entered in the register".

Failure to continue to meet, any of the conditions for registration can result in the Registrar of Approved Driving Instructors taking action to remove the person's name from the register.

There is no power for the registrar to suspend an instructor.

Mini Motorcycles

Mr. Ian Austin: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will introduce a system for regulating the driving of mini motorcycles by young people. [63164]

Dr. Ladyman: Appropriate legal requirements are already in place regarding the riding or driving or vehicles on the public highway. In addition to a range of powers under road traffic law—which includes seizure of offending vehicles under certain circumstances—the Police Reform Act 2002 enables the police to seize motor vehicles being used illegally and/or anti-socially, provided a warning has first been given. I have discussed enforcement issues with the Association of Chief Police Officers and have followed this up with a letter about the various powers available for use against offending mini motorcycles.

As far as we are aware only one of a vast range of miniature motorcycles offered for sale claims to have European Whole Vehicle Type Approval (ECWVTA). Unless a motorcycle—whether miniature or otherwise—has ECWVTA or has successfully passed through the Motorcycle Single Vehicle Approval (MSVA) process, it may not be used on the public road. Any mini motorcycles which do have ECWVTA or MSVA must be registered, taxed and insured in order to use the road. The riders, whether young or old, must hold an appropriate licence and wear a suitable helmet.

National Parking Adjudication Service

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when the National Parking Adjudication Service will have in place the appeals process relating to bus lane and tramway enforcement in England outside London; and if he will make a statement. [64864]

Dr. Ladyman: The appeals service is for the local authorities to establish. I understand from the National Parking Adjudication Service that eight councils in England (outside London) hope to have completed all the necessary steps to commence bus lane enforcement this autumn which will include establishing the appeals service and appointing bus lane adjudicators, subject to the consent of the Lord Chancellor.

Railways (Lancashire)

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much money was spent on repairing railways in (a) Ribble Valley and (b) Lancashire in each year since 1997. [65299]

Derek Twigg: These are operational matters for Network Rail (NR). I have asked NR to write directly to the hon. Member.

Road Fatalities (Richmond)

Susan Kramer: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate he has made of the number of people killed in road accidents on roads maintained by Richmond upon Thames Local Authority from 1998 to the last year for which figures are available. [65070]

Dr. Ladyman: The number of people killed in road accidents on roads maintained by Richmond upon Thames Local Authority from 1998 to 2004 (the last year for which data are available) is given in the table.

Number of fatal casualties on roads maintained by the London Borough of Richmond upon Thames Local Authority: 1998 to 2004

Search and Rescue

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the (a) location and (b) composition is of each search and rescue team in the UK. [64964]

Dr. Ladyman: The organisation for Search and Rescue (SAR) in the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland is an amalgam of separate Government Departments, the emergency services and other organisations. A significant number of charities and voluntary organisations dedicated to SAR also play a significant role. The Maritime and Coastguard Agency (MCA) has responsibility for civil maritime search and rescue in the UK which is undertaken by HM Coastguard. The Coastguard primarily makes use of rescue resources from the MOD (RAF and RN helicopters and aircraft) and lifeboats from the RNLI and other volunteer lifeboat providers. In addition, land based search and rescue is led by the police service. Their statistics are not collated centrally.

The Maritime and Coastguard Agency (MCA) SAR service is divided into three coastguard regions—Eastern, Western and Scotland and Northern Ireland, which are further subdivided into nine areas. Each area has two Maritime Rescue Co-ordination Centres (MRCCs—a total of 19 in the UK). The areas are divided into a total of 64 Coastguard Sectors around the UK and within each sector there are a number of volunteer Coastguard Rescue Teams (CRTs). A table has been placed in the Libraries of the House showing the breakdown of teams and locations. The CRTs carry out coastal rescue operations (cliff and shoreline) and act as mobile lookouts when called out by their controlling MRCC to investigate reports of incidents, etc. In the UK there are 397 Coastguard Rescue Teams based around the UK coastline.

In addition the MCA operates four SAR helicopter units at Sumburgh airport, Stornoway, Portland and Lee-on-Solent. There are two helicopters at each base except for Portland where there is only one aircraft. One helicopter at each base is kept on immediate readiness 24 hours per day except at Portland which is, in general, a daylight hours only service (circa 8 am–8 pm).

[2] The aeronautical rescue co-ordination centre located at RAF Kinloss is responsible for co-ordinating all SAR helicopter operations in the UK.
Note:
MOD contractors are not included in these figures.

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many search and rescue operations were carried out in each of the last five years (a) in the UK and (b) by each search and rescue base. [64965]

Dr. Ladyman: The table shows the number of times that Maritime and Coastguard Agency, through their Maritime Rescue Co-ordination Centres, launched rescue missions in the UK in each of the last five years. The responsibility for the co-ordination of land-based and inland waters search and rescue rests with the police service and statistics for these operations are not collated centrally.

Seatbelts

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps he (a) is taking and (b) plans to take to increase the seatbelt wearing rate to 97 per cent. over the next five years; and if he will make a statement. [65178]

Dr. Ladyman: Seatbelt messages have been included in the Department's road safety campaign for over 35 years. Having achieved very high wearing rates by good publicity and appropriate enforcement, the Department now believes it needs to be more targeted in reaching those who are most resistant to its messages. Seatbelt messages, along with other THINK! road safety issues, will in future be promoted through engagement strategies, currently under development, which will target young drivers and those who drive for work.

Enforcement of the law will remain a matter for the police who issued some 201,000 fixed penalty notices in England and Wales during 2004 for seat belt wearing offences.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what support he has (a) given and (b) plans to give to seatbelt sheriff campaigns; if he will make it his policy to support such campaigns; and if he will make a statement. [64757]

Dr. Ladyman: The Department has received no requests to support such campaigns. The Department does not directly support local campaigns but local authorities can fund these from their own resources. The Department runs paid publicity campaigns at a national level—radio, TV and posters—which local stakeholders can build upon if they wish. The Department also produces an extensive range of free promotional materials on road safety for use on a local level.

Speed Cameras

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the effectiveness in (a) Southend-on-Sea and (b) Essex of (i) fixed speed cameras and (ii) mobile speed cameras; what criteria he uses to assess effectiveness; and if he will make a statement. [64595]

Dr. Ladyman: The independent four-year evaluation report of the national safety camera programme, which is available in the Libraries of the House and on the DfT website, included an assessment of the effectiveness of both fixed and mobile cameras at the Essex Safety Camera Partnership level using the criteria of reductions in speed and casualties at camera sites.

The evaluation concluded that both types of camera were effective in both respects. Fixed cameras had, on the whole, a greater effect in reducing speeding than mobile cameras, reflecting the fact that fixed cameras affect driving behaviour all the time, whereas mobile cameras operate periodically at each location.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what guidance he has issued on the minimum number of persons that must have been killed or seriously injured at a given site before (a) a fixed speed camera and (b) a mobile speed camera is installed; and if he will make a statement. [64596]

Dr. Ladyman: The casualty criteria that must be met before a fixed or mobile speed camera is installed are set out in the Handbook of Rules and Guidance for the National Safety Camera Programme for England and Wales for 2006–07, which is available in the Library of the House, and on the Department's website. For fixed camera sites it is at least three killed or seriously injured collisions per site kilometre in the 36 months that forms the baseline period. For mobile camera sites it is at least one killed or seriously injured collision per site kilometre in the baseline period.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what research his Department has undertaken into the effects of speed cameras on drink driving levels; and if he will make a statement. [64669]

Dr. Ladyman: Speed cameras are neither designed nor intended to detect those who drink and drive. The Department has not therefore undertaken any research into the effects of speed cameras on drink driving.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what guidance he has issued on the speed at which a speed camera is triggered; and if he will make a statement. [64670]

Dr. Ladyman: The Department has not issued guidance on this matter. The guidelines issued by the Association of Chief Police Officers recommends motorists are not prosecuted unless they are recorded as going at 10 per cent. plus 2 mph over the posted speed limit.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much and what percentage of fines in (a) Southend-on-Sea and (b) Essex for a contravention of Section 89 of the Road Traffic Regulation Act 1984, went to (i) HM Treasury and (ii) each local speed camera partnership in each of the last three years for which information is available. [64671]

Dr. Ladyman: The Essex Safety Camera Partnership covers Essex county council, Southend-on-Sea borough council and Thurrock borough council. The following table shows the fine revenue, partnership expenditure and the resulting surplus which was passed to the HMT Consolidated Fund.

	Fine revenue (£)	Partnership expenditure (£)	Surplus (£)	Surplus (percentage)
2002-03	5,672,220	5,150,286	521,934	9.2
2004-05	4,710,300	4,622,413	87,887	1.9

This information relates only to activity undertaken by the Essex Safety Camera Partnership as part of the safety camera programme. More detailed information on their finances (including individual partners') is available on the Essex Partnership website at: www.essexsafetycameras.co.uk

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the impact on road safety of speed cameras in (a) Southend-on-Sea and (b) Essex between 1994 and 2006; what (i) long-term trends and (ii) seasonal variations have been recorded; and if he will make a statement. [64694]

Dr. Ladyman: The following independent evaluations of the National Safety Camera Programme undertaken for the Department include an assessment of the Essex Safety Camera Partnership area, and are available in the Library of the House, and on the Department's website:

A cost recovery system for speed and red-light cameras—two year pilot evaluation (11 February 2003);

The national safety camera programme—Three year evaluation report (15 June 2004);

The national safety camera programme—Four year evaluation report (15 December 2005).

Long-term trends and seasonal variations are recorded only at the national level.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of speed cameras on roads in (a) Southend, (b) Essex and (c) England; and if he will make a statement. [64756]

Dr. Ladyman: The independent four-year evaluation report of the National Safety Camera Programme assessed the effectiveness of cameras at both the national programme and safety camera partnership level. The report, published on 15 December 2005, is available in the Library of the House, and on the Department's website.

Jeremy Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when the road accident statistics which are used to decide on the positioning of mobile speed cameras in Warwickshire were last updated. [64773]

Dr. Ladyman: The casualty criteria that must be met before a fixed or mobile speed camera is installed are set out in the "Handbook of Rules and Guidance for the National Safety Camera Programme for England and Wales for 2006/07" a copy of which is in the Library of the House. For mobile camera sites it is at least one killed or seriously injured collision per site kilometre in the baseline period. The baseline period is a 36-month period, the start date of which must be consistent with the start of a programme quarter and the end date must be within 12 months of the date of operational case submission.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many and what percentage of fixed speed cameras located on roads in (a) Southend-on-Sea and (b) Essex had a (i) 30 mph and (ii) 40 mph speed limit in each year between 1990 and 2006. [64869]

Dr. Ladyman: The Department holds information only at a partnership level although further site by district detail will be available from the Essex Safety Camera Partnership at www.essexsafetycameras.co.uk.

The number and percentage of fixed speed cameras on roads with a 30mph or 40mph speed limit in Essex is shown in the table.

	Number		Percentage
Date established	30 mph	40 mph	30 mph	40 mph
1993	3	1	75	25
1995	9	1	90	10
1996	17	1	94	6
1998	19	1	95	5
1999	25	1	96	4
2001	45	6	87	12
2002	48	8	84	14
2003	54	17	75	24
2004	58	20	73	25
2005	58	21	73	26

Note:
Numbers are cumulative

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the cost was of installing a speed camera in Southend-on-Sea in the last period for which figures are available; and what the figures were in each year since 2000. [64870]

Dr. Ladyman: The Department does not hold detailed cost information in relation to installing speed cameras as every site is different, equipment types vary and local conditions need to be taken into account. As a general guide, the following budgetary figure can be used:

Capital cost of providing a fixed housing, including power supply, signage and providing a camera (to go in housing) £40,000.

Detailed costs for specific sites may be available from the Essex Safety Camera Partnership who can be contacted via their website at www.essexsafetycameras.co.uk.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many applications in (a) Southend-on-Sea and (b) Essex for speed camera sites have been made on which a final decision on whether installation will be allowed remains pending; and if he will make a statement. [64871]

Dr. Ladyman: The Department holds information only at a partnership level. As part of its operational case for 2006–07, the Essex. Safety Camera Partnership submitted proposals for five fixed and 21 mobile speed camera sites. As all these sites were compliant with the published site selection rules, all have been approved. There are no applications for new speed camera sites in Essex where a decision on approval remains pending.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many proposals for speed cameras in (a) Southend-on-Sea and (b) Essex have been (i) approved and (ii) rejected by his Department in each year since 1997; and what the proposed location was in each case. [64872]

Dr. Ladyman: The Department holds information only at a partnership level and requires all core sites within the safety camera programme to meet the published site selection criteria. Non-compliant sites are not submitted for approval as part of the programme so the Department has not rejected any proposals for speed cameras in Essex.

The exact location of the sites approved by the Department is available from the Essex Safety Camera Partnership. The number of sites submitted as part of their operational cases, and approved by the Department since they joined the safety camera programme in April 2000 is shown in the table:

Operational Case Date	Fixed Number approved	Mobile Number approved	Total
2003–04	21	38	59
2004–05	1	21	22
2006–07	5	21	26
Total	86	230	316

Note:
Essex SCP joined the safety camera programme as a 'pilot' partnership in April 2000.
All existing camera sites that existed at that time were brought into the programme.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions his Department has had with Essex police about changing the number of (a) fixed and (b) mobile speed cameras in (i) Southend and (ii) Essex; and if he will make a statement. [64873]

Dr. Ladyman: The Department would not expect to have discussions with Essex police about changing the number of speed camera sites in Essex because sites are selected locally as the right solution to a particular problem.

The Department did work with the Essex Safety Camera Partnership to develop its 2006–07 operational case and this was approved on 30 March 2006.

The Department's "Handbook of Rules and Guidance for the National Safety Camera Programme for England and Wales for 2006–07" a copy of which is in the Library of the House requires safety camera partnerships to keep existing camera sites under review. Any further new cameras will only be approved as core sites within the safety camera programme if they meet the published site selection criteria set out in the handbook.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the types of (a) fixed and (b) mobile speed cameras used in (i) Southend, (ii) the Metropolitan police area and (iii) Essex. [64874]

Dr. Ladyman: Partnerships are not required to provide the Department with information about the types of cameras they use. All safety cameras must however be of a type approved by the Home Office.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what research his Department is undertaking into accidents around speed camera sites in (a) Southend, (b) Essex and (c) England; and if he will make a statement. [64875]

Dr. Ladyman: The independent four-year report into the National Safety Camera Programme, published in December 2005, which is available in the Libraries of the House and the Department's website, showed a significant reduction in deaths and serious injuries at camera sites.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what recent assessment he (a) has made and (b) plans to make of the potential for temporary blinding of drivers driving at night by (i) forward facing and (ii) rear facing speed camera flashes; and if he will make a statement. [64876]

Dr. Ladyman: The Department has not assessed the effect of camera flashes at night and have no plans to do so. No forward or rear-facing camera is type approved until it has undergone rigorous testing against set specifications that ensures its reliability and safety. The peak intensity and duration of the flash are less than levels which are encountered from other sources when driving at night.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether further speed cameras are planned for each side of the (a) A127 and (b) A13 between the M25 and Southend; and if he will make a statement. [64877]

Dr. Ladyman: The Department is not currently aware of any further speed cameras planned for these roads. Any further speed cameras in the future will be proposed by the Essex Safety Camera Partnership and will only be approved as core sites within the safety camera programme if they meet the published site selection criteria.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether mobile speed cameras are planned for each side of the (a) A127 and (b) A13 between the M25 and Southend; and if he will make a statement. [64878]

Dr. Ladyman: The Department is not currently aware of any new planned mobile speed cameras for these roads. Any planned mobile speed cameras in the future will be proposed by the Essex Safety Camera Partnership and will only be approved as core sites within the safety camera programme if they meet the published site selection criteria.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received on the installation of speed cameras in Essex. [65181]

Dr. Ladyman: The Department has not received any representations on the installation of speed cameras in Essex.

Speed Humps

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what recent representations he has received from the emergency services about the removal of (a) speed humps and (b) pinch points on the road network in (i) Southend-on-Sea, (ii) Essex, (iii) the Metropolitan Police area of London and (iv) England; and if he will make a statement. [64754]

Dr. Ladyman: The Department has not received any representations from the emergency services about the removal of speed humps and pinch points on any roads in England.

London Ambulance Service did contact the Department in October 2001 with concerns that traffic calming may have a detrimental effect on ambulance response times. A regular dialogue has been maintained since this time to establish the nature of the concerns and to assist with possible solutions.

Transport Subsidies

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport pursuant to his answer of 23 March 2006, Official Report, column 496W, how much of the total bus subsidy in London is from his Department in addition to the bus subsidy operators grant. [63565]

Dr. Ladyman: In addition to funding for buses in the form of subsidy given in my answer of 23 March, the following awards were made to bus projects in the capital:

Hammersmith Urban Bus Challenge, in 2001, at £425,000.

Service improvements and expansion programme in Tower Hamlets, in 2003, at £527,208.

Brent Urban Bus Challenge, in 2003, at £440,000.

Camden and Islington PlusBus, in 2004, at £1,021,465.

Thames Gateway zero-emission electric bus project, in 2005, at £394,000.

Vehicle Excise and Registration Act

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the operation of section (a) 22A and (b) 27A of the Vehicle Excise and Registration Act 1994. [65038]

Dr. Ladyman: Section 22A relates to the Vehicle Identity Check (VIC) scheme. The scheme helps to combat the crime of vehicle ringing by verifying that written off vehicles conform to the registered particulars on the DVLA database before being registered and put back on the road.

A recent review of the scheme's effectiveness has shown that car thefts decreased by 24 per cent. in the first two years since the scheme's introduction. Although this can be attributed to a number of crime reduction measures, it is reasonable to conclude that VIC has been a contributing factor to this decrease. The review of the scheme will be published shortly.

Section 27A is not yet in force but its purpose is to introduce regulation making powers to prescribe security features in number plates making them less susceptible to theft or cloning. DVLA is currently considering which security features might be put in place.

MINISTER FOR WOMEN

Correspondence

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Minister for Women and Equality when she expects to reply to the letter from the hon. Member for Maldon and East Chelmsford of 20 December 2005 on behalf of Ms Michelle Langton of Galleywood, Chelmsford. [63770]

Meg Munn: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry to PQ No. 63771 answered today.

DEFENCE

A400M Aircraft

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions he has had with his counterparts in other countries on the merits of fitting a fuel tank inerting system to the A400M aircraft. [63224]

Mr. Ingram: The A400M does not come fitted with a fuel inerting system, although a portable removable on board inert gas generation system is available as an option. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence has not discussed the fitting of a fuel tank inerting system to the A400M with his counterparts in other countries. Officials have discussed the merits of fitting such a system with counterparts in other countries. The UK will make a decision in due course on whether to fit the system to our A400M aircraft.

Air and Sea Rescue

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the future of air and sea rescue operations capability. [64963]

Mr. Ingram: A 24 hour military and civil Search and Rescue (SAR) service around the UK is presently provided by RAF, Royal Navy and Maritime and Coastguard Agency (MCA) helicopters. This is planned to remain in service until the middle of the next decade.

As set out in the Defence Industrial Strategy (DIS), MOD and the Maritime and Coastguard Agency are jointly assessing options for provision of a replacement SAR service when the existing helicopters are taken out of service. An announcement setting out further details on the way ahead will be made in due course.

We intend to deliver a service that is at least as effective as the current one, in a manner that provides value for money to the taxpayer. Tasking of the service will continue to be managed jointly by the MOD and MCA. The DIS also makes it clear that we will retain a proportion of military aircrew.

Air Incident (Ballykelly)

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether his Department has implemented additional safety precautions as a result of the landing at Ballykelly Army Base of a scheduled aircraft bound for Londonderry Airport on Wednesday 29 March. [65362]

Mr. Ingram: The Civil Aviation Authority are currently conducting an inquiry into the circumstances of this incident. We will consider any recommendations that may emerge from this inquiry as soon as they are available.

Cadet Corps (Rifles)

Mr. Borrow: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what minimum number of rifles (a) in total and (b) per 100 cadets is required by army cadet organisations to maintain training standards. [60260]

Mr. Touhig: The number of General Purpose Rifles currently required to maintain minimum standards is 7,746, which equates to 17 rifles per 100 cadets at current strength. The number of Drill Purpose Rifles currently required to maintain minimum standards is 5,130 which equates to 11 rifles per 100 cadets at current strength.

Defence Export Services Organisation

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the annual budget has been for the Defence Export Services Organisation in each of the last 10 years. [64342]

Mr. Ingram: Operating costs which are available for the last eight financial years are given as follows. Forecast costs are given for financial year 2005–06.

£ million

Financial year	Expenditure	Receipts	Net operating costs
1998–99	45.359	-29.342	16.017
1999–2000	46.473	-34.977	11.496
2000–01	55.81	-41.430	14.380
2001–02	48.930	-37.853	11.077
2002–03	56.944	-44.407	11.944
2003–04	58.348	-42.203	16.145
2004–05	59.960	-43.038	16.922
2005–06	51.6	-38.0	13.6

The net operating costs include credits to the defence budget arising from a range of activities of the Defence Export Services Organisation, including those of the Disposal Services Agency until it was transferred to the Defence Logistics Organisation on 1 April 2005.

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the ramifications for military stability in the middle east region of increased arms sales to Israel and Saudi Arabia facilitated by the Defence Export Services Organisation; and if he will make a statement. [64466]

Mr. Ingram: The Defence Export Services Organisation (DESO) implements Government policy in respect of supporting legitimate defence exports by industry to a range of countries, including Israel and Saudi Arabia. Export licensing policy requires the Government to take into account concerns that proposed defence exports might be used for internal repression or international aggression, risks to regional stability, or other considerations.

Currently, less than 1 per cent. of (DESO) staff are engaged in export-related business to Israel and around 40 per cent. to Saudi Arabia. The latter figure includes staff in the Saudi Project Office who undertake a range of tasks principally associated with the performance of existing contracts.

Defence Intelligence and Security Centre

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence in which countries short-term training teams were deployed by the Defence Intelligence and Security Centre in 2004–05. [63459]

Mr. Ingram: In 2004–05, short term training teams were deployed from the Defence Intelligence and Security Centre to Iraq, Slovenia and Malaysia.

Depleted Uranium

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he will publish the findings of the Depleted Uranium Oversight Board. [64621]

Mr. Touhig: The Depleted Uranium Oversight Board is an independent committee that reports to me. Its proceedings, including interim summaries of the results of the retrospective depleted uranium testing programme, are published on its website (www.duob.org.uk). I understand that the board expects to submit a final report on its work toward the end of 2006.

I understand that, to date, no depleted uranium has been detected in any of the veterans' urine samples monitored under this programme.

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment his Department has made of the effect of depleted uranium shells on soldiers; and if he will make a statement. [64760]

Mr. Touhig: The Ministry of Defence routinely monitors emerging information on the potential health effects of exposure to depleted uranium (DU) and has studied the authoritative assessments by the Royal Society and others. All the reliable scientific and medical evidence shows that the likelihood of ill health as a result of battlefield exposure to DU is extremely low. Nonetheless, urine testing has been made available to current and former personnel concerned about possible exposure. To date, with the exception of a small number of personnel who suffered shrapnel injuries in a "friendly fire" incident involving DU munitions, none of those tested has been found to be excreting DU.

Combined Services Detailed Interrogation Centre

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) when each of the prisons run by the Combined Services Detailed Interrogation Centre ceased to operate; and what took the place of each; [64039]

(2) which organisation took over the functions previously carried out by the Combined Services Detailed Interrogation Centre. [64688]

Mr. Ingram: The research required to locate surviving source material which may provide the information requested will take some time. I will write to the hon. Member when this work is complete.

Far East Prisoners of War

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the camps in which civilians and military personnel must have been interned to be eligible for the Far East Prisoner Of War ex-gratia payment; and what criteria were used to determine the qualifying camps. [62539]

Mr. Touhig [holding answer 30 March 2006]: To be eligible under the military part of the ex-gratia scheme, a claimant must have been a member of the UK armed forces and have been captured and detained by the Japanese. An individual's service record and "capture cards" provided by the Japanese have normally contained sufficient contemporary evidence to establish Prisoner of War status without the need to prove detention in any particular camp. Lists of qualifying camps have not therefore been necessary to prove eligibility for military claimants.

To be eligible under the civilian part of the scheme, a claimant must have been detained within a specifically designated area, under the direct control of the Japanese. Civilian personnel who were held in the camps listed as follows and who met the other criteria for the scheme have received a payment. These camps have been verified as meeting the agreed internment definition through information obtained from a number of sources which include the International Committee of the Red Cross, the Imperial War Museum, the National Archives and ABCIFER. The list includes the main internment camps but is not exhaustive. Claims from former civilian internees who were held captive in other camps would be considered in accordance with the aforementioned internment definition. A small number of claims have been paid to civilians who were not detained at locations directly under the control of the Japanese. These payments were made in error, largely in the initial phase of the scheme. This happened either because eligibility decisions were based on lists of those who had benefited individually or as a family member under the 1950s compensation scheme based on liquidated Japanese assets where the family member may not themselves have been interned, or because the status of some locations had not been fully established.

Qualifying civilian internment camps include the following:

Ash Camp
Baguio
Batavia Area
Burma (Camp had a number of names over the period)
Changi
Chapei
Columbia Country Club
Djambi
Great Western Road
Haiphong Road
Kuching
Lincoln Avenue
Lintang
Los Banos
Muntok (Banka Island)
Lunghwa
Padang
Palembang
Pootung
Santo Tomas
Sarawak
Shanghai (Camp Chit Chat)
Sibul Springs
Sime Road
Stanley Camp
Sumatra (A number of camps with changing names)
Tanahtinggi
Tangerang
Tha Phrachandr (also known as Tha Prachand)
Weihsien
Yangchow
Yu Yuen Road

Information Requests

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many requests for Internal Reviews of Requests for Information he has received in each of the last three years; and how many were completed within 40 working days of receipt of the application. [64781]

Mr. Touhig: Since the full implementation of the Freedom of Information Act 2000 on 1 January 2005, the Ministry of Defence has received 126 requests for internal reviews of responses to requests for information or of the handling of requests. 108 reviews have been completed, of which 64 were completed within 40 working days of receipt of the application.

Joint Strike Fighter

Mr. Bone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether the Joint Strike Fighter project is subject to the US Arms Export Control Act; and if he will make a statement. [65419]

Mr. Ingram: Yes. Military aircraft appear on the US Munitions List, so the Joint Strike Fighter project is subject to the US Arms Export Control Act.

Pilots

Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many qualified pilots in the Royal Air Force are posted to (a) a flying post on a squadron and (b) a non-flying post. [64608]

Mr. Touhig: The number of trained pilots in the Royal Air Force as at 1 March 2006 by flying/non-flying post is given in the following table.

	Trained strength
Flying Post	1,520
Non-Flying Post	600
Total	2,120

Note:
All figures have been rounded to the nearest ten.

Private Tesoni Vakacakaudrove

Mrs. Humble: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on what date the Board of Inquiry into the death of Private Tesoni Vakacakaudrove at Leconfield barracks on 6 October 2002 (a) opened and (b) closed; for how many hours the Board sat; and what measures were taken as a result of its recommendations. [62458]

Mr. Touhig: The Board of Inquiry to investigate the circumstances of the death of Private Tesoni Vakacakaudrove convened on 6 January 2004 and closed on 14 January 2004. The Board comprised three members but there is no record of the number of hours that the Board sat. The recommendations made by the BOI were addressed as follows:

Initial Reporting of Incidents

Direction on the Initial Reporting of such incidents has been reviewed and clearly defined in Defence School of Transport (DST) Standing Orders. Clear guidance is also provided in each accommodation block.

Immediate Action Drills

Immediate Action Drills Flow Charts have been placed in each accommodation block.

Phones

Duty of Care staff are now equipped with both phone and mobile communications which could be relied upon in an emergency.

Health and Safety (H and S)

The DST H and S Policy and Standing Orders have been updated.

Standing Orders

DST Standing Orders have been rewritten.

Bar Orders

Orders for the NAAFI and NAAFI Bar Staff, and for NAAFI points of alcohol sale have been incorporated into Standing Orders, and displayed in all NAAFI run bars and points of sale.

Welfare

Welfare facilities and processes are clearly identified by the unit. Welfare assistance is provided by empowered officers, unit welfare officer, on site WRVS and Army Welfare Services and a Padre. Driver Training Wing (where all phase 2 students receive instruction) now has an established Student Focus Office headed by a captain. Clear direction on the use of these welfare agencies and facilities are included in induction briefings and advertised in Orders.

Health Education Posters

General alcohol education posters are displayed around the unit in accommodation, training blocks and recreational facilities and interspersed with drink driving posters.

Responsibility for Phase 2 Students

A continuous system of individual reporting from phase 1 to phase 2 training, and onward to the Field Army, now exists.

Cultural Awareness

The formalisation of UK and Foreign and Commonwealth (F and C) service personnel and F and C families cultural induction and orientation is being co-ordinated. The following are being drafted: a short guide to all F and C culture and traditions; F and C diversity management training for UK service personnel for incorporation into appropriate individual training courses; a unit welfare officer's induction package for F and C families.

Military Ethos

Following the recommendations made in the duty of care appraisal of initial training the military supervisory manpower at DST has been increased. This will help promote military ethos.

Boards of Inquiry

Since 1 June 2004, Boards of Inquiry are required to convene within 48 hours of an incident.

Replacement of staff

This recommendation was considered by HQ Land to be outside the immediate purview of the BOI.

Queen's Flight

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the cost was of overnight accommodation for the crew of a BAe146 of The Queen's Flight at Sharm el Sheikh in December 2004; for how many crew and for how many nights such accommodation was required; and which Department met the cost. [64807]

John Reid: Ministerial use of 32 (TR) Squadron is charged at an hourly rate calculated on an annual basis. This hourly rate includes a component covering aircrew accommodation, which is not recovered separately. The overall costs of the trip were included in the annual list of Cabinet Ministers' visits overseas for 2004–05 published in July 2005, a copy of which is in the Library of the House. The Prime Minister's Office met the costs. Five crew members remained at Sharm el Sheikh for eight nights.

Royal Irish Regiment

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the projected numbers of the bands of the Royal Irish Regiment are over the next five years; and if he will make a statement on the future of military music in Northern Ireland. [64189]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 18 April 2006]: Pursuant to my written ministerial statement on 9 March 2006, Official Report, column 69WS, the band of the Royal Irish Regiment will be disbanded by 1 April 2008. We will continue to provide military music in Northern Ireland via the Northern Ireland Territorial Army Band which will be renamed The Royal Irish Regiment Band (TA).

Royal Ordnance Chorley

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what role the Minister of State for Defence (a) has played and (b) is playing in deciding the future of Royal Ordnance Chorley; [63178]

(2) what role each Minister in his Department has played in the run down of (a) Royal Ordnance Chorley and (b) Royal Ordnance Bridgwater. [63175]

Mr. Ingram: Defence Ministers have played no direct role in decisions taken by BAES Land Systems concerning the future of their sites at Chorley and Bridgwater.

Minister for Defence Procurement did, however, endorse the signing of the Partnering Principles between MOD and BAES (LS) in October, which informed the company of MOD's long term capability requirement as set out in the Defence Industrial Strategy.

Submarines

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many times Royal Navy submarines have docked at Southampton in each of the last five years. [64779]

Mr. Ingram: No Royal Navy submarines have docked at Southampton in the last five years.

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what estimate he has made of the cost of upgrading and extending the life-cycle of Vanguard class submarines to accommodate Trident II D5 (A) missiles. [64246]

John Reid: Initial preparatory work is being undertaken by officials on possible options for the future of the UK's nuclear deterrent. However, Ministers have not yet begun to consider the position on this issue in any detail and it would be inappropriate to speculate on the range of options that might be available and their potential costs.

The term Trident II D5 (A) is not recognised by either the Ministry of Defence or the US Department of Defence as a current variant of the Trident D5 missiles.

Trident Replacement

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what his strategy is for ensuring the fullest possible debate on the replacement for Trident; and if he will make a statement. [64041]

John Reid: I refer the hon. Member to the answer that I gave previously to the hon. Member for Inverness, Nairn, Badenoch and Strathspey (Danny Alexander) on 7 December 2005, Official Report, column 1352–53.

Since then, the House of Commons Defence Committee has published a detailed memorandum, which was provided by my Department, and the issue has been raised on other occasions in the House of Commons. But Ministers have not yet engaged in this issue in any detail and it therefore remains the case that it is too early to say what further formal or informal procedures might be used to underpin future decision making by the Government in this area.

CABINET OFFICE

Delivery Unit

Norman Baker: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster on what Government (a) top delivery and reform priorities and (b) targets the Delivery Unit is focusing. [63160]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The Prime Minister's Delivery Unit (PMDU) is focusing on providing support to civil service departments on aspects of delivery of:

health system reform;

education system reform; and police reform,

as well as leading a programme of departmental reviews designed to improve departments' performance in pursuing their current missions and tackling future challenges.

The PMDU is also focusing on monitoring and providing challenge and support to the following public service agreement (PSA) targets arising from SR04. These include:

Department of Health

Increasing the participation of problem drug users in drug treatment

Improving health outcomes for people with long term conditions

Ensuring maximum 18 weeks waiting time between GP referral and hospital treatment

Department for Education and Skills

Young people reaching 19 ready for skilled employment or higher education

Reducing the proportion of young people not in education, employment or training

GCSE attainment at age 16

Attainment at key stages 2 and 3

Reducing drug use in young people

Reducing school absence

Home Office

Improving the delivery of justice

Reassuring the public about crime and the criminal justice system

Ensuring an effective asylum process

Reducing crime

Reducing the harms caused by illegal drugs

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister

Delivering a faster and more efficient planning system.

The unit also monitors a number of targets from the previous spending review including:

reducing criminal reoffending;

inpatient and outpatient maximum waiting times; and provision of patient choice in the NHS.

All PSA targets are monitored either by HMT or PMDU. PMDU regularly reviews its contribution to target areas in conjunction with HMT and No. 10, and would normally continue to be involved in workstreams until the target was met or where it could be confident that the target was on target to be met.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Burma

Grant Shapps: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has made to the military government of Burma on behalf of political prisoners (a) U Saw Naing Naing and (b) U Soe Han, who are incarcerated in that country. [64420]

Ian Pearson: I have been asked to reply.

The UK and EU have repeatedly called for the release of all political prisoners in Burma. Our Embassy in Rangoon monitors the general human rights situation in Burma, including the arrest and detention of political prisoners. We have not made any specific representations on behalf of U Saw Naing Naing or U Soe Han.

Community Service Orders

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many offenders who have been handed community service orders by the court have subsequently failed the conditions of their order in each of the past 10 years for which figures are available. [64385]

Fiona Mactaggart: Community service orders were renamed community punishment orders from April 2001. They also formed one element of the combination order, renamed community punishment and rehabilitation order from the same date. For offences committed since 4 April 2005, unpaid work has been imposed as a community order with an unpaid work requirement.

The readily available information (covering the years 1994 and 1999 to 2004) is published in Table 4.13 of 'Sentencing Statistics 2004, England and Wales' (Home Office Statistical Bulletin No 15/05), a copy of which is in the Library.

Correspondence

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will reply to the letter of 2 December 2005 from the hon. Member for Brent, East regarding Dr. Mohammed Salah Nabi. [64028]

Mr. McNulty: I wrote to the hon. Member on 19 April 2006.

DNA Database

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps the Government are taking to assess the deterrent effect of the DNA database on crime; and if he will make a statement. [64175]

Hazel Blears: It is not currently possible to quantify specific deterrent effects to any single given component of the investigative and prosecutorial processes. The Government have been, and is continuing to, evaluate the impact of increased use of DNA by the police, database growth and the impact on the investigation and detection of crime. The Home Office published a summary of what has been achieved through the Government's DNA Expansion Programme 2000–05 on 4 January 2006.

Identity Cards

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to his statement of 18 January 2006, Official Report, column 833, what the evidential basis was for the assertion that the London School of Economics Report was written by the leading campaigner against identity cards. [62611]

Andy Burnham: My right hon. Friend the Prime Minster stated that he thought he was right in saying that the Identity Project Report, published by the London School of Economics' Department of Information Systems, had been written by a leading campaigner against identity cards. This is a reasonable conclusion given the close correlation between the contents of the report and the publicly expressed opinions of the individual who acted as project mentor/co-ordinator and of the organisation he is a director of.

Illegal Immigrants

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many employers in West Lancashire constituency have been prosecuted for employing illegal immigrants in each year since 1997. [64123]

Mr. McNulty: The Court Proceedings Database held by the Office for Criminal Justice Reform shows that there have been no prosecutions in Lancashire for employing illegal immigrants between 1997 and the latest date for which published data is available—2004

Immigration and Nationality Directorate

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many staff of the immigration and nationality directorate are based in (a) Scotland, (b) each of the English regions, (c) Wales, (d) Northern Ireland and (e) overseas, broken down by office location; and what the remit is of each office. [39935]

Mr. McNulty: The total number of staff employed and based in the UK is shown in table 1 and a breakdown of IND in English regions is presented in table 2.

A table indicating the numbers of staff based overseas is provided in annex A.

There are approximately 134 buildings, at least partially occupied, by the immigration and nationality directorate, within the UK. Some operational staff will also be based in police stations periodically as working practices indicate that co-located intelligence gathering is beneficial to both the immigration and police services.

Due to the large number of offices, and in some instances for security reasons, it is also not feasible to list the remit of each office. I can state that the larger estates such as Croydon and Liverpool, undertake functions that cut across several areas. These include operational programmes; casework—both general and asylum; appeals work; human resources, finance and IT support functions and building services. The smaller locations tend to undertake operational programmes but are supported by regional corporate services as appropriate.

Indefinite Leave to Remain

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many cases have been affected by the suspension of casework for indefinite leave to remain applications made under the provisions of the European Community Association Agreement between March 2004 and February 2005; what the size of the backlog is; what the cost is of dealing with these cases; what steps his Department is taking to address the situation; when he expects the backlog to be cleared; and if he will make a statement. [64045]

Mr. McNulty [holding answer 18 April 2006]: An estimated 3,248 European Community Association Agreement (ECAA) applications for indefinite leave to remain (ILR) were affected by the suspension of ECAA casework between 30 March 2004 and 14 February 2005.

This figure includes those cases lodged prior to 30 March 2004, which were put on hold on the date of suspension; those received during the suspension and those submitted since resumption of case consideration. There are currently 2,367 ECAA applications for ILR outstanding.

This information is provisional management information and may be subject to change.

Data on the costs of dealing with this specific category of application are not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Significant additional casework resource has already been allocated to this work. It remains the Department's aim, subject to intake levels, to reduce the backlog of ECAA applications to frictional levels by the end of 2006.

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether compensation will be available to businesses and individuals who have been adversely affected by the suspension of casework for indefinite leave to remain applications made under the provisions of the European Community Association Agreement between March 2004 and February 2005. [64047]

Mr. McNulty [holding answer 18 April 2006]: The suspension was required to strengthen the regime for consideration of these applications and on that basis there are no plans to offer compensation.

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which (a) probation offices,

(b) prisons and (c) drug rehabilitation centres officials in his Department have visited since 1997; and for what purposes in each case. [64690]

Fiona Mactaggart: This information is not held centrally and would incur disproportionate costs in gathering this information.

Police (Ethnic Minorities)

Mr. Holloway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he is taking to increase the number of recruits from ethnic minorities into the police; whether a target has been set for the Metropolitan Police Service; and whether this target has been broken down by (a) ethnic and (b) other minority groups. [64159]

Hazel Blears: It remains the Government's policy that the composition of the police workforce should reflect the communities which it serves. The Police Service continues to make progress against the Home Secretary's recruitment targets for 2009, and all forces are committed to recruit from minority ethnic groups in proportion to, or at a level above, their representation in the local economically active population. Performance against this objective is a key performance indicator in the Policing Performance Assessment Framework.

The Home Office is working with the Police Service to accelerate the pace of change. The measures currently in hand include promoting the use of outreach workers in police forces, engagement with student faith societies and black students' unions to encourage applications from minority ethnic graduates and measures to increase minority ethnic applications to the High Potential Development Scheme. The Home Office has developed in collaboration with force recruitment departments materials aimed at increasing recruitment from minority ethnic groups, including multi-lingual recruitment material, a toolkit providing best practice guidance for familiarisation events and a video to familiarise applicants with police assessment and selection procedures.

In 1999, two per cent of police officers were from minority ethnic communities, the latest available figures show that at 31 March 2005 black and minority ethnic police officers made up 3.5 per cent. of total officer strength and that minority ethnic representation across the Service as a whole, including special constables and police staff, stood at 4.6 per cent.

The Home Secretary's Employment Targets which were published in 1999 set the Metropolitan Police a target of 25 per cent. ethnic minority representation within the force to be achieved by 2009. The latest available figures show that as at 31 March 2005; 7 per cent. of police officers (an increase from 3.3 per cent. in 1999), 20.8 per cent. of special constables (an increase from 13.9 per cent. in 1999) and 21.9 per cent. of police staff (an increase from 14.6 per cent. in 1999) within the Metropolitan Police were from ethnic minorities. The target set for the Metropolitan Police is based solely on ethnicity.

Probation Service

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action was taken in each year since 1997 to address each complaint about (a) Essex and (b) Southend probation service. [48871]

Fiona Mactaggart: In 2001 the Secretary of State agreed the National Complaints Procedure that enables local probation areas to handle complaints. Each complaint made about the Essex probation service is investigated under a three stage process. The three stages are: informal investigation by the local office, formal investigation by the chief officer or a senior officer nominated by the chief officer, and finally the appeal stage when a panel of three board members hears the appeal. Unresolved local complaints can be escalated to the independent Prison and Probation Ombudsman.

Essex probation area will maintain their own record of complaints received from offenders and the outcome of these cases.

Public Order

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps are being taken to tackle antisocial behaviour in Southend West; and if he will make a statement. [64211]

Hazel Blears: Southend on Sea is an action area—one of 50 areas across the country who work closely with the Home Office to ensure a high level of commitment to tackle antisocial behaviour locally.

With effect from 18 April, South Eastern Division of Essex Police is adopting Neighbourhood Policing, some two years before the national due date. Each Neighbourhood Policing Team will have a nominated officer who will be able to take calls relating to non emergency calls, including antisocial behaviour. Southend Antisocial Behaviour Team are in the process of setting up community engagement panels in which residents will have a direct input into the policing of their areas.

Recently high visibility patrols including Police Community Support Officers have been carried out throughout West Southend tackling all aspects of crime and antisocial behaviour. The area has several parks and open spaces and patrols are regularly carried out here.

The Police work together with the Southend Multi Agency Antisocial Behaviour Response Team (SMAART) in taking a twin track approach to perpetrators of antisocial behaviour using both preventative and enforcement action. This includes among others working with the Youth Offending Service in addressing behaviour through to obtaining antisocial behaviour orders.

UK Immigration Procedures

Susan Kramer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people were (a) detained and (b) questioned by immigration officials at Heathrow airport in the last year for which figures are available, broken down by ethnic group. [64135]

Mr. McNulty: In 2005–06, 25,040 were interviewed, of which 21,287 were detained by UK Immigration Service staff at Heathrow airport only and do not include detention centres.

Note:
These figures are from locally collated management information and as such are subject to change. It is not possible to obtain these figures broken down by ethnic group as this information is not held centrally and can therefore be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Vehicles (Crime) Act

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the operation of section 38 of the Vehicles (Crime) Act 2001. [65036]

Dr. Ladyman: I have been asked to reply.

Section 38 of the Vehicles (Crime) Act 2001 gives the Secretary of State powers to make payments in relation to;

> the prevention or detection of speeding or red light offences, or any enforcement action or proceedings in respect of such offences or any alleged such offences.

Section 38 provides the legal basis for the safety camera programme 'netting off' scheme which allows the police, highway authorities and magistrates courts, working in local 'Safety Camera Partnerships' to be reimbursed for the costs of safety cameras and follow-up enforcement from fixed penalty fines for speeding and red light offences.

On 15 December 2005 the Secretary of State announced that the netting off funding arrangement for safety cameras was to cease on 31 March 2007.

World Cup

Mr. Simon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how his Department is working with the German Government to prevent hooliganism by British fans at the 2006 World Cup. [64576]

Paul Goggins: There is very close and effective liaison with the German Government, police and civil authorities at Federal and Länder levels. My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary and Herr Schauble (German Interior Minister) signed an agreement last month covering governmental, police, judicial and other co-operation. Detailed arrangements are in place to minimise the risk of significant English football disorder during the World Cup, the cornerstone of which is tough football banning order legislation which prevents known risk fans from leaving England and Wales during the tournament.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH OFFICE

Arms Exports

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which Government agency is responsible for monitoring the end-use of UK arms exports; and if he will make a statement. [64913]

Dr. Howells: The possibility of diversion of exported goods to an undesirable end use is part of the strict risk assessment undertaken by all four Government Departments (the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, the Department for Trade and Industry, the Ministry of Defence and the Department for International Development) involved in the export licensing process at the time of application, which takes into account relevant information the Government may hold, including from the Government's overseas posts. Should information come to light that goods have been diverted, the Government will take this into consideration when assessing any future applications. The Government may also revoke the relevant licence(s) and ask the authorities in the country concerned to investigate.

Chad

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the political situation in Chad; and what discussions he has had with representatives of the rebel army. [64991]

Ian Pearson: The Chadian army defeated attacks on N'Djamena and Adre by rebel groups on 13 April. The United Nations Security Council condemned the attempt to overthrow the Government of Chad by force and called on the parties to resolve their political differences by negotiation.

We are concerned about the current political and security situation in Chad not only for the safety and security of Chadian and any remaining UK nationals, but also for the impact of an extended conflict on over 200,000 refugees from Darfur, now sheltering in camps in Eastern Chad. Our non-resident Ambassador to Chad met the Chadian Foreign Minister in N'Djamena on 4 April and made clear that the UK expects Chad to do its utmost to reduce tensions on the border with Sudan.

Chad is due to hold presidential elections on 3 May 2006. The UK is working with EU partners to urge the Chadian authorities to ensure a peaceful and credible electoral process in which all parties can participate.

Ministers have had no discussions with the rebel groups. A representative of one of the rebel groups has initiated limited contact with our Special Representative to Darfur.

China

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with the government of China since 2002 about the implementation of the Population and Birth-planning Law 2001; what response was received; and if he will make a statement. [65259]

Ian Pearson: The Government have not had any discussions with the Chinese government about China's right or need to implement family planning policies, as set out in the Law on Population and Birth Planning. However, we remain concerned about reports of enforced sterilisation and abortion in China. We believe that China's family planning policies should be based on the principle of consent, and not coercion, as espoused by the International Conference on Population and Development. We will continue to raise our concerns where this is an issue, both in our bilateral contacts and with EU Partners.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with the Government of China since 1997 about trends in its population; what response he has received; and if he will make a statement. [65260]

Ian Pearson: China's population trends impact on a wide range of policy areas, including social security, pension planning, migrant workforces and poverty alleviation. We take due account of these trends in our discussions of policy issues with the Chinese Government. Although the Government have never questioned China's right or need to implement family planning policies, we have raised concerns about reports of enforced sterilisation and abortion. Where appropriate, we will continue to broach this subject with the Chinese authorities on a bilateral basis and in conjunction with EU partners.

Cuba

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with the Government of South Sudan on the presence of Lord's Resistance Army militia in Cuba. [64920]

Ian Pearson: The UK continues to stress the importance of tackling the Lord's Resistance Army (LRA) in its discussions with the Government of Southern Sudan. Close co-operation with the Ugandan and Congolese Governments is crucial, as is full support for effecting the arrest warrants issued by the International Criminal Court (ICC) for five senior LRA commanders. The importance of the ICC process was emphasised by our ambassador in Khartoum in a meeting with Salva Kiir, President of the Government of Southern Sudan, at the end of 2005.

Democratic Republic of Congo

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made regarding the recent arrest of Bria Mackosso and Christian Mounzeo in the Republic of Congo; and if he will make a statement. [64815]

Ian Pearson: We understand that Bria Mackosso and Christian Mounzeo were arrested following accusations of misappropriation of funds from the human rights organisation founded by Mr. Mounzeo. Local non-governmental organisations and media have strongly criticised the arrests as irregular and politically motivated. The human rights situation in the Republic of Congo remains poor, with limited freedom of expression. The UK takes seriously the protection of human rights and their defenders. We have raised our concerns about these arrests with the Republic of Congo Embassy in Kinshasa. We will continue to monitor the case.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make an assessment of the human rights situations pertaining in the Democratic Republic of Congo, with particular reference to the treatment of human rights activists in Katanga province. [64917]

Ian Pearson: The human rights situation across the Democratic Republic of the Congo (DRC) remains poor. Congolese civilians, particularly in eastern DRC, continue to suffer abuses committed by militias, foreign armed groups and ill-disciplined and poorly-controlled Congolese army soldiers.

The UK is committed to the protection of human rights and human rights defenders across the DRC. Ending the climate of impunity remains a high priority. We are in regular contact with United Nations and non-governmental organisation teams working in Katanga who keep us updated on the human rights situation there. The imminent arrival of troops temporarily transferred from the UN Mission in Burundi should help to deter future abuses. And, with international community partners, we have told the Congolese Government that we hold it responsible for the abuses committed by its own soldiers, including in Katanga. President Kabila has promised that his Government will take positive action.

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the decision of President Yoweri Museveni to send Ugandan troops to the Democratic Republic of Congo. [64632]

Ian Pearson: The Ugandan Government have raised concerns about the threat posed to regional security by the Lord's Resistance Army (LRA), some of whom are believed to be in the Garamba National Park in the Democratic Republic of Congo (DRC). The Ugandan Government have said that if Uganda is attacked over the border from DRC by the LRA, Ugandan forces would respond. But we are not aware that President Museveni has taken a decision to send Ugandan troops to the DRC.

We agree that the LRA are a threat to regional peace and that those commanders facing International Criminal Court arrest warrants need to be brought to justice. But in signing the Lusaka (1999) and Luanda accords (2002), Uganda undertook to withdraw its troops from the DRC and to stay out.

The international community has emphasised the need for the DRC's territorial sovereignty to be respected in a number of UN Security Council Resolutions. In recent weeks my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under Secretary of State for International Development, Gareth Thomas, and Foreign and Commonwealth Office officials in Kampala and New York have all underlined to the Ugandan Government the UK's opposition to any unilateral Ugandan military interventions in the DRC.

Departmental Leave (Stress)

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many people have been on sick leave suffering from stress in his Department in each of the last three years; and what percentage of the total staff number this represents. [63556]

Mr. Straw: Although sick absence information is recorded on our computerised Management Information system, we do not currently have a method of extracting the specific reason for absence. In order for the Foreign and Commonwealth Office to obtain this data, it would require all sickness absence records to be manually checked for the last three years. This would be both time consuming and incur disproportionate costs. Therefore, we are developing a customised report to enable us to analyse the data by absence type. My officials will write to the hon. Member as soon as the figures are available.

Foreign Policy Centre

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what role his Department has in appointments to the advisory council of the Foreign Policy Centre. [63248]

Mr. Straw: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office has no role in appointments to the Foreign Policy Centre's Advisory Council.

Guantanamo Bay

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the conditions under which detainees are being held at Guantanamo Bay. [65089]

Dr. Howells: We have made it clear that we regard the circumstances under which detainees continue to be held in Guantanamo Bay as unacceptable. The US Government is fully aware of our views.

Indonesia

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations he has made to the government of Indonesia regarding the impending executions of (a) Fabianus Tibo, (b) Domingus da Silva and (c) Marianus Riwu in Sulawesi; and if he will make a statement. [64814]

Ian Pearson: On 14 November 2005, as EU Presidency, we expressed to the Government of Indonesia the EU's regret at the decision to carry out the executions and urged the Indonesian government not to do so and to consider the abolition of the death penalty altogether.

At present, there are no plans for the Government to make further representations on these cases. However, the current EU presidency, Austria, followed this up with the Government of Indonesia in January in separate meetings with the Minister of Law and Human Rights and the Attorney-General and in a note to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

We understand the Indonesian Supreme Court has reopened these cases, which we welcome.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will intercede in the case of (a) Fabianus Tibo, (b) Domingus da Silva and (c) Marianus Riwu in Sulawesi, Indonesia. [64918]

Ian Pearson: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave today (UIN 64814) to my hon. Friend the Member for Sunderland, South (Mr. Mullin).

Nepal

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations the Government have made to the King of Nepal on the current instability in Nepal. [64634]

Dr. Howells: The UK has made regular representations to the King and Government of Nepal, calling on them to restore democracy and to pursue a negotiated political settlement to the conflict involving all of the main actors. Most recently, on 5 April officials from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) met with the Nepalese ambassador to the UK. We told him that the King and Government were to a large extent responsible for the current impasse: the King's offer to talk to the parties did not amount to a substantive move towards restoration of democracy. We conveyed our concerns about the dangers of a heavy-handed crackdown in response to demonstrations, including the announcement of a shoot to kill policy.

In February FCO officials visited Kathmandu and met with the Home Minister. They conveyed our concerns about continuing arrests and detention of political activists, restrictions on the media and the absence of consultations involving all sides in Nepal leading to a full return to democracy.

From 18–24 March the hon. Member was part of a delegation of British parliamentarians which visited Nepal, funded by the FCO under the Global Conflict Prevention Pool. That visit aimed to support the democratic movement and put pressure on the King to restore democracy. The first objective was achieved. The delegation held high profile meetings, both individually and in joint seminars, with all the main party leaders except Madhav Kumar Nepal. The delegation encouraged party activists in Biratnagar, Nepal's second largest town, in the Terai. The second objective proved more difficult. The King avoided meeting the delegation. The delegation did meet the King's most senior advisor, Tulsi Giri, and the Chief of Army Staff. They also had dinner with a number of the King's advisors.

On 11 April, the presidency of the European Union issued a statement deploring the escalating violence and excessive use of force by all sides and calling upon those concerned to exercise restraint. The statement also called on the King of Nepal to take an urgent initiative to resolve the present problems by restoring democracy and by reaching out to all political forces to initiate a dialogue for peace.

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the actions of Maoist insurgents in Nepal; and what assessment he has made of the implications of such actions for British-Nepalese relations. [64635]

Dr. Howells: The Maoists have committed innumerable abhorrent acts including murder, abduction, extortion and intimidation of innocent people. We condemn these acts of violence and have clearly stated that we cannot condone their violence and intimidation in any circumstances.

We deeply regret the Maoists' decision to end their unilateral ceasefire in January 2006 but welcome the current Maoist ceasefire within Kathmandu. We believe that the Maoists must eventually join a wider peace process because a military victory by either side is unachievable.

The insurgency risks destabilising Nepal and has implications for regional security and important UK interests, particularly Gurkha recruitment and welfare and the provision of development assistance.

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assurances the King of Nepal has given to (a) the UK Government and (b) the European Union that the elections to be held in Nepal in 2007 will be held on a free and fair basis; and what assessment he has made of the powers the King is likely to relinquish to any freely elected party. [64637]

Dr. Howells: The King has set out his roadmap for parliamentary elections without due consultation with the political parties. For parliamentary elections to be credible, they would need to take place in the context of an overall peace process and within a political and security climate which enables all parties to put up candidates for free and fair polls. If the elections take place in April 2007, the King will be judged on his actions. It is too early to assess how the King is likely to react to any freely elected party.

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action he plans to take towards ensuring that the elections to be held in Nepal in 2007 are free and fair. [64638]

Dr. Howells: For parliamentary elections to be credible, they would need to take place in the context of an overall peace process and within a political and security climate which attracts all parties to put up candidates for free and fair polls. Working with international partners, as well as in bilateral contacts with the King, Government and the political parties, we will continue to urge the King to act urgently to restore full democracy and enable negotiations to agree a consensus roadmap towards peace.

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action he is prepared to take if the elections to be held in Nepal in 2007 are not conducted on a free and fair basis. [64639]

Dr. Howells: For parliamentary elections to be credible, they would need to take place in the context of an overall peace process and within a political and security climate which enables all parties to put up candidates for free and fair polls. It is too early to say what circumstances will pertain if and when elections are held. We will judge our response in light of those circumstances.

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which international observers he expects to take part in the elections in Nepal in 2007 to ensure that they are free and fair; what action he plans to take to ensure that such observers take part in the election; and what representations he has made to the King of Nepal on the participation of observers. [64640]

Dr. Howells: Elections can only take place in the context of a secure environment and a meaningful political process. It is too early to say what conditions will pertain at the time of any elections, or even if elections will be possible in the timeframe indicated by the King, and therefore what role election observers might play.

Peace Talks (Abuja)

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the peace talks in Abuja. [64641]

Ian Pearson: The talks continue in permanent session, but progress is still slow. When my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary addressed the talks on 14 February, he made clear that we expected more rapid progress. We welcome the African Union's emphasis on the need for a high-level push to secure a peace agreement by the end of April. We are pressing the parties to reach a deal by this date.

Proliferation Security Initiative

Patrick Mercer: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many exercises are planned to support the Proliferation Security Initiative in (a) 2006 and (b) 2007. [65281]

Dr. Howells: Australia and the Netherlands both hosted exercises in April 2006 in support of the Proliferation Security Initiative. Turkey and France plan to host exercises in summer 2006. The United Kingdom is planning a maritime industry workshop for autumn 2006. As yet there are no scheduled exercises for 2007.

Rendition Flights

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many times he was notified by the US Administration that flights ordered by the Central Intelligence Agency would be landing in the UK in each of the last four years; and if he will make a statement. [64777]

Dr. Howells: None. There is no requirement for the Government to be notified of such flights.

Student Visas (Iran)

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many visas have been issued to students from Iran in each year since 1997; and which subjects for (a) study and (b) research they indicated a wish to pursue. [64894]

Dr. Howells: The number of student visas issued in Tehran between 1997 and 2004–05 is provided in the table. UKvisas does not hold records detailing which subjects these students intended to study.

Prior to 2001–02, entry clearance statistics were published by calendar year.

Sudan

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what contingency plans the UK Government have for the absence of a peace agreement for Darfur. [64643]

Ian Pearson: The UK is at the forefront of international efforts to bring peace to Darfur. In the absence of a peace agreement we have been a leading supporter of the African Union Mission in Sudan (AMIS), contributing over £50 million. The African Union (AU) has done a good job in improving security in the region. But the situation is evolving and a more multi-disciplinary approach is now needed. We therefore support handover to a UN mission when AMIS' current mandate expires on 30 September.

But only a political solution will bring lasting peace and security to Darfur. We fully support the AU-led peace talks in Abuja and are pressing the parties to reach a deal as soon as possible. We welcome the AU's commitment to reach an agreement by the end of April. When my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary addressed the talks on 14 February, he made clear to the parties that if they do not reach an agreement soon, we, with the AU, would need to start looking at the alternatives. If necessary, we will take this discussion forward with the AU and international partners.

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action the UK Government (a) is taking and (b) is prepared to take to uphold the United Nations mandate in Sudan. [64644]

Ian Pearson: We support fully the existing mandate for the United Nations Mission in Sudan and welcome the African Union's decision to support in principle the African Mission in Sudan's transition to a UN force in Darfur. We are supporting UN planning to deploy a future UN military force to Darfur and will seek to ensure they have the mandate necessary to operate there.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what support the Government is giving to establish (a) legal systems and (b) an independent judiciary in the Sudan. [64919]

Ian Pearson: We are providing £7.2 million to support capacity building and reform of legal systems. This includes training, awareness raising, equipment and basic infrastructure for the police, the Ministry of Justice, the judiciary and the prison service. We are also providing more substantial and longer-term support to legal systems through the Multi Donor Trust Funds for the north and south.

We are working to achieve independence of the judiciary through the establishment of the National Judicial Service Commission. We are also contributing towards a Judiciary Programme in the north under the Multi Donor Trust Fund, totalling £10 million. This is aimed at helping the judiciary to maintain its independence, build a knowledge base and to effectively and fairly apply the law. A similar programme is envisaged for the south.

Sylvarius Baye

Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he expects to make contact with the entry clearance officers who dealt with the case of Sylvarius Baye (UK Visa Reference GV100/113504/NW/RK); when he first attempted to make contact with those officers; and if he will make a statement. [64804]

Dr. Howells: My noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, Lord Triesman of Tottenham, with responsibility for entry clearance, will write to my hon. Friend about this case as I cannot comment on individual cases.

United Nations (Votes)

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the occasions on which (a) the UK has voted against and the US has voted for and (b) the UK has voted for and the US has voted against the adoption of measures at the United Nations since 1997. [64992]

Dr. Howells: Since 1997 the UK and the US have voted differently in the UN Security Council on 16 occasions.

The US abstained, while the UK voted in favour, on the following six resolutions (resn.) which were passed by the Security Council:

1322 (2000) on the situation in the Occupied Territories (OTs)

1372 (2000) on the lifting of Sudan sanctions

1435 (2002) on the OTs

1506 (2003) on the lifting of Libya sanctions

1544 (2004) on the OTs

1593 (2005) on referral of the situation in Darfur to the International Criminal Court

The US voted no, while the UK voted in favour, on the following four draft Security Council resolutions:

draft resn. S/1997/199 (7 March 1997) on the OTs

draft resn. S/1997/241 (21 March 1997) on the OTs

draft resn. S/2002/712 (30 June 2002) on extension of the mandate of UNMIBH (UN Mission to Bosnia and Herzegovina)

draft resn. S/2002/1385 (20 December 2002) on the OTs

The US voted no, while the UK abstained, on the following six draft Security Council resolutions, which all referred to the situation in the Ots;

draft resn. S/2001/270 (27 March 2001)

draft resn. S/2001/1199 (14 December 2001)

draft resn. S/2003/891 (16 September 2003)
draft resn. S/2003/980 (14 October 2003)
draft resn. S/2004/204 (25 March 2004)
draft resn. S/2004/783 (5 October 2004)

Voting information on all Security Council resolutions is available on the United Nations website at www.un.org.

TREASURY

Baby Deaths (Overlaying)

Mary Creagh: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many babies died as a result of overlaying while co-sleeping with their parents in each of the past 10 years. [64456]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Colin Mowl, dated 24 April 2006:

The National Statistician has been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking how many babies died as a result of overlaying whilst co-sleeping with their parents in each of the past 10 years. I am replying in her absence. (64456)

Statistics are not routinely available on the number of babies dying as a result of overlaying whilst co-sleeping with their parents. Since 2001, deaths have been coded to the tenth revision of the International Classification of Diseases (ICD-10). This includes a code that combines deaths from 'accidental suffocation and strangulation in bed'. Figures for these deaths, in England and Wales for the years 2001 to 2004, are given in the table attached. Prior to 2001 deaths were coded to the ninth revision of the ICD (ICD-9). Figures based on ICD-9 are not comparable to those using ICD-10.

Budget 2006 (Leaflets)

Mr. Gauke: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many Budget 2006 summary leaflets were printed; and at what cost. [64140]

John Healey: Just over 1 million Budget 2006 summary leaflets were printed. The total cost of producing the Budget summary leaflets was around £151,000. The printing cost was around £69,000 and the distribution cost was around £82,000 as met from within the Treasury's departmental expenditure limits.

The leaflet is designed to provide a concise and informative summary of the Budget for a wide audience.

Mr. Gauke: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many Budget 2006 summary leaflets were distributed to (a) doctors' surgeries, (b) hospitals and (c) other health service-related locations; and what the cost was of the distribution. [64141]

John Healey: The following table shows the number of Budget 2006 summary leaflets distributed to doctors' surgeries, hospitals and other health service related organisations.

Location	Number of leaflets distributed
(a) Doctors' surgeries	[1]200,000
(b) Hospitals	[1]187,000
(c) Other health service related organisations	[1]107,000

[1] Figures have been rounded to the nearest thousand

The total cost of distribution of the Budget 2006 summary leaflet was around £82,000 including VAT. All costs were met from within the Treasury's departmental expenditure limits.

The summary leaflet is designed to provide a concise and informative summary of the Budget. It is aimed at a wide audience, and was also sent to other public organisations such as libraries, post offices, schools and universities.

Public Sector Finance

Mr. Gauke: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the budget surplus or deficit was, excluding expenditure on investment, for each financial year from 1997–98 to 2005–06 as a percentage of gross domestic product. [64593]

Mr. Des Browne: Outturns for the public sector current budget as a percentage of GDP from 1997–98 to 2004–05 can be found in the monthly Office for National Statistics publication "Public sector finances". The Budget forecast for the public sector current budget in 2005–06 was published in Table C1 of Budget 2006.

Cancer

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the (a) diagnosis and (b) mortality rate was for cancer in each of the last five years in the West Lancashire constituency. [64226]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Colin Mowl, dated 24 April 2006:

The National Statistician has been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking what the (a) diagnosis and (b) mortality rate was for cancer in each of the last five years in the West Lancashire constituency. I am replying in her absence.

The most recent available figures for newly diagnosed cases of all cancers combined are for the year 2003. Incidence rates are not available centrally for Parliamentary Constituencies.

Age-standardised incidence rates (directly standardised to the European standard population) for West Lancashire local authority for 1999–2003 are given in the table below.

Directly age-standardised incidence rates[1] per 100,000 population of all cancers[2] (excluding non-melanoma skin cancer) in West Lancashire local authority, 1999–2003

	West Lancashire LA
	Male	Female	Persons
1999	406.6	378.5	384.9
2000	446.6	377.8	401.6
2001	393.4	333.0	356.4
2002	401.3	380.7	385.9
2003	336.3	337.5	340.0

[1] Age-standardised rates per 100,000 population are directly standardised to the European standard population. In detailed analyses of trends in incidence and mortality over time for a particular cancer, ONS use age-standardised rates. These control for differences in the size and age structure of the population and allow unbiased comparison of rates over time.

[2] International Classification of Diseases, Tenth Revision (ICD-10) codes C00-C97 excluding C44.

Hugh Bayley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the (a) standard mortality rate and (b) number of deaths was for (i) women dying from breast cancer and (ii) (A) women and (B) men dying from all cancers in (1) York and (2) North Yorkshire in (x) 1997 and (y) the latest year for which figures are available. [64337]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 24 April 2006:

As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your recent question concerning what the (a) SMR and (b) number of deaths was for (i) women dying from breast cancer and (ii) (A) women and (B) men dying from all cancers in (1) York and (2) North Yorkshire in (aa) 1997 and (bb) in the latest year for which figures are available. (64337)

The latest year for which figures are available is 2004. Numbers of deaths and age-standardised death rates for 2004 and 1997 are provided in the following table. Death rates for 1997 have been adjusted to take account of the introduction of the Tenth Revision of the International Classification of Diseases in 2001.

Number of deaths and death rates[1] for all cancers and female breast cancer,[2] for York unitary authority and the county of North Yorkshire,[3] 1997 and 2004 [4]

	All cancers		Breast cancer
	Males	Females	Females
Number of deaths
York
1997	228	197	38
2004	215	212	39
North Yorkshire
1997	794	736	126
2004	832	749	135
Death rates[1] per 100,000 population
York
1997	229.9	136.6	31.1
2004	193.0	135.7	28.2
North Yorkshire
1997	227.3	153.9	30.5
2004	203.6	143.8	29.7

[1] Rates per 100,000 population standardised to the European Standard Population.

Directly age-standardised rates have been supplied rather than Standardised Mortality Ratios (SMRs) to allow comparisons between 1997 and 2004, between York and North Yorkshire and between the sexes.

[2] The causes of death for 2004 were defined using the International Classification of Diseases, Tenth Revision (ICD-10)

All cancers (malignant neoplasms)—ICD-10 C00-C97

Breast cancer—ICD-10 C50

The causes of death for 1997 were defined using the International Classification of Diseases, Ninth Revision (ICD-9).

The codes used are listed below:

All cancers (malignant neoplasms)—ICD-9 140–208

Breast cancer—ICD-9 174

Deaths were selected using the original underlying cause.

The introduction of ICD-10 for coding cause of death in England and Wales in 2001 means that data for all cancers and female breast cancer are not completely comparable with data for years before this date. The effect of the change in classification in 2001 on deaths from these causes is described in a report published in May 2002:

Health Statistics Quarterly 14 (2002), 75–83.

For all cancers (malignant neoplasms) the introduction of ICD-10 caused an increase of 2.5 per cent. and 2.2 per cent. for males and females respectively and for female breast cancer an increase of 2.7 per cent. in the number of deaths coded to these conditions in England and Wales. Death rates for 1997 from these causes have been adjusted to make them comparable with those for 2004. The numbers of deaths have not been adjusted.

[3] Usual residents of these areas. Deaths were assigned to these areas using the November 2005 All Fields Postcode Directory. The county of North Yorkshire excludes York unitary authority.

[4] Deaths registered in each calendar year.

Mr. Evans: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the (a) diagnosis and (b) mortality rate was for cancer in each of the last five years in Ribble Valley constituency. [65302]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Correspondence

John Barrett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when the Parliamentary Business Unit of the Tax Credit Office will respond to the hon. Member for Edinburgh West's letters of (a) 20 December 2005 and (b) 19 January 2006 with regard to his constituent Mr. Terence Boyd. [64409]

Dawn Primarolo: The Tax Credit Office replied in January 2006 and has provided copies of those replies to the hon. Member's constituency office.

EU Sixth VAT Directive

Mrs. Dorries: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent representations the Treasury has received on the EU Sixth VAT Directive; and if he will make a statement. [64262]

Dawn Primarolo: The Sixth VAT Directive provides the basis for the application of VAT in EU member states. It is therefore the subject of many representations to the Treasury.

Family Hardship

Mr. Love: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what (a) essential living expenses and (b) estimated weekly costs are taken into account in the calculation of family hardship when considering the recovery of an overpayment under code of practice note 26; and if he will make a statement. [64108]

Dawn Primarolo: When considering the recovery of an overpayment each individual case will be dealt with according to its circumstances as these will vary from case-to-case. In the calculation of family hardship, examples of essential living expenses that will be taken into account are: food, vital services (e.g. gas, electricity, water), rent or mortgage payments, court fines, council tax payments, and maintenance/child support.

In addition to the costs noted, other examples of estimated weekly costs that are taken into account include telephone bills, fares and motoring costs, insurance, pension payments, health, television licence payments and repairs and maintenance.

Financial Services Authority

Mr. Drew: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what measures he has put in place to ensure value for money from the operation of the Financial Services Authority. [64931]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (FSMA), enables the Treasury to hold an independent review of the economy, efficiency and effectiveness with which the Financial Services Authority (FSA) has used its resources in discharging its functions. As announced in the pre- Budget report 2005, the Treasury aims to hold the first such review in the near future.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what role the Financial Services Authority has in improving consumer understanding of financial matters. [64932]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Financial Services Authority has a statutory responsibility to promote public understanding of the financial system and to secure the right degree of protection for consumers. The FSA's annual report, which is laid before Parliament, explains how this statutory remit has been met.

The FSA leads work on the national strategy for financial capability involving a range of other partners, including Government, the financial services industry, employers' organisations and trades unions, the media, consumer bodies and the voluntary sector. Over the coming year the focus for the strategy will be on the following seven key priorities:

Embedding personal finance education in schools;

Helping students in higher education and young people not in education, employment or training manage their money;

Providing generic financial guidance through the workplace;

Providing resources for those taking maternity or paternity leave;

Distributing more widely the financial health check and an on-line tool to help people assess their debt position;

Examination of whether there is a commercial case for the delivery of a more widespread generic financial advice service; and

As part of a revised FSA consumer communication strategy, revamping and re-launching the information and tools it provides to consumers.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what public participation in its operation the Financial Services Authority provides for. [64933]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: This is an operational matter for the FSA. The Chairman of the FSA will write to the hon. Member directly.

Fiscal Golden Rule

Mr. Gauke: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of whether his fiscal golden rule would have been complied with had the assessment of the economic cycle not been altered in (a) July 2005 and (b) December 2005. [64594]

Mr. Des Browne: Progress against the golden rule is measured across the full economic cycle. It is misleading to assess progress over an arbitrary portion of the cycle.

The latest judgment of the current economic cycle and progress against the golden rule over the cycle was set out in Budget 2006.

GDP

Mr. Amess: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the gross domestic product per capita was in (a) the UK, (b) England, (c) Wales, (d) Scotland and (e) Northern Ireland in each year since 1976. [64197]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell dated 24 April 2006:

As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about Gross Domestic Product (GDP) per capita in UK, England, Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland in each year since 1976.(64197).

Estimates of GDP per capita for the years 1976 to 1988 are shown in table A. For the years 1989 to 2004 , estimates of Gross Value Added[1] (GVA) per capita are shown in table B. GVA is similar in concept to GDP but the estimates are not directly comparable.

The figures in table A are based on data published in 1998, the last time estimates for 1976 to 1988 were updated. Figures in table B are based on regional GVA published in December 2005. Estimates for 2005 are expected to be published in December of this year.

[1] Gross value added (GVA) is gross domestic product (GDP) less taxes (plus subsidies) on products. These data are current price estimates which are not adjusted for changes in prices over time.

Table A: Gross domestic product per capita 1976 to 1988[1]

1988	7,023	7,053	6,010	6,473	5,303

[1] Gross Domestic Product per head for 1976–1988 is based on data from the National Accounts Blue Book 1997. As the regional estimates of GDP and GVA are produced on a different basis, they cannot be used in conjunction to form a time series.

Lower Emission Vehicles

Chris Grayling: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer for what reason Government incentives for lower emission vehicles are limited to those vehicles registered since 2001. [63189]

John Healey: Vehicle excise duty rates for cars registered before March 2001 are not set according to CO_2 emissions since the necessary data for cars registered before that data is not available to the DVLA. Cars registered after 2001 are subject to the graduated VED system. There are currently six VED bands for cars registered after March 2001 (band A-F) and seven VED bands for cars registered after March 2006 (band A-G), based on CO_2 emissions.

Maternity Pay

Kate Hoey: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer why statutory maternity pay is not treated as an equivalent benefit for low-earning parents when assessing the additional payment for the child trust fund for children born between the introduction of the child tax credit and the introduction of the child trust fund; and if he will make a statement. [64304]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The child trust fund is designed to give more to those children in low-income households. If a child born before the introduction of child tax credit in April 2003 was part of a household receiving a specified income-related benefit when child benefit was first awarded, an additional payment will be credited to the child's account. Statutory maternity pay is not an income-related benefit. Receipt of statutory maternity pay does not necessarily indicate that a household is on a low income.

National Minimum Wage (West Lancashire)

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many companies in West Lancashire have been (a) fined and (b) forced to cease trading for non-compliance with the national minimum wage since it was introduced. [64117]

Dawn Primarolo: The information requested is not available.

Personal Bankruptcies

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many personal bankruptcies there have been in each quarter since 1989–90; and if he will make a statement. [64012]

Mr. Sutcliffe: I have been asked to reply.

Figures quoted in the following three tables relate to England and Wales, are not seasonally adjusted and they are given by calendar year quarters. Bankruptcy order figures only make up part of the headline individual insolvency series, which also includes individual voluntary arrangements (IVAs) and deeds of arrangements.

Population Forecasts

Mr. Amess: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proportion of the population is aged (a) 65 years and over and (b) 18 to 64 years; and what the forecast ratio is for (i) 2007, (ii) 2009, (iii) 2010, (iv) 2015 and (v) 2020. [64020]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 24 April 2006:

As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your question regarding the proportion of the population aged (a) 65 years and over and (b) 18 to 64 years; and what the forecast ratio is for (i) 2007, (ii) 2009, (iii) 2010, (iv) 2015 and (v) 2020. (64020)

Tax Credits

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much was overpaid to tax credit recipients in West Lancashire constituency in 2004–05. [64115]

Dawn Primarolo: Estimates for 2004–05 of the number of in-work families with tax credits awards, including information on overpayments and underpayments by constituency, based on final family circumstances and incomes for 2004–05 will be published on 31 May 2006.

Mr. Jeremy Browne: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what percentage of families received tax credits in (a) the UK, (b) the South West and (c) Taunton constituency in each year since their introduction. [64311]

Dawn Primarolo: Estimates of child and working tax credit take-up rates for 2003–04 are available on the HMRC website at http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/stats/personal-tax-credits/cwtc-take-up.htm. National and regional take-up rates for child tax credit are shown in tables 1 and 9 respectively.

Take-up rate estimates are not available at parliamentary constituency level.

Mr. Marsden: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what tax credits are available to full-time carers. [64375]

Dawn Primarolo: Child tax credit and working tax credit are available to full-time carers who meet the appropriate qualifying conditions.

Unemployment

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what changes in the level of unemployment there have been in West Lancashire constituency in each year since 2003; [64116]

(2) what the level of youth unemployment has been in (a) West Lancashire constituency, (b) Lancashire and (c) the UK in each year since 1983. [64294]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 24 April 2006:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your Parliamentary Questions about unemployment. (64116, 64294)

The Office for National Statistics (ONS) compiles statistics of unemployment for local areas from the Annual Population Survey (APS) following International Labour Organisation definitions.

Table 1 shows the numbers of unemployed, resident in the West Lancashire Parliamentary Constituency for the 12 month periods ending February 2003 to February 2004 and for the 12 months ending December 2004.

Table 2 shows the numbers of unemployed aged 16 to 24 resident in the West Lancashire constituency, Lancashire, and the United Kingdom for the, 12 month periods ending February 1995 to February 2004 and for the 12 months ending December 2004.

These estimates, as with any from sample surveys, are subject to a margin of uncertainty. Changes in the estimates from year to year should be treated with particular caution.

ONS also compiles statistics for local areas of people claiming Jobseeker's Allowance (JSA). Table 3 shows the annual average number of JSA claimants, and changes in levels, for claimants resident in the West Lancashire constituency since 2003.

Table 4 shows the annual average number of claimants, aged 18 to 24, resident in the West Lancashire constituency, Lancashire, Great Britain and the United Kingdom since 1986. Data for earlier years area not available on a consistent basis.

VAT (Car Allowances)

Mrs. Dorries: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much VAT on the road fuel element of car allowances was reclaimed in each year since 1997 up to the last period for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [64263]

Dawn Primarolo: This information is not available. HM Revenue and Customs does not collect data on VAT relating to individual goods and services.

Departmental Policies

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will set out with statistical evidence relating as closely as possible to West Lancashire constituency the effects in West Lancashire of changes to his Department's policies since 1997. [64232]

John Healey: The Government have put in place a broad programme of both macroeconomic and microeconomic reform since our election in 1997 designed to improve the economic performance of all parts of the UK. Since these policies were implemented, the economic performance of the West Lancashire constituency has improved considerably. For example, since May 1997, claimant unemployment in West

Lancashire has fallen by 35 per cent., while both long-term youth and adult unemployment have fallen by over 75 per cent.

The Neighbourhood Statistics Service provides a wide range of statistical information at parliamentary constituency level, taken from the 2001 Census and other sources. This service is available on the National Statistics website at http://neighbourhood.statistics.gov.uk/.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Altnagelvin Hospital Trust

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what (a) additional resources have been allocated to and (b) measures have been put in place by Altnagelvin Hospital Trust to meet increased need arising from the closure of the accident and emergency department at Tyrone county hospital. [64299]

Mr. Woodward: Sperrin Lakeland Trust has worked closely with Altnagelvin to ensure that safe hospital services are available to all of population of the Western Board area.

In anticipation of increased attendances at Altnagelvin an additional £750,000 was allocated for the creation of a new acute medical unit and to fund the structural changes made to the A&E department at Altnagelvin.

Funding for three additional surgical beds, to accommodate an increase in surgical admissions, has also been approved.

Altnagelvin is monitoring the situation very closely to ensure that their systems are sufficiently robust to cope with increased attendances.

Carers Allowance

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people receive carers allowance in each (a) parliamentary constituency and (b) council district in Northern Ireland; and how many received the allowance in each of the last three years. [64298]

Mr. Hanson: The information requested is shown in the following tables.

Note:
Data is taken from January of each year.

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people in Northern Ireland have applied for carers allowance in the last 12 months; how many of those applicants are awaiting a decision; what the target length of time is that applicants should wait for a decision; what the average length of time applicants waited for a decision in the latest period for which figures are available is; what the target length of time is that applicants should wait for notification of decisions once taken; and for what average length of time applicants waited for such notification in the latest period for which figures are available. [64334]

Mr. Hanson: From April 2005 to March 2006 11,642 carer's allowance applications have been received. Of these, 1447 are currently awaiting a decision.

The target length of time for applicants to wait for a decision in this period was 55 days. The average length of time applicants waited for a decision was 35 days.

There is no separate target time for the issue of notifications. However, notifications are issued automatically by computer within 24 hours of the decision being made.

CCTV

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when the consultation process on the installation of CCTV in West Belfast will be completed; what the reasons are for the time taken for the consultation process; and why East, South and North Belfast did not have an equivalent consultation processes. [52879]

Mr. Woodward: In some cases, where urgent response to disorder was necessary, consultation in respect of a number of CCTV cameras was limited. In other cases, community based consultation has taken place with both community and political representatives.

It has not been possible to identify the nature of the West Belfast CCTV consultation referred to in the question. The most recent CCTV scheme was announced in 2004, when the then Minister of State announced £2 million funding for the development of CCTV systems across Northern Ireland. In that case, interested parties have been invited to make an application to Government for funding to establish new CCTV systems in town centres across Northern Ireland. The closing date for applications has been extended to the 14 April 2006 and an "order of merit" list will be drawn up and published thereafter.

Craigavon Bridge

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether there are plans to provide additional signage indicating vehicle height restrictions for Craigavon bridge in Derry. [64509]

Mr. Woodward: The chief executive of the Roads Service (Dr. Malcolm McKibbin) has been asked to write to the hon. Gentleman in response to this question.

Letter from Dr. Malcolm McKibbin, dated 21 April 2006

You recently asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland a Parliamentary Question regarding whether there are plans to provide additional signage indicating vehicle height restrictions for Craigavon Bridge in Derry.

As this issue falls within my responsibility as Chief Executive of Roads Service, I have been asked to reply.

You will be aware that an incident occurred on 11 April 2006, in which an articulated lorry became lodged on the lower deck of the Craigavon Bridge. Our local officials have checked both the structure of the bridge and the adequacy of the signage and I can advise that damage to the bridge was slight, and that the signage for the lower deck, which was up-graded a few years ago, exceeds the required standard.

I should explain that Roads Service is required to sign all bridges with headroom less than 16'6" in order to warn drivers of high-sided vehicles of a potential hazard ahead. Accordingly, prominent triangular warning signs advising of a height restriction of 14'3" (4.3 m) have been erected both on the lower deck of Craigavon Bridge and at several locations on the immediate approaches. Further prominent signage advising that the lower deck of the bridge is "unsuitable for large vehicles" has been included on advance signage at the wider approaches to the bridge.

As you will understand, it is the responsibility for drivers of high-sided lorries to know the height and width of their vehicle and to take notice of both advanced signage and of warning signs in the immediate vicinity of a low structure. You may be interested to know that the Ordnance Survey, in association with Roads Service and Northern Ireland Railways, has produced a map, which has been widely advertised, showing all the low structures across Northern Ireland.

Historical Enquiries Team

Mr. Donaldson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many unsolved murders from each year since 1969 will be reviewed by the Historical Enquiries Team. [63614]

Mr. Woodward: I am advised that the Historical Enquiries Team (HET) intends to re-examine all deaths attributable to the security situation between 1968 and 10 April 1998—some 3,268 deaths.

The HET aims to review 400 cases per year for the first two years of the review and 600 cases each for years, three, four, five and six. The PSNI has designed an analytical database to capture all this information in a victim-centred way. Families will sit at the very heart of their investigations. The primary objective will be to work with them to achieve a measure of resolution in these difficult cases.

InterTradeIreland

Sammy Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the religious composition is of the senior management in InterTradeIreland. [58933]

Angela E. Smith: The community background of the four members of the senior management of InterTradeIreland has been identified as Roman Catholic.

Sammy Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many staff members in InterTradeIreland are from (a) Northern Ireland, (b) the Irish Republic and (c) neither Northern Ireland nor the Irish Republic. [58934]

Angela E. Smith: At 1 March 2006, InterTradeIreland employed 38 permanent staff. 35 staff have home addresses in Northern Ireland and three in the Republic of Ireland.

Sammy Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what recent assessment he has made of the value for money provided by InterTradeIreland. [58935]

Angela E. Smith: Although InterTradeIreland has produced a number of well regarded, innovative all-island trade and business initiatives, there has been no recent value for money assessment of its performance. InterTradeIreland is however required to operate in accordance with a set of procedures contained in a Financial Memorandum approved by its Sponsor Departments and the Finance Departments North and South. Its business plan and associated costs are subject to scrutiny and approval on an annual basis and its annual accounts are examined and certified by the Comptroller and Auditor General for Northern Ireland and the Irish Comptroller and Auditor General.

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the community background is of the workforce of InterTradeIreland. [59112]

Angela E. Smith: At 1 March 2006, InterTradeIreland employed 38 permanent staff. The community backgrounds of these staff have been identified as follows:

	Number	Percentage
Catholic	31	81
Protestant	6	16
Non-determined	1	3

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the community background is of the senior management team of InterTradeIreland. [59113]

Angela E. Smith: The community background of the four members of the senior management of InterTradeIreland has been identified as Roman Catholic.

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many employees of InterTradeIreland are citizens of the Republic of Ireland. [59114]

Angela E. Smith: Information on the citizenship of its employees is not held by InterTradeIreland. However, three staff have home addresses in the Republic of Ireland.

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the value of contracts awarded by InterTradeIreland to PriceWaterhouseCoopers has been since the establishment of the body. [59115]

Angela E. Smith: Since the establishment of the body in 1999 InterTradeIreland has awarded contracts to PriceWaterhouseCoopers to the value of £1.054 million.

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland in how many years InterTradeIreland has spent less than its budgetary allocation from the Exchequer. [59116]

Angela E. Smith: InterTradeIreland has spent less than its initial budgetary allocation in each year since its formation. The level of underspend has decreased year-on-year.

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the ratio between overheads expenditure and project spending was in InterTradeIreland in the last financial year for which figures are available. [59117]

Angela E. Smith: The ratio between overheads expenditure and programme spending by InterTradeIreland in 2005 was 1 to 2.3. Expenditure details have been taken from the 2005 draft accounts.

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the rate of usage by businesses of InterTradeIreland's Information Resource Centre. [59118]

Angela E. Smith: Since 2003 InterTradeIreland's Information Resource Centre has handled almost 800 inquiries from businesses, business organisations, researchers and academia.

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the total expenditure of InterTradeIreland on events was in each of the last five years. [59119]

Angela E. Smith: The total expenditure by InterTradeIreland on events in each of the last five years is as follows:

	Expenditure (£)
2001	82,837
2002	679,520
2003	755,351
2004	984,812
2005[1]	629,443

Metro Bus Service (Belfast)

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many complaints were received during the first month of operation of the Metro bus service in Belfast. [64912]

Mr. Woodward: The information in the form requested is not readily available. However, Translink has informed me that in the first five weeks of operation (7 February 2005 to 14 March 2005) it received a total of 404 complaints relating to Metro.

Nursing Training

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many students (a) entered nursing training and (b) successfully completed nursing training in Northern Ireland in each of the last 10 years; and how many of those subsequently entered the professional register. [64351]

Mr. Woodward: The number of students who commenced pre-registration nurse training and successfully completed this training in each of the last 10 years is detailed as follows. Information on the number of nurses entering the professional register each year is not held in the Department, this is the responsibility of the Nursing and Midwifery Council.

The number of pre-registration nursing students who commenced training in each of the last 10 years

1 April to 31 March	Number commencing training

PEACE Funding

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will estimate the number of jobs likely to be affected by the end of PEACE funding; and what steps each Department is taking to ensure that work and services provided through PEACE funding can be sustained in the long-term. [63122]

Angela E. Smith: Many projects will end naturally in line with original plans. For all projects it was a condition of their assistance that they would sustain their activities when PEACE funding ended.

The European Council agreed in December 2005 to allocate a further 200 million to the EU PEACE Programme for 2007 to 2013 and the funding would not end until that time. For Northern Ireland the annual amount available will, however, be approximately half current levels. How this will be allocated will only be determined after a consultation process later this year and it is not yet possible to say what activities will not continue and to estimate precisely the impact.

The primary purpose of PEACE funding is to promote peace and reconciliation outcomes and not solely the creation or maintenance of job opportunities where different sectors will be affected differently by any reductions in expenditure levels. Employment in successful private sector and social economy enterprises will continue. For the voluntary and community sector it is estimated that EU funding currently supports an estimated 1,500 jobs and at half annual funding levels this would suggest that up to 750 of these could be at potential risk. Any expenditure areas that are brought within mainstream expenditure will mitigate this. For example employment in children's projects is, following the recent announcement of the Children's and Young Peoples funding package, ensured until March 2008.

Pupil Injuries (Compensation)

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much has been paid in Northern Ireland in compensation claims for injuries received by (a) pupils, (i) on school field trips and (ii) while at school and (b) teachers as a result of (A) assault and (B) accident while on duty in each of the last five years. [63442]

Angela E. Smith: I have been advised that the information requested is as follows.

	2001–02	2002–03	2003–04	2004–05	2005–06
Pupils
Field trip	1,618	15,614	10,851	153,057	0
Injuries at school	369,945	182,008	363,422	289,509	221,726
Teachers
Assault	0	0	3,000	0	5,000
Accident on duty	47,003	78,488	10,767	29,153	104,023

Special Educational Needs

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what percentage of (a) primary and (b) secondary school pupils in Northern Ireland (i) have special educational needs and (ii) are eligible for free school meals; and what the equivalent figures are for the 100 (A) best and (B) worst performing (1) primary and (2) secondary schools. [64176]

Angela E. Smith: The requested information (2004–05) is as follows:

Percentages of pupils with special educational needs and eligible for free school meals: all schools

Percentage

	Primary schools	Post primary schools
Pupils with special educational needs	18	10
Pupils eligible for free school meals	20	20

Percentages of pupils with special educational needs and eligible for free school meals: top performing 100 schools

Percentage

	Primary schools	Post primary schools
Pupils with special educational needs	14	5
Pupils eligible for free school meals	10	10

Percentages of pupils with special educational needs and eligible for free school meals: lowest performing 100 schools

Percentage

	Primary schools	Post primary schools
Pupils with special educational needs	27	16
Pupils eligible for free school meals	41	32

Notes:

1. Figures relate to post primary pupils and pupils in nursery, reception and year 1–year 7 classes in primary schools.
2. Top and lowest 100 performing schools were identified by ranking the percentage of pupils achieving Level 4 and above and Level 5 in Key Stage 2 assessments for primary schools, and by ranking the percentage of year 12 pupils achieving five or more GCSEs at grades A*–C for post primary schools.

For nursery class pupils, "pupils with a parent in receipt of jobseeker's allowance or income support" was used as a proxy for free school meal entitlement.

CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

1911 Census

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs pursuant to the answer of 9 February 2006 to Question 49704 how, and in what form, the assurances to which she refers in her answer were given. [51803]

Ms Harman: The 1911 census forms for England and Wales included the following assurance to householders:

'The contents of the Schedule will be treated as confidential. Strict care will be taken that no information is disclosed with regard to individual persons. The returns are not to be used for proof of age, as in connection with old age pensions, or for any other purpose than the preparation of statistical tables'.

Hague Convention 1996

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs which countries have (a) signed and ratified and (b) only signed the Hague Convention of 1996 on the International Protection of Children. [62853]

Ms Harman: My hon. Friend the Member for Doncaster, Central (Ms Winterton), the then Minister, signed the Convention on behalf of the UK on 1 April 2003. The full details of signatures, ratifications and accessions are set out as follows. Up-to-date information is on the Hague Conference website at http://www.hcch.net.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Action for Southern Africa Sanitary Appeal

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what funding has been allocated to the Action for Southern Africa Sanitary Appeal. [64474]

Hilary Benn: DFID has not provided funding specifically to the Action for Southern Africa Sanitary Appeal. DFID has, however, provided funds to the International Organisation for Migration to assist the most poor and vulnerable households displaced as a result of the Government of Zimbabwe's urban clean-up operations and land reform programme. Sanitary products are included in the pack of non-food items which to date have been distributed to nearly 12,000 families, many of whom are affected by the HIV/AIDS crisis in the country.

In the last year, our top priorities have been to address the HIV and AIDS crisis, which is causing over 3,000 deaths every week; to support orphans and vulnerable children, now numbering over 10 per cent. of the total population; and to ensure that poor people across the country avoid serious food shortages. We expect these to remain our priorities in the coming year, with a planned expenditure of approximately 30 million channelled through UN Agencies and non-governmental organisations.

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development (1) what assessment he has made of the impact of a lack of female sanitary products on growth in developing countries via effects on female economic productivity; and what steps he plans take to tackle this problem; [64477]

(2) what steps the Government are taking to tackle rising vaginal infections in developing countries due to a lack of female sanitary products; [64476]

(3) what aid is given for the supply of female sanitary products in developing countries. [64475]

Hilary Benn: The low availability and high cost of purpose-made female sanitary products for menstrual protection means that they are generally not used by poor women and girls in developing countries. In general, strips of old cloth are used to provide protection during menstruation. Critically, to ensure hygiene, comfort and to lessen vulnerability to reproductive tract infections these cloths must be clean and dry. However, a lack of basic infrastructure such as toilets and clean water combined with social taboos means that it is often difficult and embarrassing to wash and dry these cloths. Women and girls also face problems bathing due to lack of facilities that provide privacy. Consequently damp or even dirty rags are re-used.

All people deserve the dignity of decent and private sanitation near their home. However, 2.6 billion people do not have it. DFID is working to increase poor people's access to clean water and basic sanitation and infrastructure.

Adolescent girls also get inadequate preparation for the changes they face in puberty, including issues around menstrual health and hygiene. The silence around these discussions with young girls is linked to taboos around female sexuality. This is why DFID is supporting work in adolescent sexual and reproductive health. This includes fostering life skills that enable young girls and boys to make informed decisions about their sexual and reproductive health and to adopt healthy behaviours that enable them to avoid reproductive track, sexually transmitted infections (including HIV) and unintended pregnancy.

DFID has not made an assessment of the impact of a lack of female sanitary products on economic growth and productivity. We are fully committed to working in ways that enable girls and women to reach their full potential. Investment in sexual and reproductive health is cost-effective. As well as direct health gains, better access to services can enable completion of education and access to economic opportunities by women and girls. This has immediate and longer term payoffs.

Central African Republic

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment he has made of (a) food shortages and (b) the number of internally displaced persons in the Central African Republic; and if he will make a statement. [64493]

Hilary Benn: Recent conflict has caused an estimated 35,000 to 50,000 people to flee their homes in North Western parts of the Central African Republic (CAR). It has not yet been possible for any agency to conduct a full nutritional survey due to instability, poor access and lack of local operational capacity, but one recent assessment found that at least 10,333 displaced people are in serious need. Medecins Sans Frontieres-Holland is making medical surveys.

DFID is providing £300,000 (a quarter of the estimated requirement) towards the World Food Programme's (WHO) pipeline, which has been revised to feed up to 50,000 people for three months. The WFP has started providing food to the most vulnerable through partners already based in the area such as the Red Cross and Caritas. DFID is in contact with the main agencies to keep needs under review. Should additional specific nutritional interventions be required, we shall respond urgently.

There is also an existing caseload of some 46,000 CAR nationals in camps in Chad that we are supporting through separate funding to the WFP and the UN High Commissioner for Refugees.

Contracts (Voluntary Sector)

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many contracts are let by his Department to voluntary sector organisations; how many of those are let on an annual basis; and how many of those had received finalised contracts for 2006–07 by 31 March. [63210]

Mr. Thomas: The Department for International Development has three current contracts with voluntary sector organisations: two were awarded in 2002 and the other in 2005. DFID does not let contracts on an annual basis and contract duration is specified in each case. The total does not include lower-value contracts let by DFID's overseas offices, of which we do not keep a central record; this information could not be obtained without incurring a disproportionate cost.

These contracts do not include the considerable activity by NGOs which DFID funds directly through our Civil Society Challenge Fund, Partnership Programme Agreements, Humanitarian Assistance and in country through our country programmes.

East Africa Drought

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment he has made of drought in the (a) Somali region and (b) Borena zone of Oromiya region of Ethiopia; and if he will make a statement. [64494]

Hilary Benn: The humanitarian situation in the worst affected areas of the Somali region (Afder, Gode and Liban zones) was re-assessed by missions which took place from 28 March to 2 April. Preliminary findings indicate that more people are in need and that more non-food help is needed. Nutritional screening also indicated a high level of malnutrition. Humanitarian agencies are continuing with a blanket supplementary feeding programme until targeted supplementary feeding is fully operational.

A similar reassessment in the Borena zone of the Oromiya region has recommended that the number of people in need has increased from 155,000 to 220,000. Blanket supplementary feeding continues and a nutrition survey is planned for May.

To date, US$37.5 million has been contributed in response to the joint Government of Ethiopia/United Nations appeal for US$111 million for non-food assistance. DFID allocated £4 million to the United Nations Office for the Co-ordination of Humanitarian Affairs (OCHA) and £1 million to the International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC). Most of the non-food needs included in the appeal would be best addressed through long-term development. DFID is working with the Government and other donors, including the European Commission, OCHA and the United States Agency for International Development (USAID) to find other ways of assisting in the meantime.

The next full assessment of all pastoral areas including the worst affected areas of the Somali region and the Borena zone of the Oromiya region is scheduled for June, following the April-June rainfall season. DFID will follow the situation closely and respond to identified humanitarian needs accordingly.

Fledgling Democracies

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what proportion of UK development aid was provided (a) bilaterally and (b) multilaterally to ensure better and more transparent government in fledgling democracies in 2005–06. [64625]

Mr. Thomas: DFID provides bilateral and multilateral assistance towards developing countries on the basis of their need and their ability to use aid effectively. Many of these countries are moving towards democracy and our assistance supports their state building efforts.

DFID tracks its bilateral expenditure towards developing countries by monitoring expenditure against specific sector objectives, one of which is improved governance. This includes different aspects of state building and the encouragement of better and more transparent government.

DFID's bilateral expenditure on programmes which include governance amongst their objectives was £347 million in 2005–06 or 13 per cent. of a total bilateral spend of £2.5 billion. Examples of this expenditure include £3,600,000 support to civic education for the Afghan National Assembly and Provincial Council elections, and £2,555,444 to support building the capacity of Iraqi media by establishing a broadcasting station for provinces in Southern Iraq. UK development aid is also used to support public service reform programmes. An example of this funding in 2005–06 was £8,500,000 provided to enhance the commitment, capability, accountability and transparency of the public service in Tanzania.

DFID provides funding to a number of multilaterals and this is pooled with other donors. In many cases these institutions support a range of activities, including governance. The UK share of this is not tracked.

International Planned Parenthood Federation

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what monitoring his Department has carried out on how the International Planned Parenthood Federation spent the funds provided by his Department in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [64205]

Mr. Thomas: DFID provides funding to the International Planned Parenthood Federation (IPPF) for its work to promote reproductive health. The IPPF produces an annual report and audited accounts which are used by DFID for monitoring purposes. DFID also attends the IPPF's annual donor consultation meeting to consider issues such as performance and effectiveness.

In 2003, DFID co-sponsored with other IPPF donors, an evaluation of the Federation's work to promote adolescent sexual and reproductive health. It confirmed the important role of the IPPF in promoting adolescent reproductive health and that the development goal of combating HIV and AIDS would only be achieved through the increased involvement of adolescents and young people. It emphasised that although progress had been made, much remains to be done to respond to the reproductive health and rights needs of adolescents and young people, and there was a need for increased support by the international community.

We are currently planning with the governments of Sweden and Norway, another evaluation of the IPPF's work at country level.

World Conference on Women

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what action his Department has taken in response to the Report of the United Nations Fourth World Conference on Women; and if he will make a statement. [62698]

Mr. Thomas: The United Nations Fourth World Conference on Women, which took place in Beijing in September 1995, concluded with adoption of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action. The Government fully supports implementation of the Platform for Action which we see as hugely significant in taking forward the global agenda on gender equality and as essential for making greater progress towards the Millennium Development Goals (MDGs.) We welcomed the re-affirmation of the key importance of the Declaration and Platform for Action, including the clear linkage with achievement of the MDGs at the Beijing Plus 10 conference, the Millennium Review Summit, and most recently at the meeting of the Commission on the Status of Women in March.

DFID's strategy for promoting gender equality is set out in the document "Poverty Elimination and the Empowerment of Women", and we are working to ensure that gender issues are made a priority across our work, and that developing country partners integrate gender into their own national plans. DFID also supports specific activities to promote the rights of women and girls, including in the areas of girls' education, maternal mortality and reproductive health. DFID is one of the three Government Departments responsible for the UK National Action Plan on implementation of the United Nations Security Council Resolution 1325 on Women, Peace and Security, which was launched on International Women's Day 2006 on 8 March.

Over the next year, we will be looking to see how we can strengthen this work in response to an evaluation of our work on gender and women's empowerment over the past ten years and to current trends in the delivery of international development assistance.

CHURCH COMMISSIONERS

Places of Worship (Listed Buildings)

24. Tony Baldry: To ask the hon. Member for Middlesbrough, representing the Church Commissioners what estimate the Commissioners have made of the amount required to maintain and repair listed places of worship in England; and what discussions they have had with English Heritage and the Department for Culture, Media and Sport on this issue. [64565]

Sir Stuart Bell: In 2003, around £101 million was spent on major repairs to churches (a substantial proportion of them listed) and a further £11 million on

Church of England Cathedrals. We are working with English Heritage to identify the areas in greatest need of assistance with repair costs; the results of this exercise will inform our discussions with the Department for Culture, Media and Sport about better State funding arrangements.

Investments

David T.C. Davies: To ask the hon. Member for Middlesbrough, representing the Church Commissioners what steps the Commissioners take to ensure they obtain the best possible return on the investment portfolios which they are responsible for managing. [64561]

Sir Stuart Bell: In the first instance, Her Majesty appoints a Second Church Estates Commissioner.

In the second instance, the aim is to achieve the best possible long-term returns by investing in assets such as equities and property, which generally offer higher long-term returns than bonds and cash deposits. There is a wide spread of assets in the UK and overseas.

Octavia Hill Estate

Simon Hughes: To ask the hon. Member for Middlesbrough, representing the Church Commissioners what sale price was agreed for the Octavia Hill Estate in South London. [64560]

Sir Stuart Bell: The Church Commissioners received £166.967 million for the sale of the properties to Grainger Geninvest on 20th March 2006

Pipe Organs

Steve Webb: To ask the hon. Member for Middlesbrough, representing the Church Commissioners what representations the Commissioners have made to the Department of Trade and Industry on the potential impact of forthcoming EU regulations affecting the replacement of pipe organs. [64181]

Sir Stuart Bell: The Churches Main Committee (the body representing the Christian Churches and the Jewish community in their dealings with Government) have written to express our concerns over the possible adverse impact of on church and cathedral pipe organs of the Restriction of the Use of Certain Hazardous Substances in Electrical and Electronic Equipment Regulations 2005, due to come into force on 1 July 2006.

LEADER OF THE HOUSE

Departmental Websites

Norman Baker: To ask the Leader of the House if he will list (a) the websites operated by his Office and (b) the reports placed on the internet in March 2006, indicating in each case whether paper copies were also made available. [65215]

Mr. Hoon: The website www.CommonsLeader.gov.uk is operated by the Office of the Leader of the House of Commons and managed by the private office staff.

The Office has not published any reports.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Independent Broadcasting

1. Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what steps the Government are taking to ensure a continued public service commitment in the independent broadcasting sector. [64568]

Tessa Jowell: The Government are committed to maintaining strong Public Service Broadcasting provision from both the BBC and other public service broadcasters. That is why, through the Communications Act, we placed on Ofcom a specific duty relating to public service television broadcasting and an obligation to undertake periodic reviews with a view to maintaining and strengthening the quality of public service television broadcasting in the United Kingdom.

Tote

13. Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement on her plans to privatise the Tote. [64581]

Mr. Caborn: The Government's objective remains to sell the Tote to a racing trust.

We continue to work closely with the Tote, the Racing Trust and the European Commission to achieve this objective.

Peepul Centre (Leicester)

14. Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement on support by the Millennium Commission for the Peepul Centre in Leicester. [64582]

Mr. Lammy: Detailed issues relating to Millennium Commission funding of the Peepul Centre in Leicester are primarily a matter for the Commission and I will therefore ask my right hon. Friend, the Minister for Sport, in his capacity as Chair of the Commission, to write to my hon. Friend and arrange for copies of his reply to be placed in the Libraries of the House.

Visitor Attractions

15. Mr. Ian Austin: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what support her Department is giving to visitor attractions in the UK. [64583]

James Purnell: My Department works closely in support of the attractions sector which attract nearly 500 million visits a year. Visitor attractions are key to British tourism and will be fully reflected in the upcoming DCMS Tourism 2012 Strategy consultation document, which will be issued shortly.

Sport Participation

16. Philip Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what steps her Department is taking to increase participation in sport. [64586]

Mr. Caborn: The Department is committed to its public service agreement target of increasing levels of participation in sport by priority groups by 3 per cent. by 2008. Working through Sport England, we are implementing a range of measures to achieve this.

BBC

17. Derek Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when she expects to be in a position to bring forward a Bill providing for the proposed increase in the BBC's licence fee and the length of the next BBC charter. [64587]

James Purnell: Neither of these issues will be subject to a Bill. TV licence fees are set in regulations laid before both Houses of Parliament and are subject to negative resolution procedure. The Government are currently conducting a funding review to determine the future level of the licence fee to apply from April 2007. An announcement will be made in due course. As set out in the White Paper, "A public service for all: the BBC in the digital age", the BBC will continue to be constituted by Royal Charter. The new Royal Charter will run for a period of 10 years until 31 December 2016.

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when she expects to publish the analysis by consultants Pannell Kerr Forster of the BBC's licence fee; and if she will ensure that the publication date provides adequate time to enable interested parties to express views on the proposals before the level of the licence fee is determined. [63797]

Tessa Jowell: We intend to publish PKF's findings subject only to proper consideration of commercial confidentiality and in advance of the seminar on 5 May.

Contracts (Voluntary Sector)

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many contracts are let by her Department to voluntary sector organisations; how many of those are let on an annual basis; and how many of those had received finalised contracts for 2006–07 by 31 March. [63215]

Mr. Lammy: DCMS has one contract within the voluntary sector and this is with YMCA. This is a three-year contract which expires in October 2007.

Correspondence

Sir Michael Spicer: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when she will reply to the letter of 30 January from the hon. Member for West Worcestershire about Stanbrook Abbey (Reference 34865). [64810]

Mr. Lammy: I wrote to the hon. Member on 20 April 2006.

Departmental Televisions

Jo Swinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many television sets are in operation in the Department (a) in total, (b) in Minister's private offices and (c) in each office building in the Department; and how many television licences are held by the Department. [62799]

Mr. Lammy: The Department for Culture, Media and Sport has television sets in operation as follows;

(a) 34 in total;

(b) Eight in Ministerial Private Offices at Cockspur Street, including three parliamentary annunciators;

(c) 29 at 2–4 Cockspur Street, two at Grove House, two at Queen's Yard and one at Blandford Street.

Each building holds a television licence that covers one or more sets.

Digital Television (Dundee)

Mr. McGovern: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when she expects digital television to be available to every household in Dundee. [64577]

James Purnell: The vast majority of households can, with the appropriate equipment, receive digital TV services via either digital satellite, digital terrestrial or cable.

Currently around three quarters of households in my hon. Friend's constituency are thought to be able to receive Freeview. Digital switchover in Dundee will happen in 2010, which will enable digital terrestrial coverage to match the current 98.5 per cent. analogue level.

Gambling

Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment she has made of the impact on problem gambling of new casinos established under the Gambling Act 2005. [64613]

Mr. Caborn: No premises licences for the three categories of new casino permitted by the Gambling Act 2005 have yet been issued, and we do not expect the competitions for these premises licences to begin until mid-2007 at the earliest. Our intention is to ask the Gambling Commission to make an assessment of the impact of the introduction of these categories of new casino no earlier than three years after the award of the first premises licence. As part of this work, the Commission will assess the impact of the new types of casino on problem gambling.

Licensing

Susan Kramer: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many new licences have been granted in (a) Richmond upon-Thames and (b) Kingston-upon-Thames under the Licensing Act 2003; and what percentage were 24 hour licences. [65069]

James Purnell: This information is not held centrally.

Millennium Dome

John Hemming: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the cost has been of the Millennium Dome to public funds in each year since its inception. [64942]

Mr. Caborn: The information is as follows.

(1) Grants from National Lottery funds were made by the Millennium Commission to the New Millennium Experience Company (NMEC) as follows.

	Grant (£)
1997–98	449
1998–99	nil
1999–2000	60
2000–01	119
2001–02	nil
2002–03	nil
2003–04	nil
2004–05	[1]nil
2005–06	[2]nil

[1] £24 million (unrequired funds decommitted from NMEC by the Millennium Commission for use on other projects)
[2] £1 million (unrequired funds decommitted from NMEC by the Millennium Commission for use on other projects)

(2) In addition, English Partnerships has been meeting management, maintenance, security and other costs at the site from 1 July 2001, and will continue to do so until the redevelopment of the arena by the Anschutz Entertainment Group is completed, expected in summer 2007, at which time Anschutz takes on full responsibility for the Dome structure and its immediate surroundings.

All of English Partnerships' costs (gross total of around £32 million to date) from July 2001 to the completion of the arena's construction, and including the costs of the entire sale process, are expected to be recovered from sale proceeds, forecast at £550 million over the period of the deal, which lasts for around another 19 years.

The year by year English Partnerships' maintenance and other costs to date have been as follows:

	Maintenance and other costs (£)
2001–02:	2.299
2002–03:	2.952
2003–04:	2.586
2004–05:	1.726
2005–06:	[1]0.364
Total	9.927

[1] To end February 2006.

In addition, English Partnerships spent £6.7 million on decommissioning some of the Dome's contents, £0.558 million on a one off payment for insurance and £14.5 million on the sale process between March 1999 and June 2004.

Music Industry

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what definition her Department uses of the music industry; under what legislation the music industry is regulated; and if she will make a statement. [64663]

James Purnell: The Department works with all businesses and activities which regard themselves part of the music industry. This includes recording, composition and publishing, instrument manufacture, production services, managers, agents and promoters and artists and performers. This work feeds into our support for music as part of our cultural objectives. We do not use an exclusive definition of this industry and there is no specific legislation under which the industry is regulated.

Queen's Birthday

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what steps her Department is taking abroad to encourage foreign tourism for the Queen's 80th birthday celebration. [63027]

James Purnell: My Department funds the work of VisitBritain in promoting tourism, to both the domestic and international markets, which includes Royal Events.

The events marking the 80th birthday of the Queen have been promoted to the international media by VisitBritain and direct by their press officers overseas. This activity is aimed to encourage more foreign tourists to visit the UK during the Queen's 80th birthday celebrations.

Royal Ballet

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what direct funding the Royal Ballet received from (a) central Government and (b) Government agencies in 2005–06; and how much such funding is planned for 2006–07. [64646]

Mr. Lammy: The Royal Ballet does not receive funding from central Government. DCMS sponsors Arts Council England to promote and invest in the arts, including dance.

The Royal Ballet is part of the Royal Opera House (ROH) and therefore receives funding through the Arts Council's subsidy to the ROH which is as follows:

	Subsidy (£)
2005–06	24,866,154
2007–08	26,252,600

The Arts Council does not direct the ROH management as to how they should allocate their funding across the Royal Ballet and the Royal Opera as well as the additional strands of work the ROH undertakes. Therefore a specific figure for the amount of Arts Council funding to the Royal Ballet Company is not available.

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what funding the Royal Ballet has received from (a) central Government and (b) Government agencies to take the company abroad on tour in each of the last eight years. [64647]

Mr. Lammy: The Arts Council does not direct the ROH management as to how they should allocate their funding across the Royal Ballet and the Royal Opera, as well as the additional strands of work the ROH undertakes. Therefore, a specific figure for the Royal Ballet Company's funding for their touring is not available.

Television Advertising

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many times (a) ITV and (b) Channel 4 have exceeded agreed limits for the quantity and length of advertisement breaks on television in each of the last eight years. [64648]

James Purnell: The matters raised are principally the responsibility of the Office of Communications (Ofcom) as independent regulator. Accordingly, my officials have asked the chief executive of Ofcom to respond directly to the hon. Member. Copies of the chief executive's letter will be placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Warships

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement on her Department's policy on the ownership of the warships which were previously in the ownership of the Warship Preservation Trust Ltd. [65401]

Mr. Lammy: Following the liquidation of The Warship Preservation Trust Ltd. in February 2006 and the subsequent disclaimer of the ships both by the Liquidator and the Treasury Solicitor (in her capacity as the Crown's Nominee for dealing with bona vacantia), the ships are now effectively ownerless and fall under the control of The Mersey Docks and Harbour Company, in whose possession they are. It will be for the company to decide how to deal with them. The National Historic Ships Unit of the Advisory Committee on National Historic Ships is in direct and regular contact with The Mersey Docks and Harbour Company, and is advising them on policy with regard to a long-term solution. The Department is monitoring the situation.

Water Safety

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the outcomes were of the recent meeting of the Water Safety Forum, with particular reference to adult to children supervision ratios in swimming pools. [65113]

Mr. Caborn: The issue of guidance relating to child admission and parental supervision in public swimming pools has been considered by the National Water Safety Forum (NWSF) at recent meetings.

The NWSF's investigations are ongoing and researchers are consulting with pool users and parents before final conclusions can be drawn.

However, the work to date has suggested that any guidance issued and followed by pool operators needs to be done on a site specific basis and supported by a site specific risk assessment before any admission ratios are set.

Departmental Policies

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will set out with statistical evidence relating as closely as possible to west Lancashire constituency the effects in west Lancashire of changes to her Department's policies since 1997. [64233]

Mr. Lammy: The Department's policies and actions have had a significant impact on west Lancashire since 2 May 1997. Our aim is to improve the quality of life for everyone through cultural and sporting activities, to support the pursuit of excellence and to champion the tourism, creative and leisure industries. Here is a non-exhaustive outline of the effects on the constituency.

In sport, over £3 billion has been invested from the lottery and Exchequer since 1997 to help us achieve our vision of an active and successful sporting nation. We have put in place the first ever comprehensive national school sport strategy which will have benefited from £1.5 billion of joint investment from DCMS and DFES by 2008. To help achieve our challenging targets for increased participation in sport and physical activity, we have invested heavily in our local and community sporting infrastructure, including thousands of new and refurbished public sports facilities. In west Lancashire, sports facilities have benefited from nine Sport England lottery grants totalling £2,347,120.

In addition, west Lancashire has received £192,501 from Awards for All, supporting 51 projects benefiting sport. The Glenburn School Sport Partnership, comprising four local secondary schools and 31 primary schools, has also received £185,063, and an award to the value of £674,259 for September 2005 to August 2008.

In the arts sector we have increased national funding, in real terms, by 60 per cent. from £199 million in 1998–99 to £367 million in 2004–05. Between 1998–99 and 2003–04 Arts Council England investment in the north west region, through Exchequer funding, increased from £7.6 million to £19.6 million, with a total investment of £34.8 million in 2005–06 (2005–06 includes lottery figures). West Lancashire has benefited from grants to arts projects, organisations and individuals, including £17,000 to the Chapel Gallery's education and outreach programme; and £5,000 to Open Arts, based in Skelmersdale.

In the museum sector we have supported the leading north west museum services through the "Renaissance in the Regions Programme", that will invest £1.7 million regionally in 2006–07. West Lancashire also benefits from its geographical proximity to National Museums Liverpool and the free access for all visitors that is on offer.

In heritage, English Heritage offered grants worth £257,555 to a combination of St Thomas the Martyr, Upholland; St John the Baptist, Burscough; Scarisbrick Hall, Ormskirk; and St Michael and All Angels, Dalton, Skelmersdale. In addition English Heritage also gave £75,000 to a Heritage economic regeneration scheme in Ormskirk.

In libraries, in common with all those in the United Kingdom, the public library branches in west Lancashire are connected to the internet through the People's Network which was funded through a £120 million lottery grant and which has put all the United Kingdom's public libraries on-line. In addition, the Department is funding the Museums, Libraries and Archives Council with £5 million over three years to implement the Framework for the Future Action Plan and Library Improvement Programme, which is designed to encourage overall improvement across the public libraries sector in England.

In broadcasting, through our commitment to public service broadcasting we have helped to foster an environment in which a creative, commercially successful broadcasting industry provides a wide range of UK-made, high quality original programmes catering for all viewers and listeners, including those in west

Lancashire. We have ensured a secure funding base for the BBC and Channel 4, while giving them the freedom to develop commercial operations which complement and support their public service remit. The Communications Act 2003 includes provisions to ensure that public service broadcasting will continue to have a key role to play in the digital future.

Furthermore, in November 2000 we introduced free television licences for people aged 75 or over. Precise information on the number of beneficiaries by constituency is not available, although as an indicator, according to Department for Work and Pensions records, the number of households in the west Lancashire constituency with at least one person aged 75 or over claiming the winter fuel payment in 2004–5 was 4,975.

In the creative industries, since 2004 funding has been given to help finance film projects in Ormskirk, Parbold and Merebrow, enabling the production of short films, screenings and digitisation projects, and travel bursaries to international film festivals for sales opportunities. The awards have been in excess of £4,500.

In tourism, west Lancashire has benefited from Government-funded marketing activity. In April 2003 we established VisitBritain with a new domestic marketing remit for England, and we gave strategic responsibility for tourism development to the Regional Development Agencies, including the North West RDA. These changes, together with VisitBritain's successful marketing activities in promoting Britain abroad as an attractive tourist destination, benefit all parts of the country, including west Lancashire.

The Government have also implemented the Licensing Act 2003, the biggest overhaul in licensing law for 40 years. It contains vital measures in the battle against alcohol related crime and disorder while allowing the majority of responsible adults the freedom to enjoy their leisure time. It gives police and local authorities the power to take tougher action against under-age drinking, antisocial behaviour, and to protect residents whose lives have been blighted by disturbance and noise. It will also provide greater choice for consumers, bring regeneration, and increased employment opportunities.

The Gambling Act 2005 will, when implemented, transfer responsibility for licensing gambling premises to local licensing authorities. Local people and businesses will be able to make representations about applications for licences and local licensing authorities will be able to decide not to issue licences for casino premises. These changes will give local communities, including those in west Lancashire, a greater say in the regulation of gambling in their area.

Finally, information from the national lottery distributors indicates that since 2 May 1997 west Lancashire has benefited from over 246 awards totalling over £7.9 million.

Wilberforce 2007 (Hull)

Ms Diana R. Johnson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what central Government support there will be for the Wilberforce 2007 commemoration in Hull. [64584]

Mr. Lammy: Next year is an important opportunity to mark the 200th anniversary of Parliament's abolition of the Slave Trade in the British Empire and I know that Hull's plans are already well advanced. Hull is a key member of the Deputy Prime Minister's Advisory Group on 2007. I am pleased that Hull Museums are a partner in the Understanding Slavery Initiative, sharing £750,000 of DCMS and DfES funding to encourage more informed and effective teaching about slavery in the classroom. To support the preparations the Wilberforce House Museum has recently benefited from a £800,000 award from the Heritage Lottery Fund and £202,400 from the DCMS/Wolfson Museums Improvement Fund.

WORK AND PENSIONS

"A New Deal for Welfare"

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether the consultation deadline for the Green Paper "A New Deal for Welfare" is being extended to take account of the fact that it was not available in accessible format for disabled people until 28 February; and if he will make a statement. [63075]

Margaret Hodge: The Disability Discrimination Act requires service providers to make reasonable adjustments to ensure that disabled people can access their services. In line with this requirement, where individuals and organisations need more time to take part in the consultation, we will extend the deadline of 21 April to ensure that everyone has an opportunity to respond. We will continue to provide support to enable people to complete their response within the deadline.

Adult Disadvantages

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions pursuant to the letter of 19 July 2004 from the hon. Member for Croydon, North to the hon. Member for Arundel and South Downs, if he will recalculate the figures on adult disadvantages to include retirement on 31 December 2004 and 31 December 2005. [56985]

Mr. Timms: The information for 2005 is not currently available. The calculations referred to are based on figures published by UBS Global Asset Management. Figures for 2005 are expected to be published in June. Figures for 2004 are presented in the table.

Since 2004 we have improved the methodology used to calculate these figures. The previous methodology overstated the decline in pension incomes since the early 1990s.

The principal change to the methodology has been to use actual earnings growth data as opposed to using average earnings growth for the entire period between 1963 and 2004. The previous methodology had the effect of overstating investment returns and contribution growth during periods of high inflation and understating them in periods of low inflation.

As the trend in inflation has been steadily downwards since the 1970s the previous methodology introduced a bias towards those with the biggest pension pots in the 1970s, who are those retiring earliest in the data series. It also failed to show the result of the late 1990s boom in equity returns that hid the increase in longevity and consequential fall in annuity rates that can be clearly seen in these tables.

The other change in methodology has been to make the hypothetical individual on whom calculations are based more typical.

Notes:

1. Lump sums and weekly pensions are all in 2004 earnings terms.
2. The tables above present results from a hypothetical analysis of pension fund investment. The model is based on the following assumptions and underlying data:

A person contributes to a pension fund for 31 years (this is an individual pension fund as opposed to an occupational one). The investment generates returns for 30 years.

Contributions are made at 5 per cent. of gross earnings.

Individuals earn average earnings (£22,000 in 2004 terms) for the entirety of their working life (Annual survey of hours and earnings, Office of National Statistics).

Contributions are made annually at the end of each year.

The return on equities is based on an average of UK equities (FTSE All-Share Index) and Overseas equities (Composite index for representative overseas markets, and FT/S&P World Ex-UK Index from 1987). To be published in Pension Fund Indicators 2004, UBS Global Asset Management.

The return on bonds/gilts is based on an average of UK bonds (FTA Over 15-year Index, and UBS 25-year index up to 1975) and Overseas bonds (JP Morgan Global Bond Index, ex UK). To be published in Pension Fund Indicators 2003, UBS Global Asset Management.

1 per cent. of the value of the fund at the end of each year is deducted from the fund, in order to account for charging/fees.

Upon retirement at the end of the final year of investment, an annuity is purchased at a prevailing market rate. The annuity rates are as at December each year, for a level annuity (for £100,000), male aged 65, single life, guaranteed five years. These have been supplied by Annuity Direct.

Benefit Costs

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the cost was in current prices of (a) income support, (b) incapacity benefit, (c) disability living allowance, (d) attendance allowance, (e) the social fund, (f) retirement pension, (g) the state second pension/state earnings-related pension scheme and (h) pension credit in each year since 1996–97; and what percentage of these costs was accounted for by administration in each year. Notes:

1. Benefit expenditure figures are rounded to the nearest £ million. The figures do not include administration expenditure.

2. Administration percentages (of benefit expenditure only and not the sum of benefit expenditure and administration expenditure) been obtained from previously published departmental reports (see source). The social fund percentage is of expenditure and loan recoveries, whereas the social fund benefit expenditure figures shown in the tables are net of recoveries. The percentage of income support inc udes expenditure on the over 60's age group. The 1996–97 administration percentage of income support paid to the unemployed is shown separately. (Jobseeker's allowance-income based replaced income support paid to the unemployed in October 1996. Jobseeker's allowance-income based administration expenditure figures are not shown in the table).

3. Information on the costs (and therefore percentages) of administering benefits from 1999–2000 onwards is not currently available in the format requested. In accordance with the requirements of Resource Accounting and Budgeting the Department now accounts for its administration and benefit expenditure by Strategic Objective, as set out in its public service agreements (PSA), and by individual Requests for Resources (RfRs), as set out in the Departmental Estimates and Accounts.

Capita Group

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what meetings (a) he and (b) Ministers in his Department have held with directors and senior executives of (i) Capita Group plc. and (ii) its subsidiaries since 1 January 2004; and whether (A) Capita Group plc. and (B) its subsidiaries have provided input (1) in writing and (2) in person to policy discussions in his Department since 1 January 2004. [61140]

Margaret Hodge: Capita Group plc has a large number of trading subsidiaries and this information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Child Support

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many parents have avoided paying the correct amount of child support in (a) West Lancashire, (b) Lancashire and (c) the UK in each year since 1980. [64293]

Mr. Plaskitt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Mr. Stephen Geraghty. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Hilary Reynolds:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency, the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive. As he is currently unavailable, I am responding on his behalf.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many parents have avoided paying the correct amount of child support in (a) West Lancashire (b) Lancashire (c) the UK in each year since 1980.

We cannot provide the information at the requested constituency or county level. Data has therefore only been provided at GB level.

As the Agency only began to operate in 1993, information is not available prior to this point. Subsequent to 1993, data has been provided for the years in which it is available.

There are a variety of ways in which a non-resident parent could potentially avoid paying the correct amount of child support. For example, an NRP could:

Refuse to provide information about their income or circumstances.

By refusing to provide this information they are preventing the Agency from performing a maintenance calculation/assessment and could thus be said to be avoiding paying the correct amount of child support. Where a parent consistently refuses to provide this information, the Agency may impose an Interim Maintenance Assessment (IMA; old scheme) or a Default Maintenance Decision (DMD; new scheme). Information on the number of DMDs and IMAs imposed by the Agency is attached as Table 1.

Under-declare their income and assets. Doing this may result in the establishment of a lower liability for child maintenance than should otherwise have applied, had the non-resident parent's (NRP) true income and assets been declared. In this case the parent with care (PWC) may then apply for a departure or variation (old and new rules respectively) from the standard formula, on the basis that the non- resident parent's lifestyle is inconsistent with the income they are declaring to the Agency. Limitations with management information means that the number of variations applied for is not available. However, the number of departures applied for is attached as Table 2.

Failure to pay the full assessed amount of child maintenance. An NRP who does not pay the full maintenance liability due to them is clearly avoiding paying the correct amount of child support. The number of NRPs who do not pay the full liability for which they have been assessed is attached as Table 3.

2005–2006 (to Feb 2006)	9,000

Notes

1. A departure can be applied for by either parent where it is felt that a maintenance assessment does not adequately reflect the circumstances of the NRP or PWC. Departures apply to old scheme cases only. The numbers presented therefore cover any circumstance where a departure has been applied for (as opposed to granted), and not just those where departures were applied for by the PWC.

2. This table shows the number of departures applied for in each year since 1999/2000. Robust figures are not available for periods of time before 1999.

3. Numbers have been rounded to the nearest thousand.

Notes

1. To place these figures into context, it should be noted that, whilst only 42 per cent. of non resident parents paid their maintenance liability in full over the quarter ending December 2005, the Agency obtained some form of payment from 70 per cent. of cases in which maintenance was due via the collection service. Where any such payment was obtained, on average, 90 per cent. of the amount due was collected.

2. Data is not available prior to 1995.

3. 'u/a' indicates that data is unavailable due to limitations in management information.

4. Numbers have been rounded to the nearest whole per cent.

Council Tax Rebate

Anne Milton: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much was provided in rebate to properties entitled to 50 per cent. council tax discount in (a) Guildford, (b) Waverley and (c) Surrey in 2005–06. [64353]

Mr. Plaskitt: The information is not available.

Anne Milton: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) when the council tax rebate savings limit was last (a) assessed and (b) increased; [64354]

(2) what representations he has received on increasing the council tax rebate savings limit; and what plans he has to increase the council tax rebate savings limit. [64355]

Mr. Plaskitt: I have received numerous representations about the savings limit in council tax benefit. The lower savings limit for people aged under 60 was increased on 1 April of this year from £3,000 to £6,000, in line with the lower savings limit for people aged 60 or over.

There have been no changes to the upper savings limit of £16,000 since the introduction of council tax benefit in April 1993.

Although the savings limits are kept under review, there are no plans to amend the limits further.

Departmental Policies

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will set out with statistical evidence relating as closely as possible to west Lancashire constituency the effects in west Lancashire of changes to his Department's policies since 1997. [64240]

Margaret Hodge: We have undertaken a fundamental overhaul of the welfare system, transforming it to an active system that fights poverty, creates opportunity and helps people become self-sufficient and independent.

Since 1997 the Government have significantly extended and improved civil rights for disabled people in areas such as employment, education, access to goods and services and transport, most recently through the Disability Discrimination Act 2005 which met our commitment to put in place a comprehensive and enforceable set of rights for disabled people. Disabled people in west Lancashire will have benefited from these significant improvements in disability rights.

In 2004–05 we estimate there were around 10 million disabled people in Great Britain, including people with limiting longstanding illnesses. All of these people would meet the definition of disability in the Disability Discrimination Act (DDA).

Information on the numbers of customers in west Lancashire who are in receipt of Disability Living Allowance (DLA) and Attendance Allowance (AA) is in the table.

DWP Information Directorate.

Figures are rounded to the nearest 100 and are displayed in thousands.

DLA is from DWP Work and Pensions Longitudinal Study (WPLS) at 31 August each year.

AA is from a five per cent sample at 31 August each year.

Through Jobcentre Plus, we are promoting work as the best form of welfare for people of working age. Since 1997 the number of long-term unemployed in west Lancashire has fallen by 72 per cent. and the number of young people that are unemployed by 38 per cent.

Our new deals have helped lone parents, the young unemployed, the long-term unemployed, disabled people, the over 50s and partners of unemployed people to move from benefit into work. Nationally over 15 million people have been helped into work by the new deals, with over 3,000 in west Lancashire alone.

Significant progress has been made in tackling child poverty. Since 1998–99 the number of children in relative low-income households fell by 700,000 from 3.1 million to 2.4 million on a before housing costs (BHC) basis and 700,000 from 4.1 million to 3.4 million on an after housing costs (AHC) basis.

Since 2001–02 incomes for lone parents in receipt of benefit have risen by more than prices or the cost of living. Child rates in income support and jobseeker's allowance have been increased by 40 per cent. since 2001–02, increasing above inflation in April 2005 in line with child tax credit upratings. All of this has benefited 1,900 families in west Lancashire.

We want all pensioners to have a decent and secure income in retirement and to share fairly in the rising prosperity of the country and our first priority has been to help the least well off pensioners. The Government will be spending over £10 billion extra in 2006–07 on pensioners as a result of measures introduced since 1997. Almost half of this spending going to the least well off third of pensioners.

Our reforms include the state second pension, which helps more future pensioners build up better pensions, especially carers. Pension credit, introduced from October 2003, provides a contribution to a guaranteed minimum income for those aged 60 and over and, for the first time, rewards people aged 65 and over who have made modest provision for their retirement. As of August 2005, around 4,800 pensioners in west Lancashire are receiving pension credit, with an average award of £41.71 per week.

We know that older people, who are often on fixed incomes, value timely help with fuel costs. This winter (2005–06) we have again made available a winter fuel payment of £200 for each eligible household with someone aged 60 or over and £300 if the household includes someone aged 80 or over to help with their fuel bills. In 2004–05, around 19,500 people in west Lancashire received a winter fuel payment.

Since 1997 pensioners have seen a real terms increase in their basic state pension of 9 per cent. As at August 2005, around 18,200 pensioners in west Lancashire have benefited from this increase.

Notes:
1. Pension Credit and State Pension data are as at August 2005.

Disability Living Allowance

Mr. Alan Reid: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many applications for disability living allowance were received in the latest year for which figures are available; how many of these were (a) granted and (b) rejected; how many of those rejected were appealed; and how many of those appeals were (i) granted and (ii) rejected. [64720]

Mrs. McGuire: Information is not available in the precise form requested. The available information is that in the year to 31 December 2005, some 426,700 claims to disability living allowance were received by the Disability and Carers Service and 423,300 claims were decided. Of these, 198,000 resulted in an award of the allowance and 225,300 were disallowed [1].

In the same period, the Appeals Service received 82,200 appeals against decisions on disability living allowance claims and appeal tribunals decided 71,400 such appeals. Some 35,900 of the appeal tribunal decisions were in favour of the appellant, whilst 34,400 were either against the appellant or upheld the decision made by the Disability and Carers Service. In the remaining 1,200 decisions, appeal tribunals disposed of the appeals in other ways, such as by striking out the appeal or by changing the period for which disability living allowance had been awarded [2].

Jobcentres

Justine Greening: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) how much his Department spent on providing jobcentre services in (a) 2004–05 and (b) 2005–06 in the London borough of Wandsworth, broken down by (i) jobcentre and (ii) (A) capital and (B) resource spending; and if he will make a statement; [64397]

(2) how much his Department plans to spend on the Wandsworth JobcentrePlus in 2006–07; and if he will make a statement. [64399]

Margaret Hodge: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the chief executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lesley Strathie:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your questions asking (a) what his Department spent on providing Jobcentre services in 2004-05 and 2005-06 in the London borough of Wandsworth, broken down by (i) Job Centre and (ii) (A) capital and (B) resource; and (b) how much his Department plans to spend on Wandsworth Jobcentre Plus in 2006-07. This is something that falls under my responsibility as chief executive of Jobcentre Plus.

Jobcentre Plus devolves budgets and accounts for expenditure to district level which, in this case, would cover Lambeth, Southwark and Wandsworth.

As the district boundary does not correspond with that of the London borough of Wandsworth it is not possible to give details of expenditure or budgets for specific London boroughs or individual Jobcentre Plus offices.

Jobseeker's Allowance

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what is the current time taken to process claims for jobseeker's allowance; and if he will make a statement. [63376]

Margaret Hodge: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the chief executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lesley Strathie, dated 20 April 2006:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question asking for a statement on the current time taken to process claims for Jobseeker's Allowance. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

Jobcentre Plus measures the time taken to process a claim for Jobseeker's Allowance as the Actual Average Clearance Time. This is measured against a Key Management Indicator which is agreed at the beginning of each year. For 2005/06, this was set at 12 working days. Latest figures show that for the year to February 2006 claims were processed in an average of 14.3 working days.

Jobcentre Plus is transforming the service it provides by making it available via the telephone, via the Internet and through the personal service offered to people in Jobcentre Plus offices. With change on this scale there can be difficulties in the beginning and, as a consequence, average clearance times have temporarily increased. This is clearly causing unacceptable delays for customers and we have taken action to address the delays.

On 30 January we launched a National Action Plan designed to reduce clearance times. The plan requires that:

all delivery units work through a Health Check and address the areas where they are under-performing;

senior managers regularly review and address poor performance; and delivery units performing below the required level develop a recovery plan to improve performance.

Senior Operational Managers were required to provide a formal assurance at the end of February that all elements of the plan are being complied with, although it has been acknowledged that concentration on backlogs of work may initially cause average clearance times to rise. The Chief Operating Officer is monitoring performance very closely.

In order to focus management attention on this issue, the Actual Average Clearance Times measure, which will remain at 12 days for Jobseeker's Allowance claims, has been added to the suite of Jobcentre Plus Targets for 2006/07.

I hope this is helpful.

Lone Parents

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people in west Lancashire constituency have been paid the lone parent work search premium. [64111]

Margaret Hodge: The work search premium pilots are running in eight Jobcentre Plus districts, including west Lancashire. Lone parents participating in the pilot are paid a £20 a week premium for a maximum of 26 weeks to help with the costs associated with searching for work. Participation is voluntary and certain eligibility criteria must be met. Participants agree to undertake intensive work search and will also be entitled to help with the cost of formal childcare while undertaking work search activities.

Between October 2004, when the pilots started, and November 2005, the latest date for which information is available, 407 lone parents in the west Lancashire Jobcentre Plus district had received the work search premium. Constituency information is not available.

An evaluation of the work search premium is being undertaken and a report is expected to be published in spring 2007.

Pensions

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when he was first shown the final draft of the parliamentary ombudsman's report "Trusting in the Pensions Promise"; and when the Government's response was given to the ombudsman. [60776]

Mr. Timms: The parliamentary ombudsman sent a copy of her draft report to the Department on 21 December 2005. In line with the ombudsman's timetable, the Permanent Secretary responded on 27 January 2006. The contents of this reply appear at Annex D to the ombudsman's report.

The ombudsman then sent a second draft report on 13 February 2006 and, again in accordance with the ombudsman's deadline, the Permanent Secretary replied on 28 February 2006. This reply appears at Paragraph 7.116 of the report.

Although the Government indicated to the ombudsman how it was minded to respond after considering the two drafts, no final decision was made on the matter until after receipt of the published report.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions why those contracted out of (a) SERPS and (b) the Second State Pension do not receive the national insurance rebate in the year prior to retirement. [65402]

Mr. Timms: State Second Pension (formerly SERPS) does not accrue in respect of the tax year in which people reach state pension age. Consequently, because the national insurance rebate is intended to replace the state benefit foregone when someone contracts out, age-related rebates made to those contracted out into a personal pension or a defined contribution occupational pension, are not made in respect of that tax year.

In the case of contracted-out occupational pension schemes, both employer and employee pay reduced rate national insurance contributions. Additional costs and administrative burdens would arise for employers if the rebate ceased in the year in which people reach state pension age and a higher national insurance rate became payable. Payment of reduced rate contributions is permitted to continue into the tax year in which state pension age is reached.

Poverty Statistics

Stephen Hesford: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many households with at least one full-time employee in (a) Wirral, West, (b) Wirral borough and (c) England are living in poverty. [62348]

Margaret Hodge: Specific information regarding low income for Government office regions of Great Britain is available in the latest publication of the 'Households Below Average Income (HBAI) 1994/95 to 2004/05', available in the Library. The threshold of below 60 per cent. contemporary median income is the most commonly used in reporting trends in low income.

The seventh annual 'Opportunity for all' report (Cm 6673) sets out the Government's strategy for tackling poverty and social exclusion and reports progress against a range of indicators. The data source does not allow us to provide robust estimates below regional level, therefore estimates for Wirral, West and Wirral borough are not available.

Information on the numbers (in millions) of households in absolute and relative low income with at least one full-time employee in the north west and Merseyside region, and in England is shown in the following table as three-year averages. Relative low income is defined here as below 60 per cent. of the contemporary median income, and absolute low income is defined here as below 60 per cent. of 1996–97 median income which has been fixed in real terms.

Number of households with incomes below 60 per cent. of GB median income and at least one household member in full-time employment in the north west and Merseyside and England—three-year average 2002–03 to 2004–05

Millions

	Relative low income		Absolute low income (1996–97 terms)
	Before housing costs	After housing costs	Before housing costs	After housing costs
North West and Merseyside	0.08	0.10	0.04	0.05
England	0.6	0.9	0.4	0.5

Notes:

1. Figures are provided using a three-year average, as single-year estimates do not provide a robust guide at regional level. Hence, figures may not be consistent with previously published single-year estimates.
2. It is not possible to present estimates from the FRS below Government office region level due to small sample sizes, and the survey design not being fully representative at this level.
3. Regional figures for the north west and Merseyside are rounded to the nearest 10,000 rather than the usual 100,000 as presented in the HBAI publication. This is because the standard approach does not give an informative view of changes over time at this level of disaggregation.

Work Incentives

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what steps he plans to take to reduce disincentives for unemployed people to return to work resulting from higher effective marginal deduction rates; and if he will make a statement. [64011]

Margaret Hodge: The Government's policies in recent years have already gone a long way to ensuring work pays, for example through the introduction of the national minimum wage and working tax credit, as well as the introduction of the 10p starting rate of income tax.

Since 1997, the number of people facing marginal deduction rates of over 70 per cent. has fallen by half a million and the new increased income disregard in tax credits, of £25,000 from April 2006, means that families receiving tax credits where someone moves into work keep the same entitlement for the rest of the tax year, rather than seeing tax credit payments reduced, even if the job is paid at the average wage.

The Government have also piloted the use of additional transitional support for targeted groups making the move off benefit and into work. We have developed an effective strategy for helping more lone parents make the transition from benefits and into work which combines child care assistance, financial support for those entering work and provision of work focused advice and support.

The £40 in work credit for lone parents has been piloted in a number of Jobcentre Plus districts since 2004, providing support for the first year in employment. The child and working tax credits are helping to tackle child poverty and make work pay for all families, including lone parents.

For incapacity benefit claimants, the Pathways to work pilots include a similar £40 per week return to work credit. The Welfare Reform Green Paper announced in January our intention to rollout Pathways to the remaining two-thirds of the country by 2008–09.

Our analysis shows that many more people are already better off in work than on benefit as a result of tax credits and we believe this and other policies designed to make work pay have contributed to record levels of employment—now at the highest level since records began.

PRIME MINISTER

Engagements

Norman Baker: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list the official engagements undertaken overseas by his wife since May 2005. [65170]

The Prime Minister: Since 1999 the Government have published an annual list of all visits overseas undertaken by Cabinet Ministers costing £500 or more during each financial year. Copies of these lists are available in the Library of the House. Information on the number of officials accompanying Ministers on overseas visits is included in the list. All Ministers' travel arrangements are in accordance with the arrangements for official travel set out in Chapter 10 of the Ministerial Code, and the accompanying guidance document, "Travel by Ministers".

Information for the year 2005–06 will be published as soon as it is ready. Where Mrs Blair has undertaken official visits this will be accounted for in the annual list.

Government Priorities

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list the issues which have been identified as top priority for the Government. [64805]

The Prime Minister: The Government's priorities are set out in the Labour Party manifesto on which we were elected. Copies are available in the Libraries of the House.

Ministerial Travel

Norman Baker: To ask the Prime Minister pursuant to the answer of 23 March 2006, Official Report, column 539W, on ministerial travel, if he will list the dates since 1 October 2005 when he has deemed it appropriate to travel by train. [65554]

The Prime Minister: I have nothing further to add to the answer I gave the hon. Member on 23 March 2006, Official Report, column 539W.

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Amess: To ask the Prime Minister which (a) probation offices and (b) prisons he has visited since 1997; and for what purposes in each case. [62571]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Hertsmere (Mr. Clappison) on 15 November 2005, Official Report, column 1103W.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Prime Minister which drug rehabilitation centres he has visited since 1997; and for what purposes in each case. [62572]

The Prime Minister: My visits cover a range of matters including health, education, criminal justice and the economy. I have undertaken a number of visits relating to drug use and rehabilitation. For example I visited Phoenix House Drug Rehabilitation Centre in Glasgow in March 2000, and the Turnaround Project in Glasgow in September 2000.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Prime Minister (1) which schools he has visited in each year since 1997; and for what purpose in each case; [62573]

(2) which hospitals he has visited since 1997; and for what purposes in each case. [62574]

The Prime Minister: Records of official visits are not held in this manner and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. My visits cover a range of matters including health, education, criminal justice and the economy and I have visited many schools and hospitals since 1997.

Parliamentary Questions

Norman Baker: To ask the Prime Minister whether it is his practice personally to approve replies to written parliamentary answers in his name. [65369]

The Prime Minister: Yes.

Norman Baker: To ask the Prime Minister how many and what percentage of written parliamentary questions in 2006 to date he has answered (a) by referring the questioner to an earlier answer and (b) by using the formula 'I have nothing further to add' to an earlier answer. [65370]

The Prime Minister: This information is not held in the format requested. However, it is a matter of public record and can be found in the Official Report.

Norman Baker: To ask the Prime Minister if he will undertake research to compare the amount of information provided by him in response to written parliamentary questions with that provided by his predecessor. [65373]

The Prime Minister: No.

Norman Baker: To ask the Prime Minister pursuant to the answer of 18 April 2006, Official Report, column 400W, if he will provide details of steps he takes to ensure that his answering practices are consistent with the February 2005 Cabinet Office guidance to Departments. [65533]

The Prime Minister: I have nothing further to add to the answer I gave the hon. Member on 18 April 2006, Official Report, column 400W.

Political Operations Section

Norman Baker: To ask the Prime Minister pursuant to his answer to question 63151, on the political operations section of his office, what the present complement is of staff working there; and what it was in June 1997. [65364]

The Prime Minister: I have nothing further to add to the answer I gave the hon. Member on 18 April 2006, Official Report, column 400W.

United Nations

Mr. Amess: To ask the Prime Minister (1) if he will list the occasions when he has addressed a meeting of the United Nations in each year since 1997; if he will place in the Library the text of the speech made; and if he will make a statement; [64999]

(2) if he will list the occasions when he has chaired a meeting of the United Nations in each year since 1997; what the subject under discussion was; if he will place in the Library the agenda and other papers considered at the meeting; and if he will make a statement. [65000]

The Prime Minister: I have regular discussions with members of the United Nations on a wide range of issues, and have addressed the General Assembly on 14 September 2005, 6 September 2000 and 23 June 1997. Copies of my speeches are available on the No. 10 and United Nations websites.

Visits

Mr. Amess: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list the occasions on which he has visited Australia in an official capacity since 1997; what the purpose of the visit was in each case; what the (a) date, (b) time, (c) location and (d) duration was of each meeting held during each visit; and if he will make a statement. [64993]

The Prime Minister: Since 1999 the Government have published an annual list of all visits overseas undertaken by Cabinet Ministers costing £500 or more during each financial year. Copies of these lists are available in the Library of the House. Information on the number of officials accompanying Ministers on overseas visits is included in the list. All Ministers' travel arrangements are in accordance with the arrangements for official travel set out in chapter 10 of the ministerial code, and the accompanying guidance document, "Travel by Ministers". Information for the year 2005–06 will be published as soon as it is ready.

I also refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend, the hon. Member for Leicester, East (Keith Vaz) on 18 April 2006, Official Report, column 401W.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list the (a) grade and (b) duties of each official accompanying him on overseas visits since May 1997; and what the costs associated with such staff were in each case. [64995]

The Prime Minister: Since 1999 the Government have published an annual list of all visits overseas undertaken by Cabinet Ministers costing £500 or more during each financial year. Copies of these lists are available in the Library of the House. Information on the number of officials accompanying Ministers on overseas visits is included in the list. All Ministers' travel arrangements are in accordance with the arrangements for official travel set out in chapter 10 of the ministerial code, and the accompanying guidance document, "Travel by Ministers".

Information for the year 2005–06 will be published as soon as it is ready.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Anglian Water

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what discussions his Department's growth areas directorate has had with Anglian Water on the effective implementation of water efficiency measures in new houses. [64727]

Yvette Cooper: Officials from the growth areas division in this Department met senior officials from Anglian Water in London on 27 July 2005. At this meeting, Anglian Water outlined their approach to meeting the demand for its services in the light of proposals for housing growth within its area. My officials were invited to a further meeting with Anglian Water at their headquarters in Huntingdon on 19 September 2005, where the water company provided further details of its plans for meeting increased demand due to housing growth. Water efficiency measures in new homes was raised in the course of these discussions.

Anhydrite Mines

Mr. Iain Wright: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many local authorities in England have applied to English Partnerships for funding to investigate the stability of anhydrite mines. [64696]

Yvette Cooper: One local authority, Hartlepool borough council, has applied to English Partnerships for funding through the Land Stabilisation Programme to investigate the stability of anhydrite mines.

Article 4 Directions

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister when his Department's consultation on proposed improvements to the procedure for making Article 4 Directions is expected to take place. [62959]

Yvette Cooper: We are hoping to issue this consultation after the local elections.

Biodiversity (Mid-Sussex)

Mr. Soames: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assessment he has made of the impact on local biodiversity of increased house building in Mid-Sussex. [64449]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 19 April 2006]: The consideration of impacts on local biodiversity of new house building are matters that should be addressed by regional planning bodies and local planning authorities when preparing regional spatial strategies and local development documents. In preparing these plans, they must have regard to national planning policies set out in Planning Policy Statement 9 (PPS9) "Biodiversity and Geological Conservation". PPS9 indicates that plan policies should aim to maintain and enhance, restore or add to biodiversity interests and recognises that it is possible to build in beneficial biodiversity features as part of the design of new developments. PPS9 is also supported by a recently published good practice guide which includes practical examples of how planning authorities can plan positively for biodiversity.

Brixham Council

Mr. Steen: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister pursuant to the answer of 16 January 2006, Official Report, column 959W, on the Brixham council proposal, what steps he has taken to ensure that a Brixham town council will be established on 1 April 2007; and what steps remain to be taken in order for the council to be operative on that date. [64967]

Mr. Woolas: Officials in the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister are considering the recommendation of Torbay council to establish a Brixham town council and they expect to submit this proposal to Ministers for a decision within the next three weeks.

For the town council to be established on 1 April 2007 the Electoral Commission, who are responsible for electoral arrangements, would need to make their order for the electoral arrangements of the town council in time for elections in May 2007.

Council Property (Disabled Facilities)

John Mann: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what guidance has been issued to local authorities on means testing for disabled facilities in council properties that are recommended and approved by a social services occupational therapist; and when this was issued. [64471]

Yvette Cooper: The disabled facilities grant (DFG) programme, which is the responsibility of my Department and administered by local authorities, is the principal means by which Government financial support is made available to help with housing adaptations for disabled people. The grant is a mandatory entitlement for eligible disabled people and applies to all housing tenures including council properties. The grant is subject to a means test and this is set out in legislation which is notified to all local authorities.

In order for the local authority to assess the needs of a DFG applicant an occupational therapist from the social services is often consulted but any advice and recommendation they give would not alter the requirement for the grant to be means tested.

Local authorities have other powers to provide housing adaptations for disabled people but these are discretionary. Many local authorities use these other powers to provide adaptations to their own stock and in this case there would be no necessity to apply a means test.

My Department, jointly with the Department of Health and the Department for Education and Skills issued, in November 2004, a Good Practice Guide entitled 'Delivering housing adaptations for disabled people'. This emphasised the need for local authorities to have a housing adaptations policy which offered the same level of service quality for all tenures with the rights set out in the DFG legislation as at least a minimum standard.

Council Housing

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how much was paid in rent into each council housing revenue account in (a) 2002–03, (b) 2003–04 and (c) 2005–06; how much in each year was spent on (i) council administration, (ii) housing repairs and (iii) tenant services; and what the total surplus made available to his Department was in each year. [61697]

Yvette Cooper: A table showing rental income and expenditure on council housing maintenance for 2002–03 and 2003–04 has been made available in the Library of the House. The figures are supplied by local authorities and are unaudited (figures are not yet available for 2005–06).

Expenditure on council administration is a general management function funded through the general fund. The HRA is a ring-fenced account within the general fund; that ring fence prevents the transfer of housing resources for other purposes such as general administration.

No figures are collected on authorities' expenditure on tenant services.

In 2002–03 and 2003–04 the subsidy system did not capture and redistribute surpluses; housing element entitlement was calculated instead as a net amount against rent rebate element entitlement, which was accounted for in the HRA prior to 31 March 2004.

Since 1 April 2004, rent rebates are no longer accounted for in the HRA which is strictly a landlord account.

Some authorities are in surplus and others are in deficit, in addition to moving surpluses to where they are needed most, the Government also provides additional net subsidy of around £200 million each year. The forecast for 2005–06 is for approximately that amount and forecasts for future years are similar.

Council Tax

Hugh Bayley: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the percentage increase in band D council tax has been in each local authority in England between 2003–04 to 2006–07. [64320]

Mr. Woolas: The information requested has been made available in the Library of the House. The table shows the percentage increase in area band D council tax for each billing authority in England between 2003–04 and 2006–07. Information for Wales is available from the Welsh Assembly Government.

Departmental Circulars

Mr. Amess: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will list the circulars his Department issued to local authorities in each year since his Department was established. [62869]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister maintains a database of its own circulars, available for public view at: http://www.publications.odpm.gov.uk/pubadvsearch.asp. Enter the keyword "circular" under the "series" search field.

In addition to this resource, the ODPM leads on managing the 'Info 4 Local' website (http://www.info4localgov.uk), which catalogues all types of documents relevant to local authorities, including "circulars/letters". Information for local authorities which appears on the ODPM website now goes onto the Info 4 Local site as a matter of course. The full archive comprises documents released by some 65 organisations, including government departments, agencies and other public bodies, and records cover the preceding two years. A search tool built into the website allows subscribers to search by document type or originating department, and subscription to the website is free.

Departmental Policies

Emily Thornberry: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will set out, with statistical information relating as directly as possible to Islington, South and Finsbury constituency, the effects on Islington, South and Finsbury of his Department's policies and actions since 2 May 1997. [60729]

Yvette Cooper: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister (ODPM) does not hold separate expenditure data on Islington, South and Finsbury constituency.

The Department has put in place a considerable programme of reforms and improvements across a wide range of housing, planning and regeneration policy areas since 1997. For example, ODPM is determined that everyone should have the opportunity to have a decent home and our strategy has meant that in 2004 the number of social sector non-decent homes in England had been reduced by around one million. Islington has set up an Arms Length Management Organisation (ALMO) and is receiving additional funding through this for investing in its housing stock. It also has two housing PFI schemes tackling almost 5,000 street properties below the decent homes standard. Islington has reported to ODPM that the number of properties in its stock below the decent homes standard has reduced from 18,911 in 2002 to 15,213 in 2005.

Islington has also received support for tackling deprivation through the Neighbourhood Renewal Fund, to enable it, in collaboration with its Local Strategic Partnership (LSPs), to improve services and has narrowed the gap with the rest of the country in its Key Stage 3 and GCSE results.

The following table sets out the main payments made to London borough of Islington since the ODPM was established following the Machinery of Government changes on 29 May 2002. For earlier years, the table shows the amount paid by ODPM's predecessor Departments from programmes which are now administered by the Office. It has been for London borough of Islington to determine how that allocation is spent, in line with its priorities.

In addition to the amounts in the table, the London Development Agency (LDA) has spent some £21.3 million on projects in Islington between 2000–01 (when the LDA was first established) and 2004–05. The LDA receives around 80 per cent. of its funding from the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister.

Funding to LB of Islington

	£ million
1997–98	249.558
1998–99	245.908
1999–2000	247.479
2000–01	250.750
2001–02	284.595
2002–03	289.622
2003–04	328.321
Total	2,247.966

In 2002, Islington signed a local public service agreement with the Government, whereby the Council undertook to achieve more testing targets in top priority services in return for reward grant. The Council will accordingly be paid £4.4 million of reward grant—£2.2 million of which it will receive very shortly.

Islington's local area agreement was signed on 23 March, which will enable Islington and its partners to pool Government funding and work together more flexibly to deliver priority services for local people.

E-enabling

Sarah Teather: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister whether the target for 100 per cent. of local government services to be e-enabled by 31 December 2005 was achieved. [64281]

Jim Fitzpatrick: By December 2005 the average local authority was 97 per cent. e-enabled based upon returns from all authorities in England. The residual 3 per cent. is accounted for by legal or operational barriers to e-enablement, allowed within the definition of best value performance indicator 157, which measured local authority performance against the 2005 target.

Sarah Teather: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how his Department assesses the cost-effectiveness of e-enabling local government services. [64282]

Jim Fitzpatrick: We commissioned a study to quantify the benefits for six National Projects. The findings were based on the experiences of the local authorities engaged in implementing these solutions. Their experiences provided a sample for analysis from which reasoned conclusions were drawn and validated with local authorities and their suppliers. Local authorities can use the outputs of the projects to achieve quantified cost savings, increases in revenue collection and service quality improvements.

Energy Efficiency

Lynne Jones: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assessment he has made of the expected performance against the target to deliver a 40 per cent. increase in the energy efficiency of new homes on 2002 levels; and what estimate he has made of the impact of non-compliance with revised building regulations on expected performance. [63038]

Yvette Cooper: The Regulatory Impact Assessment supporting the April 2006 amendment to raise energy performance standards in Part L of the Building Regulations can be seen on the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's website www.odpm.gov.uk. Building regulations are a mandatory requirement and this assessment is therefore based upon full compliance.

There is no estimate of the impact that non-compliance could have on expected performance although reports commissioned by ODPM and by others show to some extent that more effort to achieve compliance is needed.

We are therefore continuing to work with building control bodies to see how compliance can be cost effectively improved and are nine months into the largest ever training and dissemination campaign for building regulations.

Fire Precautions (Workplace) Regulations 1997

Mr. Amess: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make a statement on the operation of the Fire Precautions (Workplace) Regulations 1997. [64023]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Fire Precautions (Workplace) Regulations came into force in December 1997 and were amended in 1999. Since the introduction of the regulations, the number of fires in non-domestic premises in England and Wales has decreased from over 19,342 in 1997 to 16,212 in 2004. The number of enforcement notices served under section 13(1) of the regulations has increased from 87 in 1998–99 to over 1,100 in 2004–05 which reflects the risk-based approach to enforcement that the fire and rescue authorities have adopted. Although the number of deaths in non-domestic premises has remained fairly static, it is low (18 in 2004). Non-fatal casualities have fallen from 1,159 in 1997 to 724 in 2004.

House Building

Andrew Stunell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what proportion of the cost of building a home was paid for on average by public money in the most recent year for which figures are available where the house was built (a) as part of a shared equity scheme, (b) by a housing association and (c) by a local authority. [63434]

Yvette Cooper: In 2003–04 the average public subsidy invested through the Housing Corporation's Approved Development Programme for a social rented unit was over £64,000 and for a shared ownership unit was around £35,000.

The public subsidy includes both grant provided via the Housing Corporation and other public subsidies, such as contributions by local authorities.

We do not hold figures for local authority investment.

Sir Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assessment he has made of the impact on local biodiversity of increased house building in East Cheshire. [64904]

Yvette Cooper: The consideration of impacts on local biodiversity of new house building are matters that should be addressed by regional planning bodies and local planning authorities when preparing regional spatial strategies and local development documents. In preparing these plans, they must have regard to national planning policies set out in Planning Policy Statement 9 (PPS9) "Biodiversity and Geological Conservation". PPS9 indicates that plan policies should aim to maintain and enhance, restore or add to biodiversity interests and recognises that it is possible to build in beneficial biodiversity features as part of the design of new developments. PPS9 is also supported by a recently published good practice guide which includes practical examples of how planning authorities can plan positively for biodiversity.

Sir Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what steps he is taking to ensure timely development of infrastructure to keep pace with housing construction in (a) the borough of Macclesfield and (b) Cheshire. [64905]

Yvette Cooper: In the last four years house building has been reduced in Cheshire, and especially in Macclesfield, to focus development on more urban and brownfield sites in the conurbations, encouraging urban regeneration. The infrastructural requirements arising from house building are not, therefore, the same as in growth areas.

Transport infrastructure in the borough is being improved by the enhancement of the west coast main line, currently nearing completion. Beyond that, Cheshire county council has the main responsibility via its Local Transport Plan. The Alderley Edge and Nether Alderley by-pass scheme has provisional approval status from DfT and was identified as a priority scheme in the region's Regional Funding Allocation prepared by the North West Development Agency and the North West regional assembly. A decision on the Regional Funding Allocation will be made by Ministers in due course.

Drainage and water supply are a matter for the provider (United Utilities). Social infrastructure is dealt with via the capital programmes of the county council and other relevant agencies, within the resources available. Those resources can be supplemented by the use of planning obligations, and proposals are in hand to improve that via the Planning Gain Supplement.

Under the new spatial planning regime, the regional assembly and local planning authorities should assess infrastructure requirements, in co-operation with all relevant agencies when preparing their development plans. The Regional Spatial Strategy is under review, has been published in draft, and will be subject to public examination in autumn 2006. It proposes to double the rate of house building in Macclesfield. It will be for the inspectors examining the RSS to come to a view on the feasibility of this, subject to any representations made by the planners and providers of infrastructure, and we will note their recommendations before finalising the Regional Spatial Strategy.

Housing

Andrew Gwynne: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what estimate his Department has made of housing growth in (a) the county of Greater Manchester, (b) Stockport Metropolitan Borough and (c) Tameside Metropolitan Borough in each year to 2010. [62200]

Yvette Cooper: The Government has not made estimates of the growth in housing supply at local authority level. Future housing requirements are assessed by regions and local authorities as part of the development of Regional Spatial Strategies and Local Development Frameworks. These assessments are expected to take account of factors including the Government's latest projections of household growth.

Household projections down to local authority are available on the ODPM website at: (http://www.odpm.gov.uk/index.asp?id=1002882&PressNoticeID=2097). These show the additional households up to 2026 that would form if recent demographic trends continue. The household projections contribute part of the evidence for the assessment of housing requirements by regions and local authorities.

Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many people in temporary accommodation there have been in each of the last 10 years in Milton Keynes. [54672]

Yvette Cooper: In January 2005, the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister published "Sustainable Communities: Homes for All" which set a target to halve the number of households living in temporary accommodation by 2010. Information about English local authorities' actions under homelessness legislation is collected quarterly and is in respect of households rather than people. The number of households in temporary accommodation arranged by Milton Keynes district council under homelessness legislation on 31 March in each year since 1996 is tabled as follows.

Households in temporary accommodation[1] arranged by Milton Keynes DC under homelessness legislation as at 31 March

	Number
1996	253
1997	284
1998	382
1999	619
2000	889
2001	1,151
2002	1,320
2003	1,592
2005	849

[1] Households in accommodation either pending a decision on their homelessness application or awaiting allocation of a settled home following acceptance. Excludes those households designated as "homeless at home" that have remained in their existing accommodation and have the same rights to suitable alternative accommodation as those in accommodation arranged by the authority.

Source:
ODPM P1E Homelessness returns (quarterly)

Until 31 March 2004, the council were allocating accommodation on a non secure tenancy basis, mainly in its own stock, once a household was accepted as homeless. From 1 April 2005, the council changed the status of these tenancies to introductory tenancies for both existing and new households where a duty to house had been accepted. This gives households increased tenancy rights, greater stability within a community and greater choice in accessing accommodation.

In addition, the council have adopted an early intervention approach with households threatened with homelessness so that a higher proportion are placed in accommodation on an introductory tenancy before homelessness occurs.

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what funding is available for temporary to permanent housing initiatives in the 2006 to 2008 National Affordable Housing Programme; and if he will make a statement. [63416]

Yvette Cooper: The London Housing Board recommended that £20 million of funding be allocated from the London regional housing pot 2006–08 for temporary to permanent housing initiatives. No final decisions have yet been taken on the distribution of these earmarked resources.

We are also considering how the pilot extra homes scheme announced in the Budget 2006 could build on the range of existing and emerging 'temporary to permanent' housing schemes to help families in London move from temporary accommodation into settled homes.

Local Authorities (Chief Executive Emoluments)

Chris Ruane: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what (a) salary and (b) pension benefits relating to electoral duties were paid to the chief executive of each local authority in each of the last five years. [64925]

Bridget Prentice: I have been asked to reply.

This information is not held centrally. For national elections, the appointed Returning Officer, who may or may not be the chief executive of a relevant local authority, receives a prescribed fee. A full breakdown of Returning Officers fees and charges for the 2005 general election is listed under the Parliamentary Elections (Returning Officers' Charges) Order (SI: 2005 No. 780). This specifies an Returning Officer's fee of £2,500 per constituency for which they are responsible.

It is for local authorities to decide what remuneration is made to Returning Officers at local elections and Electoral Registration Officers for registration duties. It is also for local authorities to make superannuation arrangements for all staff appointed by them.

Local Authority Publicity

Mr. Harper: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister whether the Code of Recommended Practice on Local Authority Publicity applies to regional assemblies and their officers. [64735]

Yvette Cooper: The Code of Recommended Practice does not apply to regional assemblies or their officers. However, the Government expect that in the course of their duties regional assemblies will give due regard to and operate within the provisions of the Code.

Local Government Pensions

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister when the 85 year rule was introduced in the Local Government Pension Scheme. [60118]

Mr. Woolas: A provision in the Local Government Pension Scheme (LGPS) in England and Wales which enabled members to retire at age 60 with 25 years service (on an unreduced pension) was first introduced in 1974.

There were no changes to this 'Rule of 85' until the LGPS Regulations 1997 which introduced the facility, from April 1998, for members (subject to employer consent) to retire and receive unreduced pensions from age 50 if they met the 85 year rule.

Pathfinder Programme

Mr. Rogerson: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what changes in average house prices have occurred in pathfinder areas since the start of each programme. [64430]

Yvette Cooper: The following table shows changes in median house prices in each pathfinder between the time that a scheme was agreed and funding announced and the final quarter of 2005. Median house prices have also risen very slightly across the regions.

Pathfinder	Date scheme agreed/funding awarded	Median house price for that quarter (£)	Median house price for Q4 2005 (provisional data) (£)
Birmingham Sandwell	June 2004	86,000	95,000
East Lancashire	March 2004	33,300	54,500
Hull and East Riding	March 2005	60,000	74,950
Manchester Salford	October 2003	47,000	85,000
Merseyside	January 2004	46,500	72,000
Newcastle Gateshead	January 2004	65,000	87,500

Pathfinder	Date scheme agreed/funding awarded	Median house price for that quarter (£)	Median house price for Q4 2005 (provisional data) (£)
North Staffordshire	June 2004	52,500	67,500
Oldham Rochdale	March 2004	45,000	74,950
South Yorkshire	March 2004	55,000	78,000

Mr. Rogerson: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how much has been awarded to each pathfinder programme to date. [64431]

Yvette Cooper: The following table shows the sums awarded to each of the nine housing market renewal pathfinders for 2004–06 and, where funding decisions have been made, for 2006–08.

Pathfinder	Funding awarded for 2004–06 (£ million)	Funding awarded for 2006–08 (£ million)
Birmingham Sandwell	49.7	[1]—
East Lancashire	72.6	94.9
Hull and East Riding	11.3	[1]—
Manchester Salford	115.4	[1]—
Merseyside	92.6	97.7
Newcastle Gateshead	69.6	64.0
North Staffordshire	32.9	67.5
Oldham and Rochdale	54.4	67.5
South Yorkshire	70.7	90.0
Total	569.2	481.6

[1] Announcement not yet made.

Mr. Rogerson: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what progress has been made since December 2005 by the nine pathfinder schemes towards meeting the recommendations made by the Audit Commission in its strategic reviews of market renewal pathfinders. [64434]

Yvette Cooper: All pathfinders are working towards implementing Audit Commission recommendations which have generally been allocated time scales of between six and 12 months for completion. We will be including these recommendations in funding agreements, due to be issued shortly, for the next phase of funding (2006–08) and will be monitoring progress as part of our ongoing performance management process.

Relative Need

John Hemming: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister for what reasons the system was changed from formula spending share to relative need factors. [65415]

Mr. Woolas: I refer the hon. Member to the statement I made to the House when announcing the provisional Local Government Finance Settlement, 5 December 2005, Official Report, column 627.

John Hemming: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the formula is for converting relative need factors into monetary amounts. [65416]

Mr. Woolas: The full formula is given in Section 5 of the Local Government Finance Report (England) 2006–07.

A model showing the calculation of formula grant for all authorities can be found on the ODPM website at: http://www.local.odpm.gov.uk/finance/0607/grant.htm.

John Hemming: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the total relative needs grant block is for 2006–07; and what the total of needs above threshold is for 2006–07. [65417]

Mr. Woolas: The relative needs amount for 2006–07 is £20,878,123,134. The total needs above the threshold is 0.23098045438450.

A model showing the calculation of formula grant for all authorities can be found on the ODPM website at: http://www.local.odpm.gov.uk/finance/0607/grant.htm

Retrospective Planning Applications

Mr. Drew: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will introduce measures to speed up the procedures for considering retrospective planning applications. [62740]

Yvette Cooper: Retrospective planning applications are treated in the same way as planning applications, and have a statutory eight-week determination period. We have no plans to shorten this period.

Right To Buy (Yorkshire/Humber)

Mr. Betts: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister which rural areas in Yorkshire and Humber are exempt from the Right to Buy. [63571]

Yvette Cooper: No rural areas in Yorkshire and the Humber are exempt from the Right to Buy.

However, section 157 of the Housing Act 1985 allows social landlords to restrict the resale of properties sold under the Right to Buy scheme in specified rural areas. Such properties may only be sold to buyers who have lived or worked locally for at least three years. Alternatively, and with the consent of the Secretary of State, social landlords may require that properties sold under the Right to Buy scheme in these areas must be offered back to the former social landlords if the owners wish to sell them within 10 years of the Right to Buy sales.

In Yorkshire and the Humber, such restrictions may be imposed in the Yorkshire Dales and North York Moors National Parks, the Nidderdale, Howardian Hills and North Pennines Areas of Outstanding Natural Beauty, and the districts of Craven, Harrogate, Scarborough, Ryedale and Richmondshire, excluding settlements with 3,000 or more residents.

Road Maintenance (Legal Proceedings)

Richard Younger-Ross: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how much (a) district, (b) city and (c) county councils spent on out-of-court settlements related to injuries sustained due to lack of maintenance of roads and pavements in each year since 2001. [64437]

Mr. Woolas: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister does not hold the information requested centrally, and could provide it only at disproportionate cost.

Shared Equity Scheme

Stephen Hesford: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many of the people involved in the Shared Equity Scheme are living in Wirral, West. [64317]

Yvette Cooper: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister does not hold this information at constituency level.

Before the launch of the new Homebuy schemes on 1 April 2006, Government supported shared equity schemes consisted of Shared Ownership and the Homebuy equity loan scheme. Since 1997, 177 households within Wirral Metropolitan Borough Council were helped into home ownership through the Government's shared ownership scheme. There were no completions under the old Homebuy scheme.

Shell Haven

Bob Spink: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister when he will make a final announcement on the London Gateway Port at Shell Haven. [64007]

Yvette Cooper: On 20 July 2005, my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for Transport, announced that he was minded to approve the proposal from P&O ports for a new container port at London Gateway and, in parallel, my right hon. Friend, the First Secretary of State, announced that he was minded to approve the proposed adjoining logistics centre, subject in particular to resolution of the highways impacts of the development.

We are currently considering the large amount of material submitted by the parties and will make a further announcement in due course.

Smoke Alarms

John McDonnell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many (a) fatalities and (b) non-fatal casualties have occurred as a result of dwelling fires in the UK (i) where a smoke alarm was present and (ii) where there was no smoke alarm in each of the last 10 years for which figures are available. [64835]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The following table shows the number of (a) fatal and (b) non-fatal casualties in dwelling fires attended by the fire and rescue service in the UK, by presence and operation of smoke alarms.

Solar Power

Mr. David Jones: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what measures he plans to adopt to encourage the incorporation of (a) photovoltaic cells and (b) solar panels in new residential developments. [63067]

Yvette Cooper: In line with commitments made in the Energy White Paper, the Government are raising the energy performance standards in Part L of the Building Regulations. These higher standards coming into effect in April will encourage greater take-up of low and zero carbon systems such as photovoltaic cells and solar panels. To encourage builders to do more, a Code for Sustainable Homes is being developed that will set environmental performance standards higher than those stipulated by regulation. To further promote on-site energy generation, new homes that use renewable technology will gain extra points in the code.

In addition to this, Planning Policy Statement 22 encourages the appropriate development of renewable energy schemes and as part of the launch of the new UK Climate Change Programme published on 28 March 2006, we have announced a package of measures to increase carbon savings through the planning system and the work of local authorities.

Stock Transfers

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how much was allocated for (a) arm's length management organisations (ALMOs), (b) large-scale voluntary transfers (LSVTs), (c) debt write-off from LSVTs and ALMOs and (d) housing action trusts in (i) 2004–05, (ii) 2005–06 and (iii) 2006–07. [58882]

Yvette Cooper: (a) The allocations from the arms length management organisation (ALMO) programme was £577.15 million in 2004–05, and are £850.04 million for 2005–06 and £884.40 million for 2006–07.

(b) The sums paid to registered social landlords in gap funding grant were £7.65 million in 2004–05 and £1.83 million in 2005–06 and are expected to be £57.679 million in 2006–07.

(c) Where a local authority transfers its housing to an RSL and the receipt it receives is not sufficient to repay the outstanding debt attributable to the housing the Office will make a one off payment where the debt is held with the Public Works Loans Board. The one off payment is made to discharge the Office's continued liability, through the Housing Revenue Account, to pay subsidy on an authority's housing attributable debt that remains after the transfer.

Such payments are not made in respect of ALMOs as the local authority's debt continues to be supported through the Housing Revenue Account subsidy system. £592.44 million was allocated to support housing transfers in 2004–05. £275.54 million has been allocated to date in 2005–06. The allocation for 2006–07 is £616 million.

(d) The allocation for the Housing Action Trust programme was £59.37 million for 2004–05, and is £17.6370 million for 2005–06 and £1 million for 2006–07.

Sustainable Buildings

Mr. Soames: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will introduce a mandatory code for sustainable buildings. [64448]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 19 April 2006]: From 6 April 2006, new building regulations that set higher mandatory standards for energy efficiency that every new building must meet. These regulations raise energy efficiency standards for new buildings by 40 per cent. compared to 2002.

In addition we are giving consideration to further ways to increase the take-up of the Code for Sustainable Homes, including the possibility of mandatory assessments against all Code requirements.

We will also introduce mandatory assessment of energy efficiency in all new homes to be included in Energy Performance Certificates.

Unregistered Social Landlords

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many proposals to allow councils to set up unregistered social landlords have been made to his Department in the last 5 years. [61645]

Yvette Cooper: None.

Village Shops (Cornwall)

Julia Goldsworthy: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many villages in (a) Kerrier district and (b) Cornwall do not have a village shop. [63631]

Jim Knight: I have been asked to reply.

W do not hold information on how many villages in (a) Kerrier district and (b) Cornwall do not have a village shop.

The Government have assisted local services by extending mandatory rate relief at 50 per cent. to include sole village public houses, petrol stations and village food shops under the village shop scheme. Qualifying premises are entitled to a 50 per cent. reduction in their business rates bills, and local authorities have the discretion to top-up all other non-domestic premises up to 100 per cent. provided it has a rateable value of £14,000 or less.

The Countryside Agency has supported village shops through the Community Service Grants, identified under the Vital Villages programme, (a three year programme of grants that commenced in April 2001). Since April 2005, Defra has devolved funding for some of the Countryside Agency's economic and social regeneration policies, including those hitherto supported by the Vital Villages programme, to the regional development agencies. RDAs, working in partnership, will decide how to spend their resources to meet national targets and address regional and local needs.

Waste Incinerators

Norman Baker: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what requirements there are for planning authorities to take account of available water resources when determining planning applications for incinerators, with particular reference to East Sussex; and what opportunity exists for the views of water supply companies to be considered in such cases. [63152]

Yvette Cooper: Local planning authorities must determine planning applications in accordance with the statutory development plan, unless material considerations indicate otherwise. Where relevant the availability of water resources will have informed the preparation of the development plan and its policies and could be a material consideration in the determination of a planning application for an incinerator. Water undertakers will be consulted on the preparation of the development plan, and applications for planning permission will be publicised by the local planning authority concerned.

Departmental Policies

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will set out with statistical evidence relating as closely as possible to west Lancashire constituency the effects in west Lancashire of changes to his Department's policies since 1997. [64234]

Mr. Woolas: The Department has put in place a considerable programme of reforms and improvements across a wide range of policy areas. These changes have resulted in payments made to west Lancashire district council since 2002–03 (when the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister was established following the Machinery of Government Changes on 29 May 2002) as shown in the following tables. It has been for the west Lancashire district council to determine how that allocation has spent, in line with their priorities.

In addition since 1 April 2006 west Lancashire has been a partner in the local area agreement for the county. This has resulted in allocations as follows:

The Cleaner Safer Greener Fund—£970,000 for 2006–07 and £1,130,000 for 2007–08 to be spent across the borough in order to address 'liveability' issues with a specific focus on narrowing the gap between the best and worst areas.

The Neighbourhood Element Fund—£412,800 for 2006–07 and £516,000 for 2007–08, to be spent with a focus on neighbourhood management within the areas of Digmoor and Tanhouse in Skelmersdale.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Adult Education (Tooting)

Mr. Khan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much funding has been allocated to adult education in Tooting in each year since 1997. [47743]

Bill Rammell: The Department allocates funds for the post-16 education and training sector to the Learning and Skills Council (LSC) working through 47 local offices. The LSC was established in 2001 bringing the planning and funding of post-16 education together under one body within a framework set by Government. In 2001–02 the Learning and Skills Council (LSC) spent £2,236 million on adult programmes including Further Education, Work Based Learning, Adult and Community Learning and other programmes in England. This increased to £2,427 million in 2002–03; £2,866 million in 2003–04; and £2,999 million in 2004–05. The Department does not hold figures for adult education funding at local or regional levels. Some of the information you require is available on the LSC's website. As the LSC is responsible for the planning and funding of post-16 learning, Mark Haysom, the council's chief executive has written to my hon. Friend with the information requested and a copy of his reply has been placed in the House Library.

Letter from Mark Haysom, dated 19 April 2006:

I write in response to your recent Parliamentary Question regarding funding allocated to adult education in Tooting in each year since 1997. I trust the following information is helpful.

The LSC has calculated that the London Borough of Wandsworth will have received nearly £80 million allocated to adult education as a total funding amount from the LSC inception in 2001/02 to the indicative allocation for 2006/2007.

We are not able to break this down by ward level and, therefore, these allocations are for the whole of Wandsworth and are not based on providers or residents based in the Tooting ward. The local authority itself may be able to provide further detail on adult participation/funding attracted at ward level.

I have provided a table to show the 19+ funding recorded on the LSC allocations payment system (AMPs) from 2002/03 to the present indicative allocations for 2006/07. This has been set out for Further Education, Work Based Learning, and Adult and Community Learning. We have included the figures for 2001/02 assuming these were the same as 2002/03. There may be some small variation in the actual level of 2001/02 allocations, which could be verified if required.

Funding allocations relating to adult education prior to the LSC would require searching the TEC records for WBL contracts, FEFC for further education and the DfES for Adult and Community Learning.

Asbestos Insulating Board

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will issue interim guidance to schools warning of the potential dangers of inserting drawing pins and staples into asbestos insulating board in walls and ceilings, and advising that the practice should cease immediately, pending the final recommendations of the Working Group on Action to Control Chemicals; and if she will make a statement. [64228]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 19 April 2006]: Following the advice of the Working Group on Action to Control Chemicals we will shortly be updating our asbestos webpage at www.teachernet.gov.uk/asbestos and issuing a communication to schools. The communication will include unqualified interim guidance to schools not to pin or staple materials to asbestos insulating board in walls or ceilings. The Group identified that this practice produces a risk to teachers and pupils and is an avoidable activity. HSE have advised that under the precautionary principle this activity must stop and that local authorities and governing bodies will need to notify staff not to damage walls and ceilings in this way if asbestos is present.

Brokerage Services

John Penrose: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what estimate she has made of the cost of brokerage services to be provided from August to link employers needing training to their most appropriate provider. [63272]

Phil Hope: General brokerage support that will support businesses through their Information, Diagnostic and Brokerage (IDB) role is funded by the DTI via the Regional Development Agency. Skills Brokers will receive funding from the Learning and Skills Council. The cost of brokerage is within the overall funding set aside for the National Employer Training Programme and the amounts will vary regionally dependent upon the regional priorities and the current capacity of the network. Detailed information on the estimated cost of brokerage services is not held centrally by the Department. Mark Haysom, LSC chief executive, has written to the hon. Member and a copy of his letter has been placed in the House Library.

Letter from Mark Haysom, dated 19 April 2006:

I am writing in response to your recent parliamentary question about estimating the costs of the brokerage service which will link employers to the most appropriate provider.

The Train to Gain skills brokerage service is planned to cost a total of 66 million for the period April 2006 to March 2008 and engage with 85,000 employers in training their workforce. The LSC is specifically focusing skills brokers on employers who have not traditionally invested in the skills of their workforce. Brokers will support them in identifying how investing in the skills of their workforce can benefit their business and then help source high quality training to support those skills needs.

Child Protection

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether there are serving headteachers on List 99. [47281]

Ruth Kelly: My Department does not hold the information requested.

List 99 is a confidential document which contains the personal details of people whose employment by a local education authority, school or in other relevant employment has been barred or restricted by the Secretary of State under section 142 of the 2002 Education Act.

Employers have to check the list to make sure they do not appoint someone to a post from which they have been barred. Since 2000 only total bars have been made and no partial restrictions. A person whose employment has been restricted by the Secretary of State may only work in a post which does not contravene the terms of their restriction. I should also point out that further checks, in addition to List 99, should be undertaken before a teacher is appointed. The fact that an individual is not barred cannot in isolation imply their suitability for a post.

As I set out in my statement of 19 January, Sir Roger Singleton's expert panel will review all cases involving a sexual offence or allegation which resulted in a decision not to include in List 99, or which resulted in a restriction or partial bar.

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many people have been (a) referred to and (b) included on the (i) Protection of Children Act 1999 list and (ii) the Protection of Vulnerable Adults list since 8 January; and how many of these referrals have been cases of individuals previously referred to each list but not previously included on them. [53091]

Ruth Kelly: Decisions to employ individuals in regulated child care settings are a matter for individual employers. There are strong safeguards in place. For example, enhanced CRB checks are mandatory and provide important protection revealing whether any individual has any past police cautions or convictions as well as other local police information.

Since 8 January, 44 people have been referred to the Protection of Children Act list. Of these 44 none has so far been included as the cases are on-going. One has been referred to Protection of Children Act list previously but not included. No one provisionally listed on the Protection of Children Act list is able to work with children while their cases are being examined.

Since 8 January 13 people have been included on Protection of Children Act list all of which are from referrals made before that date.

Matters to do with the Protection of Vulnerable Adults are for my colleague, the Secretary of State for Health.

The Safeguarding Vulnerable Groups Bill will introduce a new vetting and barring scheme which will strengthen the system still further.

China (Inter-country Adoption)

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what progress has been made in resolving the dispute with the Chinese Government over the terms of the standard letter of no objection for inter-country adoption; and if she will make a statement. [64834]

Maria Eagle: We understand that there are several British expatriates living in China and wanting to adopt through the Chinese domestic system. The Chinese Government has asked for a certificate confirming that these persons are suitable to adopt. In the absence of an assessment completed by an adoption agency in accordance with UK law, it is not possible for the Government to confirm to the Chinese authorities the suitability of such a person to be an adoptive parent. If a certificate were issued without a thorough assessment, this might result in the placement of a child with a person who has not been assessed and approved to adopt—and who could be manifestly unsuitable. Without a certificate, however, the Chinese Government will not allow British expatriates to adopt.

We have agreed to work with the Chinese Government to find a mutually agreeable form of words that do not amount to an assurance of a person's suitability to adopt but would satisfy Chinese law. Although this is taking longer than originally hoped, significant progress has been made and we remain hopeful of bringing this matter to a successful conclusion.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many and what proportion of (a) staff and (b) new staff employed in (i) her Department and (ii) each of the agencies for which she has responsibility were registered as disabled in each of the last three years for which data are available. [61371]

Maria Eagle: The Cabinet Office collects and publishes annually statistical information on the civil service by Department. These include data on the number of staff in Departments who have declared a disability.

Declaration of a disability is voluntary.

The latest available information at April 2004 is available in the Library and on the civil service website and the following addresses:

http://www.civilservice.gov.uk/management/statistics/publications/xls/disability_apr04_4nov04.xls

for data relating to 1 April 2004, and

http://www.civilservice.gov.uk/management/statistics/archive/index.asp

for previous reporting periods.

The number and proportion of new staff employed in my Department who declared a disability in each of the last three years are as follows:

	Number	Percentage
2005/06	[1]—	2
2004/05	[1]—	1
2003/04	6	2

[1] In accord with civil service guidelines for disclosing equality data, numbers below 6 are not shown.

Education Maintenance Allowance

John Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many pupils in Easington constituency are in receipt of the education maintenance allowance. [63372]

Maria Eagle: This is a matter for the Learning and Skills Council, who operate education maintenance allowances for the DfES and hold the information about take-up of the scheme. Mark Haysom, the Council's Chief Executive, has written to my hon. Friend with the information requested and a copy of his reply has been placed in the House Library.

Letter from Mark Haysom, dated 19 April 2006:

I am writing in response to your Parliamentary Question that asked "how many pupils in Easington constituency are in receipt of the education maintenance allowance?"

Information on the number of young people who have applied, enrolled and received EMA is available at local education authority (LEA) level, but not at constituency level. By the end of February 2006,4,201 young people in the Durham LEA area had received one or more EMA payments in the academic year 2005/06.

I hope this information is helpful and addresses your question.

Educational Standards

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment she has made of progress made by schools in (a) deprived areas and (b) affluent areas in raising educational standards since 1996–97; and if she will make a statement. [41212]

Jacqui Smith: We have seen significant progress in the narrowing of the attainment gap at GCSE between schools in deprived and affluent areas, compared with the situation in 1996–97. The Excellence in Cities (EiC) programme and excellence clusters were introduced in 1999 and 2000, respectively, to target areas of significant deprivation. Between 2001, the year in which the 3rd phase of EiC began, and 2005, the percentage of pupils achieving 5+A*-C at GCSE/GNVQ and equivalents in EiC areas increased by nearly 10 percentage points, rising from 39.8 percentage in 2001, to 49.4 percent (provisional) in 2005. The rate of improvement in non-EiC schools over the same period was around 5 percentage points, rising from 52.2 per cent. in 2001 to 57 percent (provisional) in 2005.

As shown in the following table, performance data also indicate that the schools with the highest proportions of disadvantaged pupils, as assessed by free school meal (FSM) entitlement, have made more improvement than those with the lowest proportions. This improvement is evident, both at Key Stage 2 and Key Stage 3 in English and Maths; and at GCSE/GNVQ.

Improvements in attainment made by low and high FSM schools between 1996 and 2004 across key stage tests

Employer Training Pilots

Kelvin Hopkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills pursuant to the answer of 3 March 2006, Official Report, column 995W, on employer training pilots, which organisations from the (a) private and (b) public sector with over 250 staff participated in the employer training pilots in (i) 2004 and (ii) 2005; and how many trainees in each sector took part in the pilots in each year. [59859]

Phil Hope: The information requested is not held centrally by the Department, but is collected by the Learning and Skills Council (LSC). Mark Haysom, LSC chief executive, has written to the hon. Member and a copy of his response has been placed in the House Library.

Letter from Mark Haysom, dated 13 April 2006:

I am writing in response to your recent parliamentary question on the Employer Training Pilots during 2004–05.

Please find attached a table setting out the number of private and public sector employers who participated in the pilots and have more than 250 employees. The table also provides figures on the number of trainees who participated by sector in the pilots during 2004–05.

We are unable provide details of individual employers participating in ETP without first obtaining permission to do so from each employer.

I hope this response is helpful to you.

Head Teachers/Principals

Ms Diana R. Johnson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many vacancies there were on average for headteacher positions in (a) Kingston upon Hull and (b) Hull, North constituency in each year since 1997. [64105]

Jacqui Smith: The following table gives the number of full-time head teacher vacancies in maintained schools in The City of Kingston Upon Hull local authority and England, in each January 1997 to 2005, the latest information available.

Information on teacher vacancies is not available at constituency level.

John Penrose: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether (a) the Government or (b) local education authorities can direct a school governing body to dismiss a head teacher. [64461]

Jacqui Smith: In almost all circumstances the dismissal of a head teacher is a matter for the governing body of the school. However, in exceptional circumstances, there is limited scope for this decision to be taken in conjunction with the local authority, or at their suggestion. This may happen when the school's delegated budget has been suspended or it is determined that the head teacher has failed to secure the National Professional Qualification for Headship within set limits. Additionally, in the most extreme circumstances the Government can become directly involved. Where it can be clearly shown that a governing body has acted illegally in not dismissing a head teacher, the Secretary of State has the power under Section 496 and 497 of the Education Act 1996 to intervene and direct the Governing Body to dismiss the head teacher.

John Penrose: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether primary legislation will be needed in order for learning and skills councils to direct a governing body of a further education college to dismiss the principal. [64457]

Bill Rammell: Yes. This power does not currently exist. We plan to bring forward legislation to give the Learning and Skills Council powers to do this.

Liverpool Learning Service

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will make a statement on (a) the finances of and (b) the redundancy programme announced at the Liverpool Learning Service. [65403]

Phil Hope: The responsibility for the finances and staffing of the Liverpool Adult Learning Service rests with Liverpool City Council. Overall we have made clear in the White Paper, "Further Education: Raising Skills, Improving Life Chances" that our priorities for the funding of adult learning are high quality learning opportunities targeted at those who need help most—adults without effective literacy and numeracy or without the employability skills embodied in a first full Level 2 qualification. It is the responsibility of the Learning and Skills Council to meet these national priorities in the light of local needs, ensuring that it only contracts for good quality provision.

Neighbourhood Learning in Deprived Communities Fund

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what research her Department has undertaken into the social profile of people accessing learning provided through the Neighbourhood Learning in Deprived Communities Fund. [65433]

Phil Hope: Although there is no specific research on the social profile of people accessing learning provided through the Neighbourhood Learning in Deprived Communities (NLDC), by its very nature money is targeted at the poorest neighbourhoods in the country to reduce worklessness and crime and to improve the health, housing and physical environment of local residents. It is an important part of a suite of programmes designed to support successful regeneration. In 2004/5 the NLDC funded 30,000 new learners on programmes including 13,000 helped into Skills for Life provision.

Pupil Referral Units

Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment she has made of the effectiveness of pupil referral units; and if she will make a statement. [64485]

Jacqui Smith: Evidence on the effectiveness of pupil referral units is available, as for other schools, from inspections undertaken by the Office for Standards in Education (Ofsted). The latest Ofsted Annual Report, published in October 2005, found that 25 of the 38 pupil referral units inspected in 2004/05, 25 were good or better, providing effectively for the young people they serve. Of the remaining 13 units, 10 were found to be satisfactory and three were unsatisfactory. Ofsted also found that the quality of teaching was good or better in 29 of the units, and unsatisfactory in only one, that the units generally provided a curriculum that meets the particular needs of their pupils, and that the quality of accommodation in units continues to improve. Subject to parliamentary assent, the measures within the Education and Inspections Bill will require local authorities to take faster and more decisive action to turn round schools in special measures or requiring significant improvement. These expectations will also apply to pupil referral units which fail an Ofsted inspection.

We are also undertaking research on alternative provision generally which will identify examples of good practice which we will disseminate.

School Exclusions

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many pupils have left school due to permanent exclusion in West Lancashire constituency since 1997. [64326]

Jacqui Smith: The number of permanent exclusions from maintained primary and secondary schools in West Lancashire constituency from 1996/97 to 2003/04 is given in the table.

Figures for the number of permanent exclusions during 2004/05 academic year should be available in June 2006.

Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment she has made of the effect on schools which lose funding when children are excluded; and if she will make a statement. [64486]

Jacqui Smith: We have made no specific assessment of the effect on schools of losing funds when children are permanently excluded. The principle is well established that funding must follow a permanently excluded pupil to their new education provider to ensure that the pupil's education continues. The amount that transfers from the school is calculated according to a formula which is set out in regulations. Local authorities, however, may deduct an additional amount in accordance with discretionary arrangements made under their local funding formula. The Department does not control these local arrangements. The total amount that a school loses will depend on the factors included in any funding formulae and the date in the financial year when the exclusion takes effect.

Specialist Schools

Mr. Jeremy Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many specialist schools there were in (a) England and (b) Taunton constituency in each year since 1997. [64350]

Jacqui Smith: The following table shows the number of schools there were in (a) England and (b) Taunton constituency in each year between 1997 and March 2006.

Operational date	England	Taunton
Pre 1997	149	0
1997	223	1
1998	306	3
1999	383	3
2000	519	4
2001	670	4
2002	977	4
2003	1,440	7
2004	1,949	7
2005	2,379	7
2006	2,502	7

All of the maintained secondary schools in Taunton constituency have achieved specialist school status.

Student Finance

Peter Law: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the average debt incurred by students on leaving university was in the last year for which figures are available; what the average time taken to pay off the debt has been to date; and what assessment she has made of the impact of the student loan scheme on the application for university places from children from working-class homes. [62313]

Bill Rammell: In 2005–06, the average amount of publicly-owned student loan debt in the UK on reaching statutory repayment due date (SRDD) was £8,350. Borrowers reach SRDD in the April following graduation or otherwise leaving their course.

The latest Student Income and Expenditure Survey 2004/05, which covered full-time and part-time undergraduate students in higher education institutions in England and Wales, found that full-time final year students' average anticipated total debt on graduation was £7,918 in 2004/05. Debt in this instance is defined as total borrowings offset with total savings. Borrowing included student loans, overdrafts, credit cards, commercial loans and informal loans.

The average time to repay a mortgage style loan (primarily loans taken out before 1998), for all those who have fully repaid to date, is five years (figure to nearest whole year). This is based on the time taken from a student reaching their SRDD until the loan account is fully repaid. Customers who repay early before reaching their SRDD have, for the purposes of the analysis, been treated as having a repayment time of zero.

It is too early in the scheme to provide a meaningful average for the time taken to repay an income contingent loan, as this scheme is relatively new and only 2 per cent. of these loan borrowers have repaid their loan in full to date.

No specific assessment has been made of the impact solely of the student loan scheme on the application for university places by children from working class homes. However, the following table shows that the proportion of entrants from the lower socio-economic groups has increased steadily over time, a trend which continued during the period when tuition fees and income contingent loans were introduced.

Proportion of young (under 21) UK domiciled entrants to full-time first degree courses at UK HEIs

	Proportion of entrants to higher education from:
	State schools	Lower social classes (IIIM, IV, V)	Lower socio-economic groups (4–7)	Low participation areas
1997/98	81.8	24.9	n/a	12.1
1998/99	85.0	25.1	n/a	12.3
1999/2000	84.9	25.3	n/a	12.4
2000/01	85.7	25.4	n/a	12.5
2001/02	86.0	25.8	n/a	13.1
2002/03	87.2	n/a	28.4	13.3
2003/04	86.8	n/a	28.6	13.9

n/a = Not available.
Note:
The socio-economic group classification was introduced in 2002/03 to replace the social class groupings. The two classifications are not directly comparable.

Performance Indicators in Higher Education.

Repayment of income contingent loans is linked to income after leaving university or college so that leavers only repay as and when they can afford to do so, and not until income is over £15,000 per year. Under the new system from 2006/07, students from low-income backgrounds will be entitled to a maintenance grant of up to £2,700 per year, and an institutional bursary of at least £300.

Sunday Trading

Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment she has made of the possible effects on (a) parental involvement in children's education and (b) parent-child contact time of easing or removing Sunday trading restrictions. [64484]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The DTI issued a press and website notice in January asking for views and evidence on all aspects of Sunday trading.

Teacher Pensions

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the employer contribution rates to the teachers' pension scheme are; what assumed rate of return underlies those contribution rates; and what the contribution rate would be if the assumed rate of return was in line with current redemption yield on index-linked gilts. [61398]

Bill Rammell: The employer contribution rate, as established at the 2001 valuation of the Teachers' Pension Scheme (TPS), is 13.5 per cent.

The assumed rate of return methodology for the TPS is known as SCAPE (Superannuation Contributions Adjusted for Past Experience). Instead of tracking the returns of invested pension funds, the method of crediting investment returns to the notional fund is now based on a rate of return which the Government Actuary advises as being appropriate for the valuation of a public service pension scheme. For the purpose of the 2001 valuation, the Government Actuary used a real rate of return of 3.5 per cent. per annum.

It is not possible to estimate an employer contribution based on different rate of return assumptions because of the disproportionate cost.

Trust Schools

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the powers of the sponsor will be in relation to trust schools; and what the equivalent powers are in relation to academies. [64686]

Jacqui Smith: A trust school will be a maintained foundation school that has acquired a charitable foundation or trust to help it improve standards for its children. Trusts must be incorporated charities with specified objects and characteristics. The role of trust partners, who may be voluntary or private sector organisations and can include local authorities, will be to set up the trust in accordance with the legal requirements and appoint trustees to carry out the trust's functions. The functions of the trust will be to appoint governors to the school and to hold assets on trust for the school. The school's governing body—which will include representatives of parents, staff, the local authority and the wider community as well as governors appointed by the trust—will retain day-to-day responsibility for the school. A trust school will not have sponsors as such, as there is no requirement for trust partners to contribute financially to the capital costs of the school as academy sponsors do.

An academy is a state funded independent school set up as a company with charitable status. The academy principal sponsor is a member of the academy trust (company), appoints a number of further persons to the academy trust and also appoints sponsor governors, one of whom can be the principal sponsor him/herself. The maximum number of members of the academy trust and sponsor governors that can be appointed by the principal sponsor is specified in the academy's articles of association, in accordance with the funding agreement between the Secretary of State and academy trust,. The Governing Body has responsibility for running the academy on behalf of the academy trust.

World Cup (Complimentary Tickets)

Mr. Hands: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many complimentary tickets her Department has received for games taking place at the FIFA World Cup 2006 in Germany. [63913]

Maria Eagle: To date and according to our records, the Department for Education and Skills has not received any complimentary tickets for World Cup matches taking place in Germany this summer. Departmental Ministers do not intend to attend any of the FIFA World Cup matches in Germany this year in an official capacity.

HEALTH

Ambulance Services

Steve Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps she is taking to ensure that when three-star ambulance trusts are merged with other ambulance trusts the standards of the merged trust are equal to those of the existing three-star trust. [62384]

Mr. Byrne: Should our proposals for reconfiguration of ambulance trusts proceed, the new ambulance trusts would still be required to meet national performance requirements. The new trusts would be expected to learn from and use best practice from the current trusts. Local innovations and successes would not only be preserved but also shared to benefit all patients.

Audiology Tests

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate she has made of the average waiting time from a patient being referred by a GP to an audiologist and a hearing test taking place in the last period for which figures are available. [62053]

Mr. Byrne: The data requested is not centrally available.

Cancer

Hugh Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average waiting time was from diagnosis to first treatment for people from York diagnosed with (a) breast and (b) all cancers in (i) 1997 and (ii) on the latest date for which figures are available. [64335]

Mr. Byrne: Average waiting times for the treatment of cancer patients are not collected centrally. A cancer waiting times standard of a maximum wait of 31 days from diagnosis to first cancer treatment was introduced for breast cancer from December 2001 and for all cancer patients from December 2005. Data for York Hospitals National Health Service Trust show that in the last quarter, October to December 2005, 100 per cent. of women with breast cancer and 97.2 per cent. of all cancer patients were treated within this standard. Data on cancer waiting times were not collected centrally in 1997.

Hugh Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much has been spent in improving cancer services in York since 1997. [64336]

Mr. Byrne: The information requested is not held centrally. Local health economies are responsible for determining how to use their resources to meet the health needs of their local population, including investment in cancer services. An exercise to track additional cancer investment carried out in 2005 showed that in 2003–04 there was new investment in cancer services across the Yorkshire cancer network of £2.669 million.

Hugh Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many specialist cancer (a) doctors and (b) nurses were employed by the NHS in York in (i) 1997 and (ii) in the latest year for which figures are available. [64338]

Mr. Byrne: The information requested is shown in the table.

Child and Adolescent Mental Health Service

Ms Diana R. Johnson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many children in (a) Hull, North constituency and (b) Kingston-upon-Hull have had to wait more than (i) one month, (ii) two months and (iii) three months for an appointment with the child and adolescent mental health service in the last 12 months. [64091]

Mr. Byrne: The information requested is not held centrally.

Cholesterol

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate she has made of the percentage of adults in West Lancashire with high cholesterol levels. [64112]

Mr. Byrne: The information is not available in the format requested. Data on cholesterol levels are available from the Health Survey for England (HSE). The most recent data available on cholesterol are for 2003, as this is the last year where the HSE focused on cardiovascular disease.

The results in the table show the mean total cholesterol levels for adults for England and the North West Government Office Region, broken down by gender for 2003.

Choose and Book System

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the letter from her Department's Director of Access of 26 January 2006, on Choose and Book, which NHS trusts are unable to implement an integrated patient administration systems solution; for what reasons these Trusts are unable to do so; and if she will make a statement. [48846]

Mr. Byrne: For valid technical or commercial reasons, a small number of national health service trusts are currently not expected to be able to achieve a fully compliant integrated solution during 2006. Details are shown in the table.

NHS Trust	Detail
Gateshead Health NHS Trust Mid Yorkshire Hospitals NHS Trust Heart of England NHS Foundation Trust Moorfields Eye Hospital NHS Foundation Trust	Current PAS supplier has no plans to make a compliant system
Clatterbridge Center for Oncology NHS Trust	As a specialist hospital receiving mostly tertiary referrals, no plans to move to a compliant PAS
Trafford Healthcare NHS Trust Norfolk and Norwich University Hospital Chelsea and Westminster Healthcare NHS Trust Southampton University Hospitals NHS Trust Oxford Radcliffe Hospitals NHS Trust Heatherwood and Wexham Park Hospitals Trust	Current PAS cannot be made compliant but plan indicates that the local service provider's PAS will be available for Choose and Book in March 2007
Royal National Hospital for Rheumatic Diseases	Very low volume booking so business case for moving to integrated PAS is not viable

In due course, a fully compliant integrated solution will be implemented in these trusts. In the meantime, the choose and book indirectly bookable services' solution will be utilised.

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health for what reasons her Department's aims of achieving 90 per cent. of general practitioner referrals through Choose and Book by the end of December 2006 have been postponed to March 2007. [48847]

Mr. Byrne: The end point of March 2007 for getting to 90 per cent. of referrals made through choose and book aligns the objective with the incentives contained within the 2006–07 general practitioner contract, the negotiations for which were recently concluded between NHS Employers and the British Medical Association.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps she plans to take to encourage greater uptake by general practitioners of the choose and book IT system. [53515]

Mr. Byrne: The Department is taking a number of steps to encourage greater uptake by general practitioners (GPs) of the choose and book service. A key step is the newly agreed general medical services contract, which will reward general practices, through a directed enhanced service payment, for utilisation of the choose and book service.

Over 210,000 GP referrals have been made through choose and book to date with over 3,800 GP practices having made at least one referral as at 21 March 2006.

Consultancy Fees

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the total cost to her Department of consultancy fees in relation to (a) restructuring and (b) private finance initiatives has been since 1997. [32200]

Mr. Byrne [pursuant to the reply, 27 March 2006, c. 783–84W]: I regret that my previous reply was incorrect. It should read as follows:

The Department does not collect information that would allow for an analysis of the consultants engaged in restructuring and could not obtain this information without incurring disproportionate costs.

The total spend on consultancy work directly related to private finance initiative in each year is shown in the table.

Financial year	Cost
1999–2000	108,824
2000–01	60,379
2001–02	168,277
2002–03	207,171
2003–04	892,859
2004–05	89,698
2005 to date	47,856

Dentistry

Mr. Walter: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many dentists in North Dorset constituency have declined the NHS dentist contract; and if she will make a statement. [63222]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 20 April 2006]: Information on the number of dentists who have declined to provide national health service dental services from 1 April 2006 is not yet available centrally.

Provisional management estimates on the number of accepted and rejected contracts are available centrally. These show that, as at the start of April in North Dorset Primary Care Trust (PCT), 14 contracts had been accepted and three contracts had been rejected.

The contract numbers do not read across to numbers of individual dentists who may have agreed or rejected contracts. Contracts can be at practice or individual dentist level. Typically, many of the accepted contracts are with practices covering a number of dentists, whereas rejected contracts are more likely to be for individual practitioners.

In North Dorset PCT, the rejected contracts represent an estimated 7.1 per cent. of the total NHS services represented by all the contracts offered by this PCT, based on weighted courses of treatment or units of dental activity.

PCTs are using the funding associated with rejected contracts to commission additional services from other dentists. The information available centrally does not include any services commissioned since the information given above was collected at the start of April.

Jeff Ennis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many dentists are practising in (a) Barnsley and (b) Doncaster; and how many of these have not signed the new NHS dental contract. [64684]

Mr. Byrne: Figures are not yet available at a primary care trust level. 198 national health service dental contracts have been signed in the South Yorkshire strategic health authority (SHA) area, and six contracts have been rejected. The signed contracts account for 99 per cent. of NHS dental service in the SHA.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much was spent on external consultants and advisers by (a) her Department, (b) each (i) non-departmental public body and (ii) executive agency for which her Department is responsible and (c) each independent statutory body, organisation and body financially sponsored by her Department in each year since May 1997. [39068]

Mr. Byrne: The total cost of external consultancy services procured by the Department, where in-house resources were not available, is shown in the table.

	Cost
1999–2000	8,718
2000–01	6,852
2001–02	7,056
2002–03	7,266
2003–04	10,031
2004–05	12,800
2005–06 to date	[1]4,658

[1] The 2005–06 spend is lower because the Department has rectified some miscoding against the expenditure category codes to provide a more accurate figure of external consultancy spend to 31 January 2006.

Note:
Information is not available prior to 1999–2000.

The Department holds no central record of spend on external consultancy services by non-departmental public bodies, executive agencies, independent statutory bodies or organisations financially sponsored by the Department. The annual accounts for these organisations may include expenditure on consultants; copies of accounts can be obtained from individual organisations.

Departmental Policies

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will set out with statistical evidence relating as closely as possible to the West Lancashire constituency, the effects in West Lancashire of changes to her Department's policies since 1997. [64124]

Mr. Byrne: The Government have put in place a programme of national health service investment and reform since 1997 to improve service delivery in all parts of the United Kingdom. There is significant evidence that these policies have yielded considerable benefits for the West Lancashire constituency.

For example:

At the end of February 2006, the number of people waiting more than six to eight months for in-patient treatment within West Lancashire Primary Care Trust (PCT) had fallen to zero from 530 in June 2002;

At the end of December 2005, the number of patients waiting over 13 weeks for out-patient treatment within West Lancashire PCT had fallen to zero from 597 in June 2002;

Figures for December 2005 show that all patients within West Lancashire PCT are able to be offered an appointment with a primary care professional within two working days, an improvement from 64.7 per cent. in June 2002;

West Lancashire PCTs financial allocation increased to £136.4 million for 2006–07, a real terms increase of 6.3 per cent.;

In June 2003, at Southport and Ormskirk Hospital NHS Trust 92.9 per cent. of patients spent less than four hours in accident and emergency (A&E) from arrival to admission, transfer or discharge. Figures for December 2005 show an improvement to 99.4 per cent.;

Between September 2000 and June 2005, the number of consultants at Southport and Ormskirk Hospital NHS Trust has increased from 81 to 87. The number of nurses increased from 895 to 910;

In the West Lancashire local authority (LA) area, death rates from cancer per 100,000 population have fallen to 177.5 in 2003 from 193.4 in 1997;

In the West Lancashire LA area death rates from coronary heart disease per 100,000 population have fallen to 124.7 in 2003 from 168.5 in 1997;

A NHS treatment centre at a cost of £3.8 million opened in 2004 in Ormskirk. The centre provides 3,400 surgical procedures;

Ormskirk General Hospital has new services totalling £17 million NHS capital:

- treatment centre offering urology out-patients, endoscopy, minor and day surgery and pain services;
- 12 bed antenatal ward, eight bed delivery suite and 22 bed postnatal ward;
- neonatal unit of 12 cots with intensive care nursery; and
- new paediatric services including dedicated A&E department, 28 bed children's ward and children's out-patient department.

Two additional wards at Southport Hospital and

A replacement magnetic resonance imaging scanner for Southport and Formby District General Hospital.

Diabetes

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many calls received by NHS Direct were on diabetes-related issues in each of the last three years. [59069]

Mr. Byrne: This information is not centrally held. It may be available from NHS Direct Special Health Authority and the hon. Member may wish to contact the Chairman of NHS Direct for details.

Grievance Procedures

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many grievance procedures have been initiated in the Department in each of the last three years. [63537]

Mr. Byrne: The Department has records of eight grievances in 2005. For reasons of confidentiality, the number of cases has been suppressed for 2006. None was initiated in 2004.

Harassment Complaints

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many complaints of (a) bullying and (b) sexual harassment have been investigated in the Department in each of the last three years; and how many complaints have been upheld. [63538]

Mr. Byrne: The information requested on complaints of bullying is suppressed on grounds of confidentiality. There have been no complaints of sexual harassment.

Health Services (North Northamptonshire)

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions her Department has had with the growth areas directorate in the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister concerning additional provision of NHS health care in North Northamptonshire. [64726]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department has had no direct discussions with the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister concerning additional provision of national health service health care in North Northamptonshire. However, the Department has regular six-monthly meetings with the growth area team at the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister.

Health Treatment Centres

Paul Holmes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has for the expansion of independent sector treatment centres. [61715]

Mr. Byrne: There are 15 contracts currently under way for the provision of 30 independent sector treatment centre (ISTC) facilities, with the remainder being fully operational during 2006 and 2007. A second phase of procurement was launched in March 2005 and this additional capacity will be provided through a variety of facilities, such as existing ISTCs, newbuild centres, refurbishments and existing national health service facilities over the next five years.

Hearing Aids

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how the 18 week waiting target will apply to those applying for a digital hearing aid who currently have an analogue one. [63574]

Mr. Byrne: The Department is considering the results of a recent listening exercise on the principles and definitions to govern the 18-week pathway. In the light of comments received, we will publish conclusions shortly.

Infant Formula

Annette Brooke: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what her Department's policy is on trials of infant formula with particular reference to the Patch test; what guidance she has issued to hospitals on their role in recruiting mothers for such trials; and if she will make a statement. [51668]

Caroline Flint [holding answer 14 February 2006]: While the Department does not issue guidance to hospitals on their role in recruiting mothers for such trials, the dignity, rights, safety and wellbeing of participants must be the primary concern in any research study.

The Department is legally required to ensure that independent research ethics committees are in place to approve research proposals, which involve national health service patients, their organs, tissues or data, to ensure that the studies comply with recognised national and international ethical standards.

Malnutrition

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what responsibility (a) GPs, (b) district nurses and (c) care workers have in (i) monitoring older patients for malnutrition and (ii) introducing measures to combat malnutrition; [64285]

(2) which health and social care workers have responsibility for identifying and implementing action to combat malnutrition in people over the age of 65 (a) in primary care, (b) in care homes, (c) who are hospital in-patients and (d) who are hospital out-patients; and what action she is taking to implement this policy. [64286]

Mr. Byrne: The primary responsibility for monitoring the health of individuals, including their nutritional status, rests with clinicians.

I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave on 28 June 2005, Official Report, column 1523W, which stated that, it is the responsibility of the appropriate regulatory bodies that set standards for health and social care education and training to determine how much knowledge registrants require of specific health and social care issues such as nutrition and malnutrition.

The General Medical Council for example, requires that all pre-registration house officers must demonstrate competence across a range of factors, including nutrition in considering treatment options they discuss with patients. The Nursing and Midwifery Council also stress the need for specialist community public health nurses to understand, among other things, the importance of nutrition.

The National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence and the National Collaborating Centre for Acute Care published a clinical guideline on 21 February 2006 to help the national health service identify patients, who are malnourished or at risk of malnutrition.

Mary Seacole Award

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much funding (a) NHS Employers and (b) the Department of Health has provided for the Mary Seacole Leadership and Development Awards since their inception; what the aims of the awards are; and whether similar leadership and development opportunities are available to non-black and minority ethnic NHS staff. [61271]

Mr. Byrne: Since their inception in 1994–95, the Department has provided funding of £25,000 annually for the Mary Seacole Leadership Awards. From 2006–07, these awards will become the Mary Seacole Leadership and Development Awards, with additional funding of £25,000 being provided by NHS Employers.

The awards are focused on nurses, midwives and health visitors in clinical and professional practice in the national health service in England. They contribute to positive action that the Department and partner NHS organisations take in order to help black and minority ethnic NHS staff develop their careers in the NHS. The context for this is the difficulties that some black and minority ethnic staff experience in this regard and which do not apply in the same way to other groups.

Maternal and Child Health

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she expects the findings of the confidential enquiry into maternal and child health to be published; and if she will make a statement. [64370]

Mr. Byrne: The confidential enquiry into maternal and child health runs a series of programmes which report at different times. It plans to publish its annual perinatal mortality monitoring report for 2005 by the end of 2006.

Medical Students (Jobs)

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of (a) the number of medical students without jobs allocated from August 2006 and the reasons for delay in allocations, (b) the effectiveness of the Multi-Deanery Appointment process and (c) the number of 2006 medical graduates that will not have jobs as junior doctors by 1 August 2006. [54503]

Mr. Byrne: Recruitment to foundation programmes in August 2006 is a two stage process—to date only stage one has been completed.

In the first round of applications, over 5,000 candidates were matched to posts. A small number of applicants, including about 465 United Kingdom applicants, will need to go through a second stage of the recruitment process. There are about 490 vacancies available in the second round.

The multi-deanery appointment process is a computer system designed to handle the many applications received by postgraduate deans. For the 2006 recruitment round it was adopted by eight out of 14 deaneries in England. It is not intended to make decisions on, or score, applicants. This is done by senior doctors.

We are confident that there are enough Foundation places for all UK graduates in good standing.

Multiple Sclerosis

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many multiple sclerosis patients have commenced beta interferon and glatiramer treatment in the West Lancashire area in each of the last five years. [64291]

Mr. Byrne: There have been no prescriptions for either of these preparations during the period March 2001 to February 2006 (the most recent data available) by prescribers in West Lancashire Primary Care Trust.

NHS and Mental Establishments (Visits)

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the (a) mental health and (b) NHS establishments she has visited in the last six months; and on what days she visited them. [61565]

Mr. Byrne [pursuant to the reply, 27 March 2006, c.798W]: I regret my previous reply was incomplete. It should read as follows:

The Secretary of State visited the following national health service establishments in the last six months:

Highgate Mental Health Trust—18 October 2005

The Royal Free Hampstead NHS Trust—18 October 2005

The Gateway Surgical Centre—15 November 2005

Homerton University Hospital Foundation Trust—24 December 2005

The James Wigg Practice—13 January 2006

Liverpool Street Commuter Walk in Centre—24 January 2006

Merrydale Primary Care Centre—3 February 2006

Barts and the London NHS Trust—8 March 2006

The Thelma Golding Health centre—15 March 2006

NHS Direct

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the policy of NHS Direct is on confidentiality in cases where a caller discloses information that may suggest that a crime has been committed. [60706]

Mr. Byrne: NHS Direct considers any such instances on a case-by-case basis, in line with the principles of the Caldicott Committee report on the review of patient identifiable information 1997 and Confidentiality: NHS Code of Practice 2003.

Copies of both documents are available from the Department's website at:

NHS Expenditure

Steve Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what initial estimate was made of the cost to the NHS of (a) the new contract for consultants, (b) the new contract for GPs and (c) the Agenda for Change reforms in (i) 2005–06 and (ii) 2006–07; and what her latest estimate is of the costs in each case. [62598]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 30 March 2006]: The consultant contract was a three-year deal. It was costed on a methodology agreed with the British Medical Association. On that basis, the estimated cost of the contract (and the funding provided) was £133 million in 2003–04 rising to £250 million in 2005–06. In late 2004, we adjusted the tariff for 2005–06 by £150 million in response to suggestions from the service that there was a further cost pressure. However, our national survey, published in February 2005 and based on returns from 95 per cent. of trusts on the position as at 29 October 2004, indicated that the actual additional cost to the service was around £90 million.

The new contract for general practitioners was backed by a guaranteed 36 per cent. increase in resources in England, rising from £5 billion in 2002–03 to £6.8 billion in 2005–06. The overall increase in resources is now forecast to be more than 40 per cent. for the three-year period, equating to spend on primary medical care services of around £7.6 billion in 2005–06. For 2006–07, the equivalent forecast cost is £7.9 billion.

The agreed funding envelope for agenda for change in 2005–06 and 2006–07 was £950 million and £1.4 billion respectively. It is estimated that in the first 12 months direct earnings costs exceeded those originally estimated by 0.5 per cent. of the agenda for change pay bill, or around £120 million in cash terms. In the same period, it is estimated that the indirect earnings costs of replacing additional hours and leave arising from agenda for change exceeded those originally estimated by some £100 million.

NHS Finance (Hospitals)

John Hemming: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what account is taken of the variation of fixed capital costs in the formulae for funding NHS hospital trusts through payment by results. [62510]

Mr. Byrne: The national tariff is currently based on average reference costs, which are calculated from individual returns from every national health service trust, NHS foundation trust and primary care trust which provides services. NHS reference costs are based on a full absorption methodology and therefore include cost of capital. In addition, the annual tariff uplift includes an assessment of the increase in statutory capital charges payable and charges payable on new private finance initiative investments.

NHS Redress Scheme

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the fifth report of session 2005–06 from the Constitutional Affairs Select Committee on Compensation culture: NHS Redress Bill, what the basis is for her Department's view that only genuine cases will be eligible for the redress scheme and that the vast majority of opportunistic claims will be easily rejected. [64741]

Jane Kennedy: There are a number of criteria which must be satisfied before a case may be eligible for the NHS redress scheme and these are clearly laid out in the Bill. The criteria include that:

the case must involve a liability in tort under the law of England and Wales arising out of qualifying services provided as part of the NHS in England; the liability is in respect of personal injury or loss arising out of a breach of a duty of care in relation to the diagnosis of illness or the care or treatment of any patient; and the liability must arise as a consequence of any act or omission by a health care professional.

The scheme to be established under the powers in the Bill will not create any new legal rights; the scheme only provides a basis for settling claims where existing qualifying liabilities arise. It is a way for individuals who have low monetary value claims to seek redress without having to go to court. Under the scheme, the same tests for negligence will be applied to cases as are applied under current tort law.

If patients do not wish to use the NHS redress scheme or if an offer is not made, or is rejected, their right to pursue a claim through the courts will remain in being, unaffected by the scheme.

Patient Transfers

Steve Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the Department of Health Winter Report 2005–06, page 18, how many critically ill patients have been transferred between hospitals for non-clinical reasons in each year since 2000. [62555]

Mr. Byrne: Statistics on the total number of critically ill patients transferred for non-clinical reasons are not collected centrally. However, self-reported management information received by the Department does indicate that the number of transfers was significantly lower in 2005 than in 2000 and critical care bed capacity has increased significantly since 2000.

Payment-by-results

John Hemming: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which hospitals she identified before the introduction of payment by results as being at risk of deficits as a result of its introduction; and what percentage deficit she expected for each one. [62679]

Mr. Byrne: The movement from local prices to a national tariff means that the income of most national health service providers will change. We undertook an exercise to estimate changes in income for organisations to inform the transition from local prices to national tariff. Transitional arrangements channel extra funds into organisations which lose income under payment by results, to give them time to adjust to the new arrangements.

Pension Provision

Mr. Lilley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of expenditure by the NHS is accounted for by the cost of pension provision. [61572]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 27 March 2006]: Pension contributions made by employers amount to 14 per cent. of the pensionable payroll. This equates to 5.3 per cent. of gross departmental expenditure on the national health service in 2004–05.

Mr. Lilley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the annual cost of pensions is for (a) general medical practitioners, (b) consultants and (c) NHS staff covered by Agenda for Change. [61573]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 27 March 2006]: The information requested is not available centrally.

Mr. Lilley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the estimated increase in the level of pensions is that will be payable on retirement on average to (a) GPs as a result of the new contract, (b) consultants under their new contract and (c) other NHS staff as a result of Agenda for Change. [61574]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 27 March 2006]: The information is not available in the form requested.

Mr. Lilley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what the estimated additional accrued pension liability to the NHS is as a result of the (a) GPs' new contract, (b) consultants' new contract and (c) Agenda for Change; [61575]

(2) what assessment she has made of the potential impact of new contracts (a) for GPs, (b) for consultants and (c) under Agenda for Change on the cost of pensions for the NHS; and if she will make a statement. [64359]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 27 March 2006]: The information requested is not available, but the Government's actuary Department has valued the total liabilities of the NHS Pension Scheme as at 31 March 2005 to be £127.9 billion. They are in the process of preparing a detailed actuarial valuation of the scheme as at 31 March 2004 which will be published later this year which will include analysis of the factors leading to any change in valuation.

Mr. Lilley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much of the additional funding for the NHS in each year since 1999 has been absorbed by the increase in the cost of pensions. [61577]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 27 March 2006]: The NHS pension scheme is revalued periodically to take account of overall scheme liabilities. The last valuation was based on 1999 data, and a further valuation, based on 2004 data will be completed shortly. Contribution rates have not therefore increased in this period as a result of changes to scheme liabilities. A change was however made in employer contributions in 2004 to take account of the transfer of responsibility for the indexation of national health service pensions, together with the associated funding, from HM Treasury to the NHS.

Postgraduate Medical Education and Training Board

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much has been collected from doctors by the Postgraduate Medical and Education Training Board since its creation. [62567]

Mr. Byrne: The postgraduate medical education training board as of 28 March 2006 has collected £1,585,315 from doctors since its creation.

Potters Bar Community Hospital

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many beds are not available for the treatment of patients at Potters Bar Community Hospital. [64733]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information requested is not held centrally.

Prostate Cancer

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when cryotherapy treatment was approved by the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence for use in early prostate cancer; where in the Hampshire and the Isle of Wight strategic health authority area such treatment is available; and on what date the treatment became available in each case. [64808]

Caroline Flint: In November 2005, the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence (NICE) issued interventional procedure guidance on the use of cryotherapy as a primary (first) treatment for prostate cancer. The guidance concluded that the current evidence appeared to support the use of this treatment provided that normal arrangements are in place for consent, audit and clinical governance.

NICE also recommended that further research and audit of this treatment should address quality of life, clinical outcomes and long-term survival.

Cryotherapy treatment is not available in national health service organisations in the Hampshire and Isle of Wight strategic health authority area.

Radiotherapy

Greg Mulholland: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the impact on patients' prognoses of delays in the commencement of radiotherapy treatment; and what steps she plans to take to speed up the commencement of treatment for those patients requiring radiotherapy. [64480]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Data on waiting times for radiotherapy are not collected centrally, nor is the impact of delays in radiotherapy treatment. We know from a recent audit by the Royal College of Radiologists, that waiting times for radiotherapy in some parts of the country are unacceptably long but that the situation is improving. The NHS Cancer Plan sets out maximum waiting time targets for cancer treatment which may include radiotherapy where this is given as a first definitive treatment. From December 2005, there is a maximum two-month wait from urgent referral to treatment and a maximum one-month wait from diagnosis to first treatment for all cancers.

To tackle radiotherapy waiting times, we are increasing the numbers of therapy radiographers in post and in training, making better use of existing staff, making unprecedented investment in new radiotherapy equipment, and streamlining the patient journey. Professor Mike Richards, the national cancer director, is also currently working with Royal Colleges, professional bodies, cancer networks and trusts through the National Radiotherapy Advisory Group, who are looking into radiotherapy provision and will be reporting in the summer on recommendations for long-term solutions for the future.

Salt Intake

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment her Department has made of the likely impact on the future incidence of (a) strokes and (b) heart disease in the UK of the revised salt reduction targets. [65272]

Caroline Flint: High salt intakes are associated with high blood pressure, which is one of a number of risk factors that contribute to the incidence of cardiovascular disease. There are also other risk factors which contribute to high blood pressure such as being overweight, physical inactivity, and excess alcohol consumption. It is difficult to accurately separate out the impact of salt reduction, from other factors, on the incidence of strokes and heart disease and my Department has not made an evaluation of this type.

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what estimate her Department has made of the achievability of lowering the average daily salt intake of children to a maximum of 3g for 4 to 6-year-olds and 5g for 7 to 10-year-olds; [65273]

(2) what assessment her Department has made of the impact of the revised salt reduction targets for various foods on the aim to reduce average salt intake in adults to a maximum of 6g per day. [65274]

Caroline Flint: Achievement of the Government's targets for reducing salt intakes of adults and children will be dependent upon a range of factors. In addition to the Food Standards Agency's (FSA) voluntary salt reduction targets, changes in consumption patterns and reductions in the amount of salt added to foods by consumers will have an impact. It is not possible to predict accurately exactly when the targets for dietary intakes will be met for adults and children.

The FSA's salt reduction targets, however, cover those foods that contribute most of the salt in the diet of both adults and children, and have been set at levels that are both challenging and will have a real impact on consumers' intakes. The FSA aims to monitor reductions in consumers' salt intakes using urinary monitoring and will review the salt reduction targets in 2008 to ensure continued progress towards the dietary intake targets.

Section 64 Funding

Mr. Vara: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Hornsey and Wood Green (Lynne Featherstone) of 13 March 2006, Official Report, column 2028W, on section 64 funding, when she expects the review to start; and how long she expects it to last. [63597]

Mr. Byrne: A review of departmental funding to the third sector will take place during 2006–07 but detailed plans are not yet in place. An announcement will be made when arrangements have been finalised. This will include information on consultation and how the third sector can get involved.

Social Exclusion

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what funding streams her Department plans to finance in 2006–07 to tackle social exclusion. [56086]

Mr. Byrne: Social exclusion is a multi-faceted problem. Many of the Department's funding streams will help to tackle the causes and consequences of social exclusion. For example, the weighted capitation formula, used to inform the 2006–08 revenue allocations to primary care trusts, takes account of need and some element of unmet need, and so targets funding towards disadvantaged areas across the country.

Suppliers (Bill Payments)

Miss Kirkbride: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the average time each trust hospital took to pay bills to outside suppliers in 2004–05. [62067]

Mr. Byrne: The Department does not currently collect specific information on the period of time national health service trusts take to pay suppliers.

However, NHS trusts are required to comply with the Confederation of British Industry's better payment practice code and have been given a target of paying 95 per cent. of undisputed invoices within contract terms or 30 days where no terms have been agreed.

In 2004–05, NHS trusts paid 83 per cent. of their bills within 30 days or contracted terms.

Tariffs

Mr. Kevan Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on direct access tariffs in the NHS. [65108]

Mr. Byrne: Direct access services are currently outside the scope of payment by results. Funding for services outside the scope of payment by results continues to be negotiated locally.

Temporary/Agency Staff

Kelvin Hopkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate she has made of the cost of employing temporary and agency staff in her Department in 2005–06. [36920]

Mr. Byrne: The Department does not collect information that would provide an analysis of temporary staff. To date in 2005–06, the total cost of agency staff employed directly on departmental administration work, where in-house resources were not available, is £6.489 million.

Wider Partnerships Initiative

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much revenue (a) her Department and its arm's length bodies and (b) the NHS have generated through the wider partnerships initiative. [57518]

Mr. Byrne: The information requested is not held centrally and can be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Worcestershire Royal Hospital

Sir Michael Spicer: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 2 February 2006, Official Report, c. 726W, on Worcestershire Royal Hospital, when the West Midlands South Strategic Health Authority will write to the hon. Member for west Worcestershire as indicated in the reply. [64896]

Ms. Rosie Winterton: West Midlands South Strategic Health Authority wrote to the hon. Member on 19 April 2006.

York Hospital

Hugh Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients were on the waiting list for elective admissions to York Hospital in March in each year since 1997. [64321]

Mr. Byrne: The information is shown in the following table.

Patients waiting for elective admission, all specialties, York Hospitals National Health Service Trust

Period	Total waiting list
March 1997	6,846
March 1998	8,445
March 1999	6,715
March 2000	6,477
March 2001	6,317
March 2002	6,354
March 2003	6,425

Hugh Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average waiting time was for patients waiting for elective admissions to York Hospital at the end of March in each year since 1997. [64322]

Mr. Byrne: The information is shown in the following table.

Patients waiting for elective admission, all specialties, York Hospitals National Health Service Trust—estimated average waiting time

Period	Median time waiting so far (weeks)
March 1997	12.0
March 1998	15.9

Written Answers to Questions

Tuesday 25 April 2006

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Accidents (Animals)

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will introduce legislation to make it a defence in law for owners whose horses and other animals are involved in accidents to show that they have taken reasonable steps to avoid such accidents; and if she will make a statement. [63776]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 18 April 2006]: The Animals Act 1971 currently has the effect of placing strict liability on the owner of animals that cause harm whatever the circumstances. This appears to be inconsistent with current liability law in other areas which allows for a general defence of reasonable care. The Government have acknowledged that there may be a case for an amendment to the Animals Act and expects to launch a consultation shortly on this matter.

Air Quality

Ms Diana R. Johnson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent assessment she has made of air quality standards in Hull, North constituency. [64097]

Mr. Bradshaw: Local authorities have a duty under Part IV of the Environment Act 1995 to review and assess the current, and likely future, air quality in their areas. Where local authorities consider that one or more of the nationally prescribed air quality objectives for each of the seven pollutants is unlikely to be met by the relevant deadline, they must declare an air quality management area (AQMA), covering the area where the problem is expected. These local authorities must then take action, along with other agencies and organisations, to work towards meeting the air quality objectives.

Kingston-upon-Hull city council submitted their last Updating and Screening Assessment (USA) in July 2003. The authority subsequently carried out a Detailed Assessment in respect of nitrogen dioxide, particles (PM10), and sulphur dioxide, which was submitted to my Department in May 2004. In light of the conclusions of the Detailed Assessment, Kingston declared an Air Quality Management Area (AQMA) in respect of nitrogen dioxide, in August 2005. Kingston is currently developing their air quality action plan, which will set out measures to work towards meeting the air quality objective. They have included measures within Hull city council's local transport plan, which should improve the capacity to deliver cleaner air within the AQMA.

The next round of review and assessments has now started and local authorities are asked to submit a new Updating and Screening Assessment by end of April 2006, which will be considered by my officials. My Department will be assessing Kingston-upon-Hull's report as part of this exercise.

Animal Welfare

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many (a) allegations have been reported, (b) investigations taken place and (c) prosecutions pursued under (i) the Protection of Badgers Act 1992, (ii) the Zoo Licensing Act 1981, (iii) the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981, (iv) the Pet Animals Act 1951, (v) the Wild Mammals Protection Act 1996 and (vi) the Deer Act 1991 in each year since 1996. [64284]

Mr. Bradshaw: Since 1996, no allegations have been reported, investigations conducted or prosecutions pursued by Defra under these pieces of legislation. The enforcement responsibility for these areas lies primarily with the police and local authorities.

Avian Influenza

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent assessment she has made of the (a) the potential for an outbreak of the H5N1 virus in the UK and (b) the potential impact of an outbreak on (i) the poultry industry and (ii) domestic poultry keepers. [63841]

Mr. Bradshaw: H5N1 avian influenza was confirmed in a sample from the partially decomposed body of a Whooper swan found on the causeway at Cellardyke, Fife, Scotland. The swan is the first case of H5N1 detected in a wild bird in the UK and our current hypothesis is that it originated outside Great Britain. Ongoing intensified surveillance across the UK has not identified any other positive live or dead wild bird. There is also no evidence that the virus is present in domestic poultry.

Poultry keepers within a 2,500 sq km wild bird risk area around the area where the swan was found have been required to house their birds. All bird keepers throughout the UK are encouraged to continue their efforts to maintain high levels of biosecurity and develop their plans to bring their birds indoors should that become necessary.

The implications of the Whooper swan finding have been discussed with ornithologists and a revised veterinary risk assessment has been published. It concludes that the current measures put in place throughout Scotland are adequate and proportionate at present. The situation will continue to be reviewed.

We are monitoring the market impact of avian flu closely. The European market is currently volatile, and the knock-on effects of significant downturns in some member states (notably Italy and France) are being felt domestically in terms of lower prices. So far, however, consumption of poultry products has not been significantly affected in the UK.

Cattle Exports

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what publicity her Department has undertaken to notify farmers of the regulations with which they must comply in order to export cattle; [63089]

(2) what discussions she has had with farming groups on the facilitation of the export of cattle to the EU once the ban is lifted; [63090]

(3) whether farmers will need a licence to export cattle to the EU; [63091]

(4) if she will make a statement on the regulations with which cattle farmers must comply in order to export cattle to the EU; [63092]

(5) what diseases cattle will need to be tested for prior to export to the EU. [63093]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 18 April 2006]: On 8 March 2006, the EU's Standing Committee on the Food Chain and Animal Health unanimously approved a Commission proposal to allow the UK to export:

cattle born or reared in the UK on or after 1 August 1996;

beef and beef products derived from such cattle slaughtered on or after 15 June 2005;

beef containing vertebral column, or products derived from vertebral column from cattle slaughtered on or after the date that the EU Regulation enters into force.

Such exports may take place on the same basis as other member states and will be subject to strict health and welfare requirements. We expect the EU Regulation to enter into force on 2 May and exports to be able to resume from 3 May.

In preparation for the lifting of the ban, Defra officials have held numerous meetings with key stakeholders from industry and animal welfare organisations to discuss the health and welfare requirements for exports. Defra has circulated to industry draft guidance on procedures for completing the necessary export health certification and route plans. The finalised versions of this guidance will be published shortly on Defra's website at <http://www.defra.gov.uk/animalh/int-trde/default.htm>

Requirements for export include testing for bovine tuberculosis in Great Britain when applicable, and when exporting to certain countries, for infectious bovine rhinotracheitis. Cattle from Northern Ireland must also be tested for brucellosis. In addition, cattle intended for export must be identified in accordance with EU law, with an official tag in each ear and a valid cattle passport.

All exports must comply with the conditions laid down in EU and domestic legislation relating to animal and animal products exports, the welfare of animals during transport, BSE and cattle identification.

Chewing Gum

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans she has to tackle chewing gum-related antisocial behaviour; and if she will make a statement. [63362]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Clean Neighbourhoods and Environment Act 2005 specifically addresses this type of antisocial behaviour. Chewing gum is clearly defined as litter under the Act, and all local authorities have the power to fine people caught dropping gum.

The Chewing Gum Action Group—which brings together chewing gum manufacturers, the Local Government Association, the Chartered Institution of Wastes Management, ENCAMS (who run the 'Keep Britain Tidy' campaign), Department for Education and Skills (DfES), the Improvement and Development Agency and Defra—recently announced funding for 15 local authorities across England to support campaigns aimed at helping them deal with the problem of gum litter.

The campaigns will use a mixture of advertising, alternative disposal and enforcement measures to reduce gum litter in these areas.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what representations she has received from private business regarding chewing gum-related antisocial behaviour; [63363]

(2) what representations she has received regarding chewing gum-related crime; and if she will make a statement. [63364]

Mr. Bradshaw: Private industry is represented on the Chewing Gum Action Group. The Department has also received a number of representations from private businesses regarding the production and marketing of chewing gum disposal solutions.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much less chewing gum there was on relevant streets at the end of the Chewing Gum Action Group campaign pilot period. [63996]

Mr. Bradshaw: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 25 January 2006, Official Report, column 211OW.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much private funding the Chewing Gum Action Group campaign pilots received; and how much is estimated to be available in the future. [63997]

Mr. Bradshaw: The chewing gum pilot campaigns received £378,873 of private funding. An additional £600,000 of private funding will be available to help support 15 further campaigns, beginning in May.

Climate Change

Stephen Hesford: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the impact of the climate change levy on the environment; and if she will make a statement. [64315]

John Healey: I have been asked to reply.

The climate change levy (CCL) is playing a crucial role in enabling the UK to meet its Kyoto Protocol target.

An independent evaluation by Cambridge Econometrics, commissioned by HM Revenue and Customs and published alongside Budget 2005, has examined the effect of the levy since its announcement in Budget 1999 and introduction in April 2001. It concluded that the levy could deliver cumulative savings to 2005 of 16.5 million tonnes of carbon (MtC) and by 2010, annual carbon savings of over 3.5 MtC a year—well above the 2 MtC estimated at the time of its introduction.

Correspondence

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she will reply to the letter of 7 March 2006 from the hon. Member for Walsall, North regarding a constituent. [64740]

Jim Knight [holding answer 24 April 2006]: I apologise for the delay in replying to the hon. Member's letter. A response was issued on 24 April.

Emissions

Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) pursuant to the answer of 21 October 2004, Official Report, column 824W, on emission levels, whether local authorities are obliged to include conditions which represent the best available techniques when issuing a permit under the Pollution Prevention and Control Act 1999; [64081]

(2) what steps her Department intends to take to ensure compliance with Integrated Pollution Prevention and Control SG2 for new glass-making facilities. [64154]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Pollution Prevention and Control Regulations require local authorities, in deciding what conditions to include in a permit, to take account of various principles, including that installations "should be operated in such a way that all appropriate preventive measures are taken against pollution, in particular through application of the best available techniques". It is for local authorities to decide on the facts of each individual case, having regard to any guidance issued to them by the Secretary of State, what constitutes the best available techniques in that case.

Statutory guidance note SG2 sets out the Secretary of State's views on what constitute the best available techniques for the generality of glass manufacturing activities. Regulators must have regard to any guidance issued by the Secretary of State. It does not specify the standards that must be included in individual permits.

Exercise Hawthorn

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when the results from Exercise Hawthorn will be made known. [64866]

Mr. Bradshaw: Exercise Hawthorn was scheduled to take place between 5 and 6 April. As soon as we confirmed that highly pathogenic H5 virus had been discovered in a dead swan in Cellerdyke, Scotland on the afternoon of 5 April, the exercise was brought to an end to ensure that we could bring all our resources to bear on this situation.

Although we are disappointed that the exercise could not be concluded, useful results have been gathered, and we will publish these in the summer.

Flooding

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs pursuant to the answer of 20 March 2006 to Question 61242, on flood defences, whether she has discussed these funding levels with the Treasury. [62714]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 18 April 2006]: Funding levels for flood risk management are set by Defra following Treasury decision in the 2004 Spending Review on the overall spending limits for the Department for 2005–06 to 2007–08. An effective flood risk management service is a priority for Defra and funding for this was discussed with Treasury during the 2004 Review. There has been no specific discussion since on the level of flood spend.

The level of spending on flood risk management will be considered in the context of the comprehensive spending review in 2007 as will the level of the Department's spend across all areas.

Fly-tipping

Ms Diana R. Johnson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many incidents of fly-tipping were reported in (a) Hull North constituency and (b) Kingston-upon-Hull in each year since 1997; how many prosecutions were made as a result; and if she will make a statement. [64096]

Mr. Bradshaw: Defra has worked with the Environment Agency to establish Flycapture, the national database of fly-tipping incidents, which has been operational since April 2004. No national data were previously available on illegal waste disposal or fly-tipping. Flycapture collects data at local authority level only.

The data are probably an underestimate and will increase as authorities get better at collecting and reporting the data.

Kingston-upon-Hull city council reported 4,929 incidents of fly-tipping between June 2004 and March 2005 (an average of 493 incidents a month) and 7,199 between April 2005 and February 2006 (an average of 655 a month). The Environment Agency investigated five incidents between June 2004 and March 2005 in Kingston-upon-Hull.

The data submitted for prosecutions are incomplete, but show that Kingston-upon-Hull city council took forward five prosecutions in 2004–05 and a further 16 in 2005–06.

GM Crops/Food

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs which EU states are in favour of co-existence between GM and non-GM crops; and what clarification of the position was achieved at the recent Vienna Conference. [65058]

Mr. Morley: It is generally recognised that if GM crops are to be grown commercially then coexistence measures will be needed. In Article 26a of Directive 2001/18/EC member states agreed that the Commission should develop guidelines on coexistence. However, member states have different views as to what precise form coexistence measures should take.

The European Commission has recently published a report on the implementation of national coexistence measures and this is available at www.europa.eu.int/comm/agriculture/coexistence/com104_en.pdf.

The concluding remarks from the recent EU conference in Vienna are at http://europa.eu.int/comm/agriculture/events/vienna2006/concl_en.pdf.

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions she has had with the European Commission following its proposals to allow organic food to include up to 0.9 per cent. GM. [62494]

Mr. Bradshaw: A Council Working Group to discuss the EC proposal for a Council regulation on organic production and labelling of organic products to replace the current Regulation 2092/91 has met five times and discussions are continuing.

Horseracing

Kerry McCarthy: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether she has plans to review the regulation of the horseracing industry, with particular reference to the avoidance of deaths of horses on race days. [63952]

Mr. Bradshaw: Regulation of the horseracing industry is being transferred from the Jockey Club to the Horseracing Regulatory Authority (HRA). The Department welcomes the transfer and views it as a vital step towards the modernisation of the sport. We are confident that the HRA will work closely with the industry to continually assess and improve measures to protect racehorses from harm.

The Protection of Animals Act 1911 already protects the welfare of racehorses. Under this Act it is an offence to ill treat or cause any unnecessary suffering to any domestic or captive animal. The maximum penalty is a fine of £5,000 or six months' imprisonment, or both.

The Animal Welfare Bill will extend these powers by introducing a duty of care for those who are responsible for animals. This will allow action to be taken, even if the animal is not currently suffering. Under the Bill, we have proposed that the maximum penalty for an offence of cruelty will be raised to a fine of up to £20,000 or imprisonment for 51 weeks, or both.

Integrated Pollution Prevention and Control Regime

Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what advice and support her Department provides to local authorities dealing with applications under the Integrated Pollution Prevention and Control regime; [64151]

(2) whether her Department has mechanisms in place to ensure consistency in enforcement of the Integrated Pollution Prevention and Control regime across local authorities. [64153]

Mr. Bradshaw: Defra provides a range of support to local authorities in discharging their responsibilities under the Pollution Prevention and Control Regulations. These include the publication of statutory guidance, published advice on procedures and interpretations, and technical and other support in response to queries. All relevant written material, which is aimed at maximising consistency of local authority practice and assisting with effective and efficient discharge of their functions under this legislation, can be found on the Defra website at http://www.defra.gov.uk/environment/ppc. It is necessary for the Department to exercise caution in advising on individual cases, because to do so might prejudice the decision on any appeal that might come before the Secretary of State.

Landfill

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what her Department's estimate is of the number of cubic metres of landfill required for one tonne of waste. [63439]

Mr. Bradshaw: It would depend on the density of the waste. If my right hon. Friend would like to write to me with more details I will provide a fuller answer.

Recycling

Mr. Wills: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what (a) steps her Department has taken and (b) targets the Department has established to encourage Swindon borough council to recycle (i) domestic waste, (ii) commercial waste and (iii) plastic; and what percentage of waste was recycled in the Borough over the last five years. [61004]

Mr. Bradshaw: The information requested is as follows.

Domestic Waste

There are two targets for local authorities to achieve in respect of domestic waste.

The first is to meet the challenging national target set by the EU Landfill Directive.

By 2010 to reduce biodegradable municipal waste land filled to 75 per cent. of that produced in 1995

By 2013 to reduce biodegradable municipal waste landfilled to 50 per cent. of that produced in 1995

By 2020 to reduce biodegradable municipal waste landfilled to 35 per cent. of that produced in 1995.

This target is being delivered through a combination of measures/drivers designed to assist and encourage local authorities. In particular the Government have established the Waste Implementation Programme (WIP) with an aim of driving waste management solutions up the waste hierarchy, improving the sustainability of waste management. WIP delivers this through the following nine work-streams:

1. Local Authority Support Unit
2. Local Authority Funding
3. Waste Minimisation (managed by WRAP [1])
4. Efficiency
5. Education (managed by WRAP)
6. Kerbside recycling (managed by WRAP)
7. Research

8. Data

9. New Technologies

[1] WRAP—Waste Resource Action Programme

Recycling is towards the top of the waste hierarchy, together with minimisation and reuse, and each of the work-streams includes effort towards these areas.

Local authorities are responsible for meeting the EU targets and contribute individually to the overall target through compliance with the Local Authority Trading Scheme (LATS) scheme. This provides landfill allowance allocations for each authority and measures their performance against these targets. The scheme allows authorities to trade their allowances (buying, selling, or borrowing from future years) with penalties applied to those who fail to meet the scheme requirements.

The second target is the Defra PSA6 target to:

Enable at least 25 per cent. of household waste to be recycled or composted by 2005–06, with further improvements by 2008.

Although looking more widely than biodegradable waste this target focuses on household—rather than municipal—waste.

WIP monitors and assists with the delivery of this target in a number of ways but in particular through programmes of work delivered through WRAP, and the work undertaken by the Local Authority Support Unit programme.

Commercial Waste

The current targets, and therefore WIP remit, does not extend to commercial waste. Current policy is for local authorities to manage commercial waste through the usual commercial processes.

Plastics

The Biodegradeable municipal remit of WIP does not extend plastics, however WRAP are using other Defra funding to engage with industry to develop recycling markets.

Recycling/Composting Performance for Swindon borough council

The Recycling/Composting Performance for the last five years for Swindon borough council is outlined in the following table:

	BVPI 82a+b (recycling+composting)
2004–05	19.55
2003–04	15.4
2002–03	14
2001–02	13

Jessica Morden: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate she has made of the average cost to local authorities of recycling a tonne of kerbside waste. [61298]

Mr. Bradshaw: DEFRA does not gather information on the cost of recycling kerbside waste. The cost of recycling will vary depending on a number of factors, including the collection method used by a local authority, the materials collected and the market for recycled materials.

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much funding Lancashire county council has received to support recyling in each year since 1997. [63197]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 18 April 2006]: The main source of funding for local authorities' waste management services is the Environmental, Protective and Cultural Services (EPCS) block of annual Government grant. It is for local authorities to decide what proportion of the block is invested in waste management services, including recycling. Funding is also provided from DEFRA and a variety of other sources to support sustainable waste management at a local level, including through partnerships with other local authorities. The amounts allocated to Lancashire county council are set out in the table.

[1] As part of a partnership with other local authorities.

Mr. Iain Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what steps her Department is taking to increase the proportion of waste recycled by business; [63276]

(2) what estimate she has made of the proportion of waste recycled by business in the last 12 months. [63284]

Mr. Bradshaw: Most recent data from the Environment Agency (2002–03) indicate that 44 per cent. of waste produced by business in England and Wales was recycled. This level of recycling exceeds what is being achieved for household waste, and is up from 37.5 per cent. in 1998–89.

The Government have identified a need for further action on recycling by businesses and producer responsibility makes an important contribution to increasing recycling. The policy is aimed at ensuring that businesses take responsibility for the environmental impact of products that they place on the market, particularly once they become waste. Recent waste legislation, such as that implementing EC directives on packaging and end-of-life vehicles, places various requirements on producers, including recovery and recycling targets.

Government funding from the Business Resource Efficiency and Waste (BREW) Programme is another significant element of the Government programme to increase recycling by businesses, by funding resource efficiency and waste minimisation programmes. Various BREW delivery bodies are charged with returning £284 million, from additional landfill tax receipts, to business over three years.

Initiatives already under way to encourage recycling by businesses, under BREW and other programmes, include:

work by the Waste and Resources Action Programme (WRAP), to improve the range and quality of recycled products and to increase the demand for them;

a WRAP-led pilot of sector-specific help for small businesses. Following this pilot, DEFRA will consider how recycling services for small businesses might best be developed; work by Envirowise to provide resource efficiency advice to businesses;

the DTI Technology Programme, which facilitates research and development into resource efficiency, including in the area of waste management; and the Environment Agency's pilot of an online internet service for small businesses: 'What do I do with my waste?'. The pilot is working as an extension to the Agency's existing guidance service for small and medium sized enterprises ('NetRegs').

The Government are currently reviewing its Waste Strategy for England. On 14 February 2006, DEFRA issued a consultation document on the review which suggested various proposals to increase business waste recycling and recovery. The proposals include a wider role for local authorities in fostering better recycling services for small businesses, better integrating municipal and business waste management and continuing to develop markets for recycled materials. The consultation period ends on 9 May. Following the consultation, DEFRA will issue a revised strategy which will take account of comments received from stakeholders.

The Government do not have an estimate of the proportion of waste recycled by business in the last 12 months. However, the Environment Agency estimates that 53 per cent. of all business waste regulated under the Pollution Prevention and Control (PPC) regime was recycled or re-used in 2004. DEFRA is developing a data strategy to provide future data on waste arisings and recycling.

Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what Government policy is on the recycling of batteries; [63518]

(2) what plans she has to encourage companies to recycle the batteries which they (a) produce and (b) sell, with particular reference to batteries of three kilos or more. [63521]

Mr. Bradshaw: There is currently no legislative requirement to recycle spent batteries. However, the Government support the development of the proposed EU Batteries Directive as its objectives are consistent with those in the Government's Waste Strategy and Sustainable Development Strategy. Both aim to reduce the quantity of hazardous and non hazardous waste batteries going to landfill and increase the recovery of waste materials.

The proposed directive, which might be expected to come into force in the UK in 2008, sets targets for the collection and recycling of all waste batteries. We expect that producers of batteries will have collection and recycling obligations to meet. The exact form these may take will not be decided until the directive has been finalised and we have completed formal domestic consultation with all parties concerned. It is expected that producers will need to work closely with waste management companies and local authorities, among others, in order to collect and recycle waste batteries in line with the likely obligations under the directive.

Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will list the local authorities which have provision for battery recycling; and how many battery recycling schemes there are in England. [63519]

Mr. Bradshaw: DEFRA has commissioned the Waste and Resources Action Programme (WRAP) to work with 12 partner organisations in 13 local authority areas across the UK to trial the kerbside collection of waste household batteries. The following local authorities and organisations are taking part in the scheme in England:

Barnsley—Rabbit Recycling (North Barnsley) Ltd
Calderdale—Kerbside Calderdale
East Devon—East Devon District Council
Eastleigh—Eastleigh Borough Council
Harlow—Environmental Conservation Co-operative Ltd (ECCO)
Liverpool—Energywise Recycling
Stockton on Tees—Stockton on Tees Borough Council
Trafford—EMERGE Recycling

The trial is likely to be extended in the future.

A number of local authorities currently provide collection facilities for spent batteries. These include:

Brighton and Hove Council
Bristol City Council;
Cambridgeshire County Council;
Ceredigion Council;
Cheshire County Council;
Gloucestershire County Council;
Hampshire County Council;
Kingston upon Hull Council;
Lancashire County Council;
Newport City Council;
Powys County Council;
Sheffield City Council;

Suffolk County Council
Surrey County Council;
The London Borough of Barnet;
The London Borough of Brent
The London Borough of Sutton
The London Borough of Waltham Forest; and West Sussex County Council.

In addition, a number of schools have become involved in the collection of spent portable batteries in Lancashire.

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many local authorities in England have made recycling compulsory. [63883]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Department does not hold the information requested. It is up to each local authority to decide how to go about meeting the challenging recycling targets in their local area.

Compulsory recycling will not be suitable for all local authorities, but Defra will watch those that try such schemes with interest. We are continuing to investigate options for influencing householder behaviour, with particular emphasis on positive incentives to help authorities encourage householders to reduce, re-use and recycle their waste.

Ms Diana R. Johnson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps she is taking to encourage local authorities to recycle plastic. [64098]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Government have set challenging household waste recycling targets for local authorities and is proposing to increase them as part of the current Waste Strategy Review consultation. 60 per cent. of English local authorities provided plastic collection facilities in 2004. The Waste and Resources Action Programme (WRAP) is supporting the efforts of local authorities by increasing domestic plastic recycling capacity and developing markets for recycled plastic products. WRAP'S ROTATE programme also gives local authorities free advice on collection programmes and local communications and awareness programmes. This will include advice on plastics recycling facilities if applicable.

Mr. Wills: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many recycling points there are per 1,000 population in (a) Swindon borough council area and (b) England. [64279]

Mr. Bradshaw: Requested figures, based on 2003–04 DEFRA Municipal Waste Management Survey and 2003 mid-year population estimates, are shown in the following table:

	Recycling points per 1,000 population
Swindon Borough Council	0.24
England	0.41

Note:
Recycling points are civic amenity and recycling sites.

Research Contracts

Mark Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will list the research contracts granted by her Department to research facilities in Wales in each of the last 20 years. [63960]

Mr. Bradshaw: A full response to this question could be made only at disproportionate cost. DEFRA and its predecessor Departments have substantial research programmes. DEFRA currently spends around £160 million annually on research and at any one time has in the order of 1,500 ongoing projects with a large number of contractors.

However, DEFRA proactively publishes large amounts of data on its R and D projects through its website http://www2.defra.gov.uk/research/project_data/Default.asp This includes information on "live" projects and those completed over recent years. It is also possible to access separate information on research contractors used through this site.

Ring Rot

Mr. Roger Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will list the (a) correspondence and (b) meetings the Department has had with representatives from the Royal Netherlands embassy in connection with the outbreak of ring rot of potatoes in 2003 in Wales. [63183]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 18 April 2006]: A list of correspondence between the Department and representatives from the Royal Netherlands embassy, in connection with the outbreak of potato ring rot in Wales in 2003, is as follows. This includes some correspondence associated with subsequent outbreaks. There have been no meetings between the Department and the Royal Netherlands embassy to discuss this issue.

Single Payment Scheme

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will take steps to ensure farmers threatened with bankruptcy proceedings by British banks due to delays with Single Farm Payments are offered a guarantee from the Government to the bank up to the level of the sums owing together with interest; and if she will make a statement. [65020]

Jim Knight [holding answer 24 April 2006]: My noble Friend Lord Bach met the British Bankers' Association and other representatives of the major lending banks on 30 March to discuss the situation of farmers awaiting payment under the Single Payment Scheme. The banks re-emphasised on that occasion that > "no viable business is being refused additional financial support and, as a result, no viable businesses are failing because of uncertainty about the payments timetable".

I am sure that farmers who have not yet received a payment will have joined the leaders of the NFU, CLA and TFA in welcoming the announcement made by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State on 19 April 2006, Official Report, column13WS, that partial payments will be made to them as soon as it is operationally possible to do so.

Southern Water

Derek Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions she has had with Southern Water on the continuing leakage from the two reservoirs at Halfway on the Isle of Sheppey. [65777]

Mr. Morley: Defra has had no discussions with Southern Water concerning leakage from the two reservoirs at Halfway on the Isle of Sheppey.

However, I understand that the Consumer Council for Water (CCW) has been contacted about this issue. CCW advised those concerned to contact Southern Water directly, who has a duty to maintain reservoirs under their ownership. Southern Water responded directly to these individuals' concerns.

Waste

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when her Department will publish guidance on the definition of waste; and if she will make a statement. [64048]

Mr. Bradshaw: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 18 April 2006, Official Report, column 35W.

Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps she is taking to raise awareness for waste disposal purposes of hidden batteries which are inbuilt in products. [63520]

Mr. Bradshaw: Batteries that are inbuilt into products will have to be removed under the requirements of the Waste Electrical and Electronic Equipment (WEEE) Directive. The directive requires the selective treatment of WEEE delivered to authorised treatment facilities, and one of the treatments specified is the removal of batteries. Defra has prepared draft WEEE permitting regulations and guidance. We will introduce the regulations before the introduction of the producer responsibility requirements of the DTI WEEE regulations. The DTI expects to consult on draft WEEE regulations later this spring.

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs for what reasons Herefordshire Council has not received funding from the Waste Minimisation and Recycling Fund; and if she will make a statement. [64601]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Waste Minimisation and Recycling Fund was challenge based, and in each of the three bidding rounds applications were received from a large number of local authorities. Defra considered in full each application against set criteria agreed with an expert advisory panel, comprising key representatives from across the industry.

The panel separately assessed each application and Defra officials took into account their recommendations before final decisions were taken by the Minister of State.

Support was given to the best local authority projects designed to either minimise the amount of household waste generated, or those that aimed to provide more new or improved facilities for re-use and recycling and composting.

Herefordshire council submitted a bid in round 2 of the Fund (2003–04) that was unsuccessful. However, the council did not submit a bid in either the first or third rounds.

The Government's Waste Implementation Programme (WIP) provides a range of support, analysis and assessment work to compliment the funding and help local authorities deliver the best waste minimisation and recycling services.

Herefordshire council has received funding for a number of different projects from Defra, which are detailed in the following table:

Funding type	Start date	End date	Amount (£)
Waste Performance and Efficiency Grant	1 April 2005	31 March 2006	132,415
Household Incentives	1 April 2005	31 March 2006	61,800
Household Incentives	1 April 2005	31 March 2006	20,583

In addition, in December 2005, Defra wrote to all local authorities regarding the Waste Performance and Efficiency Grant (WPEG). This is a 3-year targeted grant totalling £260 million over 3 years, which is replacing the Waste Minimisation and Recycling Fund from 2006.

Every English local authority with waste management responsibilities received a portion of the £40 million allocation in 2005–06. The allocations for the next two years were announced at the end of 2005.

Under this grant, Herefordshire Council is set to receive £348,944.18 in 2006–07 and £365,548.83 in 2007–08. Further information, and a full list of allocations to local authorities is available on the Defra website at the following address: http://www.defra.gov.uk/Environment/waste/localauth/funding/index.htm.

Wild Birds

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans she has made for a ban on the import of captive wild birds. [64868]

Mr. Bradshaw: The UK cannot make a decision to ban imports of wild birds unilaterally. It is for the European Commission to consider, in conjunction with the views or representations of all European Union (EU) member states.

A temporary ban on the import of captive wild birds into the EU from third countries is currently in place until 31 May 2006. The Government are currently seeking views from interested parties on issues relating to this ban. Any representations to the Commission about extending it will be made after thorough consideration of any comments received.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether seizures of wild birds illegally imported into the UK have increased since the introduction of the EU ban on the import of live captive birds. [64975]

Mr. Bradshaw: There is no evidence to suggest that there has been an increase in seizures of wild birds illegally imported into the UK since the introduction of the EU ban.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether the Government will be making representations for an extension of the EU ban on the import of live captive birds beyond 31 May. [64976]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Government are currently seeking views from interested parties on issues relating to the ban. Any representations to the European Commission about extending the ban will be made after thorough consideration of any comments we receive.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Bank Accounts

Mr. Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what research the Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on the introduction of a universal service obligation guaranteeing citizens access to a basic bank account; and if he will make a statement. [64393]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: I have been asked to reply.

In December 2004, the banks and the Government agreed to work towards the shared goal of halving the number of adults in households with no bank account of any kind and of having made significant progress in that direction within two years. The Financial Inclusion Taskforce has been asked to monitor progress toward this goal and its recent report concluded that steady progress had been made.

Developments will be reviewed at the end of the two year period to see whether further initiatives are needed.

China

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the level of UK trade with China. [61790]

Ian Pearson [holding answer 30 March 2006]: UK Trade with China is growing strongly. Chinese figures for the first 11 months of 2005 shows that UK exports grew by 15 per cent.—higher than any of our major European competitors (Germany 1 per cent., Italy 9 per cent.). Chinese exports of goods to the UK totalled £12.835 billion in 2005.

Ensuring that UK business is best placed to take advantage of the new opportunities that are becoming available as China's economy develops is a key priority for this Government. There are currently a number of government-to-government dialogues taking place between China and the UK, namely, the Chancellor's Asia Task Force, the China Task Force and the UK-China Joint Economic Trade Commission (JETC) which aim to tackle barriers to trade and promote two-way trade and investment.

The UK is one of the largest investors in China (and the largest EU investor in China and Hong Kong combined) with a total of 4,834 British invested projects as of November 2005.

GMOs

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has received (a) supporting the free trade of genetically modified organisms (GMOs) and (b) requesting that markets remain free of GMOs; and if he will make a statement. [63663]

Ian Pearson: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry has received (a) no recent representations supporting the free trade of genetically modified organisms and (b) a considerable volume of correspondence as part of a campaign calling for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry to support the right of European countries to ban genetically modified food and crops and call for disputes over environmental, social and health issues to be dealt with by alternative institutions to the World Trade Organisation.

Home Computing Initiative Scheme

Jo Swinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many individuals have participated in the Home Computing Initiative Scheme in each year since 1999, broken down by region. [64165]

Alun Michael [holding answer 18 April 2006]: I am unable to provide a statistical breakdown of how many Individuals have participated in the Home Computing Initiative Scheme in each year since 1999 or by region. This information is not available.

A recent estimation provided by the HCI Alliance (BT, Intel and Microsoft) indicates that over 500,000 units have been loaned under the Home Computer Initiative Scheme since 1999.

Notaries Public

Mr. Howard: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will seek an amendment of European regulations to ensure that British notaries public are allowed to work in all EU member states; and if he will make a statement. [63984]

Ian Pearson: I refer the right hon. and learned Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Christchurch (Mr. Chope) in response to a similar question, on 21 March 2006, Official Report, column 302W.

The Government continue to support the inclusion of notary services within the European Commission's proposal for a directive on services in the internal market.

South West Regional Development Agency Offices

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the cost was of running the South West of England Regional Development Agency offices in Australia, China, Japan and North America in each of the last five years; and what the budget is for these offices for the 2006–07 financial year. [64899]

Alun Michael: The South West of England Regional Development Agency has provided the information on the cost of overseas offices as follows:

	Australia	China	Japan	North America	Total
2001–02	0	0	180,846	451,873	632,719
2002–03	0	0	264,938	448,698	713,635
2003–04	0	0	410,732	409,939	820,671
2004–05	67,000	50,000	339,530	145,470	601,999
2005–06	70,000	82,000	398,405	122,187	672,592
2006–07	70,000	80,000	400,000	125,000	675,000

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the work of the overseas offices of the South West Regional Development Agency in Australia, China, Japan and North America. [64901]

Alun Michael: These offices are funded by the South West of England Regional Development Agency in support of its statutory purposes under the Regional Development Agencies Act 1998, subject to financial arrangements and reporting requirements also set out in the Act.

The Agency assesses its overseas teams principally in terms of their contribution to foreign direct investment in the South West of England economy, which for 2005–06 was:

Country	Number of projects	New/safeguarded jobs
USA	7	over 360 new jobs and over 800 jobs safeguarded
Japan	6	over 90 new jobs and over 540 jobs safeguarded
Australia	5	35 new jobs and 15 jobs safeguarded

The Chinese economy is growing at almost 10 per cent. per annum and there is a recognition that the UK lags behind US, Japan and Germany in terms of identifying and exploiting opportunities for investment, trade and collaboration between academic institutions.

The China office aims to seek investment opportunities as its economy evolves from being predominantly a destination for foreign direct investment into an overseas investor itself. It has a role developing partnership opportunities and collaboration on research and development and teaching in support of regional universities. It also works to support UK Trade and Investment to ensure that trade opportunities for South West of England from this rapidly developing market are encouraged and supported.

The Agency plans an independent review of its overseas teams during this financial year. The review will inform the Agency before it commits to any funding beyond March 2007 and will explore the direct and indirect benefits that the overseas offices provide to attracting and retaining investment in the South West region.

Westinghouse Electric Co.

Mr. Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the progress of the sale of Westinghouse Electric Co. to Toshiba Corporation; and when he expects the sale to be completed. [63804]

Barry Gardiner [holding answer 18 April 2006]: The sale of Westinghouse to Toshiba is proceeding smoothly. The parties are working to complete the transaction speedily with timing still dependent on obtaining the necessary regulatory clearances (which began last week with the US anti-trust and CFIUS filings). We currently still expect completion of the sale by end September 2006.

HOUSE OF COMMONS COMMISSION

Parliamentary Network

Mr. Drew: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission on how many occasions the parliamentary network has been inaccessible from (a) the parliamentary estate and (b) remote locations in the last 12 months; and what plans the Commission has to ensure service improvements. [64962]

Nick Harvey: During 2005 there were eight occasions when the Parliamentary Network was not accessible from within Parliament, five occasions when it was not accessible from remote locations using the VPN (virtual private network), and eight occasions when it was not accessible from either location. Most were instances of planned maintenance for which users of the network are normally given seven days' notice, and which is normally undertaken either at weekends or before 9am and after 7pm on weekdays. Over the year overall network availability, excluding planned maintenance, was 99.65 per cent. and including planned maintenance was 98.59 per cent.

Since late January 2006 the performance of the VPN remote access service has deteriorated. The Parliamentary ICT service is, as a matter of priority, working to identify the root cause of slow running experienced on occasions by many users. In the medium to longer term the Parliamentary ICT service has begun a fundamental re-assessment of the technologies used and services offered to remote users. A key objective of this work is to provide more assured access and performance than can be guaranteed at present.

TRANSPORT

Air Quality (Fines)

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many (a) cars and (b) ministerial cars have been fined for leaving their engine running unnecessarily under the air quality management areas since this provision came into effect; and if he will make a statement. [65854]

Derek Twigg: No fines for breaking local air quality management regulations have been issued to the Government Car and Despatch Agency for its ministerial cars or any other vehicles it operates.

Aviation White Paper

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether the planned timetable for the publication of the review of the Aviation White Paper will be affected by the postponement of the consultation on railway alternation at Heathrow airport. [64865]

Derek Twigg: In the Air Transport White Paper, we said that by the end of 2006 we would report progress generally on the White Paper policies and proposals. There are no plans to change this timetable in view of the postponement of the consultation on mixed mode at Heathrow airport.

Blackpool Tramway

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether it is his policy to fund the renewal proposals for the Blackpool tramway. [58915]

Derek Twigg: Our policy is to support tram schemes, where they are the right solution, and where they represent value for money. In July 2004, the Department rejected a bid to convert the Blackpool system to a modern light rail system, because the scheme did not represent value for money. We asked the promoters to re-examine lower cost alternatives.

Last year, Blackpool borough council and Lancashire county council submitted a business case to the Department for upgrading the Blackpool tramway. We are considering the proposals based on value for money, including the wider benefits, affordability and region advice.

Bridge Construction (A27 Beddingham)

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects construction to begin on a bridge to replace the level crossing at Beddingham on the A27. [65548]

Dr. Ladyman: A decision on the Inspector's Report following last year's public inquiry is the next stage in the statutory processes of this scheme. The earliest date construction could start of the A27 Southerham to Beddingham improvement, which includes a bridge to replace the Beddingham level crossing, is in late summer this year. This is subject to a favourable decision, completion of statutory procedures, and the availability of funds.

Contracts (Voluntary Sector)

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many contracts are let by his Department to voluntary sector organisations; how many of those are let on an annual basis; and how many of those had received finalised contracts for 2006–07 by 31 March. [63214]

Derek Twigg: This information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

The Department provides local authorities with financial support for the provision of transport services but it is at their discretion how much of this goes to the voluntary and community sector.

Disability Access

Mr. Khan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how the implementation of the voluntary code of practice on disability access on aeroplanes and ships is being monitored by his Department. [64470]

Derek Twigg: The Department for Transport, in conjunction with the Disabled Persons Transport Advisory Committee, has commissioned research projects to monitor both sectors' compliance with the voluntary codes. These projects are due to report shortly.

We are committed to legislation if the codes prove ineffective. The provisions in the Disability Discrimination Act 2005 enable us to do this without further primary legislation.

Disabled Access

Mr. Khan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to encourage train operating companies to create disabled access facilities at railway stations. [64482]

Derek Twigg: I refer my hon. Friend to the Written Statement to the House on the Railways for All Strategy on 23 March 2006, Official Report, columns 39–40WS.

Grievance Procedures

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many complaints of (a) bullying and (b) sexual harassment have been investigated in his Department in each of the last three years; and how many complaints have been upheld. [63549]

Derek Twigg: There has been a total of 33 complaints of bullying across the Department and its Executive Agencies over the past three years, nine of which have been upheld, and five of which are ongoing. There have been six complaints of sexual harassment, four of which have been upheld. Owing to the low number of cases, and the need to maintain confidentiality, it is not possible to break these figures down further.

These figures include the Government Car and Despatch Agency throughout the period, even although it only became part of the Department for Transport in November 2005. They exclude the Highways Agency, who have not to date recorded this information centrally, although they will do so from 1 April 2006.

The Department's Staff Handbook contains guidance on procedures to be followed in cases of bullying and harassment, and this was supplemented by a Diversity Briefing Note that was published by the Department's Equality and Diversity Unit in June 2005.

The Department has a network of Harassment Contact Officers, who are able to investigate complaints in a confidential manner. We have also run events covering the issues of Bullying and Sexual Harassment as part of our Valuing Diversity series of events in DfT (Central), and the agencies have also included this aspect into their diversity training.

Homeland Security

Patrick Mercer: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport pursuant to the answer of 28 March 2006, Official Report, column 855W, on homeland security, what the (a) lessons learnt and (b) improvements made were from the Merseyrail exercises for emergency preparedness in January 2006. [63885]

Derek Twigg: It is not appropriate to discuss the detail of any exercises undertaken or security arrangements in place.

Railways

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to reopen the Sheffield Woodhead to Manchester railway line to freight traffic; what timescale he envisages for making a decision; and if he will make a statement. [65516]

Derek Twigg: We are aware of private sector initiatives to reopen the line but no formal proposal has been put to the Department.

Mrs. James: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when (a) he and (b) his officials last met Arriva Trains Wales to discuss (i) capacity and service provision on the South Wales mainline, (ii) improving connecting services west of Cardiff, (iii) overcrowding on trains and (iv) improvements to station facilities and security. [60824]

Derek Twigg: Ministers meet representatives from the train operating companies from time to time and a wide range of issues are discussed.

There is no specific obligation, within the ATW Franchise Agreement, to enhance station facilities although there is an obligation to enhance security provisions at car parks to railway stations along this route.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he next plans to carry out a (a) national and (b) regional survey of railway station usage. [62456]

Derek Twigg: The Department for Transport has been collecting usage data from all stations across Great Britain as part of the National Rail Travel Survey. Results from this survey should be available in autumn 2006, and will build both a national and regional picture of rail travel and station usage.

Stephen Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Meriden of 7 March 2006, Official Report, column 1280W, on railways, what the levels of overcrowding in peak hours were on train lines on each (a) line and (b) franchise in each year since 1996–97, broken down by passenger transport executive area. [63976]

Derek Twigg: Figures for Passengers in Excess of Capacity (PIXC), a measure which applies to weekday commuter trains arriving in London between 07:00 and 09:59 and those departing London between 16:00 and 18:59 for the train operators, are available in the Libraries of the House.

The PIXC measure does not apply to other services and the additional information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the implications for direct railway services between Leeds and London of the decision to start direct railway services between Sunderland and London; and if he will make a statement. [65517]

Derek Twigg: An assessment of the decision is being carried out by Network Rail on direction from the Office of Rail Regulation. It is expected to be completed by June.

Road Accidents (Essex)

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many people were (a) killed and (b) injured in road accidents in Essex between 1995 and the latest available date. [64624]

Dr. Ladyman: 832 people were killed and 70,816 were seriously and slightly injured in personal injury road accidents in Essex (excluding the unitary authorities of Southend-on-Sea and Thurrock) between the years 1995 and 2004 (the latest for which figures are available).

School Run

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate the Department has made of the total number of miles driven to take children to and from school over the last five years. [65990]

Dr. Ladyman: Data from the National Travel Survey showing the number of miles travelled by car drivers for the purpose of escorting others to education are given in the following table. Data are provided on a single-year basis to 2002. Prior to this, the NTS sample was too small to give reliable single-year estimates. Data have therefore been presented for 1999–2001 as a three-year average.

Million

	Total mileage
1999–2001 average	3,940
2002	3,802
2003	3,947
2004	4,422

Speeding (Motorcyclists)

Lembit Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps he (a) is taking and (b) plans to take to reduce the chances of motorcyclists being charged for speeding on the basis of inaccurate evidence; and if he will make a statement. [65856]

Dr. Ladyman: Evidence of speeding for possible use in court must be provided by equipment that has been type-approved by the Home Secretary. No equipment receives type approval unless it has successfully passed rigorous and comprehensive tests both operationally and in the laboratory. No specific test is prescribed that involves motorcycles, or any other particular sort of vehicle, because they are not considered to present any distinct problems. The operational tests do, however, involve measuring the speed of any passing traffic including motorcycles. The Home Office are wholly satisfied that when used in accordance with their type approval, the manufacturers' instructions and the Code of Practice issued by the Association of Chief Police Officers all type approved devices are accurate and reliable on motorcycles and in the evidence they produce.

Television Sets

Jo Swinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many television sets are in operation in the Department (a) in total, (b) in Ministers' private offices and (c) in each building in the Department; and how many television licences are held by the Department. [62808]

Derek Twigg: The Department for Transport has 218 television sets. There is one television in the office of each Minister and one in the private office of each Minister. The breakdown on the number of television sets in each building has been placed in the Libraries of the House. 69 television licences are held by the Department.

The number of television sets will not in all cases strictly correspond to the number of licences held because of Crown exemption in situations where the equipment is used for official purposes.

Data have not been provided for the Vehicle and Operator Services Agency, an Executive Agency of the Department, as the requested information is not held centrally and can be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Football (Role Models)

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what responses she received to her letter of 2004 to football club chairmen on reminding them of the responsibility players have as positive role models. [65819]

Mr. Caborn: The purpose of my letter of 9 August 2004 to the chairmen of the 92 Premier and Football League clubs was to remind them of the huge impact football can have on wider society.

No formal response was required. However, those chairmen who did respond agreed with the sentiments expressed in my letter and assured me that they would take the opportunity to convey my message to both their players and manager.

Olympic Games

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) if she will make a statement on progress with site assembly at the Olympic Park and planned changes to the configuration of the park; [65114]

(2) what recent discussions her Department has had with the Reuben Brothers on site assembly at the Olympic Park; and what assessment she has made of the future options for site assembly. [65115]

Mr. Caborn [holding answer 24 April 2006]: Good progress continues to be made in assembling the land for the Olympic Park. More than 80 per cent. of the land needed is already in public authority control. The London Development Agency (LDA) is responsible for the process of land assembly and its preferred option for acquiring land continues to be through reaching private agreements with landowners. Given the size and complexity of the site, the LDA has decided that it is necessary to exercise its powers of compulsory acquisition so as to be sure of securing possession of the land when required. A Public Inquiry for this Compulsory Purchase Order will begin on 9 May 2006.

The Olympic Delivery Authority are continuing to test and validate their plans to ensure that they can deliver the best Games and legacy facilities. No wholesale changes are being proposed, but there may be some adjustments to the layout of facilities within the existing Olympic Park area. Any such changes are likely to be announced before the summer.

The Department has had no discussions with the Reuben Brothers on the process of land assembly.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Abortion

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will make it her policy to exclude counselling for abortion and abortifacient birth control to school pupils; and if she will make a statement. [64251]

Beverley Hughes: The Government support the provision of school-based health services where the school identifies a need. The decision to provide such services, and the content of that service, is for the individual school governing body in consultation with pupils, parent and the wider school community.

Capital Expenditure

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the total capital expenditure has been for each school in the 100 (a) primary and (b) secondary schools with the (i) highest and (ii) lowest percentage of children receiving free school meals in the past 10 years. [66087]

Jacqui Smith: Capital allocations are made on a local authority basis, and information is not held centrally on individual schools. Expenditure on individual schools is determined by each local authority in accordance with priorities set out in its asset management plan, utilising funding allocated by the Department for Education and Skills and other sources available to the local authority.

Capital allocations from the Department to local authorities in England have increased from less than £700 million in 1996–97 to a planned £6.3 billion in 2007–08, rising to £8 billion by 2010–11.

Class Sizes

Mr. Jeremy Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the average (a) class size and (b) pupil to teacher ratio was in (i) primary schools and (ii) secondary schools in (A) Taunton constituency, (B) Somerset and (C) England in each year since 1992. [64346]

Jacqui Smith: The following table provides the average class size and pupil-teacher ratios in maintained primary and secondary schools in Taunton constituency, Somerset local authority and in England, January 1992 to 2005, the latest information available.

Pupil-teacher ratio information prior to 1997 is not available at constituency level.

Average class size[1] and pupil-teacher ratios[2] in maintained primary and secondary[3] schools in Taunton constituency, Somerset local authority and England: January of each year

	1992	1993	1994	1995	1996	1997	1998

Early-years Education

Patrick Mercer: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) whether the levels of guaranteed unit of funding per child for free nursery education places in 2006–07 will take into account the increased entitlement for nursery education to 38 weeks per year; [65284]

(2) what criteria the Department used to allocate guaranteed unit of funding per child for free nursery education places in 2005–06; [65286]

(3) what the guaranteed unit of funding per child was for free nursery education places in Nottinghamshire for (a) 2005–06 and (b) 2006–07. [65287]

Jacqui Smith: For 2005–06, the Schools Formula Spending Share (FSS) system was used to distribute resources for nursery education between local authorities. The formula for under 5s used pupil numbers, weighted for deprivation, area costs and sparsity to divide up the overall total of resources for under 5s. That resulted in a unit of funding for under 5s of £2,980 for Nottinghamshire. For 2006–07, the Dedicated Schools Grant (DSG) replaced Schools FSS, and £82 million was added to the total of DSG to fund the increased entitlement for nursery education from 33 weeks to 38 weeks per year. DSG has a single unit of funding for all pupils from 3 to 15: the baseline figure for Nottinghamshire for 2005–06 was £3,246 per pupil; and the figure for 2006–07 is £3,457 per pupil, which takes account of the additional funding for the increased entitlement for nursery education.

Examinations (Permitted Languages)

Philip Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills in what languages other than English examinations may be taken; and how many students took examinations in a language other than English in each of the last eight years. [64816]

Jacqui Smith: Examinations leading to general qualifications offered by the three England-based unitary awarding bodies must normally be taken in the medium of English, except where competency in another language is being examined, for example, in the case of modern foreign languages. A very small number of students also take some examinations with those awarding bodies in the medium of Welsh or Irish (Gaeilge), but information about the numbers is not collected centrally.

List 99

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Havant (Mr. Willetts), of 20 January 2006, Official Report, column 1622W, on List 99, on what basis her Department's policy not to identify anyone below Secretary of State level was formulated; and if she will make a statement. [47952]

Ruth Kelly: The powers under section 142 of the Education Act 2002 (whether or not to make a direction that an individual should be added to List 99) are exercisable by, and expressed in terms of, the Secretary of State. Responsibility lies with and was accepted by the Secretary of State and was confirmed in her statement of 12 January 2006. The case of Carltona, Ltd v Commissioners of Works and Others, [1943] All ER 2, recognised the principle of delegation but stated that,

> "The Minister is responsible. It is he who must answer before Parliament for anything that his officials [and junior Ministers] have done under his authority."

Pupil Expenditure

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much was spent per pupil in (a) primary and (b) secondary schools in (i) England, (ii) Hull and (iii) East Riding in the last year for which figures are available. [65463]

Jacqui Smith: The following table contains the available information:

	Primary school based expenditure per pupil[1] (£)	Secondary school based expenditure per pupil[2] (£)	Combined local authority and school based expenditure per pupil[3] (£)
City of Kingston upon Hull	2,990	4,030	4,160
East Riding of Yorkshire	2,760	3,510	3,800
England	2,910	3,800	4,140

[1] School based expenditure includes only expenditure incurred directly by local authority schools. This includes the pay of teachers and school-based support staff, school premises costs, books and equipment, and certain other supplies and services, less any capital items funded from recurrent spending and income from sales, fees and charges and rents and rates. This excludes the central cost of support services such as home to school transport, local authority administration and the financing of capital expenditure. The pupil data are drawn from the DfES Annual Schools Census adjusted to be on a financial year basis.

[2] Combined local authority and school based expenditure includes all expenditure on the education of children in local authority maintained establishments and pupils educated by the authority other than in maintained establishments. This includes both school based expenditure and all elements of central LA expenditure except youth and community and capital expenditure from revenue (CERA). Certain elements of central local authority expenditure cannot be attributed to a particular phase of education and consequently a sector breakdown is not available. Pupil figures include all pre-primary pupils, including those under 5s funded by the authority and being educated in private settings (only available from 1999–00), pupils educated in maintained mainstream schools and any other local authority maintained pupils. All pupil numbers are adjusted to be on a financial year basis.

Notes:

2004–05 figures are as reported by local authorities in their section 52 outturn statements as at 20 April 2006 and are subject to change. All figures are shown in cash terms and rounded to the nearest £10.

Pupil:teacher Ratios

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the pupil to teacher ratio has been in West Lancashire (a) primary and (b) secondary schools in each year since 1980. [64297]

Jacqui Smith: The following table provides the pupil teacher ratios in maintained nursery and primary and secondary schools in west Lancashire constituency, in each January from 1997 to 2005, the latest information available.

Pupil to teacher ratio information prior to 1997 is not available at constituency level.

School Admissions

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills pursuant to the answer of 28 March 2006, Official Report, column 888W, on school admissions, what powers (a) schools adjudicators and (b) admissions forums will have to ask for details of admissions other than in response to objections. [65945]

Jacqui Smith: The provisions set out in clause 42 of the Education and Inspections Bill will permit the schools adjudicator to consider any aspect of a school's admission arrangements in addition to the aspect which is the subject of the objection. The Bill does not give the adjudicator any power to consider schools' admission arrangements where he has not received an objection.

Admission forums have a different remit. They are required by regulations to give advice to admission authorities on their admission arrangements, and where this advice is not followed, clause 38(8) of the Bill will enable them to refer objections to the adjudicator. As part of this process, they should see all local schools' admission arrangements and will be able to request these where they have not been supplied.

Admission forums will also be able to prepare and publish reports on how well an area's admission arrangements engender fair access and work in the interests of parents and children. The local authority, neighbouring local authorities, and admission authorities in their area will be required by regulations to provide the admission forum with any information they hold that will enable them to produce their report.

School Music Facilities

Ms Diana R. Johnson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what funding her Department has made available for school music facilities in (a) Kingston upon Hull and (b) Hull North in each academic year since 1997. [64104]

Jacqui Smith: The answer to my hon. Friend's question on school sport facilities (64103) addresses the issue of capital funding allocations.

In addition, since 1999 we have provided considerable revenue funding support for music provision through Music Standards Fund (MSF) allocations to local authorities. The purpose of the MSF is to enhance opportunities for pupils to access musical education of high quality.

(a) Since 1999 the following Music Standards Fund payments have been made to Kingston-upon-Hull:

	Allocation (£)
1999–2000	512,000
2000–01	512,000
2001–02	512,000
2002–03	512,000
2003–04	522,000
2004–05	512,000
2005–06	522,000
2006–07	522,000

The allocations for 2003–04, 2005–06 and 2006–07 include an additional £10,000 for the development of a Kingston-upon-Hull Wider Opportunities programme. The allocation to Kingston-upon-Hull's music services for 2007–08 will be £512,000.

In addition, in December 2005 we announced an increase of £30 million over the years 2006–07 and 2007–08, intended specifically to support instrumental and vocal tuition for Key Stage 2 pupils. Of the £3 million available for 2006–07, £16,533 has been allocated to Kingston-upon-Hull schools. In 2007–08 the allocation will be £126,750.

(b) We do not hold figures for how much of the funding allocated to Kingston-upon-Hull was spent on school music provision in Hull North.

Skills Training

Ms Diana R. Johnson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many people aged (a) 30 to 39 years, (b) 40 to 49 years and (c) 50 years and over received skills training in (i) Hull North constituency and (ii) Kingston-upon-Hull in each year since 1997. [64100]

Phil Hope: The following table shows the numbers of non-academic long courses of more than 24 weeks duration undertaken in Hull North and in Kingston-upon-Hull by academic years and for the age bands requested.

	Hull North			Kingston-upon-Hull[1]
	30–39	40–49	50+	30–39	40–49	50+

Teachers

Willie Rennie: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what provisions exist for the (a) suspension and (b) banning of teachers (i) accused and (ii) convicted of sexual assault. [65404]

Ruth Kelly [holding answer 24 April 2006]: All LEAs and educational establishments should have procedures for dealing with allegations against staff that aim to strike a balance between the need to protect children from abuse, and the need to protect staff and volunteers from false or unfounded accusations. Any decision to suspend or dismiss a teacher is taken locally, School Staffing (England) Regulations 2003 give both the governing body and the head teacher the power to suspend any person employed or engaged to work at the school. Usually such action is agreed by the governing body, though where a decision should not be delayed, the head teacher may use their discretion to remove a teacher by suspending or terminating their employment with immediate effect.

Employers have a statutory duty, under the Education (Restriction of Employment) Regulations 2000, to make a report to my Department when a person is dismissed from employment on the grounds of misconduct or resigns in circumstances which would have led to their dismissal if they had not resigned. With the support of the panel of experts chaired by Sir Roger Singleton Panel it is then the responsibility of the Secretary of State to consider whether to prohibit the person from working with children in the future by placing them on List 99.

Where an individual who states they are employed to teach or work with children is convicted of a sexual assault, the police also report this for consideration. A number of convictions are considered sufficiently serious to warrant an immediate and automatic bar from working with children—'an offence contrary to section 3 of the Sexual Offences Act 2003 (sexual assault)'—is a conviction that would result in an automatic bar from teaching.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment her Department has made of the number of (a) male and (b) female teachers in (i) Southend, (ii) Essex, (iii) Greater London and (iv) England who left the profession as a result of stress in each year since 1997. [64252]

Jacqui Smith: The information requested is not collect centrally.

Research into the factors affecting teachers' decisions to leave the profession, commissioned by the Department and published in 2003, found that stress was cited as 'of great importance' by around 37 per cent. of primary leavers and around 34 per cent. of secondary leavers in England in calendar year 2002. The full report can be found at http://www.dfes.gov.uk/research/data/uploadfiles/RR430.pdf

The Department has looked closely at stress issues and tackling the sources of stress, such as excessive workload, by providing practical guidance and practical support:

Workforce reform—as well as any reduction in overall hours, reducing administration, more support staff, limits on cover and guaranteed planning, preparation and assessment time will have a positive impact.

Encouraging better behaviour and attendance—improving pupil behaviour has a direct impact on reducing teacher stress.

We have also encouraged better management of teacher health matters through improved occupational health guidance for schools and LEAs, and have worked with employers directly in relation to early intervention to avoid ill-health retirements.

We have supported the setting up of the Teacher Support Network's (TSN) telephone helpline since its launch in 1999. In March 2006, the service was expanded to provide online support as well.

We have since November 2003 also supported the TSN's 'well-being' pilot in London schools, which focuses on sustainable improvements in staff well-being and the development of management practices aimed at creating healthy workplaces.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Affordable Dwellings

Andrew Stunell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the average (a) land cost and (b) building cost was for an affordable dwelling in each region in England in the most recent year for which information is available. [63433]

Yvette Cooper: The following table shows the average land cost and works cost in each Government office region in 2003–04 through Social Housing Grant via the Housing Corporation for new build schemes only.

Compulsory Purchase

Mr. Rogerson: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many compulsory purchase orders have been made in each year since 1991, broken down by region. [64432]

Yvette Cooper: Data on compulsory purchase orders is not available for the whole of this period. The following table sets out the number of confirmed CPOs submitted by local authorities from 1994 to 2005.

E-enabling

Sarah Teather: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister whether the level of take-up for individual e-enabled local government services is recorded. [64289]

Mr. Woolas: Data on the level of website usage and take-up of selected e-enabled local government services is collected from individual local authorities in England as part of implementing electronic Government returns. The results from IEG6 statements in April 2006 are currently being analysed. The results from IEG5 statements in December 2005 show that in 2005–06 local authorities accepted 2.7 million online e-payment transactions and 24,000 online planning applications, whilst over 13 million people now visit local authority websites each month.

In addition, research activity commissioned as part of the ODPM take-up campaign due to launch nationally on 8 May 2006 will monitor levels of citizen awareness and take-up of local government e-services.

Homelessness

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many households were classified as homeless in (a) Beverley and Holderness, (b) London and (c) England in each of the last 10 years; and if he will make a statement. [62362]

Yvette Cooper: Information about local authorities' actions under homelessness legislation is collected quarterly at local authority level. The constituency of Beverley and Holderness is contained within the East Riding of Yorkshire district council.

The Government are committed to reducing homelessness and halving the number of households in temporary accommodation by 2010. Its strategy for achieving this is set out in "Sustainable Communities: settled homes; changing lives".

The number of households accepted by the district council as eligible for assistance, unintentionally homeless and in priority need for each year since 1996, and the number of households in temporary accommodation arranged by the council under homelessness legislation as at 31 December in each year is tabled as follows. Information is also collected on the number of people who sleep rough—that is, those who are literally roofless on a single night—and these are also presented in the table.

The duty owed to a person accepted as eligible for assistance, unintentionally homeless and in priority need is to secure suitable accommodation. If a settled home is not immediately available, the authority may secure temporary accommodation until a settled home becomes available. As an alternative to the provision of temporary accommodation some authorities arrange for households to remain in their current accommodation (homeless at home), until a settled solution becomes available.

Key Worker Initiative

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assessment he has made of the (a) take-up and (b) occupation rates of accommodation built under the Government's key worker initiative scheme. [51074]

Yvette Cooper: As at 28 February 2006, 2,817 new homes have been provided through the Key Worker Living programme. Of these 65 per cent. have been taken up and are occupied with a further 8 per cent. reserved/under offer.

Where there are vacant units the reasons for these vary from scheme to scheme but to date common features include:

many units have been only recently completed and are just being marketed some units have been affected by market conditions including competition from developers who are offering large discounts on private units as a short term expedient to shift their stock limited eligibility criteria in some parts of the country

failure of some RSLs to effectively market the units

To address this, the eligibility criteria for all Key Worker Living new build units was expanded from 14 November to include:

all clinical NHS staff (except doctors and dentists), teachers in schools, further education and sixth form colleges, police officers and community support officers, uniformed staff in Fire and Rescue Services, prison and probation service staff, social workers, occupational therapists, educational psychologists, speech and language therapists, rehabilitation officers for the visually impaired and qualified nursery nurses, local authority employed clinical staff (e.g. nurses) and;

local authority planners.

In addition Registered Social Landlords (RSLs) can consider grant neutral changes to tenure and expanded eligibility criteria.

In addition 23 new Homebuy Agents are now in place across the country to improve marketing and information to first time buyers. This will make it easier for first time buyers and key workers to find out about local schemes, and also for RSLs to respond in a more flexible and informed way to local demand.

National Affordable Housing Programme (Coventry)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what funding is available for temporary to permanent housing initiatives in the 2006 to 2008 National Affordable Housing Programme, in Coventry; and if he will make a statement. [64750]

Yvette Cooper: At present no funds have been made available in Coventry for temporary to permanent housing initiatives through the Affordable Housing Programme 2006–08.

ODPM supports innovative schemes which provide settled housing solutions for households in temporary accommodation. Where these schemes offer value for money but require capital investment ODPM would encourage regional housing boards to support bids for Affordable Housing Programme funding.

Overcrowed Accommodation (Lancashire)

Mr. Evans: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many (a) households and (b) children in (i) Lancashire and (ii) Ribble Valley are living in overcrowded accommodation. [65919]

Yvette Cooper: There are two measures of overcrowding—the statutory definition and the bedroom standard.

The most recent estimate of the number of households failing the bedroom standard in Lancashire county is 10,000. This is taken from an ad hoc report based on combined data from both ODPM's 'Survey of English Housing' and the Department of Work and Pension's 'Family Resources Survey' for the three years 2000–01, 2001–02 and 2002–03.

Reliable estimates for the number of children living in overcrowded accommodation in Lancashire are not available. Separate data for Ribble Valley are also not available.

A one-off estimate was made in the autumn of 2001 that there were approximately 25,000 households across the whole of England that were in conditions of overcrowding that breached the statutory standard. This estimate was based on data from the 'Survey of English Housing' for the period 1997–98 to 1999–2000 and from the 1996 'English House Condition Survey'.

Recycling (Swindon)

Mr. Wills: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how much funding Swindon borough council received to support recycling in each year since 1997. [60997]

Mr. Bradshaw: I have been asked to reply.

Swindon borough council have received the following funding in respect of waste minimisation and recycling since 1997.

2005–06

£40,000 CA site grant from the Waste Resources and Action Programme (WRAP)

£142,622.94 allocated from the Waste Performance and Efficiency Grant (WPEG)

I can additionally confirm that they have been allocated £378,206.25 from WPEG in the forthcoming 2006–07 financial year and will be receiving £396,244.28 in 2007–08.

Right to Buy

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what proportion of right to buy receipts were (a) paid to his Department and (b) retained by councils in each year since 1997; and how much of the total revenue was spent on housing. [61701]

Yvette Cooper: The following table shows total capital receipts from right-to-buy sales of local authority dwellings in England in the years 1997–98 onwards. The figures are net of discount and are as reported by local authorities.

The table also shows the value of housing capital receipts set-aside by local authorities to repay debt. Until the introduction of the pooling regime in 2004–05, set-aside was the mechanism that allowed a proportion of housing capital receipts to be redistributed for investment elsewhere.

As can be seen from the following table, since 1997 the Government have consistently invested more in housing than they have received in receipts. In 2004–05 the amount paid to Government from all housing receipts (not just right to buy) was £1.7 billion. The amount invested in housing was £4.1 billion i.e. almost 2½ times the amount received in receipts. The ratio is expected to increase substantially in the future.

	Total housing capital receipts (£ million)	Set aside/pooling (£ million)	Set aside/pooling as percentage of housing capital receipts	Capital investment (£ million)	Investment greater than set-aside/ pooling by £ million

[1] Estimated pooled housing capital receipts.

[2] Programmed expenditure.

Note:

Pooling replaced set-aside as the mechanism to invest housing capital receipts in 2004–05.

Supporting People

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the budget of the Supporting People programme was for (a) north Yorkshire and (b) city of York in (i) 2005–06 and (ii) 2006–07. [65540]

Mr. Woolas: The information requested is set out in the tables.

North Yorkshire

	Supporting People Programme Grant	Supporting People Administration Grant
2005–06	15,584,012	385,412
2006–07	15,274,485	385,412

City of York

£000

	Supporting People Programme Grant	Supporting People Administration Grant
2005–06	8,640,941	243,102
2006–07	8,436,979	243,102

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assessment he has made of the impact of the reduced level of funding for the Supporting People programme on (a) homelessness, (b) social inclusion and (c) social welfare in (i) west Yorkshire and (ii) city of York. [65542]

Mr. Woolas: Supporting People grant funding is paid to local authorities to enable the provision of housing-related support for vulnerable people. All authorities are expected to manage their funding effectively and efficiently, based on local needs and priorities. To support and provide a platform for that, authorities have been required to review all of their existing services and to develop a five year strategy for their local programme. Within this context, it is for individual authorities to decide how to appropriately manage any changes in funding.

World Cup (Complimentary Tickets)

Mr. Hands: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many complimentary tickets his Department has received for games taking place at the FIFA World Cup 2006 in Germany. [63901]

Jim Fitzpatrick: None.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH OFFICE

Swaziland/Lesotho

13. James Duddridge: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the effects of the withdrawal of the high commissioner from Swaziland and Lesotho. [65131]

Ian Pearson: We enjoy full diplomatic relations with the Governments of Lesotho and Swaziland. The right hon. Paul Boateng, our high commissioner in Pretoria, is accredited as non-resident high commissioner to both countries. We also maintain regular contact with the high commissioners of Lesotho and Swaziland in London.

Mauritania

14. Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with the Mauritanian Government on the illegal immigrants coming to the UK from Mauritanian ports. [65132]

Dr. Howells: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has not had any discussions with Mauritania on this subject. The Government take illegal migration seriously. Engaging with source and transit countries in Africa on migration was a priority for our EU presidency.

The UK has offered to co-fund with the European Commission, through a contribution of €81,000, a UNHCR project in Mauritania, which aims to improve Mauritanian capacity to manage migration.

European Constitution

15. Mr. Bone: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on his plans for a referendum on any new treaty establishing a constitution for Europe. [65133]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: The Government have made it clear that the EU constitutional treaty will only be ratified in the UK after a referendum of the British people. There is no other treaty, so discussion of other referendums would merely be abstract speculation. The EU needs to continue its focus on delivering economic reform and tackling the challenges of globalisation.

Sudan

17. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he is taking to impose sanctions on the Government of Sudan in response to alleged war crimes in Darfur. [65135]

Ian Pearson: The UK is a leading proponent of sanctions against those who violate human rights or impede the peace process in Darfur. We have identified several individuals from all sides to the conflict who we believe meet this criteria and have proposed to the Security Council that they face targeted sanctions under UN Security Council resolution 1591. We hope that a Security Council resolution imposing these measures will be passed within a day or so.

Middle East

18. Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on his policy towards Islamist organisations in the middle east. [65136]

Dr. Howells: There are a wide variety of Islamist organisations in the middle east. We encourage political groups to pursue their agendas within the democratic process and to embrace universal principles of human rights, including the rejection of violence as a means to achieving political objectives.

19. Michael Connarty: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Government of Israel on Israel's occupation of Palestinian land as defined by the 1967 boundaries. [65137]

Dr. Howells: The territory which Israel occupied in June 1967 remains occupied territory. UN Security Council resolution 242 (1967), which the UK supported, calls for the withdrawal of Israeli armed forces from territories occupied in the conflict. The building of settlements and the barrier on this land are both illegal. We have made our concerns clear to the Israeli Government.

The final determination of borders is for both parties to negotiate.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions his Department has had with representatives of Hamas; and if he will make a statement. [64748]

Dr. Howells: We have had no recent discussions with representatives of Hamas.

Iran

20. John Penrose: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on Iran's nuclear programme. [65138]

Dr. Howells: I refer to the answer my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary gave earlier.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has had with the International Atomic Energy Agency on Iran's nuclear programme. [64746]

Dr. Howells: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary and senior Foreign and Commonwealth Office officials are in frequent contact with the Director-General of the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) and his staff concerning Iran's nuclear programme. My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary most recently spoke to Dr. El-Baradei on 14 April.

The United Nations Security Council has asked Dr. El-Baradei to report by 28 April on Iran's compliance with the measures required by the IAEA Board of Governors. The Security Council will consider next steps after that.

Kashmir

21. Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has had with the government of Pakistan and India about Kashmir. [65139]

Dr. Howells: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary regularly discusses a broad range of issues, including Kashmir, with the Governments of both India and Pakistan. He discussed Kashmir with President Musharraf during his visit to Islamabad on 14 February 2005 and with the then Indian Foreign Minister, Natwar Singh, during the latter's visit to London on 27 June 2005.

Kosovo

22. Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress has been made with the talks on the final status of Kosovo; and if he will make a statement. [65140]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: We continue to support the status process led by UN Status Envoy, Martti Ahtisaari. We are encouraging both Belgrade and Pristina to engage constructively in this process.

My right hon. Friend, the Foreign Secretary, chaired a ministerial contact group meeting in London on 31 January. The statement which issued forms the basis for the British Government's approach to the Kosovo status process. It has been placed in the Library of the House.

David Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the future governance of Kosovo. [64831]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: The future governance of Kosovo is an issue that will be determined by the United Nations-led status process. The former President of Finland, Martti Ahtisaari, has been appointed the UN status envoy and is leading this political process on behalf of the international community. On 31 January 2006 in London, a Ministerial Contact Group statement emphasised that a multi-ethnic settlement is the only workable option. A copy of the statement has been placed in the Library of the House. Contact Group Ministers (United States, United Kingdom, France, Germany, Italy and Russia together with representatives of the European Union) also re-stated the international community's willingness to establish, for an interim period after the settlement, appropriate civilian and military structures to help ensure compliance with the settlement's provisions.

David Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the movement of people in and out of Kosovo since the commencement of NATO action there. [64832]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: During the NATO campaign, persecution by the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia military led to the temporary exodus of over 500,000 Kosovo-Albanian refugees moving to Macedonia, Montenegro and Albania. Shortly after the campaign ended a large majority of those Kosovo-Albanian refugees returned. However, after the end of the campaign an estimated 65,000 to 70,000 Kosovo Serbs left Kosovo.

Since 1999 the overall numbers of Kosovo-Serbs, previously displaced from their homes, returning to Kosovo has remained disappointingly low. Uncertainty over the outcome of the final status process and its impact on the sustainability of returns create significant disincentives to return to Kosovo. Economic security remains very limited. Weak property rights protection, discouragement from the authorities in Belgrade and shortages of social housing all contribute to an atmosphere of uncertainty and insecurity. We are encouraging Kosovo's Provisional Institutions to take the essential actions necessary to enable those who wish to return to do so and create an environment conducive to facilitate returns. We are also urging the Government in Belgrade to sign the protocol on returns agreed in September 2005.

Colombia

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has held with (a) the Secretary of State for Defence and (b) others about (i) human rights and (ii) the personal security of trade unionists in Colombia. [64787]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has had no recent discussions with my right hon. Friend the Defence Secretary about these issues. However, my noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, Lord Triesman of Tottenham, with responsibility for Latin America, has discussed human rights, including the legitimate security concerns of Colombian trade unionists, with both British and Colombian trade unionists on 6 March and 6 February respectively. He has also raised human rights in discussions with the Colombian Vice-President on 28 November 2005, the Colombian embassy in London and non-governmental organisations. Human rights are at the heart of our policy towards Colombia. We will continue to work with our EU partners, the Colombian Government and other stakeholders, including civil society, to help improve the human rights situation there. Our embassy in Bogota is actively pursuing this objective

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations he has made to the Government of Colombia about the murder of trade unionists in that country; and if he will make a statement. [64788]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: Through our embassy in Bogota we frequently raise human rights issues, including the murder of trade unionists, with the Colombian authorities. We also sponsored a visit to the UK. by a group of senior Colombian trade unionists in February to demonstrate support to Colombian unions. We believe and have consistently stated that civil society, including trade unionists, human rights defenders and community leaders, have an important role to play in helping tackle Colombia's inter-linked problems of internal armed conflict, illegal drugs trade and human rights abuses. My noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, Lord Triesman of Tottenham, with responsibility for Latin America, raised the importance of respect for human rights and the role of civil society when he met Vice-President Santos of Colombia in London in November 2005.

Craig Alden (Imprisonment)

Richard Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations have been made by the Government regarding the imprisonment of Craig Alden in Brazil; and if he will make a statement on the UK Government's position on the case. [64969]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: On 30 March 2005, my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary wrote to the Brazilian Foreign Minister in support of Craig Alden's application for Presidential Expulsion. The Brazilians rejected this application. Both my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary and my noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Foreign and Common wealth affairs, Lord Triesman of Tottenham, who is responsible for Consular matters in Latin America, have subsequently raised Mr. Alden's case with their Brazilian counterparts on a number of occasions asking that they take account of the human rights issues involved in Mr. Alden's case. Most recently, my noble Friend Lord Triesman of Tottenham raised Mr. Alden's case with the Brazilian Foreign Minister in March 2006.

Since his arrest, Mr. Alden and his family have expressed concerns over his safety while in prison. We have taken his fears about his safety seriously and officials from our Embassy in Brasilia have made numerous successful representations to the Brazilian authorities, requesting that he remain apart from other prisoners.

The Foreign and Commonwealth Office remains completely impartial in respect of the substance of any allegations against Mr. Alden. However, we share the concerns about the fairness of his trial, which we continue to raise with the Brazilian government.

Equal Pay

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps are undertaken within his Department to ensure that women are obtaining equal pay to men doing work of equal value. [65837]

Mr. Straw: As part of the 2005–08 pay settlement for delegated grades, agreed in November 2005, the Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) agreed with the Trade Union Side (TUS) to undertake annual Equal Pay Audits and to review the findings on completion with the TUS. The first of these will be carried out during 2006.

The FCO last carried out an Equal Pay Audit in 2003. The conclusions were that the overall picture on mean salaries within bands for full-time employees is within the 5 per cent. tolerance set out by the Equal Opportunities Commission; women do not seem to be less favourably treated than men in the way they are allocated to, or progress through, the salary scale and within each band the distribution of performance ratings is in proportion to the general split.

Exercise Exploring Themis

Patrick Mercer: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what (a) lessons were learnt and (b) improvements were made to UK maritime security following Exercise Exploring Themis in November 2005. [65282]

Dr. Howells: 15 nations took part in this UK exercise in November 2005 as part of the Proliferation Security Initiative (PSI). The exercise identified a number of lessons, with extensive and valuable feedback provided by participating nations. The need for appropriate and timely access to information from a range of sources reinforced the importance of cross-government involvement from the outset. Sharing of information between PSI nations was also shown to be vital, highlighting the need for secure and reliable communications channels to be established. Almost all nations commented on the need to continue to improve inter-departmental operations and awareness within their own governments. A number of important issues were raised which will be examined in future PSI exercises, such as the disposition of cargo after an interdiction and how the Suppression of Unlawful Acts at Sea protocols will affect the legal basis for interdiction. The cost effectiveness and benefits of running a federated exercise in national capitals showed that this way of hosting exercises could reduce the cost without compromising the high standards associated with PSI events.

The UK has benefited a great deal from running Exercise Exploring Themis and from our involvement in other PSI exercises. The main benefits have been improved intra-Government co-ordination, better understanding of the legal environment and improved technical abilities, such as communications. These factors have all contributed to improved UK maritime security. The exercise also enabled governments from 15 nations to co-ordinate their efforts to address potential future weapons of mass destruction proliferation threats. Effective joint international action helps to address maritime security for UK shipping outside UK territorial waters.

Hindu Persecution (Moscow)

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make representations to the Russian Government about discrimination against and persecution of Hindus in Moscow. [64708]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: I raised the situation facing Hindus in Russia, as well as other religious minorities, with Deputy Foreign Minister Alexander Yakovenko in Moscow on 30 March 2006.

Iraq

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he last visited Iraq; and if he will make a statement. [64747]

Dr. Howells: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary last visited Iraq on 2 to 3 April together with the US Secretary of State, Condoleezza Rice. He met a broad range of key political figures involved in the negotiations on the formation of a new government including President Talabani, Prime Minister Ja'afari and leaders of the main Kurdish, Sunni Arab and Shia parties. He urged them to work to conclude the process as swiftly as possible in the interests of the Iraqi people.

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he has been contacted by the Italian authorities in relation to the export from the UK of Beretta small arms to Iraq. [57260]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 9 March 2006]: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office is unable to confirm or deny whether we have received any such contact about an investigation in another country. I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him by my right hon. Friend the Minister for Policing, Security and Community Safety, Hazel Blears, on 14 March 2006, Official Report, column 2114W.

Karni Crossing (Gaza)

Richard Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Israeli government on the closure of the Karni crossing into Gaza; and if he will make a statement. [65455]

Dr. Howells: Our Embassy in Tel Aviv has repeatedly expressed our concerns about the closure of the Karni crossing. The Embassy last raised it with the Head of Israel Defence Force Strategic Planning and Foreign Relations on 4 April, The Karni crossing was reopened on 12 April. It is important that access and movement is improved and we call on both parties to implement the 15 November Agreement on Movement and Access. The Israeli government has assured us that they will continue to support the transfer of humanitarian assistance by opening other crossing points to the Gaza Strip to avert a potential crisis due to lack of food and money.

Montenegro

David Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the Government's position relating to the proposed referendum on independence in Montenegro. [64830]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: The referendum on Montenegrin independence from the State Union of Serbia and Montenegro is scheduled for 21 May. The UK welcomes the agreement between the Government and the opposition in Montenegro on the standards for the referendum. The referendum should be held according to the terms of the Constitutional Charter of the State Union of Serbia and Montenegro and subsequent legislation.

The UK has made clear that the whole process needs to be transparent, consensual and democratic.

Norman Kember

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether discussions took place between representatives of the Government and representatives of the kidnappers of Norman Kember prior to 21 March 2006. [64386]

Dr. Howells: It is not our policy to comment publicly on the operational details of the Government's efforts to secure the release of British nationals taken hostage overseas.

Proliferation Security Initiative

Patrick Mercer: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps the Government have taken to comply with the Proliferation Security Initiative. [65283]

Dr. Howells: The UK has taken a number of steps to comply with the Proliferation Security Initiative (PSI). We have formally committed to and publicly endorsed the PSI and its Statement of Interdiction Principles and indicated willingness to take all steps available to support PSI efforts. We have actively participated in and hosted PSI interdiction training exercises. We have undertaken a review and provided information on current national legal authorities to undertake interdictions at sea, in the air or on land. We have indicated willingness to strengthen authorities where appropriate. We have provided points of contact for PSI interdiction requests and other operational activities. We have established appropriate internal Government processes to co-ordinate PSI response efforts. We have reviewed our legal authorities and are working on adoption of the 2005 Suppression of Unlawful Acts protocols to strengthen the legal environment for interdiction. This will make it an internationally recognised offence to transport weapons of mass destruction (WMD), their delivery systems and related materials on commercial vessels.

We are currently examining a range of measures to deter proliferators and further raise the political and economic costs of trafficking in WMD and we will continue to take the necessary steps to strengthen our capacity to act effectively, as and when required, to take action consistent with the PSI Statement of Interdiction Principles.

Tom Hurndall/James Miller

Richard Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on what occasions he has met with the family of (a) Tom Hurndall and (b) James Miller; and whether he has plans for future such meetings. [65895]

Dr. Howells: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary met the family of James Miller on 2 June 2003 and the family of Tom Hurndall on 17 June 2003. The then Foreign and Commonwealth Office Minister of State, with responsibility for Consular Affairs, my noble Friend right hon. Baroness Symons, met the Miller family on 18 July 2003, 6 November 2003, 5 July 2004 and 4 April 2005. She met the Hurndall family on 23 July 2003, 6 January 2004, 23 March 2004 and 18 April 2005. As the Minister responsible for Consular Affairs in the Middle East I also met the Miller family on 23 May 2005 and the Hurndall family on 11 July 2005.

My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary is planning to meet both families again soon.

UN Human Rights Council

Ms Diana R. Johnson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the establishment of the UN Human Rights Council. [65134]

Ian Pearson: We welcomed and voted in favour of the General Assembly Resolution establishing the Human Rights Council. We believe this offers an important opportunity to improve the UN human rights machinery, but much will depend on member states showing commitment to making a fresh start. We will continue to play the fullest part possible towards the body's success and are standing for election to the Council on 9 May.

PRIME MINISTER

Scotland Act

Mr. Weir: To ask the Prime Minister pursuant to the answer of 14 March 2006, Official Report, column 2045W to the hon. Member for Dundee, East (Stewart Hosie) on the Scotland Act 1998 and the announcement that the Secretary of State for Scotland has been carrying out the functions of the Advocate General for Scotland since 18 January 2006 if he will place in the Library a copy of the determination under section 87(3) of the Scotland Act 1998. [66077]

The Prime Minister: Yes.

DEFENCE

Afghanistan

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to deploy Royal Air Force Jaguar aircraft to Kandahar; and if he will make a statement. [64793]

Mr. Ingram: There are currently no plans to send Jaguar aircraft to Afghanistan.

Casualty Evacuation

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many casualty evacuations there have been from (a) Iraq since the start of Operation Telic and (b) Afghanistan since 2001. [65450]

Mr. Ingram: The latest Aeromed figures for Operation Telic are published on the MOD website.

For the period between March 2003 to 1 January 2006, up to 4,000 UK military and civilian personnel (including a small number of Iraqis) were medically evacuated from Iraq. For the period between 1 January 2006 and 28 February 2006, 133 UK military and civilian personnel were medically evacuated from Iraq.

The great majority of these cases were due to illness, accidental injury, routine outpatient treatment in the UK or for compassionate reasons and not as a result of hostile action.

Since 2001, there have been 33 aeromedical evacuations from Afghanistan. The great majority of these cases were due to illness, accidental injury, routine outpatient treatment in the UK or for compassionate reasons and not as a result of hostile action.

Colombia

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much defence (a) equipment, (b) training and (c) other support has been given to the Government of Colombia in each of the last three years. [64786]

Mr. Ingram: In financial years 2003–04 and 2004–05 the cost of military training assistance provided by the United Kingdom Ministry of Defence to the Colombian armed forces was around £120,000 per year. This assistance covered Explosive Ordnance Disposal (EOD) training and the provision of military training and education to members of the Colombian armed forces both in Colombia and in the UK.

In financial year 2005–06 the cost of military training assistance provided by the UK MOD to the Colombian armed forces was approximately £130,000. This assistance consisted in EOD training and British military education and training courses in the UK. We also supported the Colombian military justice reform process by running seminars on Rules of Engagement and study tours introducing Colombian personnel to key British defence concepts such as the need to have democratic and accountable control of the armed forces.

The MOD has not given the Colombian armed forces any equipment over the last three years, nor has it given other support to the Government of Colombia, apart from some bespoke counter-narcotic assistance.

Departmental Expenditure

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what his Department's expenditure was on civil air travel in 2004–05. [64248]

Mr. Ingram: The Ministry of Defence spent approximately £109.6 million on civil air travel in financial year 2004–05. This figure is provisional and subject to final audit.

Depleted Uranium

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what research has been conducted since December 2004 to establish the number of UK depleted uranium shells recovered from (a) UK waters and (b) overseas waters. [64604]

Mr. Ingram: The only records of the recovery of United Kingdom depleted uranium shells from the marine environment are for two recoveries from the Solway Firth. One shell was recovered from the foreshore of the Kirkcudbright Training Area in 1994 and the second was recovered from the sea during trawling in 1997.

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment the Defence Radiological Protection Services has made of uranium in urine of military personnel and civilian employees of his Department on operations where there is a potential for exposure; and if he will make a statement. [64761]

Mr. Touhig: Very small amounts of natural uranium occur in the human body from normal dietary sources. Of the several hundred United Kingdom troops and civilians who have had assessments of the level of uranium in their urine following operational deployments to areas where depleted uranium munitions have been used, 384 have been tested under the biological monitoring arrangements made by what was the Defence Radiological Protection Services and is now part of the Defence Science and Technology Laboratory. No depleted uranium has been detected in anyone other than a small number of personnel who received shrapnel injuries in an incident involving friendly fire.

Fast Jet Aircraft (Pilot Blackout)

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many incidents of pilots of fast jet aircraft blacking out have occurred in the past 10 years. [63806]

Mr. Ingram: The number of incidents of pilots of fast-jet aircraft blacking out in the past 10 years is not held centrally by the RAF. However, in 2004 the Ministry of Defence conducted a survey of all RAF aircrew to determine the prevalence of gravity-induced loss of consciousness (G-LOC). Of the 2,259 aircrew who responded to the survey, 454 (20.1 per cent.) admitted to having lost consciousness for a number of seconds following G exposure at least once during their career. There have been no recorded RAF aircraft accidents within the last 10 years where G-LOC has been a contributing factor.

To reduce the risk of G-LOC, all RAF fast-jet pilots undergo theoretical and practical training in countering the effects of high G. Future options for high G training are under consideration.

Gulf Veterans

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many veterans have voluntarily presented themselves to the Gulf Veterans' Medical Assessment Programme in each year since 1993. [64763]

Mr. Touhig: The total number of veterans seen at the Gulf Veterans Medical Assessment Programme since 1993, is 3,445. This figure includes 3,275 veterans of the 1991 Gulf Conflict (Operation Granby), 136 Porton Down Volunteers, and 34 veterans of the current operation in Iraq (Operation Telic). The figures for each year since 1993 are further broken down as follows:

	Op Granby	Porton Down	Op Telic
1993	2	—	—
1994	56	—	—
1995	259	—	—
1996	578	—	—

Royal Irish Regiment Home Service Battalions

Mr. Donaldson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to the statement of 9 March 2006, Official Report, columns 961–3W, how many full-time members of the Royal Irish Regiment Home Service Battalions have indicated a preference to transfer to General Service under the terms of the package announced. [65929]

Mr. Ingram: Information on how many full-time members of the Royal Irish Regiment Home Service have indicated a preference to transfer to the General Service is not yet available. Those affected have been asked to register an expression of interest through their chain of command by 30 April 2006.

Submarines

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the operational criteria are for decisions on whether submarines should berth at Southampton rather than Portsmouth; and if he will make a statement. [64778]

Mr. Ingram: "Operational" criteria as such are not generally considered when deciding which Z berth to use. The strict limitations on nuclear powered submarine operational activities at Z berths mean that these locations are used for planned crew stand-off periods, materiel re-supply and personnel changeovers only.

It is possible that, for example during the briefing or debriefing phases of an exercise, proximity to other forces may dictate the choice of berth. But otherwise the selection is made on the basis of berth availability, submarine programme and local interference considerations.

The decision on whether to use Portsmouth or Southampton for visits by United Kingdom nuclear powered submarines will be based on the criteria listed above.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what infrastructure is necessary to deal with effluent from nuclear powered submarines around Z berths; and what the (a) capital and (b) running costs are. [64783]

Mr. Ingram: No infrastructure is required around Z berths to deal with radioactive effluent from operational nuclear-powered submarines as discharges of this type are prohibited at these berths.

Other effluent, such as sewage or bilge water, is managed in the same way as for conventionally powered warships and civilian vessels, and depending on the location of the Z berth it is discharged either by direct connection to an installed shore-based facility or by tanker collection. In commercial ports the Ministry of Defence pays for effluent disposal services; these vary from port to port and generally depend on volume. In the naval bases effluent disposal facilities are shared with surface warships and the associated costs cannot therefore be identified separately.

Telephone Calls

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many minutes of free overseas telephone calls UK forces personnel are entitled to each week while on overseas tours. [65959]

Mr. Touhig: As part of the Operational Welfare Package, personnel serving on operations overseas are allocated 20 minutes of free telephone cards to anywhere in the world every week they are away. In addition, personnel serving over the Christmas/new year period are given an additional 20 minutes.

Personnel who are serving in non-operational areas are granted a cost towards telephone calls as part of their local overseas allowance; this cost is to make up the difference between the overseas location and the United Kingdom towards 20 minutes worth of telephone calls.

Type 23 Frigates

Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the last Type 23 Frigate is expected to leave service. [64611]

Mr. Ingram: On present plans the final Type 23 Frigate, HMS St. Albans, will be withdrawn from service in 2029.

Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Type 23 frigates will be fitted with Sonar 2087; and what the total cost of the project is expected to be. [64612]

Mr. Ingram: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 14 March 2006, Official Report, column 2150W, to the hon. Member for New Forest, East (Dr. Lewis).

There is an operational requirement for eight of the 13 in-service Type 23 frigates to be modified to operate the Sonar 2087 system. The decision on which ships are to be modified is determined by the fitting opportunities within the frigate upkeep programme.

The total cost of the project is currently expected to be £355 million.

Veterans Day

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many inquiries the Veterans Agency has received about organising events for Veterans Day 2006. [65441]

Mr. Touhig: The Veterans Agency and the Veterans Policy Unit have received over 100 telephone enquiries about organising events for Veterans Day 2006. The Veterans Policy Unit has also received eight bids for funding regional events.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Assets Recovery Agency

Grant Shapps: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list completed cases handled by the Assets Recovery Agency, broken down by year and region; and if he will make a statement on the agency's performance to date. [64418]

Paul Goggins: The number of cases completed by the Assets Recovery Agency broken down by year and region is shown in the table.

The Assets Recovery Agency is making an effective contribution towards the recovery of criminal proceeds. Since its inception in 2003, the agency has adopted 177 civil recovery cases and 30 tax cases for investigation; and disrupted over 127 criminal enterprises with £68.45 million worth of assets subject to freezing orders. The agency has completed 35 cases with a recovery value of approximately £9.1 million and has realised receipts of around £8.34 million.

The agency has also assisted law enforcement agencies in obtaining 13 confiscation orders with a total value of £6.4 million.

The Centre of Excellence in the Assets Recovery Agency has delivered training in the Proceeds of Crime Act to over 2,600 financial investigators in law enforcement agencies. The agency has also successfully raised awareness of the new powers in the Act by hosting a series of conferences and presentations; and through the issue of a monthly newsletter which publicises successes in recovering the proceeds of crime.

Assets recovery agency: number of completed cases[1]

2005–06[3]	23	20	3

Notes:

[1] Those cases that have reached final actions i.e. recovery order, final assessment or settlement.

[2] There were no completed cases in 2003–04 as this was the first full operational year of the agency.

[3] 2005–06 performance figures are to end March 2006. Final year-end performance figures are yet to be finalised.

Correspondence

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the Parliamentary Business Unit of the Immigration and Nationality Department will reply to the hon. Member for Edinburgh, West's letter of 16 February 2006 with regard to his constituent Miss Tendai Rita Mupamhanga. [64412]

Mr. McNulty: The Immigration and Nationality Directorate responded to the letter from the hon. Member on 21 April 2006.

Crime Statistics

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the crime rates among migrant workers in England; and if he will make a statement. [45591]

Hazel Blears: From the information collected centrally on recorded crime it is not possible to make such an assessment. Specific details on victims and offenders are not collected.

Fixed Penalties

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the fixed penalty was for a contravention of section 89 of the Road Traffic Regulation Act 1984 in each year since the Act came into force. [64701]

Hazel Blears: In 1984 the fixed penalty for exceeding the speed limit in contravention of section 89 of the Road Traffic Regulation Act 1984 was £20 and three penalty points. This was raised to £24 in 1986, £32 in 1990 and £40 in 1992. From 1 November 2000 the penalty was raised to the current level of £60. The offence is endorsable and the number of penalty points has remained at three from 1984 to date.

Home Detention Curfew Scheme

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the (a) average and (b) longest time has been between a prisoner being released on the Home Detention Curfew scheme and receiving their tagging device in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [64383]

Fiona Mactaggart: Almost all offenders released on Home Detention Curfew are tagged on the day of release.

Since 1 April 2005, the longest time taken to fit monitoring equipment to an offender released on Home Detention Curfew is eight days. This occurred in May 2005, just after the new electronic monitoring contracts started and the old ones expired.

Figures before April 2005 are not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Human Trafficking

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what steps his Department is taking to protect the victims of human trafficking; [64051]

(2) what support is available to the victims of trafficking once discovered by the authorities. [64053]

Paul Goggins: Since March 2003 the Home Office has funded the Poppy Scheme which is run by Eaves Housing for Women. The scheme provides safe accommodation and tailored one-to-one support for adult female victims who have been trafficked to the UK and into prostitution. Support is provided on a short term basis, or for longer in return for co-operation with the relevant authorities.

On the basis of a positive evaluation the Home Office is investing £2.4 million over the next two years to expand the excellent service provided through the Poppy Scheme. This fulfils our commitment to continue funding the core service (25 crisis spaces), and will also provide 10 additional step-down places, the first ever 24-hour national outreach service, and the development of a resource pack for victims, service providers and law enforcement agency staff.

Assistance and support for child victims is secured through local statutory social services.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received on the European Convention on Action Against Trafficking in Human Beings; and if he will make a statement. [64052]

Paul Goggins: Since negotiations began on the Council of Europe Convention on Action against Trafficking in Human Beings we have received a number of representations from organisations and individuals.

The need to provide effective support to victims is a key aspect of our strategy for tackling human trafficking. We continue to consider the practical implications of signing the convention.

National Criminal Intelligence Service

Dr. McCrea: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what disability recruitment guidelines were used in the recruitment process for National Criminal Intelligence Service posts at the new regional office in Belfast advertised in autumn 2003. [64731]

Hazel Blears [holding answer 24 April 2006]: I refer the hon Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Belfast, North (Nigel Dodds) on 9 January 2006, Official Report, column 377W.

Road Traffic Offences

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department in what circumstances a person charged with an offence under section 89 of the Road Traffic Regulation Act 1984 would not be prosecuted; and if he will make a statement. [64680]

Hazel Blears: Enforcement of the law relating to speeding offences is a matter for the police who will decide what approach is most effective in different circumstances. Prosecution may be appropriate where the offence is considered too serious for offer of a fixed penalty or may occur where a fixed penalty offer is not accepted. Decisions as to prosecution are ultimately a matter for the Crown Prosecution Service.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prosecutions under section 89 of the Road Traffic Regulation Act 1984 were dropped because the alleged offender lived overseas in each year since 1996. [64681]

Hazel Blears: This information is not collected centrally. We recognise that while those living abroad can be prosecuted for this offence there are practical problems in enforcement. Measures in the Road Safety Bill currently before Parliament will help address the situation.

Security Industry Authority

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether the Harrington review was taken into account in the full regulatory impact assessment on the Approved Contractor Scheme published on 16 February. [59072]

Paul Goggins: As the Harrington review was not then available, it could not be taken into account when drafting the full Regulatory Impact Assessment on the Approved Contractor Scheme.

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the review of the Security Industry Authority by Roy Harrington will be published; what the main recommendations are; and when these recommendations will be implemented. [58889]

Paul Goggins: Roy Harrington was commissioned by the Home Office to review the future strategic direction of the Security Industry Authority. Once Ministers have fully considered his report, they will make decisions on its recommendations.

The report will be published in due course, copies will be placed in the Library and it will also be made available on the Home Office website.

Road Safety

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent research has been carried out on the impact of atmospheric conditions on the accuracy of speed cameras; and if he will make a statement. [64693]

Hazel Blears: All speed cameras producing evidence for possible use in court have to be of a type approved by the Secretary of State. The type approval process includes tests both operationally and in the laboratory to ensure that devices will when properly used function accurately and reliably. No separate research has been undertaken. We are satisfied that all currently approved devices merit their type approved status and can be relied upon.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to use the photographs taken by speed cameras to (a) detect and (b) prosecute those seen committing an offence under (i) section 14 of the Road Traffic Act 1988 and (ii) the Road Vehicles (Construction and Use) (Amendment) (No. 4) Regulations 2003; and if he will make a statement. [65048]

Hazel Blears: Enforcement of these offences is an operational matter for the police. There are no such plans of which I am aware. Speed cameras are designed and type approved only to detect vehicles exceeding the speed limit and record an image of them. Enforcement depends on the police witnessing the offences. The likelihood of this is increased by the expanded use of police intercept teams linked to the operation of Automatic Number Plate Recognition systems We expect enforcement of these and other motoring offences to reflect the joint Home Office/Department for Transport/Association of Chief Police Officers Roads Policing Strategy issued last year, the National Policing Plan and the National Community Safety Plan, which emphasise the importance of roads policing and encourage a pro-active approach.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether the LTI20.20 mobile speed camera is used by (a) the police in (i) Southend and (ii) Essex and (b) the Metropolitan Police area; and if he will make a statement. [64692]

Hazel Blears: The purchase and use of speed cameras for law enforcement purposes is a matter for individual chief officers of police. I understand, however, that this particular device is used both by Essex police, including in Southend, and by the Metropolitan Police.

Speed cameras used by the police to produce evidence for possible use in court have to be of a type approved by the Secretary of State. The laboratory and field testing undertaken prior to the granting of type approval is designed to ensure that all type approved equipment is accurate and reliable when used in accordance with its type approval conditions, in line with the manufacturer's instructions and in accordance with the Code of Practice drawn up by the Association of Chief Police Officers. I am satisfied that all type approved speed cameras, including the LTI 20.20, merit their type approved status and are appropriate for police use.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make it his policy that a photograph of the alleged speeding vehicle should be sent at the same time as the summons; and if he will make a statement. [64755]

Hazel Blears: The responsibility for deciding whether to disclose the photograph, or any other evidence, of a speeding offence detected by a camera rests with the chief officer of the force concerned. Any evidence, including the calibration certificate and any photograph, would, of course, be produced should a case go to court.

UK Passport Service

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 21 March 2006, Official Report, column 313W, on passports, for how long the UK Passport Service's website has carried details of this policy; and if he will make a statement. [64075]

Andy Burnham: An explanatory note was added to the UK Passport Service's (UKPS) website on 14 March after the issue had been mentioned during the debate on the Identity Cards Bill the previous day. The note was omitted in error when the Identity and Passport Service website was launched on 1 April and restored on 4 April when the error was brought to our attention.

It has always been the case that passport holders could renew passports any time before the expiry date. This is often necessary to meet the minimum passport validity required for entry to some countries.

In response to customer complaints about losing validity when renewing early, the UKPS introduced the facility of transferring up to nine months unexpired validity from the old passport to the new one. The original advice on the UKPS website was based on this, but was not intended to prohibit earlier renewal.

Young Offenders

Joan Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department in what circumstances it is appropriate for a police officer to use a caution for the first offence of a young offender, rather than pressing charges; and if he will make a statement. [65322]

Hazel Blears: Young people who commit a first offence will normally be dealt with under the Final Warning scheme, unless the offence is so serious that they must be charged and dealt with by a court. They will not receive a caution as that process for young offenders was replaced by the Final Warning Scheme under Section 65, Crime and Disorder Act 1998. The Home Office and the Youth Justice Board produced guidance for the police and Youth Offending Panels on how to operate the scheme and that guidance is available on the Home Office website. The guidance provides comprehensive details on how to proceed with the most common offences but makes it clear that in deciding on the correct course the individual circumstances of the offence, offender and other relevant information must be considered as part of the decision-making process. That ensures that appropriate levels of discretion remain in the system for dealing with young offenders and that the correct action is taken in each case.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Afghanistan

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development pursuant to the answer of 30 March 2006, Official Report, column 1127W, to the hon. Member for Carmarthen, East and Dinefwr (Adam Price), on Afghanistan, which agencies in Afghanistan are liaising with the UK authorities on the process for the eradication of the poppy crop. [65889]

Dr. Howells: I have been asked to reply.

The UK does not carry out eradication in Afghanistan; eradication policy and implementation is the responsibility of the Government of Afghanistan, in particular, the Ministry of Counter Narcotics and the Ministry of Interior. The Government of Afghanistan's policy on eradication is set out in its National Drug Control Strategy which states that "where there are legal livelihoods, a credible threat of eradication is needed in order to incentivise the shift away from poppy cultivation. We will therefore carry out targeted ground-based eradication throughout Afghanistan in order to ensure we make maximum progress towards our long-term elimination goal". The UK supports this approach and in 2005–06 provided £5.25 million to support the Government of Afghanistan's eradication effort. In particular, the UK supported the Ministry of Counter Narcotics targeting work to identify priority areas for eradication and provided equipment, including tractors and all-terrain vehicles.

Nepal

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment he has made of the stability of the Government of Nepal for the purpose of channelling aid to the Nepalese people. [64629]

Hilary Benn: DFID is monitoring the current political instability in Nepal very closely. Under present conditions, the ability of the Government of Nepal to implement development activities and deliver basic services is very sharply constrained. For UK aid through Government to be effective, it is therefore essential that there is a satisfactory resolution to the present crisis.

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much aid was allocated to Nepal in each of the last three years. [64630]

Hilary Benn: Expenditure under the DFID bilateral programme, including humanitarian aid and DFID-managed funds from the cross-Whitehall Global Conflict Prevention Pool (GCPP), was as follows:

	£ million
2002–03	27.16
2003–04	32.05
2004–05	35.08

The estimated figure for expenditure in 2005–06 is £33.2 million (£32.8 million excluding the GCPP).

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development whether he plans to reduce aid allocation to Nepal. [64631]

Hilary Benn: Following King Gyanendra's assumption of direct rule last year, DFID's allocation to Nepal for the financial year 2005–06 was reduced from £40 million to £32 million. For 2006–07, the allocation has been reduced further, to £30 million. These changes reflected the deteriorating environment for using aid funds effectively to reduce poverty in Nepal. The current political crisis in Nepal poses a further serious threat to the effective use of aid and DFID is keeping the situation under close review.

DFID also manages funds from the cross-Whitehall Global Conflict Prevention Pool (GCPP). Including the GCPP, expenditure in 2005–06 was an estimated £33.2 million and the 2006–07 allocation is £30.16 million.

Overseas Aid

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much his Department has given in overseas development aid excluding debt relief in each of the last 10 years; what percentage of UK gross domestic product these payments constituted; and if he will make a statement. [64652]

Hilary Benn: Set out are details of UK official development assistance (ODA) with and without debt relief as a percentage of gross national income. This is the measure used in international reporting.

The Government have announced a clear timetable to reach the UN target of 0.7 per cent. of gross national income (GNI) spent on development aid by 2013. Last year UK aid spending as a proportion of GNI rose sharply, reflecting implementation of the Government's plan to increase development assistance set out in its 2004 Spending Round and a significant short-term increase due to debt relief for Nigeria. Debt relief to poor countries frees resources for poverty reduction and is quite rightly classified as official development assistance (ODA).

ODA, excluding debt relief, rose in cash terms last year but decreased as a proportion of GNI. The main factors were changes in the CDC portfolio and timing of payments to the European development fund. We do not expect these issues to affect the 2006 figures.

	UK ODA (£ million)	ODA as percentage of GNI	UK ODA less debt relief (£ million)	ODA less debt relief as percentage on GNI
1996	2050	0.27	1998	0.27
1997	2096	0.26	1916	0.24
1998	2332	0.27	2077	0.24
1999	2118	0.24	2048	0.23
2000	2974	0.32	2871	0.31
2001	3179	0.32	2919	0.29

	UK ODA (£ million)	ODA as percentage of GNI	UK ODA less debt relief (£ million)	ODA less debt relief as percentage on GNI
2002	3281	0.31	2878	0.27
2003	3847	0.34	3767	0.34
2004	4302	0.36	3868	0.33
2005[1]	5916	0.48	3879	0.31

Source:
DAC online database.

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what total aid budget has been allocated to (a) Tanzania, (b) Nepal, (c) Ethiopia, (d) Venezuela and (e) Peru by the UK for 2006–07; and what percentage each figure represents of each country's GDP. [64813]

Hilary Benn: Of the five countries referred to, DFID has bilateral aid programmes in Tanzania, Nepal and Ethiopia. The total aid budget allocated by DFID in 2006–07 to each country is:

Tanzania	110,000,000
Nepal	30,000,000
Ethiopia	90,000,000

There is no UK bilateral programme in Venezuela or Peru. However, DFID has allocated £620,000 in 2006 for Andes regional activities which covers Peru, Bolivia and Columbia.

Projected 2006–07 GDP figures are not available so it is not possible to say what percentage the 2006–07 allocations represent in relation to the countries' GDP, but for information, the GDP for each country for the latest year available (2004) is:

Tanzania	5,921,548,953
Nepal	3,659,813,448
Ethiopia	4,407,543,048
Venezuela	59,656,260,830
Peru	37,323,129,672

Parliamentary Questions (Supplementary Information)

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if he will make it his policy when placing material in the Library in response to a parliamentary question, to supply a copy of the material to the hon. Member who tabled the question; and if he will make a statement. [64204]

Hilary Benn: As well as depositing material in the Libraries of both the House of Commons and the House of Lords, the Department for International Development has always adopted the policy of supplying copies of additional material referred to in the response to a parliamentary question to the Member of the House who tabled the question.

Rights, Democracy and Inclusion Fund

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much each country in receipt of funds through the Rights, Democracy and Inclusion Fund has received in each of the last three years. [64627]

Hilary Benn: The Rights, Democracy and Inclusion Fund is a recent initiative within DFID's aid programme in Nepal, and is co-financed by the Swiss Government. The Fund was launched in January 2006 to support Nepali initiatives aimed at strengthening institutions of democracy and increasing the political inclusion of ethnic minorities, dalits and women. To date, one grant has been approved by the Fund, which received some 30 proposals in its first two months of operation. It was anticipated that the Fund would disburse up to £3 million of British and Swiss funds over its three-year life, with some £400,000 allocated for the 2006–07 financial year. However, management and implementation of all development activities, including this Fund, have been seriously affected by the current political crisis in Nepal.

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what measures are in place to assess the effectiveness of funds allocated through the Rights, Democracy and Inclusion Fund. [64628]

Hilary Benn: Applications for financial support under the Rights, Democracy and Inclusion Fund are subject to careful scrutiny by a committee comprising staff from DFID's Nepal office, the British embassy in Kathmandu, and a representative of the Swiss Government. All approved projects will have clear objectives against which organisations receiving grants will be required to report. In addition, the effectiveness of the Fund overall will be periodically reviewed to ensure that it represents a good use of aid funds.

Strategic Defence Reviews

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development on how many occasions the Department has allocated funds to assist strategic defence reviews in the last nine years. [64845]

Hilary Benn: DFID has supported defence reviews through the Global and Africa Conflict Prevention Pools, which bring together the conflict prevention work of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, the Ministry of Defence and the Department for International Development (DFID). The Africa Conflict Prevention Pool (ACPP) has supported a Strategic Defence Review in Uganda. The Global Conflict Prevention Pool (GCPP) has supported defence reviews in Sri Lanka and Indonesia. In each case, advice was delivered through the Security Sector Development Advisory Team (SSDAT), a team of technical advisers from the Ministry of Defence and DFID.

DFID encourages national security reviews that address the safety, security and access to justice needs of individuals and communities as well as of the state. A national security review should inform any following defence review process by clearly stating the priorities required by a country of its defence sector. The ACPP has supported such national security reviews in Sierra Leone and has provided limited advice to the United Nations Office in Guinea-Bissau (UNOGBIS). The GCPP has supported the development of a National Security Strategy in Jamaica and the Internal Security Review in Kosovo.

Uganda

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what estimate he has made of the percentage of Ugandans who lived in poverty in (a) 2001 and (b) 2004. [64589]

Hilary Benn: According to the latest available data from the Uganda National Household Survey in 2002–03, 38 per cent. of the population lived below the poverty line compared with 56 per cent. of the population in 1992. There was a significant decline in poverty through the 1990s.

The 2005–06 Uganda National Household Survey is currently being carried out and new poverty data should be available by the beginning of 2007.

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what percentage of Uganda's budget in the last year for which figures are available was (a) donor sponsored and (b) sponsored by the UK. [64825]

Hilary Benn: In the Ugandan financial year of 2004–05 (which runs from July to June) 47 per cent. of the Government of Uganda's budget was sponsored by donors. In the financial year of 2004–05, British aid was 4.7 per cent. of the Government of Uganda's budget. This is the last financial year for which data are available.

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what percentage of the total Ugandan budget British aid represented in (a) 2001 and (b) 2004; and how much total aid Uganda received in (i) 2001 and (ii) 2004. [64826]

Hilary Benn: In the Ugandan financial year of 2001–02 (which runs from July to June), British aid was 6.7 per cent. of the total budget of the Government of Uganda. In the financial year of 2004–05, British aid was 4.7 per cent. of the total budget.

In the financial year of 2001–02, Uganda received total aid equivalent to £492 million, the total aid received by Uganda in the financial year of 2004–05, was equivalent to £478 million.

This information is based on data from Uganda's Ministry of Finance and Economic Planning.

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment he has made of the contribution of the funds allocated to the Ugandan Ministry of Defence's strategic defence review to the reduction of poverty in that country. [64844]

Hilary Benn: Human security is essential for development. At the same time it is important for governments to strike the right balance between expenditure and security and on reducing poverty in areas such as education and health.

An independent assessment of the UK's support for Uganda's first strategic Defence Review was carried out in December 2004. It found that the Review has helped to establish the processes necessary for ensuring a professional, modern, accountable, efficient and affordable security sector. Already the Review has been the basis for the development of a Defence Corporate Plan that prioritises expenditure and includes indicators which can be used to monitor performance for example in procurement, financial management and management of human resources. The Defence Review and the Corporate Plan provide a basis for more effective dialogue between government and development partners about Uganda's defence expenditure. In this, we emphasise the importance of implementing the recommendations of the Defence Review to help provide the security required for poverty reduction.

NORTHERN IRELAND

A and E Departments

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) on how many occasions police were called to deal with unruly or violent behaviour at accident and emergency departments in each of Northern Ireland's acute hospitals in each of the last three years; [64911]

(2) how many incidents necessitating police being summoned occurred at accident and emergency departments of each Northern Ireland acute hospital in each year between 2000 and 2005. [65312]

Mr. Woodward: The information requested is not recorded centrally either by the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety or by the Police Service of Northern Ireland.

Therefore, this information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Avian Influenza

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what measures have been established in the event of the arrival in Northern Ireland of avian influenza to protect (a) the farming community and (b) the wider population. [65924]

Mr. Woodward: Both the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety (DHSSPS) and the Department of Rural Development (DARD) are working closely on this issue and have contingency plans in place to deal with an outbreak of avian influenza in both humans and birds.

Specific guidance on worker safety and personal protection has been issued to DARD staff, the poultry industry, and those living and working on farms in respect of the threat of avian influenza. Oseltamivir (Tamiflu) prophylaxis will be made available to those who have contact with infected poultry.

There have been no cases of human-to-human transmission recorded to date and the threat of avian influenza to the general population is currently very low indeed. Nevertheless DHSSPS has ensured that arrangements are in place for the rapid diagnosis and management of any human cases of avian influenza.

Information for professionals and the public is available on our website at http://www.dhsspsni.gov.uk/index/phealth/avianflu.htm.

Further information on the disease risk to humans travelling to and from areas affected by avian flu has been produced jointly by DARDNI and DHSSPS and is available at ports, including airports, GP surgeries and community pharmacies.

Civil Service (Travel Expenses)

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland pursuant to the answer of 16 March 2006, Official Report, column 2490W, on civil service travel expenses, what percentage of travel undertaken by (a) the Department for Agriculture and Rural Affairs and (b) the Northern Ireland Office (NIO) during the last financial year was (i) within Northern Ireland, (ii) between Northern Ireland and the Republic of Ireland, (iii) between Northern Ireland and Great Britain and (iv) between Northern Ireland and continental Europe; what percentage of travel costs incurred by the NIO was for air travel between Belfast and London; and what percentage of travel costs was for (A) standard and economy and (B) first and business class travel. [62511]

Mr. Hain: The cost of NIO travel cannot be disaggregated, except at disproportionate cost. However, it is estimated that less than 10 per cent. of the cost is for travel within NI and between NI and the RoI. It is further estimated that some 80 per cent. of all travel cost is in respect of flights between NI and GB and that less than £1,000 was spent on travel between NI and continental Europe.

Approximately 90 per cent. of air travel cost was for journeys between Belfast and London and some 94 per cent. of these trips were at business class with the remaining 6 per cent. at economy class.

NIO business class travel bookings are at competitive rates, are fully flexible and refundable and enable staff to make last minute adjustments to their travel arrangements without a cost penalty to meet the demands of the Department's business.

Travel costs within the Department of Agriculture and Rural Development cannot be separated into the geographical divisions requested except at disproportionate cost.

However, it is estimated that some 85 per cent. of expenditure was on mileage, which is likely to relate primarily to travel within Northern Ireland, 12 per cent. related to public transport within the United Kingdom (including air, train and bus fares) and 3 per cent. related to travel outside of the United Kingdom.

Deaf Teachers

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many deaf people qualified as teachers in the last five years; and how many of those people are now employed as full-time teachers. [65891]

Angela E. Smith: Students gaining an initial teacher training qualification from a Northern Ireland higher education institution and declaring a hearing impairment/deaf disability, 2000–01 to 2004–05 are as follows:

	Number of qualifications obtained
2000–01	[1]
2001–02	0
2002–03	[1]
2003–04	5
2004–05	[1]

[1] To prevent the identification of individuals, figures less than five have been suppressed.

Information on the current employment status of the graduates identified in the table is not available.

Denis Donaldson

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what co-operation there has been between the Garda and the Police Service of Northern Ireland in connection with the murder of Denis Donaldson. [65326]

Mr. Woodward: The hon. Member will appreciate that this is an ongoing investigation. I can, however, assure him that both Gardai and the Police Service of Northern Ireland are collectively engaged in tracking down those responsible for this horrendous murder, and the Government wholeheartedly and actively supports those efforts.

Dental Services

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people in Northern Ireland wishing to be registered with an NHS dentist on 31 December 2005 were not so registered. [65345]

Mr. Woodward: The information requested is not available.

Education

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many (a) part-time and (b) full-time students are enrolled in each of the further and higher education institutes in Northern Ireland. [65928]

Angela E. Smith: The latest available data[1] pertaining to student participation in the Northern Ireland further education sector relate to the 2004/05 academic year and are detailed as follows.

[1] Data is a full year count of students.

Independent Treatment Centres

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the development of independent sector treatment centres in the NHS in Northern Ireland. [64979]

Mr. Woodward: There are currently no plans to develop independent sector treatment centres in Northern Ireland. However, in the context of securing shorter waiting times for patients, I am committed to making appropriate use of the independent sector while at the same time developing additional hospital capacity and reforming hospital systems and processes.

Long-term Sick Leave

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, how many people in the NHS in Northern Ireland have been on long-term sick leave in each of the last three years (a) in total and (b) broken down by grade, and how many were suffering from stress. [63467]

Mr. Woodward: [pursuant to the reply of 18 April 2006, Official Report, col. 491W]. I am now in a position to provide the information requested.

Number of episodes of long-term sick leave (28+ days) by year

Staff group	2003	2004	2005
Admin and clerical	1,596	1,604	1,617
Ambulance	103	165	175
Ancillary and general	2,135	2,137	2,079

Professional and technical	96	111	109
Social services	195	248	233
Works and maintenance	9	13	5
Total	1,563	1,782	1,659

These figures include episodes of sick leave, which commenced between 1 January 2003 and 31 December 2005. If an episode runs beyond the end of a particular year, it may be counted again in the following year. Stress-related illnesses such as nervous debility/anxiety and depression are included in the figures.

Medical Equipment

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, what is the most expensive piece of medical equipment in each hospital in Northern Ireland; and how many continuous hours per day each is operation. [63463]

Mr. Woodward [pursuant to the reply, 18 April 2006, Official Report, c. 492W]: I am now in a position to provide the information requested.

This information is not held centrally. The following information has been supplied by health and social services trusts which provide acute hospital services. In some instances it has not been possible to provide the number of hours the equipment is used on a daily basis. My department is currently examining the diagnostic capacity available within the HPSS as part of my elective care reforms which are designed to reduce waiting times for inpatient day case and outpatient procedures.

Northern Ireland Civil Service

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment has been carried out to ensure that filling of vacancies in the Northern Ireland Civil Service from (a) departmental transfer lists and (b) the central transfer list complies with (i) section 75 of the Northern Ireland Act 1998 and (ii) all other equality obligations. [65508]

Angela E. Smith: The process of filling vacancies from departmental transfer lists has not been assessed against equality obligations, including Section 75. The central policy on staff transfers has not been subject to equality screening; however, the policy is currently under review. The expectation is that the new policy will establish a consistent approach to filling vacancies across the NICS and the policy will be subject to the equality impact assessment process.

Nursing Home Care

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland pursuant to the letter of 3 August 2005 from the Permanent Secretary of the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety (COR/379/2005) to the hon. Member for North Down what the exceptional circumstances are under which health care may be provided free of charge in a nursing home in Northern Ireland. [65470]

Mr. Woodward: The exceptional circumstances where continuing health care needs might be met in a nursing home, rather than in hospital, are a matter for professional clinical and social care judgement in individual cases and will be based on an assessment of whether continuing consultant intervention and/or specialist nursing care could be more effectively and efficiently provided in a nursing home.

Parking

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many fixed penalties were issued during 2005 in Northern Ireland Department for Regional Development pay and display car parks in respect of vehicles that did not have the correct payment sticker displayed on the windscreen. [65314]

Mr. Woodward: The chief executive of the roads service has been asked to write to the hon. Gentleman in response to this question.

Letter from Dr. Malcolm McKibbin, dated 25 April 2006:

You recently asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland a parliamentary question regarding how many fixed penalties were issued during 2005 in Northern Ireland Department for Regional Development pay and display car parks in respect of vehicles that did not have the correct payment sticker displayed on the windscreen.

As this issue falls within my responsibility as chief executive of roads service, I have been asked to reply.

I should explain that in roads service's pay and display car parks, a fee is levied based on the length of time that the driver intends to park. If a vehicle fails to display evidence that a fee has been paid, an Alternative Charge ticket is issued. However, if a fee has been paid, but is insufficient for the length of stay, an Excess Charge ticket is issued.

I can advise that during 2005 roads service issued 16,112 Alternative Charge and 4,908 Excess Charge tickets.

Parliamentary Questions

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he will answer question (a) 38593 and (b) 38594, tabled by the hon. Member for Upper Bann, on special advisers. [63447]

Mr. Hain: I have now responded to the hon. Member's questions (a) 38593 and (b) 38594. I must apologise to the hon. Member for the delay in responding, owing to an administrative error within the Department. Steps have been taken to prevent a recurrence.

Patient Advocates

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many cases were dealt with by patient advocates during 2005 at each of Northern Ireland's acute hospitals. [64910]

Mr. Woodward: The information requested is not available. However, patient liaison and support services, including advocacy, provided by Health and Social Services Trusts, are widely available in Northern Ireland, as are advocacy services provided by the Health and Social Services Councils.

Sex Offenders (Tagging)

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many convicted sex offenders in Northern Ireland have had electronic type tags fitted after their release from prison in each year between 2000 and 2005. [64906]

Mr. Hanson: Electronic tagging is not currently used in Northern Ireland. The recent consultation on the Review of the Sentencing Framework included a section inviting comment on the possible introduction of electronic monitoring and on its various applications. We will bring forward proposals to modernise the sentencing framework during the course of the year.

Special Advisers

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) how many special advisers are employed by the Government in Northern Ireland; what their (a) role is, (b) relationship with the various civil service departments and officials is, (c) salary is and (d) qualifications are; [38593]

(2) what function special advisers employed by the Government in Northern Ireland exercise in relation to departmental answers to parliamentary questions; and how many of them are members of the Labour Party. [38594]

Mr. Hain: There are two special advisers employed within my Department. Their role and relationships with Departments and officials are in accordance with the Code of Conduct for Special Advisers issued by the Cabinet Office's Propriety and Ethics Team. I refer the hon. Gentleman to the Prime Minister's written ministerial statement on special advisers of 21 July 2005. This statement referred to the revised Code of Conduct for Special Advisers which reflected commitments given by the Government to the Public Administration Committee and the Committee on Standards in Public Life. It also advised that the Civil Service Order in Council governing the appointment of special advisers had been amended to the effect that special advisers are appointed to assist Ministers. They are employed as temporary civil servants and paid according to the relevant pay band. On the issue of Labour Party membership, this is matter for the individuals concerned.

Still-births

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what (a) financial assistance and (b) support is available for expectant mothers in Northern Ireland who deliver a still-born baby. [65354]

Mr. Woodward: The information requested is as follows.

(a) A stillbirth is defined in The Stillbirth Definition (Northern Ireland) Order, 1992 as

> "The complete expulsion from its mother, after the 24th week of pregnancy, of a child which did not at any time after being completely expelled or extracted breathe or show any other evidence of life."

Such an event prior to 24 weeks is treated as a miscarriage. This distinction is reflected in the financial assistance available.

If a pregnancy does not result in the issue of a living child, depending on her individual circumstances, a woman may be entitled to receive financial support as follows:

(i) If the pregnancy ends before 24 weeks; incapacity benefit, statutory sick pay and income support;

(ii) If the pregnancy ends after 24 weeks; statutory maternity pay, maternity allowance, income support, a social fund funeral payment and a sure start maternity grant.

(b) Trained staff within the Health and Personal Social Services (HPSS) in Northern Ireland offer a wide range of support to the bereaved. This is in addition to the services available from voluntary, community and church organisations. In July 2005 the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety (NI) published a "Careplan for Women who Experience a Miscarriage, Stillbirth or Neonatal Death". This document is designed to promote quality and effective care and forms a basis for trusts to develop their arrangements in accordance with local needs and circumstances. It can be viewed at www.dhsspsni.gov.uk/hoi-careplan.pdf.

In March 2006, a HPSS regional bereavement network for Northern Ireland was established. It comprises five area co-ordinators based in local hospitals, and will help make a significant contribution to developing support for those who experience a stillbirth.

Television

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to ascertain the demand for access to Scottish television by viewers in Northern Ireland who do not have cable or satellite. [55157]

Mr. Hanson: Government have no plans to ascertain demand for access to Scottish television by viewers in Northern Ireland.

Two Tick Symbol

Dr. McCrea: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) under what circumstances organisations in Northern Ireland may no longer use the two tick symbol; [64729]

(2) what the criteria are for use by an organisation in Northern Ireland of the two tick symbol; [64730]

(3) how many organisations in Northern Ireland have ceased to be eligible to use the two tick symbol in each of the last five years. [64751]

Angela E. Smith: The two ticks disability symbol does not operate in Northern Ireland.

TREASURY

Business Investment

Chris Huhne: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the rate of business investment was as a percentage of gross domestic product in (a) the UK, (b) Germany, (c) France, (d) the US and (e) other OECD countries in each of the last 10 years. [64796]

John Healey: On average between 1997 and 2004, UK business investment has grown more than any other G7 economy except Canada, and more than both the euro area and OECD averages.

The data requested are available from the OECD Economic Outlook (Source OECD database), which is available through the House of Commons Library.

Census Act

Mr. Amess: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the operation of the Census Act 1920. [64884]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Jil Matheson, dated 25 April 2006:

The National Statistician has been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question on the operation of the Census Act 1920. I am replying in her absence. (64884)

The Census Act 1920 as amended by the Census (Confidentiality) Act 1991 and the Census Amendment Act 2000 is the legislation which empowers the taking of a census. It specifies the duty of the Registrar General to make arrangements and do all such things as are necessary to take a census and provides that expenses incurred will be provided by Parliament.

In practical terms it covers every aspect of the Census from the enumeration procedures, the topics which may be required, to the laying of reports before Parliament. The Census Act also requires secondary legislation in the form of an Order in Council and Census Regulations to be made for each Census.

The Census Order directs that a particular census shall be taken, and is a function of the Queen's Privy Council. The Draft Order is laid before both Houses of Parliament under Section 1(2) of the Census Act and prescribes:

the date of the Census;

the areas to be covered by the Census;

the persons required to complete the returns;

the persons required to be included in the returns (that is, the enumeration base); and the particulars (that is the question items) to be recorded in respect of each person.

Section 3 of the Census Act 1920 empowers the Chancellor to make Regulations governing the detailed arrangements for the conduct of the Census, principally covering the data collection activities.

Reports on output from a Census are laid before Parliament under Section 4 (1) and Section 4(2) allows the preparation of additional abstracts requested by customers.

Other sections of the Act cover the authority to carry out a local census at the request and expense of a local authority (Sections 6 and 7); the penalties for unlawful disclosure of personal census information and for refusal to comply with the Census Act (Section 8).

The Schedule of the 1920 Census Act sets out the topics in respect of which particulars may be required in the Census.

Consultants

Philip Davies: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much HM Revenue and Customs and its predecessor bodies spent on consultants in (a) each year between 1997 and 2000–01 and (b) 2005–06. [64812]

Dawn Primarolo: The former Inland Revenue spent the following amounts on consultancy between 1997 and 2000–01:

	Amount (£ million)
1997–98	9.2
1998–99	15.8
1999–2000	35.0

Data are not available for the former Customs and Excise for these years.

Audited figures for HMRC for 2005–06 are not available.

EU Commissioner for External Trade

Mr. Davey: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has made to the EU Commissioner for External Trade on (a) his decision to impose duties on imports of shoes from China and Vietnam, (b) the current discussions on imports of furniture from Asia and (c) the current talks in the Doha trade round; and if he will make a statement. [64672]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: As the Treasury set out in the April 2006 pamphlet 'The case for open markets: how increased competition can equip Europe for global change', openness to trade and investment is key to Europe's future prosperity and we need to strengthen its relationships with its major trade and investment partners. An ambitious outcome to the Doha Round is essential to deliver benefits to developed and developing countries alike and all key players need to demonstrate commitment and political will in order to achieve a successful outcome by the end of 2006.

To this end Treasury Ministers and officials have conversations and discussions with a wide range of organisations and individuals as part of the of policy development, analysis and delivery.

Mr. Davey: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he last met the EU Commissioner for External Trade; how many times in the last 12 months he has met him; when he next expects to meet him; and if he will make a statement. [64677]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Treasury Ministers and officials have discussions with a wide range of organisations and individuals as part of the process of policy development, analysis and delivery. As was the case with previous Administrations, it is not the Government's practice to provide details of every such meeting.

HM Revenue and Customs

Philip Davies: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what performance related pay is given to HM Revenue and Customs employees. [64820]

Dawn Primarolo: In HMRC all pay awards are performance related. Staff must achieve a satisfactory or better standard of performance to qualify for a basic performance award.

There are three performance categories—'Top', 'Good' and 'Improvement needed'. In addition to the basic performance award, 'Top' and 'Good' performers will qualify for a pay range progression award. Also, the 'Top' category (20 per cent. of staff) will qualify for a bonus of between 2.5 per cent. and 5 per cent. of salary. Those deemed 'Good' and on their pay range maxima, will qualify for a smaller bonus.

This information excludes members of the senior civil service (SCS), who have a separate pay system.

Hospitals (Tax Payments)

Mr. Swire: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much (a) pay as you earn tax and (b) national insurance is outstanding from all hospital trusts to HM Revenue and Customs. [65383]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Runnymede and Weybridge (Mr. Hammond) on 7 March 2006, Official Report, column 1300W.

Imports (Tax Evasion)

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the estimated level of tax evasion on imported goods was in each of the last five years for which records are available. [65859]

Dawn Primarolo: HM Revenue and Customs currently does not undertake any exercise to quantify the level of tax evasion on imported goods.

Income Tax

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the difference would be to the nearest £1 million of income generated to the Exchequer if the personal allowance for all was raised to £10,000 per annum and all income above that taxed at 40 per cent., compared with the present personal tax system. [65361]

Dawn Primarolo: The estimated yield from increasing all personal allowances to £10,000 and introducing a single rate of 40 per cent. on earnings, savings and dividend income is £32.4 billion in 2005–06.

The estimate is given to the nearest £100 million because estimates to the nearest £1 million will be less accurate.

The actual yield is likely to be less because the figure excludes any estimate of behavioural response to the tax change which is likely to be significant given the scale of the change.

The income tax information is based upon the 2003–04 Survey of Personal Incomes (SPI) and projected forward to 2005–06 in line with March 2006 Budget HM Treasury assumptions.

Insurance Mediation Directive

Mr. Malik: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will seek an exemption for the freight forwarding sector from compliance with the EU directive on insurance mediation. [65978]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: HM Treasury is aware of the concerns that have been expressed in relation to the insurance mediation directive by the freight forwarding sector, and has met industry representatives to discuss their concerns.

In the implementation of EU directives, EU member states have to give effect to the obligations in the directive and cannot unilaterally alter the scope of any directive.

Non-Parochial Registers Act

Mr. Amess: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will make a statement on the operation of section 5 of the Non-Parochial Registers Act 1840; [64882]

(2) if he will make a statement on the operation of the Places of Worship Registration Act 1855; [64883]

(3) if he will make a statement on the operation of the Births and Deaths Registration Act 1953; [64885]

(4) if he will make a statement on the operation of the Registration Service Act 1953; [65041]

(5) if he will make a statement on the operation of section 5 of the Public Expenditure and Receipts Act 1968; [65042]

(6) if he will make a statement on the operation of section 18 of the Marriage Act 1970. [65043]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Registrar General, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Dennis Roberts, dated 25 April 2006:

The Registrar General has been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions concerning the Registration Service. I am replying in her absence. (65041, 64885, 65042, 64882, 64883 & 65043)

The Registration Service Act 1953 (65041) sets out the responsibility for the provision and administration of the registration service in England and Wales. This includes the provision by local authorities of a local registration service for births, stillbirths, deaths and marriages which is overseen by the General Register Office on behalf of the Registrar General.

The Births and Deaths Registration Act 1953 (64885) sets out requirements for the registration of births, still-births and deaths in England and Wales. The registration service is successfully delivered, resulting in creation of the appropriate registration records and issue of certificates within the timescales that are required.

Section 5 of the Public Expenditure and Receipts Act 1968 (65042) allows the Chancellor of the Exchequer to make an Order varying fees for marriage services and certificates of births, deaths and marriages. The power to charge fees for these services is prescribed in the Marriage Act 1949 and the Births and Deaths Registration Act 1953. The fees collected contribute to meeting the costs to local authorities of the provision of the local registration service and those of the Registrar General in providing the central certificate application service.

Registers deposited under the Non-Parochial Registers Act 1840 (64882) are held at the National Archive who provide access to those records and list them in their catalogue. If a certificate under the seal of the General Register is required for evidential purposes arrangements are in place for this service to be provided by the Registrar General.

The Places of Worship Registration Act 1855 (64883) provides for places of religious worship, except those of the Established Church, to be certified to the Registrar General on payment of a fee, currently £28, to the superintendent registrar of the district.

A building has to be certified as a place of religious worship before it can be registered for marriages by the Registrar General under the Marriage Act 1949. The Registrar General maintains the record of these places of religious worship by adding those newly certified and cancelling those that are disused.

Section 18 of the Marriage (Registrar General's Licence) Act 1970 (65043) empowers the Registrar General, with the approval of the Chancellor of the Exchequer, to make regulations prescribing the form of the notice of marriage and the form of the Registrar General's licence. These forms are prescribed by the Registration of Marriages Regulations 1986 (SI 19867 1442) as amended by the Registration of Births, Deaths and Marriages (Amendment) Regulations 2005 (SI 2005/3177).

Planning Aid Supplement

Michael Gove: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proportion of the proposed planning aid supplement will be retained by the local authority in which the development to be taxed takes place. [64946]

John Healey: In the Economic and Fiscal Strategy Report 2006 the Government stated that it would ensure that a significant majority of Planning-gain Supplement (PGS) revenues are retained for infrastructure priorities within the local authority area where the revenues derived.

Secular Baby-naming Ceremonies

Colin Challen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will ensure that registrars make those registering births aware of providers of secular baby-naming ceremonies in addition to those ceremonies provided on a commercial basis by registrars themselves. [65142]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Dennis Roberts, dated 25 April 2006:

The Registrar General has been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking that registrars make those registering births aware of providers of secular baby-naming ceremonies in addition to those provided on a commercial basis by registrars themselves. I am replying ill her absence. (65142)

Registrars are statutory office holders who are appointed by local authorities to carry out duties relating to the registration of births, still-births, deaths and marriages. Their statutory duties do not include performing-baby-naming ceremonies but registrars may be involved in delivering ceremonies as a local authority function. Any arrangements for information about independently operated baby-naming ceremonies being made available by registrars would be a matter for individual local authorities.

Self-invested Personal Pensions

Mr. Bone: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will bring forward proposals to regulate independent trustees of self-invested personal pensions. [65421]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: As set out in the formal Government response to the autumn 2005 consultation on pension scheme rules, the pensions industry overwhelmingly supported the option of introducing, from April 2007, a new regulated activity of establishing, operating or winding up a personal pension scheme. This new activity will cover independent trustees of self-invested personal pensions. Industry also overwhelmingly agreed with Government that it was sensible not to rush through this regulation before April 2007. The FSA published a consultation paper in April 2006 and will analyse feedback during the summer before making the necessary amendments to their rulebook by October 2006.

Tax Credits

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many tax credit claimants have been on the manual payments database in each quarter from Q1 2003 to Q1 2006; and if he will make a statement. [62030]

Dawn Primarolo: The information is not available for 2003–04 and 2004–05. For 2005–06, the information is not available in the format requested and could be obtained only at a disproportionate cost.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many disabled adults have claimed tax credits in each month since April 2003 in Coventry, South. [64749]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given to the hon. Member for Yeovil (Mr. Laws) on 31 January 2006, Official Report, column 414W.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many referrals were received by HM Revenue and Customs' Special Compliance Office and Criminal Investigations in respect of tax credit fraud in the period from April 2005 to February 2006. [62789]

Dawn Primarolo: In the period 1 April 2005 to 28 February 2006, Criminal Investigations received around 2,100 referrals relating to tax credits.

Ms Diana R. Johnson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many cases of forged tax credits which resulted in prosecution have been reported to Jobcentre Plus in Hull in the past 12 months. [62864]

Dawn Primarolo: There have been no cases of forged (fraudulent) tax credit claims resulting in a prosecution relating to Jobcentre Plus in Hull in the last 12 months.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what additional checks and safeguards have been introduced into the tax credits system since 1 December 2005 to reduce fraud; and if he will make a statement. [63322]

Dawn Primarolo: HMRC takes fraud very seriously and as part of its everyday activity, continually examines its approaches to tackling fraud—introducing new measures and initiatives where necessary. Following the closure of the tax credit e-portal in December, HMRC is planning to implement through scheduled IT releases additional measures and will reopen the portal once this work provides the necessary assurance. It would be inappropriate to give specific details of these as it could aid those seeking to gain through fraud.

CABINET OFFICE

Departmental Advertising Costs

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how much (a) his Department and (b) its agencies spent on advertising for job vacancies in each of the last five years. [65969]

Mr. Jim Murphy: Recruitment expenditure for the Cabinet Office is shown in the following table:

	Expenditure (£)
2004–05	317,828
2005–06	249,535

The Cabinet Office is also responsible for the advertising and filling of Fast Stream vacancies across the Civil Service. These figures include specific Fast Stream advertising costs of £81,000 for the period 2004–05 and £47,888 for the period 2005–06.

Cabinet Office systems are not sufficiently structured to provide accurate information on this issue prior to 1 April 2004.

Recruitment expenditure for the Central Office of Information is shown in the following table.

	Expenditure (£)
2001–02	61,622
2002–03	133,013
2003–04	80,457
2004–05	179,807
2005–06	125,884

The figure for Central Office of Information 2005–06 is still subject to audit.

Office of Public Service Reform

Norman Baker: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what factors underlay his decision to abolish the Office of Public Service Reform. [65223]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The transfer of Office of Public Service Reform's functions to other units is one of a number of recent changes designed to produce a more strategic and better focused Cabinet Office.

Norman Baker: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what the total expenditure was during its lifetime of the Office of Public Service Reform, broken down by (a) salaries, (b) funds spent on consultants and (c) other costs. [65224]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The total expenditure during the lifetime (June 2001 to January 2006) of the Office of Public Service Reform, broken down by salaries, funds spent on consultants and other costs (including non-salary payroll costs, secondees, publications and conferences) is shown in the following table.

Expenditure	£ million
Salaries	4.9
Consultants	3.5
Other costs	4.1
Total expenditure	12.5

Norman Baker: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many individuals in the Office of Public Service Reform were, when it was wound up, receiving gross salaries in excess of £100,000 per annum. [65226]

Mr. Jim Murphy: No one in the Office of Public Service Reform was receiving a gross salary in excess of £100,000 per annum.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Benefits

Mr. Jeremy Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what percentage of the population claimed (a) income support and (b) incapacity benefit in (i) the UK, (ii) the South West and (iii) Taunton constituency in each year since 1997. [64313]

Mrs. McGuire: Information is not available in the format requested. The available information for Great Britain, the South West Government Office Region and the Taunton parliamentary constituency is in the tables. No proportions can be given for the constituency figures as working-age population estimates are not available by parliamentary constituency.

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what (a) benefits and (b) other assistance are offered by his Department to those who act as carers for ill or disabled relatives in West Lancashire; what measures are in place to encourage higher levels of take-up of such benefits; and if he will make a statement. [64292]

Mrs. McGuire: The administration of carer's allowance is a matter for the chief executive of the Disability and Carers Service, Mr. Terry Moran. He will write to the hon. member with the information requested.

Letter from Vivien Hopkins:

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, what (a) benefits and (b) other assistance are offered by his Department to those who act as carers for ill or disabled relatives in West Lancashire; what measures are in place to encourage higher levels of take-up of such benefits; and if he will make a statement.

The Minister for Disabled People, Anne McGuire MP, promised you a substantive reply from the Chief Executive of the Disability and Carers Service (DCS). In the Chief Executive's absence I have been asked to reply on his behalf.

In answer to parts (a) and (b) of your question, depending on their personal circumstances, carers have access to the full range of social security benefits. Those who provide regular and substantial care of at least 35 hours a week for a severely disabled person receiving Attendance Allowance or the equivalent rates of the Disability Living Allowance care component can be entitled to a Carer's Allowance and if on a low income, to the carer premium in the income-related benefits or the carer's additional amount in Pension Credit.

Information on the recipients of carer's related benefits in West Lancashire is provided in the following table:

Recipients of carer's related benefits in the Westminster parliamentary constituency of West Lancashire as at August 2005

Benefit	Claimants
Carer's allowance	900
Carer's additional amount paid with pension credit	500
Carer's premium with income-related benefits
Income support	400
Income based jobseeker's allowance	—

Notes:

1. Definitions and conventions: "-" Nil or Negligible;"." Not applicable.
2. Caseload figures are rounded to the nearest hundred.
3. Carer's allowance: Total shows the number of people in receipt of an allowance, and excludes people with entitlement where the payment has been suspended, for example if they are in hospital.

4. Pension credit: Pension credit was introduced on 6 October 2003 and replaced minimum income guarantee (income support for people aged 60 or over).
5. Parliamentary constituencies are allocated by matching postcodes against the relevant ONS Postcode Directory.
6. A smaller number of former MIG cases did not convert to pension credit on 6 October 2003. These cases have been excluded from the figures and are mainly cases where the claimant is aged under 60 and the partner over 60.
7. IS, PC and CA figures are taken from 100 per cent. WPLS data.
8. JSA (IB) figure is derived by applying 5 per cent. proportions to 100 per cent. WPLS data.
9. August 2005 is the latest published data available.

Information on housing benefit (HB) and council tax benefit (CTB) recipients with a carer premium in the North West Government office region (GOR) is provided in the following table:

Notes:
1. Numbers are rounded to the nearest thousand.
2. HB/CTB data refers to households and may be a single person or a couple.
3. HB figures exclude any extended payment cases.
4. CTB figures exclude any single adult rebate cases.
5. The figures are based on a 1 per cent. sample and are therefore subject to a degree of sampling variation.
6. May 2004 are the latest data available.
7. The lowest level the figures can be broken down to is GOR, therefore figures have been provided for North West GOR.

In answer to the second part of your question asking what measures are in place to encourage higher levels of take-up of such benefits, information and advice about entitlement to Carer's Allowance and other benefits are available from a range of outlets. These include the DCS' Benefit Enquiry Line which is a dedicated helpline, providing advice and information to disabled people and carers or representatives, social security offices, Jobcentre Plus offices, DWP and other internet sites, local authorities, Citizens Advice and welfare benefit offices, public libraries, health clinics, doctors' surgeries and health visitors. Officials from the DCS also discuss Carer's Allowance at outreach events throughout Great Britain, including West Lancashire.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what forms of financial assistance are available for full-time carers. [64376]

Mrs. McGuire: Depending on their personal circumstances, carers have access to the full range of social security benefits. Those who provide regular and substantial care of at least 35 hours a week for a severely disabled person receiving attendance allowance or the equivalent rates of the disability living allowance care component can be entitled to a carer's allowance and, if on a low income, to the carer premium in the income-related benefits or the carer's additional amount in pension credit. Most carers entitled to carer's allowance are credited with national insurance contributions to protect their entitlement to state pension, and around two million carers will benefit from the special arrangements we have made for them in the state second pension.

The Government's National Carer's Strategy, which we developed with carers and the organisations that represent them, and published in 1999, has achieved much in improving the financial support for carers, including older carers, through carer's allowance and other benefits, and through introduction of the carers grant to support local authorities in providing breaks and services for carers. In the last local government finance settlement, we confirmed our commitment to continue the carers grant beyond 2006. Until at least the end of the 2007–08 financial year, provision for the grant will be £185 million a year. In this way, the Government will have invested an extra £1 billion in support for carers by 2008.

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what percentage of incapacity benefit claimants in West Lancashire have been receiving the benefit for five years; and what the percentage was in May (a) 1983 and (b) 1997. [64113]

Mrs. McGuire: Incapacity benefit was introduced in April 1995, so no information is available about durations of five years or over prior to May 2000. A breakdown below national level is not available for the predecessor benefits. As at August 2005, the most recent available information, 51 per cent. of incapacity benefit claimants in Lancashire West had been claiming the benefit for over five years.

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many incapacity benefit claimants of working age in West Lancashire are in receipt of (a) income support with a disability premium, (b) incapacity benefit and (c) severe disablement allowance. [64119]

Mrs. McGuire: As at August 2005, there were 1,800 income support claimants of working age with a disability premium, 4,500 incapacity benefit claimants of working age and 500 severe disablement allowance claimants of working age in West Lancashire.

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the average time taken between (a) the submitting of a claim for incapacity benefit and the formal acknowledgement of that claim by his Department, (b) the formal receipt of a claim for incapacity benefit and the carrying out of a personal capability assessment interview, (c) a personal capability assessment for incapacity benefit and the decision on eligibility being made, (d) the decision on eligibility for incapacity benefit and the first payment being made and (e) the claim for incapacity benefit being submitted and the first payment being made using the most recent period for which figures are available.[64839]

Mrs. McGuire: The information requested is not collected centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions to what point can a recipient of incapacity benefit backdate a claim once eligibility for the benefit has been confirmed; and when in the claims process is the official start point for the payment once eligibility for incapacity benefit has been confirmed. [64840]

Mrs. McGuire: Claims for incapacity benefit can be backdated for up to three months prior to the date of claim.

Incapacity benefit is not paid for the first three days in a period of incapacity but payment will be made for any other day within the three-month period providing the conditions of entitlement are satisfied.

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions pursuant to the answer of 7 March 2006, Official Report, column 1349W, on incapacity benefit, how many recipients of incapacity benefit are receiving an adult dependant addition; and what the average payment is for such recipients. [64841]

Mrs. McGuire: As at August 2005, the most recent available figures, there were 61,400 incapacity benefit claimants in receipt of an adult dependency increase. Of these, 37,700 claimants were in receipt of only an adult dependency increase; the average weekly benefit paid to these claimants was £134.21. Additionally, there were 23,800 incapacity benefit claimants in receipt of both an adult dependency increase and a child dependency increase; the average weekly benefit paid to this group was £151.41.

Note:

Numbers are rounded to the nearest 100; totals do not sum due to rounding.

Mr. Crabb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether the benefit replacing incapacity benefit will be taxable. [64277]

Mrs. McGuire: I refer the hon. Member to the written answer given to him by my right hon. Friend, Margaret Hodge on 27 March 2006, Official Report, column 720W.

Child Support

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many parents have been found to have been avoiding paying the correct amount of child support in (a) Tamworth constituency, (b) Staffordshire, (c) the West Midlands and (d) the UK in each year since 1997. [22153]

Mr. Plaskitt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Mr. Stephen Geraghty. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Hilary Reynolds:

In reply to your parliamentary question about the Child Support Agency, the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the chief executive. As he is currently unavailable, I am responding on his behalf. Please accept my apologies for the delay in responding to your question.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many parents have been found to have been avoiding paying the rightful amount of child support in (a) Tamworth constituency (b) Staffordshire (c) the West Midlands and (d) the UK in each year since 1997.We cannot provide the information at the requested constituency or county level. We have some information at West Midlands level, but only in relation to cases under the old scheme until 2003. All other data is given at GB level, as the CSA does not cover Northern Ireland cases.There are a variety of ways in which a non-resident parent could potentially avoid paying the right amount of child support. For example, an NRP could:

Refuse to provide information about their income or circumstances.

By refusing to provide this information they are preventing the Agency from performing a maintenance calculation/assessment and could thus be said to be avoiding paying the rightful amount of child support. Where a parent consistently refuses to provide this information, the Agency may impose an Interim Maintenance Assessment (old scheme) or a Default Maintenance Decision (new scheme). Information on the number of DMDs and IMAs imposed by the Agency is attached as Table 1.

Under-declare their income and assets. Doing this may result in the establishment of a lower liability for child maintenance than should otherwise have applied, had the NRP's true income and assets been declared. In this case the parent with care may then apply for a departure or variation (old and new rules respectively) from the standard formula, on the basis that the non-resident parent's lifestyle is inconsistent with the income they are declaring to the Agency. Limitations with management information means that the number of variations applied for is not available. However, the number of departures applied for is attached as Table 2.

Failure to pay the full assessed amount of child maintenance. An NRP who does not pay the full maintenance liability due to them is clearly avoiding paying the rightful amount of child support. The number of NRPs who do not pay the full liability for which they have been assessed is attached as Table 3 and 3.1, relating to GB and west Midlands respectively.

I hope you find this helpful.

Jessica Morden: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what measures will be introduced to improve the level of child support payments from non-resident non-paying parents. [61896]

Mr. Plaskitt: On 9 February my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, announced that Sir David Henshaw will undertake a fundamental redesign of child support policy and delivery mechanisms and he will deliver his finding before summer recess.

My right hon. Friend also announced that we are making available an additional £120 million to the Child Support Agency to implement the Operational Improvement plan which introduces a number of measures to improve the compliance rate of non-resident parents. This plan is available in the House Library.

For your benefit the relevant section of this plan is as follows:

Child Support Agency Operational Improvement Plan 2006–2009

Putting It Right: Enforcing Responsibilities

The Issues

Nearly one in three non-resident parents who have been assessed and are due to make a payment fail to pay

Debt accrued since 1993 as a result of non-resident parents' failure to pay exceeds £3.3 billion, some of which is considered uncollectable

The Agency does not respond quickly or firmly enough when non-resident parents start to default

Non-resident parents and the general public need greater awareness of the impact on children of the failure to pay child support

The Action

Managing non-resident parents with child support debt more effectively.

Child support debt is created by parents failing to fulfil their responsibility for their children. We will take quicker and firmer action against those who default on payment. We will employ external debt collection agencies to recover outstanding debt.

We will also improve our own debt collection and enforcement activity to ensure greater returns by using best practice from the private sector. Over 600 more staff trained and effective within the next year and staffing dedicated to enforcement activity quadrupled over the period of the plan through redeployment and restructuring.

There are many non-resident parents who seek to avoid payment of debt by evading the attempts of the Agency to contact them. We will make more use of information held by HMRC and credit reference agencies to track down those who owe money for their children.

Court action for those who won't pay

We will significantly increase the number of non-resident parents brought before the courts through our increased focus on compliance and enforcement, utilising the existing range of sanctions available such as driving licence removal and imprisonment.

We have been increasing the number of cases where debt is secured through Liability Orders in the courts. We will continue to increase our efforts here, enabling us to seek the seizure of assets where appropriate.

Understanding the impact for children

Failure to pay child support causes real hardship for children. We will increase the awareness of this hardship among non-resident parents and the general public. We will work with the media and stakeholders to develop a campaign to make clear that failing to pay has real and lasting consequences for children.

The Improvement

More responsibility from non-resident parents

Increased enforcement action and action in the courts

More money for more children

Using debt collection agencies to recover more debt more quickly. Over £100 million more historic debt collected over the three years, although it should be noted that new debt will continue to accrue over this period.

Delivery that is more efficient and effective

Four times as many designated enforcement staff generating increased levels of case compliance from 65 per cent. currently, to 75 per cent. by March 2008 and 80 per cent. in March 2009.

Departmental Advertising Costs

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will list the public information advertising campaigns run by his Department in each of the last seven years; and how much his Department spent on (a) newspapers and (b) television advertising in each of those campaigns. [64502]

Mrs. McGuire: The Department for Work and Pensions was formed in June 2001 from parts of the former Department for Social Security, the former Department for Education and Employment, and the Employment Service. Information prior to 2001 is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. The information for other years is as follows:

Notes:

1. The tables do not include the following as the information is not held centrally and to obtain it would incur disproportionate cost:

spend by non-departmental bodies for which the Department is responsible;

details of highly localised publicity activity by the Department's customer-facing businesses; recruitment or procurement advertising;

Jobcentre Plus p licity during 2002 to 2003 as at that time allocations sat w individual policy teams and within regional budgets.
2. The figures in these tables refer to media spend only, excluding production, direct mail, public relations and other costs.
3. All figures have been rounded to the nearest thousand.
4. All figures are quoted net of VAT.
5. Press includes national press, regional press, specialist press, advertorials and featurelink; to provide costs for newspaper only advertising would incur disproportionate cost.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much (a) his Department and (b) its agencies spent on advertising for job vacancies in each of the last five years. [65968]

Mrs. McGuire: This information is not collected centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Disability Employment Advisers

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what information is made available to disability employment advisers by his Department about organisations that provide (a) support and (b) supervision for supported permitted work; and what funding is available to such organisations to provide these services. [64276]

Margaret Hodge: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the chief executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lesley Strathie, dated 20 April 2006:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question asking what information is made available to disability employment advisers by his Department about organisations that provide (a) support and (b) supervision for supported permitted work; and what funding is available to such organisations to provide these services. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

As part of their training, all Disability Employment Advisers are made aware of the provisions for Supported Permitted Work, the relevant benefit legislation and the local organisations that provide this service. Advisers are encouraged to build relationships with organisations who provide such support, typically these would be local authorities and organisations involved with employment for disabled people. This ensures that Advisers are aware of all possibilities of support for customers. Detailed guidance on Supported Permitted Work, setting out the type of support available, is also available.

The Department does not provide funding to organisations for the work they do supporting those participating in Supported Permitted Work.

I hope this is helpful.

Disabled People (Heating Bills)

Mr. Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assistance with heating bills is provided to disabled people in receipt of benefits (a) throughout the year and (b) during the winter months. [64377]

Mrs. McGuire: Disability living allowance and attendance allowance provide severely disabled people with a contribution towards the extra costs they face because of the effects of their disability. Recipients are free to spend these benefits in any way they choose, During the winter months, disabled people in receipt of certain benefits may be eligible to receive a cold weather payment. Cold weather payments are intended to provide extra help to the most vulnerable people towards additional heating costs during a period of cold weather. People receiving pension credit are eligible. Income support or income-based jobseeker's allowance customers with a pensioner or disability premium, or who have a child under five or a child who is disabled in their family, are eligible because they are considered to be the most vulnerable.

Winter fuel payments of up to £200 are available to disabled people aged 60 or over, and up to £300 for those aged 80 or over, regardless of whether they are in receipt of any benefit.

Pension Credit

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what criteria are used by (a) the Pension Service and (b) other agencies for which his Department has responsibility in (i) identifying and (ii) approaching people who have not applied for pension credit but might be eligible for it. [64506]

Mr. Timms: The Pension Service uses savings and tax information obtained from Her Majesty's Revenue and Customs—together with administrative data from the Department—to help identify those customers whose income and savings levels would exclude them from entitlement to pension credit. The Pension Service then assesses the most appropriate way of approaching those customers with potential eligibility.

Pensions

Mr. Holloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what steps he is taking to ensure that Royal Mail pensioners will be paid their accrued pension benefits in full in the event of Royal Mail being unable to meet its obligations. [64160]

Mr. Timms: The Government do not guarantee company pension schemes. However, the Pensions Act 2004 puts in place specific measures to provide support, advice and protection to schemes and to scheme members. These include:

The Pensions Regulator which has a broad range of powers to help it fulfil its statutory objectives which include protecting the benefits of occupational pension scheme members. The Regulator will act quickly to anticipate and tackle any risks to those members;

A new scheme funding regime which requires trustees and employers to agree an appropriate funding target for the scheme and a plan for eradicating any shortfall; and

The Pension Protection Fund which will provide protection to members of eligible defined benefit occ tional pension schemes where the employer becomes insolvent (after 6 April 2005) and leaves the scheme under funded.

As a defined benefit occupational pension scheme, the Royal Mail scheme is eligible to benefit from these arrangements.

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will list the countries where British pensioners living abroad (a) do and (b) do not have their pensions uprated; and if he will make a statement. [65922]

Mr. Timms: We uprate the UK state pension to people who are living outside the UK where there is a legal requirement to do so under either the terms of a reciprocal agreement or EC law. The following lists show those countries where the state pensions are uprated; it is not uprated in any other country The UK has reciprocal agreements covering the uprating of state pensions with the following countries:

Austria[1]
Barbados
Belgium[1]
Bermuda
Channel Islands
Cyprus[1]
Finland[1]
France[1]
Germany[1]
Gibraltar
Iceland[1]
Ireland[1]
Isle of Man
Israel
Italy[1]
Jamaica
Luxembourg[1]
Malta[1]
Mauritius
Netherlands[1]
Norway[1]
Philippines
Portugal[1]
Spain[1]
Sweden[1]
Switzerland[1]
Turkey
USA
Yugoslavia (including the State Union of Serbia and Montenegro, Bosnia-Hercegovina, Croatia, Slovenia and the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia).

UK nationals living in the following countries are entitled to upratings of state pension under EC law on co-ordination of social security:

Austria
Belgium
Cyprus
Czech Republic
Denmark
Estonia
Finland
France
Germany
Gibraltar
Greece
Hungary
Iceland
Ireland
Italy
Latvia
Liechtenstein
Lithuania
Luxembourg
Malta
Netherlands
Norway
Poland
Portugal
Slovak Republic
Slovenia
Spain
Sweden
Switzerland

[1] The UK's reciprocal agreements with these countries have generally been superseded by EC law on co-ordination of social security.

Winter Fuel Payment

Mr. Dunne: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people his Department estimates were entitled to receive their winter fuel payment but did not do so in (a) 2001–02, (b) 2002–03, (c) 2003–04, (d) 2004–05 and (e) 2005–06. [64921]

Mr. Timms: Most people who qualify for a winter fuel payment do not need to make a claim because they are paid automatically from DWP records. Some people aged 60 or over who are not in receipt of a benefit administered by DWP do need to claim. Many men aged 60–64, for example, fall into this category and need to claim. However, we do not have any estimate for how many eligible people have not claimed.

Mr. Dunne: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people his Department estimates did not receive their backdated winter fuel allowance for 2005–06 consequent on his Department's ruling that claims had to be made by 30 March 2006 for this winter. [64922]

Mr. Timms: Using departmental records we issue claim forms automatically to people we can identify who may be newly eligible. We cannot identify everyone who may be newly eligible as some people have had no recent contact with the Department and we do not hold up-to-date address details. It is therefore not possible to provide an estimate of how many eligible people have not received a winter fuel payment because they did not make a claim by 30 March 2006. In order to maximise take-up we run an extensive publicity campaign advising people how to claim their payment and giving details of the cut-off date for claims.

Mr. Dunne: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many and what percentage of appeals for back payment of winter fuel payments were successful in each year from 2002 to 2005. [65054]

Mr. Timms: Details of appeals on late claims for 2002 to 2004 are provided as follows:

Winter	Appeals received	Appeals allowed by tribunal (Number)	Appeals allowed by tribunal (Percentage)
2002	1,407	5	Less than 0.5
2003	1,157	2	Less than 0.5
2004	733	4	Less than 1

No appeals have been received for 2005 as decisions on late claims for winter 2005 have not yet been issued.

CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

Case Management

Vera Baird: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what steps she plans to take to increase the number of cases presented to magistrates courts by designated caseworkers. [64859]

The Solicitor-General: I have been asked to reply.

The CPS has embarked on a recruitment, training and development programme to prepare sufficient numbers of designated caseworkers to handle a minimum of 16 per cent. of routine magistrates court sessions nationally in 2006–07. In some areas this figure will be much higher. Recently revised guidelines issued by the Director of Public Prosecutions expanded the range of cases capable of being handled by designated caseworkers; and CPS staff will work closely with their HMCS partners to seek better scheduling of cases suitable for presentation by designated caseworkers.

Vera Baird: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs whether she plans to establish small prosecution case management teams, made up of designated caseworkers, administrative staff and lawyers responsible for reviewing and presenting cases from a single police division as recommended by the National Audit Office. [64852]

The Solicitor-General: I have been asked to reply.

As identified by the NAO in their visits to a number of operational units, particularly in Northumbria and South Wales, alignment of dedicated teams of CPS prosecutors, designated caseworkers and administrative staff, to police divisions/basic command units, and ideally servicing discrete magistrates courts, offered the best model for the effective local delivery of justice, both in terms of value for money, victim and witness care, and in promoting the confidence of the local community.

The CPS has initiated a programme of activity to restructure all operational units handling volume crime into a similar model, working in close partnership with police colleagues and the courts, and in line with current proposals for police reform, currently the subject of consultation.

Criminal Justice Act 2003

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what assessment the Department has made of the impact of the bad character provisions in the Criminal Justice Act 2003 on criminal proceedings. [64467]

Fiona Mactaggart: I have been asked to reply.

We have commissioned a research project to assess the impact on the courts of the bad character provisions of the Criminal Justice Act 2003. The researchers are due to complete their work by the end of 2006.

Electoral Reform

James Duddridge: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what assessment she has made of the impact on voter participation of the narrowness of the majority of the sitting hon. Member. [53887]

Bridget Prentice: My Department has not made an assessment. Research into the relationship between voter participation and the contestability of seats has not led to a consensus on its impact. It is one of many factors which people may take into account in deciding whether to vote.

Human Rights Act

Vera Baird: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs (1) what progress has been made towards making the Human Rights Act 1998 applicable to private providers of public functions; [66030]

(2) when she expects to publish proposals for making the Human Rights Act 1998 applicable to private providers of public functions; [66031]

(3) what discussions she has had with the Department for Trade and Industry on measures needed to make the Human Rights Act 1998 applicable to private providers of public functions. [66032]

Bridget Prentice: My noble Friend the Minister for Human Rights (Baroness Ashton of Upholland) undertook that the Government would seek a case in which to argue for the its original intention as to the scope of the Human Rights Act 1998. A suitable case has been identified, and the Secretary of State for Constitutional Affairs has applied to intervene. We believe that a successful intervention would be the best resolution of this problem.

The Government nevertheless still intends to issue a consultation on the scope of the Human Rights Act in the context of the Discrimination Law Review. As part of this, my noble Friend is of course in contact with her ministerial colleagues, including the Minister for Women and Equality at the Department of Trade and Industry (Meg Munn).

Voter Registration

Chris Ruane: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what measures her Department has taken to encourage illiterate and semi-literate electors to register to vote. [65824]

Bridget Prentice: Electoral Registration Officers (EROs) send an electoral registration form to every household each year at the annual canvass of electors, and a member of each household is required to complete and return the registration form to the ERO on behalf of all persons living there. The Electoral Administration Bill currently before Parliament places a duty on EROs to ensure electoral registers are complete. As part of this duty, EROs will be required where necessary to make house-to-house inquiries to ensure completed registration forms are returned for all eligible persons. Therefore illiterate, or semi-literate, electors may not have to complete the registration form by themselves.

My Department is also working with key stakeholders on improving the annual canvass form by making it clearer, simpler and easy to understand.

HEALTH

Advertising and Marketing

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 20 March 2006, Official Report, column 139W, on advertising and marketing campaigns, what financial limits will be placed on advertising of services by hospitals. [61557]

Mr. Byrne: The initial principles set out in "The NHS in England: The Operating Framework for 2006–07" state that providers will not want to spend excessively on marketing and are likely to welcome clear guidance on what is acceptable. As indicated in my earlier response, the Department is currently working with key stakeholders, such as the NHS Confederation, the Foundation Trust Network, the Healthcare Commission, and NHS Partners, in order to develop this guidance, which will be published later in the year.

Agenda for Change

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the payments due under Agenda for Change will be made; and if she will make a statement. [59894]

Mr. Byrne: The new pay system has been designed to support modernisation within the health service and is a pay reform package designed to match pay to the weight of the job. The pay rates under the new system came into effect from the 1 October 2004, and when staff are assimilated any pay increase will normally be back-dated to this date. As at the end of February 2006, 97.1 per cent. of national health service staff had been assimilated, and this is expected to have risen to 99 per cent. at the end of March.

Alzheimer's Disease

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance her Department has issued to primary care and other health trusts on the use of medications and remedies to assist patients with the symptoms of Alzheimer's disease before the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence reports in July. [63875]

Mr. Byrne: The Department has not issued any guidance to primary care and other health trusts on the use of medications and remedies to assist patients with the symptoms of Alzheimer's disease. Until the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence issues revised guidance to the national health service, its original guidance issued in 2001 continues to apply.

BCG Vaccinations

Justine Greening: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether her Department has reviewed the Wandsworth primary care trust local BCG vaccination policy; if she will place a copy of it in the Library; and if she will make a statement. [64402]

Jane Kennedy: The Department does not review local primary care trust (PCT) bacillus calmette-guerin (BCG) vaccination policy.

PCTs are responsible for the performance of immunisation services and for specifying the level and quality of services provided. PCTs will in turn be held to account for their performance, through their commissioning arrangements with service providers, by the strategic health authority.

Bowel Cancer Screening

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many testing kits have been (a) ordered, (b) manufactured and (c) distributed as part of the rollout of the National Bowel Cancer Screening Programme from 1 April 2006; and who is responsible for providing the testing kits; [65263]

(2) when each of the programme hubs for the National Bowel Cancer Screening Programme will be (a) commissioned and (b) operational; [65264]

(3) how many (a) men and (b) women aged 60 to 69 years have been invited to be screened for bowel cancer as part of the rollout of the National Bowel Cancer Screening Programme from 1 April 2006; [65265]

(4) what funding her Department has agreed for the National Bowel Cancer Screening Programme in (a) 2006–07 and (b) 2007–08; [65266]

(5) what estimate she has made of the increase in bowel cancer screening capacity in England since 1 April 2006. [65267]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answers 24 April 2006]: The national bowel cancer screening programme will be rolled out nationally over the next three years. Funding for the first year of the screening programme is being transferred to the national cancer screening team in Sheffield, and Wolverhampton will be the first local screening centre.

We estimate that around £10 million will be spent on the first stages of the national bowel cancer screening programme. Funding decisions have not yet been made for future years are but we are committed to ensuring that the necessary funding is available to ensure the full implementation of the programme.

NHS Cancer Screening Programmes are taking all the necessary action to ensure the successful roll-out of the programme, including the procurement of testing kits. The kit supplier has been notified that the first order is for 100,000 kits. No kits have been distributed as they have not yet been received from the manufacturer.

Five programme hubs across England will invite men and women to participate in the screening programme, send out the faecal occult blood (FOB) testing kits, interpret kits and send results out. 90 to 100 local screening centres will provide endoscopy services for the 2 per cent. of men and women who have a positive FOB test result.

The first of the five programme hubs will be established in Rugby. The NHS Cancer Screening Programmes team is currently considering where the other programme hubs will be located. We intend that the other four programme hubs will be established by March 2007, with announcements to be made in due course.

We estimate that we could invite about 120,000–150,000 men and women for screening in 2006–07 as part of the national bowel cancer screening programme. No invitations have been sent out as yet. In addition, the pilot in Rugby plan to invite a further 28,360 people over the next 12 months.

Capita Group

James Brokenshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many tenders (a) Capita plc and (b) its subsidiaries has submitted to her Department in each of the last three years; and how many tenders were successful. [61466]

Mr. Byrne: We do not hold centrally information that would allow for an analysis of how many tenders Capita Group plc or its subsidiaries have been invited to bid for, and could not obtain this information without incurring disproportionate costs.

Cheshire Mersey Strategic Health Authority

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will publish the McKinsey report on which Cheshire Mersey Strategic Health Authority based its report on preparing NHS trusts for foundation status. [63639]

Mr. Byrne: This is a matter for Cheshire and Merseyside Strategic Health Authority.

Choose and Book

Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many out-patient appointments have been booked since April 2005. [54875]

Mr. Byrne: 6,823,970 outpatient appointments have been booked.

Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 20 March 2006, Official Report, column 143W, on choose and book, if she will break down the number of new bookings made via the choose and book service by (a) inpatient and (b) outpatient appointment in each primary care trust involved in the project. [61299]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 27 March 2006]: Choose and book is not used for booking inpatient appointments. The data given in my earlier response included bookings for outpatient and other appointments, such as appointments within primary care. At present though it is not possible to differentiate types of appointments more precisely.

Christmas Parties

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much the NHS spent on staff Christmas parties in 2004–05. [63914]

Mr. Byrne: The information requested is not held centrally.

Clinical Trials

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) males and (b) females have had an adverse reaction to drugs whilst taking part in clinical trials in each of the last five years; what the drug involved was in each case; at which hospital each trial took place; and what the outcome was in each case. [60936]

Jane Kennedy: Clinical trials are designed to evaluate the safety and efficacy of new drugs and new indications for approved drugs. The Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency (MHRA) receive applications for over 1,000 new trials each year involving a planned number of new trial participants of approximately 90,000 to 95,000.

Adverse reactions occurring during clinical trials are reported to the MHRA in summary form in end of trial reports, submitted by the trial sponsor within one year of a trial being completed. These data are not consolidated in any database form and cannot be analysed across trials. Only serious unexpected suspected adverse reactions (SUSARs) occurring during clinical trials are reported during the trial and are recorded on the MHRA's safety database.

The numbers of reported serious unexpected suspected adverse reactions is shown in the table.

	Males	Females	Not classified	Total
2001	314	275	17	606
2002	235	207	10	452
2003	154	163	19	336
2004	170	154	11	335
2005	167	171	21	359

In 2005, it would appear that the total number of SUSARs reported amounted to an estimate of less than 0.4 per cent. of the total planned number of patients participating in clinical trials for that year. These occurred with a wide range of drugs being investigated in a wide range of medical conditions, many of which were serious, such as cancers, etc.

At this stage of development, information about a drug would be regarded as commercially confidential. In addition, information about location, or any other data which could identify individuals will not be disclosed in order to protect the identity of those individuals.

ComMedica

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what protocols are in place for the suspension and termination of contracts between providers and Connecting for Health. [61732]

Mr. Byrne: NHS Connecting for Health manages its relationships with its contractors through a range of standard contractual provisions and remedies designed to address poor performance at an early stage and to support the contractor towards full compliance. These include requirements for the contractor to supply more information about the manner in which services are being provided, and the causes of any failures on the contractor's part. Others enable NHS Connecting for Health to exert greater control over how a contractor provides the services, or to require that a contractor provide the services in a different way. Specific financial remedies cover compensation for the national health service for loss suffered due to non-delivery, and the withholding of payment to incentivise compliance with contractual obligations. The contract does contain provision for the termination of the whole contract, or a part of the services provided by a contractor. However, termination is a step that NHS Connecting for Health would contemplate only after every opportunity, and all possible assistance had been given to enable a contractor to recover its position and become successful.

Consultants

Steve Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much her Department has spent on consultants in each year since 2003–04. [62565]

Mr. Byrne: The total cost of consultants engaged directly by the Department, where in-house resources were not available, is shown in the table.

Financial year	Cost (£000)
2003–04	10,031
2004–05	12,800
2005–06[1]	[2]4,658

[1] To end of January.
[2] The 2005–06 spend is lower because the Department has rectified some miscoding against expenditure category codes to provide a more accurate figure of external consultancy spend to 31 January 2006.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many consultants were hired to work in her Department in (a) 2003, (b) 2004, (c) 2005 and (d) 2006. [60626]

Mr. Byrne: The Department does not collect information that would identify the numbers of consultants engaged for the years requested. Contracts do not usually specify the precise numbers of consultants and the numbers can vary during a contract.

Departmental Officials (Hospital Visits)

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which hospitals officials in the Department have visited since 1997; for what purpose in each case; if she will list the (a) date, (b) time and (c) duration of each visit; and if she will make a statement. [64590]

Mr. Byrne: The information requested can be provided only at disproportionate costs.

Diabetes

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many (a) type 1 and (b) type 2 diabetics there are in England; [65920]

(2) what estimate she has made of the number of people who will develop (a) type 1 and (b) type 2 diabetes in the next 10 years. [65923]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The PBS[1] model estimates that, in 2005, the number of people with type 1 (T1) diabetes in England was 169,913 and the number of people with type 2 (T2) diabetes in England was 2,265,649. The PBS model does not estimate new incidence of diabetes. However, it does estimate that there will be a total of 2.75 million persons with diabetes in 2015 (T1 = 173,733 and T2 = 2,573,560) compared to 2.44 million persons with diabetes in 2005 (T1 = 169,913 and T2 = 2,265,649).

[1] Yorkshire and Humberside Public Health Observatory PBS (Public Health Observatory, Brent Primary Care Trust, School of Health and Related Research Sheffield University) diabetes population prevalence model.

Domestic Violence

Ms Diana R. Johnson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the access to general practitioner services by families who have been involved in domestic violence in Hull North. [64089]

Mr. Byrne: All residents in Kingston-upon-Hull have equal access to general practitioner (GP) and other primary care services. In December 2005, 100 per cent. of patients in both Eastern Hull and West Hull primary care trust areas were able to be offered an appointment to see a GP within two working days.

Electricity Cables

Chris Huhne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research her Department has undertaken into potential health risks associated with living in close proximity to high voltage electricity grid overhead cables. [64854]

Caroline Flint: The Department's radiation protection research programme supports a number of studies investigating the possible health effects of electromagnetic fields (EMF). These range from laboratory work investigating possible cellular effects to large population studies. In addition, the Department, along with the Health and Safety Executive, has supported the World Health Organization's international EMF project since it started in 1997.

The Health Protection Agency's radiation protection division (HPA-RPD) keeps the worldwide research findings on electromagnetic fields (EMF) and health continually under review. In 2004, on the basis of a comprehensive review of the existing body of research to date, the HPA-RPD, previously the national radiological protection board, recommended the adoption of new EMF exposure guidelines in this country. In addition, in view of the scientific uncertainties in relation to power frequency EMF, the HPA recommended the Government "consider the need for further precautionary measures". They have also noted that the majority of elevated magnetic fields are due to variations in the electricity supply and distribution system, the presence of substations and equipment in the home rather than proximity to high voltage overhead cables.

Practical precautionary measures are now being considered in detail by a stakeholder advisory group, SAGE, that includes Government Departments, agencies, electricity industry, specialists and public concern groups. Details of the process can be found on its website at www.rkpartnership.co.uk/sage

Emergency Admissions

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what initiatives accompanied her Department's press release of 20 March, reference 2006/114, entitled Improve

Healthcare by Reducing Unnecessary Emergency Admissions; and for what reasons the information was issued in the form of a press release. [61148]

Mr. Byrne: One of the priorities for the NHS Institute for Innovation and Improvement, when it was launched in July 2005, was to look at how the national health service could improve productivity. One of the first productivity savings established by the NHS Institute was that of reducing the number of unnecessary emergency admissions; namely that a 30 per cent. reduction in unnecessary emergency admissions could save the NHS around £400 million annually.

The information on the productivity savings was issued in the form of a press release to make the NHS and public aware of the patient benefits and cost savings that were taking place in a number of NHS organisations, and to help demonstrate to other NHS organisations methods of how to increase efficiency and productivity.

Health Care (Elderly People)

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what legislation governs the hiring of (a) paid and (b) volunteer staff within health care facilities caring for the elderly. [53865]

Mr. Byrne: When employing staff, including those working with older people, the national health service is required to follow the guidance, "Safer Recruitment", issued in May 2005. "Safer Recruitment" covers all the pre and post-appointment checks, including checks against the protection of children act list that NHS employers are required to make before appointing anyone, including employees, volunteers, students and trainees, to a position in the NHS. A copy is available in the Library.

In regulated social care, providers must comply with regulations on pre-employment checks made under the Care Standards Act 2000, which came into force in April 2002. The responsibility for carrying out pre-employment checks, including Criminal Records Bureau and protection of vulnerable adults checks where applicable, rests with the relevant employer.

In response to Sir Michael Bichard's inquiry in June 2004, the Department, in conjunction with the Department for Education and Skills has been developing a new vetting and barring scheme. Legislation to provide for the scheme, which will apply to all NHS and social care settings, was introduced in the other place in February 2006.

Health Trainers

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Sutton and Cheam (Mr. Burstow), 13 February 2006, Official Report, column 1767W, on health trainers, for what reasons this information is not collected centrally; whether health trainers form part of a staff group for the purposes of compiling the NHS workforce census; and what assessment she has made of the average pay of a health trainer in the 2005–06 financial year. [61317]

Mr. Byrne: Health trainers will be collected in the September 2006 workforce census but not as a separately identifiable staff group.

Health trainer posts have been created very recently at a local level and their pay will have been evaluated or matched locally using the national health service job evaluation scheme. As such it is not possible to estimate the national average pay for health trainers in the current financial year.

Health Treatment Centres

Paul Holmes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many NHS staff are employed at each independent sector treatment centre; and what roles they perform. [61714]

Mr. Byrne: As of March 2006, 21.1 whole-time equivalent (WTE) staff are on secondment to independent sector treatment centre (ISTC) projects. This includes 13.1 WTE doctors and 8.0 WTE nurses. Staff working in ISTCs are shown in the following table:

Location	National health service: doctors seconded (WTE)	nurses seconded (WTE)
North Bradford	5.2	0
Portsmouth	0.3	8.0
Kidderminster	1.6	0
Total	13.1	8.0

Home Treatment

Mr. Havard: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the Health and Social Care White Paper, whether she plans to give further support to new technologies that treat patients at home and prevent hospitalisation. [50519]

Mr. Byrne: As a part of its prime role to deliver the national programme for information technology and to link this with the necessary improvements in clinical processes and services, the Department's NHS Connecting for Health agency is working with suppliers to encourage the development of relevant innovative information technology. It is also supporting the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's digital challenge for English local authorities by helping the national health service to work locally with the public and other agencies to develop joined-up approaches to supporting citizens to lead healthier lives in their local communities.

In addition, the Department is providing £80 million over the next 2 years for a preventative technology grant to support 160,000 older people stay in their own homes. The purpose of the grant is to initiate a change in the design and delivery of health, social care and housing services and prevention strategies to enhance and maintain the well-being and independence of individuals.

The white paper "our health our care our say" commits us to undertake a large-scale pilot exploring the potentials of technology, over a number of sites covering a total of at least 1 million people. We anticipate the pilot sites will commence by the end of 2006.

Hospitals (Brokerage)

Dr. Pugh: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which hospitals in England are in receipt of brokerage. [64329]

Jane Kennedy: Cash brokerage is managed by strategic health authorities across the national health service organisations for which they have responsibility. This information is not held centrally by the Department.

Identity Fraud

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what training the Department has provided for (a) front desk and (b) administrative staff in relation to identity fraud. [41412]

Mr. Byrne: Staff in the Department do not routinely deal with members of the public on a face-to-face basis and written and other communications from the public are only answered if they relate to health and social care policy or services.

Where specific inquiries are received relating to an individual's personal circumstances they are referred to the appropriate part of the national health service for answer.

Since personal information is not released to members of the public it has not been necessary to provide specific training in relation to identity fraud in this area.

Influenza Pandemic

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps her Department has taken to ensure that (a) primary care trusts, (b) local authorities and (c) NHS trusts in West Lancashire are prepared for an influenza pandemic. [64296]

Mr. Byrne: We expect all national health service organisations to have appropriate plans in place for a possible human influenza pandemic. Those plans should be developed in conjunction with partner agencies and regularly tested and updated. Operational guidance on planning for a pandemic was originally published in May 2005 and provides planning checklists for NHS organisations to inform and develop their plans. The Department continues to work with strategic health authorities to ensure that robust and resilient human influenza pandemic plans are in place across England and is currently reviewing operational approaches to the delivery of health care to ascertain whether further operational guidance may be helpful in support of local planning.

Information Sharing

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the effectiveness of information sharing on numbers of medical professionals being trained in European Union member states. [29502]

Mr. Byrne: The Department is a member of the European Union Commission high level group on the health services and medical care, which is discussing the available data and mobility of health professionals being trained in EU member states.

Lancashire Ambulance NHS Trust

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients died in ambulances operated by the Lancashire Ambulance NHS Trust on its way to a hospital accident and emergency department in each year since 2000. [62818]

Mr. Byrne: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Local Improvement Finance Trusts

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what requirement there is on the part of a local improvement finance trust company to sign all leases before building commences. [61699]

Mr. Byrne: The duties of a local improvement finance trust (LIFT) are laid down in the contractual framework that is signed on the establishment of the company. This requires that all head leases between LIFT company and tenants are confirmed before financial close. Sub leases, are a matter for the head lease to determine.

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many Local Improvement Finance Trust projects have been built; and how many of them are being leased at capacity. [61728]

Mr. Byrne: There are 68 new Local Improvement Finance Trust (LIFT) facilities open to patients, with one a week opening to the end of 2006. Information is not held centrally on the capacity of buildings leased as that is a commercial issue for each LIFT company.

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which strategic health authorities make it a policy that GPs are required to sign up to the terms of the lease to occupy local improvement finance trust premises before the full business case is approved. [61729]

Mr. Byrne: The business case approval process of the Department requires, prior to financial close, that primary care trusts demonstrate:

potential tenants for the building have been identified;

these tenants have provided written support to confirm that they will sign up to the lease conditions and the indicative lease costs; and the financial implications of the nature of the various expected tenancies have been factored into processes to demonstrate affordability and value for money

Strategic health authorities usually have a role as approvers of local improvement finance trust business cases. In undertaking this approval they will implement the approval policy listed.

Mini Motor Cycles (Protective Headgear)

Mr. Ian Austin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many injuries treated in emergency departments were recorded as resulting from not wearing protective headgear while driving mini motorcycles in (a) Dudley, (b) the West Midlands and (c) England in the last two years. [63166]

Mr. Byrne: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Mobile Telephones

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to update the leaflets on the health risks of mobile telephones and mobile telephone base stations published by her Department six years ago. [64843]

Caroline Flint: The leaflets on "Mobile Phones and Health" and on "Mobile Phone Base Stations and Health" were produced following the comprehensive review of the science published by the independent expert group on mobile phones (the Stewart report) in 2000. The Stewart report remains the basis of science underpinning the health policy relating to exposure mobile phone radio waves. However, in view of the time elapsed and the need to provide up-to-date information, consideration is currently being given to a revised version of the leaflets.

N3 National Network

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what assessment she has made of the N3 national network connectivity capability of (a) general practitioners and (b) pharmacists; and if she will make a statement; [62520]

(2) how many (a) general practitioners and (b) pharmacists are linked to the Electronic Transfer of Prescriptions system; and by what date she expects all contractors to be linked. [62519]

Mr. Byrne: Currently around 9,700 general practitioner (GP) sites, including branch surgeries, have been connected to the N3 network in England, representing some 94 per cent. of those for which orders have so far been placed. The network provides centrally-funded, secure and reliable connections, between 0.5 megabite and two megabites, along with an integrated services digital network (ISDN) back-up line for resilience, and is the biggest civilian network in Europe.

The capability of community pharmacy contractors to connect to N3 has been greatly enhanced by commercial network providers who are now making connections to N3 available as part of the introduction of the electronic prescription service (EPS). Community pharmacy contractors now have a range of options for getting connected, including all in one packages of EPS software upgrades and network connections offered by pharmacy system suppliers.

As at 24 March 2006, 880 GP practices and 148 pharmacies had been upgraded and linked to the EPS. The rapid implementation of the EPS means that these numbers are constantly changing. Numbers for individual GPs and community pharmacists are not available.

In line with the target in the Department's national strategic programme, Delivering 21st Century IT, all GP practices and community pharmacies in England are expected to be linked to the service by the end of 2007.

NHS Beds

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many NHS beds there were in each year since 2004. [62413]

Mr. Byrne: The average daily number of available beds for all ward types in 2004–05 was 181,784.

NHS Direct

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she initiated the review of commissioning arrangements for NHS Direct from April 2007; who is conducting the review; when she expects the review to be completed; if she will publish the results of the review; and if she will make a statement. [51891]

Mr. Byrne: The review of NHS Directs commissioning arrangements began with the Department's arm's length body review in 2004. NHS Direct was established as a special health authority in April of that year, with primary care trusts (PCTs) becoming responsible for commissioning their services.

To support PCTs in this role, the Department publishes annual commissioning frameworks, which are available on the Department's website at www.dh.gov.uk. Once NHS Direct's future organisational form has been decided, the Department, in partnership with NHS Direct; PCTs; and other stakeholders will agree commissioning arrangements for 2007–08 and beyond. We anticipate publishing these arrangements annually in line with current practice.

NHS Litigation Authority

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 4 April 2006 to question 62399, what the basis was of her statement that the NHS litigation authority (NHSLA) does not record the legal funding arrangements of claimants; and what records were provided by the NHSLA to the authors of the report on the funding of personal litigation commissioned by the Department for Constitutional Affairs as part of the 'large scale data set provided by the NHSLA'. [64988]

Jane Kennedy [holding answer 24 April 2006]: The NHS litigation authority (NHSLA) will record the legal funding arrangements of claimants when legal proceedings are issued. As a defendant organisation, they will not necessarily know about the funding status of claims that are pre-litigation, unless the information is offered by the claimant. Information on the funding arrangements of claimants is therefore collected but necessarily incomplete.

The NHSLA provided a dataset containing information on a total of 58,120 cases involving litigation against the national health service related to clinical care for the report 'The Funding of Personal Injury Litigation: comparisons over time and jurisdictions,' February 2006. The following caveat to the data was quoted in the report:

> "It is important to note that the proportion of CFA [conditional fee arrangement] funded cases implied by these figures is an underestimate of the proportion of cases run by claimants on a CFA basis. This is because the NHSLA, as a defendant organisation, is unlikely to know about the funding status of claims which were closed without payment of costs."

NHS Pension Scheme

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she expects the resource accounts for the NHS pension scheme for 2004–05 to be published. [61344]

Mr. Byrne: The NHS Pension Scheme Resource Account for 2004–05 was laid before the House on 30 January 2006 and copies of the account are available in the Library.

The NHS Pensions Agency is in the process of producing printed and bound copies of the accounts, and these will be available from The Stationery Office within the next few weeks.

NHS Surgeries (Private Companies)

Paul Holmes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many contracts for NHS surgeries have been awarded to private companies; to which companies each contract has been awarded; and where each surgery is located. [61712]

Mr. Byrne: The information requested is not collected centrally. Local primary health care provision is a matter for primary care trusts.

NHS Trust Deficits

Dr. Pugh: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what sums she expects to accrue to the central NHS from interest charged on NHS trusts with deficits; and how much has been accrued to date. [64333]

Jane Kennedy: The aim of the 2005–06 strategic health authority (SHA) surplus incentive scheme was to encourage financial management in the national health service. The scheme is run at SHA level. We will be paying interest to SHAs that underspend, in addition to charging interest to overspending SHAs, so we will not know the net gains or losses from the scheme until the 2005–06 out-turn figures are known.

Organ Harvesting (China)

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of (a) the extent to which the practice of harvesting the organs of executed prisoners in China takes place (b) the role of the Chinese Government in the practice and (c) the extent to which such prisoners have given their consent. [65759]

Ian Pearson: I have been asked to reply.

The Chinese Government has acknowledged the practice of organ harvesting from executed prisoners, but has given little indication as to how widespread it is other than to say it is relatively uncommon. We have received no evidence to substantiate recent media reports of large-scale organ harvesting in China. Despite Chinese Government assurances that prisoners agree to the donations voluntarily and that their families sign donation agreements, we are concerned about this practice. I raised these concerns with the Chinese Government on 7 April. We believe that the right approach is to seek to overcome the social taboo of organ transplants in China and encourage donation from the general population. The Government welcome the announcement by the Chinese Ministry of Health of a new regulation to come into effect on 1 July, to ban the sale of organs and introduce medical standards for organ transplants.

Patient Care and Support

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Health under the health reform in England proposals, what the division of responsibility will be between (a) GP-contracted and (b) local government personal social services for patient care and support. [49624]

Mr. Byrne: Primary care trusts (PCTs), working closely with practices will continue to be accountable for the local use of national health service resources. Local government will remain responsible for the provision of social care.

We are exploring new ways of giving people more control over the support they need through individual budget pilots in local government. In addition, through practice based commissioning we are putting the necessary reforms in place to ensure the maximum benefit for the health and wellbeing of local populations.

Our reforms, combined with the increased use of flexibilities allowed under section 31 of the Health Act 1999 will support the further integration of services through stronger commissioning arrangements and partnerships between practices; PCTs; local government; and local people.

Population Increases

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will adjust the funding formula for NHS trusts to take account of increases in population arising from migrants from EU accession states. [59404]

Mr. Byrne: The weighted capitation formula is used to determine primary care trusts' (PCTs') target shares of available resources to enable them to commission similar levels of health services for populations in similar need.

The advisory committee on resource allocations (ACRA) continuously oversees the development of the weighted capitation formula. This includes determining the populations base to be used in advance of each allocations round.

ACRA made recommendations on the population base to be used for the 2006–08 revenue allocations to PCTs. As a consequence, 2003 based population projections for 2006 and 2007 published by the Office of National Statistics (ONS) were used for the 2006–07 and 2007–08 revenue allocations respectively. ONS population projections take account of migration.

ACRA will make recommendations on the populations base to be used in revenue allocations post 2007–08.

Postgraduate Medical Education and Training Board

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the (a) longest and (b) average processing time to issue a certificate was by (i) the Postgraduate Medical Education Practitioner Training Board since its creation and (ii) the Joint Committee on Postgraduate Training for General Practice in each year from 1997 to its abolition. [62568]

Mr. Byrne: The longest time taken by the postgraduate medical education training board to issue a certificate is 35 days and the average is eight days.

The joint committee on postgraduate training in general practice did not keep statistics on the processing times of full and complete individual applications, however there were strict published timeframes which were adhered to at all times. These were as follows:

Certificate of prescribed experience—10 working days

Certificate of equivalent experience—six to eight weeks.

Practice-based Commissioning

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what her latest estimate is of the number of GP practices engaged in practice-based commissioning (a) in total and (b) broken down by strategic health authority; and if she will make a statement. [63111]

Mr. Byrne: The Department does not currently collect data on take-up of practice based commissioning, although a new data collection will be established for 2006–07.

Preventive Technology Grant

Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) whether she plans to ring fence payments of preventive technology grant to local authorities; [64146]

(2) how many people aged 65 and over had one or more items of telecare equipment in (a) their homes and (b) other residential settings at 31 March; [64187]

(3) what estimate she has made of the number of new users of telecare equipment aged 65 and over provided with one or more items of telecare equipment in (a) their own homes and (b) other residential settings in (i) 2006–07 and (ii) 2007–08. [64188]

Mr. Byrne: The preventative technologies grant will not be ring fenced. It is for local providers to determine how best to deliver services to their local population, including telecare. However, the Department expects councils, working with local partners, to achieve key public service agreement targets around supporting people with long term conditions and improving the patient and user experience, in particular supporting older people to live at home.

The number of people aged 65 and over with one or more items of telecare equipment in their homes or residential setting is not held centrally. The Department expects councils to help an additional 160,000 older people to live at home with safety and security and reduce the number of avoidable admissions to residential/nursing care and hospital.

Primary Care Trusts

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what restrictions apply to the use primary care trusts can make of funds from the sale of assets. [50156]

Jane Kennedy: Fixed assets held by primary care trusts (PCTs) are public capital financed.

As a consequence, under the PCTs' finance regime, cash released from their sale can only be reinvested in other capital assets, or repaid to the Department.

In other words, the proceeds of asset-sales cannot be used to fund ordinary operating costs.

Where the PCT chooses to reinvest the cash in its facilities, rather than repaying it, the PCTs management is free to determine what assets will be bought up to its delegated limit for capital investment.

Delegated limits vary between £1 million and £10 million, depending on the organisation's turnover from provider activities and performance. Strategic health authorities have discretion over how amounts in excess of delegated limits are reinvested.

Mr. Gummer: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether her Department (a) has approached and (b) plans to approach the Treasury for a release of additional funds from the sums available in the National Insurance Fund above the minimum working balance to alleviate financial deficits in primary care trusts. [60640]

Mr. Byrne: The Department has no plans to seek additional funding from the HM Treasury.

Public Information

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much was spent on her Department's public relations and information services in each of the last 5 years for which figures are available. [48958]

Mr. Byrne: The following table shows the Department's expenditure on publicity and advertising for the last five years.

£ million

Financial year	Advertising expenditure	Publicity
2000–01	20.80	24.32
2001–02	20.41	16.82
2002–03	23.13	11.72
2003–04	38.98	13.37
2004–05	37.80	15.16

Radiotherapy

Greg Mulholland: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the reasons for the difference between the waiting times for radiotherapy patients in Leeds and the rest of Yorkshire. [65173]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 24 April 2006]: There has been a historical under-funding of staffing and equipment for radiotherapy in Leeds. Waiting times for radiotherapy at Leeds Teaching Hospitals National Health Service Trust are currently six weeks for urgent patients and 11 weeks for routine patients. The trust is taking action to further reduce these waiting times.

Two new linear accelerators were commissioned in 2005, and the trust recruited 12 additional radiographers last summer and two experienced radiographers recently. The trust has commenced the process of recruiting radiologists who are due to graduate this summer. The trust is working to maximise its current capacity, although waiting times will be fully addressed only when the new oncology wing opens at St. James's University Hospital in early 2008.

The Yorkshire cancer network was subject to a peer review exercise in October and November 2005. The report described cancer services in Leeds as excellent and the radiological services as internationally renowned.

Sexual Assault

Willie Rennie: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what provisions exist for the (a) suspension and (b) banning of health care workers (i) accused and (ii) convicted of sexual assault. [65405]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 24 April 2006]: NHS employers have disciplinary procedures which relate to any serious crime or misconduct, and an accusation or conviction of sexual assault would be dealt with accordingly.

Particular provisions apply if the health worker is named on the list maintained under the Protection of Children Act 1999, of individuals barred from working with children, or the list maintained under Part 7 of the Care Standards Act 2000, of individuals barred from working with vulnerable adults in regulated social care settings. The lists are managed by the Department for Education and Skills on behalf of the Department. It is an offence for any person on these lists to knowingly apply for work with children or vulnerable adults, and for an employer to knowingly offer such a person this type of work.

Registered health professionals accused or convicted of a sexual assault would also be subject to the fitness to practice proceedings of the relevant regulatory body, which would consider whether or not they should be suspended or erased from the professional register.

Staff Abuse

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many inquiries concerning abuse by health or social care staff there have been in each (a) strategic health authority and (b) local authority area in the last five years; what the status of each inquiry was; whether the data from each inquiry has been brought together; and what plans for action were made as a result of the inquiries. [58711]

Mr. Byrne: The information requested is not available centrally. National health service employers are responsible for ensuring that their staff do not pose a threat to the safety of patients and for acting on information about the registration status of staff subject to statutory regulation.

All care homes, domiciliary care agencies, adult placements schemes and nurses agencies in England are regulated by the Commission for Social Care Inspection (CSCI), which is the independent regulator for social care. The CSCI is responsible for registering and inspecting the regulated social care sector in accordance with statutory regulations and national minimum standards to ensure consistency and improve the quality of life and level of protection for the most vulnerable people in society.

Regulated social care providers, including private companies, are required to conduct rigorous pre-employment checks on prospective staff, including obtaining a Criminal Records Bureau disclosure. Since 26 July 2004, there has also been a requirement for prospective employees in these areas to be checked against the protection of vulnerable adults (POVA) list before starting work.

Tariffs

Mr. Kevan Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what methods she uses to assess the adequacy of data collection before the introduction of mandatory tariffs. [65107]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 24 April 2006]: The national tariff is calculated from data on the average cost of activity as reported by national health service providers through the annual reference cost collection and is subject to scrutiny by audit. The robustness of this data is tested using statistical analysis with regard to key indicators of data quality, including sample size, distribution and year-on-year volatility.

Vaccinations (Schools)

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which vaccines are routinely administered by nurses in a school setting. [65696]

Caroline Flint: The tetanus/diphtheria/inactivated polio vaccine (Td/IPV), which protects against tetanus, diphtheria and polio, is the vaccine that is routinely administered by school nurses, in a school setting. This vaccine is given routinely to teenagers aged between 13 and 18 years of age.

School nurses may also check when giving the routine Td/IPV if the teenager is up to date with other routine vaccinations such as measles, mumps and rubella (MMR), meningitis c (MenC) and for some hepatitis B, and arrange catch up vaccinations where needed.

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which NHS bodies provide funding for vaccines delivered in schools. [65699]

Caroline Flint: Funding for immunisation services in schools forms part of the annual allocation to primary care trusts (PCTs). PCTs are responsible for the management of those monies and running of immunisation programmes.

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance school nurses receive on vaccines that they deliver in schools; and what understanding they are expected to have of the disease they are vaccinating against. [65700]

Caroline Flint: The Department produces a number of resources to support health professionals in the implementation of the routine childhood immunisation programme. These resources are sent directly to primary care trusts (PCTs) to cascade to the appropriate health professionals.

Detailed information on the tetanus/diphtheria/inactivated polio vaccine (Td/IPV) routinely given by school nurses, and the diseases it protects against, is available at the publication "Immunisation against infectious disease—The 'Green Book' chapters on Diphtheria, Hib, Pertussis, Polio and Tetanus", and the "DTaP/IPV/Hib for babies, DTaP/IPV for pre-school and Td/IPV for teenagers".

Both these publications were sent directly to PCTs at the time of publication. The Department also produces a leaflet aimed at teenagers and parents, to support school nurses and the routine immunisation programme for 13 to 18 years olds entitled, "Teenage immunisations (school years 8 to 13, ages 13 to 18) your questions answered".

All of these publications are available either from the Department's publications line free of charge or via the website at www.immunisation.nhs.uk

Waiting Lists/Times

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average waiting time was in hospitals in (a) West Lancashire and (b) England in each year since 1997. [64125]

Mr. Byrne: The median waiting times for in-patient admission for March each year since 1997 at national health service trusts in West Lancashire and for England are shown in the table.

Estimated average waiting time for elective admission, all specialties, England

Written Answers to Questions

Wednesday 26 April 2006

TRANSPORT

Airport Security (Northern Ireland)

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many incidents regarded as sufficiently serious to be investigated by the Civil Aviation Authority occurred during 2005 involving aircraft at (a) Belfast International, (b) Belfast City and (c) Londonderry airports. [64907]

Derek Twigg [holding answer 24 April 2006]: During 2005 the Civil Aviation Authority investigated 23 incidents at Belfast International airport, 18 incidents at Belfast City airport and two incidents at Londonderry airport.

Bicycle Transportation

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions he has had with the rail companies to seek agreed policies on the transportation of bikes on trains. [65789]

Derek Twigg: As part of our ongoing commitment to bike and rail journeys I am discussing with our advisory body on cycling, Cycling England, how we might further encourage such journeys and will be reviewing this issue with the TOCs later this year.

In addition, the franchise replacement process provides an opportunity to improve cycle facilities at stations, and to address the requirements of cyclists who wish to use trains. Bidders for new franchises will be asked to consider cycle-rail integration matters in their bid submissions.

Blue Badges

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will introduce temporary parking exemption Blue Badges for those suffering short-term impairment; and if he will make a statement. [65910]

Derek Twigg: The Department for Transport has accepted a recommendation made by the Disabled Persons Transport Advisory Committee (DPTAC), the Department's statutory advisers on the transport needs of disabled people, that the Blue Badge scheme should be extended to people with temporary mobility impairments which severely affect their walking ability and are likely to do so for at least 12 months. We intend to consult on draft regulations later this year.

Cycle Route Signs

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what guidance his Department has issued on the requirement for local highway authorities to erect cycle route signs on highways; and on what date the guidance was published. [66271]

Dr. Ladyman: There is no specific requirement for authorities to erect cycle route signs. However, the Department issued a Local Transport Note LTN 2/87 "Signs for Cycle Facilities" in November 1987.

General guidance on the complete range of traffic signs is contained in the Traffic Signs Manual.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many and what proportion of (a) staff and (b) new staff employed in (i) his Department and (ii) each of the agencies for which he has responsibility, were registered as disabled in each of the last three years for which data are available. [61385]

Derek Twigg: The information requested is shown in the following tables as far as it is available.

[1] The Government Car and Despatch Agency became part of the Department for Transport as of 8 November 2005.

Metrolink

Mr. Leech: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport pursuant to the answer of 9 March 2006 Official Report, column 1650W, on Metrolink phase 3, whether the matters discussed included (a) reducing the number of lines, (b) shortening the route on any of the three lines and (c) a timetable for work to commence on building phase 3; and if he will make a statement. [59060]

Derek Twigg: Greater Manchester Passenger Transport Executive have recently submitted a draft business case seeking Government funding, from the Regional Funding Allocation. Discussions are ongoing.

Olympic Games

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the (a) demand and (b) required capacity on the (i) London transport network, (ii) national rail network and (iii) road network for the 2012 Olympics; what timetable he envisages for delivering increased capacity to meet demand; what budget will be made available; and if he will make a statement. [65701]

Derek Twigg: The Olympic Delivery Authority and the London Organising Committee for the Olympic Games (LOCOG) are responsible for developing and delivering the plans for transport for the 2012 Olympic and Paralympic Games.

These plans, which included estimates of spectator demand and transport network capacity, were initially set out in the candidature file submitted to the International Olympic Committee in November 2004. This document is available in the House of Commons Library.

Table 14.14 set out the predicted spectator demand for each venue and table 14.8 set out the predicted 2012 capacity of the public transport fleet which would serve the Games.

On average the total demand for spectator transport for the Games is predicted to be some 500,000 per day, peaking at 770,000 on the busiest day. This includes regional events such as sailing at Weymouth and Olympic football matches.

Peak demand for the Olympic Park in Stratford is around 300,000 spectators per day. The 10 railway lines which will serve the Olympic Park will be capable of transporting some 240,000 passengers per hour during the peak, ensuring that there will be adequate capacity for both spectators and normal transport users.

Both transport capacity and spectator demand will be kept under review by LOCOG and the Olympic Delivery Authority as the work preparing for the 2012 Games progresses.

Transport specifically for the 2012 Games will be paid for from the Olympic Public Sector Funding Package agreed between the Government and Mayor of London, which is funded from the National Lottery, the London Development Agency and London council tax.

Prestwick/Stansted Airports

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport on what date (a) Prestwick and (b) Stansted Airports were designated as bases from which to deal with security alerts over UK airspace involving terrorist threats. [64893]

Derek Twigg [holding answer 24 April 2006]: All UK airports are required to maintain contingency plans for dealing with security alerts. Beyond that it would not be appropriate to comment on specific security matters at individual airports.

Railways

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport by what means he assesses the work of the Rail Accident Investigation Branch; what assessment he has made of its performance to date; whether he plans changes to the methods of assessment; and if he will make a statement. [65702]

Derek Twigg: The RAIB produces reports on all its investigations and copies are provided to the Secretary of State. These reports are also put into the public domain.

The reports enable the Secretary of State to assess, on an ongoing basis, the work of the RAIB. This is in addition to meetings that the Secretary of State holds with the Chief Inspector of the RAIB.

There are no plans to change the methods of assessment.

Mr. Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what legislation governs the use of (a) private hire vehicles and (b) unlicensed drivers and vehicles as transport for rail replacement; and if he will make a statement. [65494]

Derek Twigg: s40 of the Railways Act 2005 provides for where a railway passenger service is temporarily interrupted or has been discontinued, the Secretary of State (or Scottish Ministers in the case of Scotland) may secure the provision of a substitute service for the carriage of passengers by road by means of public service vehicles (i.e. buses) or private hire vehicles.

A private hire vehicle means a vehicle licensed under s37 of the Town Police Clauses Act 1847, s6 of the Metropolitan Public Carriage Act 1869, s48 of the Local Government (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1976 or s7 of the Private Hire Vehicles (London) Act 1998 (or additionally in the case of Scotland taxis or private hire cars licensed under s10 of the Civic Government (Scotland) Act 1982.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether it is his policy to replace rail services with bus services on the (a) Par to Newquay, (b) Liskeard to Looe, (c) Totnes and Ivybridge to Plymouth, (d) Chippenham to Frome and (e) Severn Beach routes. [64774]

Derek Twigg: Other than the continuation of existing arrangements whereby buses provide some services between Avonmouth and Severn Beach, there is no policy to replace rail services with buses on any of these routes.

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many miles of previously closed branch lines have been re-opened since May 1997. [62373]

Derek Twigg: In England and Wales, approximately 17 miles of former freight line have been re-opened for passenger use since 1997.

David Mundell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether funding has been allocated to the Scottish Executive in respect of Railways for All. [59328]

Derek Twigg: Following the enactment of the Railways Act 2005, responsibility for the funding and specifying the outputs of the rail network in Scotland transferred to Scottish Ministers on 1 April 2006. Over £360 million per annum has been transferred from the Department for Transport to Transport Scotland to enable Scottish Ministers to discharge these new responsibilities. The operation and funding of the Access for All programme in Scotland is under discussion between the Department and Transport Scotland.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many times nuclear flasks have been transported by rail in each of the last five years. [65521]

Derek Twigg: This information is available in a report commissioned last year by this Department entitled "Survey into the Radiological Impact of the Normal Transport of Radioactive Material in the UK by Road and Rail", reference NRPB-W66. Copies of this report have been placed in the House Library and are available on the internet at the following address:

http://www.hpa.org.uk/radiation/publications/w_series_reports/2005/nrpb_w66.htm

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimates the Department has made of the amount of nuclear waste that has been transported by rail in each of the last 10 years; and how much he expects to be transported by rail in the next five years. [65522]

Derek Twigg: This Department does not hold detailed information on quantities of radioactive waste transported.

Information on shipments of radioactive waste by rail is available in a report commissioned last year by this Department entitled "Survey into the Radiological Impact of the Normal Transport of Radioactive Material in the UK by Road and Rail", reference NRPB-W66. Copies of this report have been placed in the House Library and are available on the internet at the following address:

http://www.hpa.org.uk/radiation/publications/w_series_reports/2005/nrpb_w66.htm

Road-Legality Regulations

Richard Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to (a) review and (b) vary the regulations which (i) modified and (ii) performance vehicles are required to meet to be classified as road-legal. [65776]

Dr. Ladyman: There are no specific plans to review the regulations relating to modified or performance vehicles. All road vehicles are required to comply with the appropriate construction requirements, irrespective of whether they have been modified or are performance vehicles. These types of vehicles may, however, be affected by changes that could arise from revisions currently being negotiated for the European type approval regime, but at present it is too early to say one way or the other.

Roads (Romford/Havering)

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much money was spent on building new roads in (a) Romford and (b) Havering in each of the last 10 years; and if he will make a statement. [63003]

Dr. Ladyman: This information is generally not held centrally and would only be obtainable from the relevant local highway authorities, Transport for London (TfL) and the London borough of Havering respectively.

The Highways Agency is not responsible for any roads in the Romford area.

None of the roads for which the Highways Agency is responsible within the London borough of Havering have been built in the last 10 years.

Route Utilisation Strategy

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what timetable he envisages for the redevelopment of London Waterloo station to facilitate the implementation of the Route Utilisation Strategy; and if he will make a statement. [65514]

Derek Twigg [holding answer 25 April 2006]: The major redevelopment of Waterloo is being considered by Network Rail and a master plan proposal is currently under evaluation by them. Elements of the Route Utilisation Strategy are being taken forward through the franchising process.

Seat Belts

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received about newly-produced cars being fitted with a seat belt reminder system. [65105]

Dr. Ladyman: Further to my answer to the hon. Member of 19 April 2006, Official Report, columns 708–9W, I have received no further representations about newly-produced cars being fitted with a seat belt reminder system.

Speed Cameras

Lembit Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether it is mandatory for the speed camera partnerships to corroborate their cameras radar measurements of speed with the cameras photographic evidence before sending out a notice of intended prosecution to those accused of speeding offences; and if he will make a statement. [65857]

Paul Goggins: I have been asked to reply.

This is a matter for the individual police forces within safety camera partnerships. The Association of Chief Police Officers (ACPO) has issued a Code of Practice for the Operational use of Road Policing Enforcement Technology (available on the ACPO website www.acpo.police.uk). This deals in part with the use of approved secondary check procedures to verify the continuing accuracy of the device.

Speed Limits

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the effect on traffic volumes of the strict enforcement of (a) existing 60 mph and 70 mph speed limits and (b) a 55 mph speed limit on all extra-urban roads, broken down by (i) class of road and (ii) type of vehicle. [65665]

Dr. Ladyman: Speed limits are in place for road safety reasons, and enforcement of them is a matter for the police.

Train Timetable (West Country)

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what criteria the Department used in deciding to specify in the Greater Western Franchise (a) a reduction in the frequency and (b) an increase in the journey time of trains between (i) London and Exeter and (ii) London and Plymouth; how many trains under the new schedule will reach (A) Exeter in two hours or under and (B) Plymouth in three hours or under from London; and how many did so under the (1) current schedule and (2) 1994 schedule. [60179]

Derek Twigg [holding answer 21 March 2006]: The Great Western Franchise specification was designed to improve the overall operational and financial performance of the train service and to ensure resources were used to best meet market needs.

Under the proposed timetable for December 2006, which has been consulted on by First Group, the fastest journey time between London and Exeter will be two hours eight minutes, with the average journey time for daytime trains being two hours 31 minutes. No trains made the journey in two hours or under in 1994. The position for Plymouth is that in the proposed December 2006 timetable the fastest journey will be three hours; in the present timetable two trains arrive in three hours or less, while in 1994 no trains made the journey in three hours or under.

First announced a series of changes to their proposed December 2006 timetable on 3 April, including the reinstatement of two London and Exeter trains in each direction, which will allow improved journey times to Plymouth.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Avian Influenza

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the efficacy of the methodology used in collecting samples for testing for avian influenza. [64711]

Mr. Bradshaw: Regular assessments are made of the methodologies used for sample collection and any changes in methodology are robustly validated to international standards prior to adoption. The procedures used for UK programmes of avian influenza surveillance in wild bird populations conform to international protocols. These are specifically endorsed as part of a mandatory European Union wild bird surveillance programme and ratified by all member states.

As the service provider for AI surveillance testing, the Veterinary Laboratories Agency (VLA) has a commitment to ensure that any modifications to procedures are fully validated before new methodology is adopted. This ensures a high degree of quality assurance, critical for detection and diagnosis, especially with respect to a listed pathogen of zoonotic potential such as avian influenza.

In January 2006, the VLA launched a project studying virus survival. The results from this study will be formally linked, where required, to any review process.

Climate Change Targets

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what plans she has to ensure that her Department's progress in meeting domestic climate change targets is effectively monitored; [64972]

(2) what additional measures she is planning to enable the Government to meet their domestic climate change targets; and if she will make a statement. [64973]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 24 April 2006]: The new Climate Change Programme, published in March 2006, sets out a range of policies to support our national climate change goals. These include measures to support increased electricity generation from renewable sources, to encourage energy efficiency measures in households, and to provide more reliable consumer product information. The Programme will also support more sustainable transport choices, introduce higher standards for energy efficiency in buildings, and finance energy efficiency measures for public sector organisations.

Defra is also consulting on the draft of the UK's National Allocation Plan for the second phase of the EU emissions trading scheme. The Scheme is a central element of the energy supply and business sectors' contribution to our policies to tackle climate change.

Existing and new policies set out in the Programme are expected to reduce the UK's carbon dioxide emissions to 15 to 18 per cent. below 1990 levels by 2010. This would take the Government close to their domestic target to reduce carbon dioxide emissions by 20 per cent. below 1990 levels by 2010.

The Government issue annual updates on the UK's greenhouse gas emissions. The final emissions estimates for 2004 were published on 23rd January 2006, and can be viewed at:

http://www.defra.gov.uk/news/2006/06Q123b.htm

The Government will also be reporting annually to Parliament on emissions levels.

Cuckmere Valley

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs pursuant to the answer of 1 December 2005, Official Report, column 651W, on the Cuckmere Valley, if she will break down the figure of £394,000 into (a) consultants costs, (b) internal staff costs and (c) other costs; and whether the allowance for internal staff costs reflects the total estimated costs applicable to the project internal staff. [65544]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 25 April 2006]: The Environment Agency confirms that the figure of £394,000 reported as spent to date on the Cuckmere Esturary Project in the parliamentary answer given on 1 December 2005, Official Report, column 651W, was split as follows:

Cost	£
External consultants	337,000
Internal staff	57,000

All costs for the project are included in the totals shown.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs pursuant to the answer of 1 December 2005, Official Report, column 651W, on the Cuckmere Valley, how much has been spent to date; and how much it is anticipated will be spent on the next stage following the completion of the preparatory stage of the project. [65545]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 25 April 2006]: I understand from the Environment Agency that the total expenditure to date on the Cuckmere Estuary Project is £440,000. This figure is split as follows:

External consultants costs	375,000
Internal staff costs	65,000

The principal outputs from this project, namely the flood risk management business case and the environmental report, are complete in draft and are undergoing internal review within the Agency. These reports have determined the preferred flood risk management and environmental policy options for the future management of the Cuckmere Estuary. When these options have been approved, it is intended that a scheme will be developed by a Partnership of English Nature, the National Trust, the South Downs Joint Committee and the Environment Agency. It is not possible to give an estimate of the costs of developing the scheme at this time.

The current 100-year construction cost estimates for the three main policy options considered are:

	£ million
No active intervention with exit strategy	1.2
Hold the line	17.13
Managed realignment	2.4

Development costs are included within the figures. The costs of a public inquiry are not included in the figures.

Departmental Leave (Stress)

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many people have been on sick leave suffering from stress in her Department in each of the last three years; and what percentage of the total staff number this represents. [63544]

Jim Knight: During 2005 there were 180 members of staff in DEFRA (including State Veterinary Service, Government Decontamination Service and Marine Fisheries Agency) who were absent sick, giving "stress" as the reason. This represents 2.4 per cent. of the 7,573 staff.

Figures for preceding years are not readily available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

The Department takes the management of stress seriously and has recently changed the way in which employees and managers are supported, by introducing an employee assistance programme (EAR) to ensure employees have 24-hour access to professional support services as required.

In terms of education and prevention, the Department's Occupational Support and Advisory Team has been undertaking mini-audits of business units against the Health and Safety Executive's (HSE) Management Standards for Stress.

The team also maintain a website dedicated to stress related issues, and present a series of road-shows (including regional offices) to provide practical advice on the subject directly to staff.

Electric Shock Collars

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will carry out an investigation into the use of electric shock collars as a training aid for dogs. [65250]

Mr. Bradshaw: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 18 April 2006, Official Report, column. 23W.

Energy Efficiency

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what research her Department has undertaken to compare energy efficiency rates in the UK with other European Union countries. [64970]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 24 April 2006]: Only recently has work begun to develop "proper" indicators of energy efficiency changes, rather than using energy intensity as a proxy. Existing information on whole economy energy intensity is published on a consistent basis across the 25 member states and is available at:

http://epp.eurostat.cec.eu.int/portal/page?_pageid=1996,39140985&_dad=portal&_schma=PORTAL&screen=detailref&language=en&product=EU_strind&root=EU_strind/strind/enviro/en020

However, energy intensity does not paint an accurate picture of efficiency gains as it includes structural changes as well as efficiency improvements.

Defra has already developed an efficiency indicator for UK housing, as a contribution to the work of the interdepartmental Joint Working Group on Energy and the Environment. Information is available at:

http://www.dti.gov.uk/energy/environment/jwgee/0422.pdf

Work is also under way on similar types of indicators for the UK industry and service sectors, although a lack of suitable data are delaying progress.

In parallel, EU-wide work on energy efficiency across the EU-15 member states is being taken forward through the 'ODYSSEE' project. Defra and DTI jointly fund a consultancy to represent UK interests. Information on energy efficiency performance to 2003 for each member state is available at:

http://www.odyssee-indicators.org/Publication/country_profiles.html

Note:

ODYSSEE data are not official statistics compiled and checked by the national statistical offices of member states.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps her Department is taking to ensure European governments promote energy efficiency in domestic appliances. [64971]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 24 April 2006]: The Government are fully committed to raising product standards and encouraging consumers to use the most energy efficient domestic appliances. Progress is being made by a combination of policy measures including product information (energy labels), minimum standards, and the promotion of best practice. These are taken forward by the Market Transformation Programme (MTP).

The UK continues to work closely with the European Commission to influence and speed up the delivery of both mandatory and voluntary measures under the recently agreed Eco-Design for Energy Using Products (EUP) Framework Directive. We are encouraging the Commission to bring forward formal proposals for revising the EU Energy labelling Scheme, and we are supporting the work of the Energy Saving Trust in promoting efficient domestic appliances.

As President of both the EU and the G8 in 2005, the UK together with the European Commission hosted an International Energy Efficiency Conference (2 to 3 November 2005) to deliver a roadmap for global energy efficiency improvements. Details of the conference aims and outcomes can be viewed at:

http://host5.oliveserver.co.uk/df/ee/conferenceobjectives.aspx

We will also host the 2006 Energy Efficiency in Domestic Appliances and Lighting Conference (EEDAL 06) to advance international co-operation and new initiatives on energy efficient domestic appliances. Further details can be found at:

http://www.livegroup.co.uk/EEDAL

Government Offices (Energy Consumption)

Sir Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the effectiveness of the Government's policy on the reduction of energy consumption in its offices; and if she will make a statement. [63608]

Mr. Morley: The Framework for Sustainable Development on the Government estate is the main vehicle for systematically assessing, reporting and improving Government performance in managing its own land and buildings in a sustainable way. It sets cross-Government targets in all key operational areas, including energy consumption.

The Sustainable Development Commission's report, 'Leading by Example? Not Exactly . . . ' was published in December 2005. This reported on departmental performance against a range of sustainable operational targets within the framework.

The Government accept that more needs to be done to improve its overall operational performance including its own energy consumption. The UK Government Sustainable Development Strategy (Securing the Future, March 2005) included a commitment to review the framework and make proposals for achieving a significant change in operational performance. We are currently taking forward work in this area, and challenging new departmental energy targets will be published this summer.

Sir Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps her Department has taken to reduce energy consumption in its offices; and if she will make a statement. [63609]

Mr. Morley: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 18 April 2006, Official Report, column 24W.

House Building (West Chelmsford)

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what measures are being taken taken to ensure there are sufficient levels of water supply to cope with the levels of house building in West Chelmsford constituency. [64722]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 24 April 2006]: All water companies have water resource management plans which look ahead 25 years and include projections of current and future demands for water. These are regularly updated to take account of factors including projections of household numbers, occupancy rates, and the implications of climate change. The management plan for Essex and Suffolk Water includes proposals for an extension to the Abberton reservoir by 2014.

Mobile Telephones

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs pursuant to the Answer of 18 April 2006, Official Report, columns 31–2W, on mobile telephones, what the timescale is for the implementation of the EU Waste Electrical and Electronic Directive. [65947]

Malcolm Wicks: I have been asked to reply.

The Department is currently engaged in conversations with key stakeholders on the best way to implement the Waste Electrical and Electronic Equipment Directive. I will be announcing a new timetable before the parliamentary recess in July.

Single Farm Payments

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many new applicants have sought to register land for single farm payments; and how much land not previously registered under the integrated admission and control system has been registered. [63500]

Jim Knight: Since December 2004 some 50,000 customers have registered land for the purposes of the Single Payment Scheme and the Environmental Stewardships schemes. The increase in land is 0.95 million hectares.

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many applications for registering land for single farm payment have been made in total from North Essex. [63501]

Jim Knight: 78 applications have been made to register land in North Essex from customers who were not registered under the old IACS (integrated administration and control system).

Sporting Facilities (Drought Orders)

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment her Department has made of the requirements of (a) professional and (b) amateur sporting facilities in the event of the introduction of drought orders; [64721]

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will take steps to exempt (a) county cricket clubs and (b) community sports facilities from drought orders; and if she will make a statement. [65112]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 24 April 2006]: I recognise that any drought order made to restrict use of water may impact on how sporting facilities and clubs maintain their grounds. However, serious drought is an exceptional event and provisions must be in place to allow water companies to fulfil their duty to supply water to domestic customers.

Drought orders can be made only after careful consideration of all the issues raised by objectors to an application. A hearing will normally be held by an independent Inspector appointed by the Secretary of State. Objectors have the opportunity to be heard by the Inspector. In determining the application the Secretary of State will take into account the objections raised and the Inspector's recommendations.

Vital Villages Funding

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs which villages have received vital villages funding; when each received such funding; and which villages have applied for funding but have been unsuccessful. [65952]

Jim Knight: Between 2001 and March 2005 the Countryside Agency's Vital Villages programme met its target to help over 1000 rural communities to help themselves by assisting them in identifying service needs, piloting the adoption of alternative approaches to addressing these needs and having a greater say In their own affairs.

We do not keep central records on all the information you have requested but I have placed in the Library of the House the following information provided by the Countryside Agency which I hope will be of interest:

Annex 1—A list of all agreed and between 2001 and 2005, including which each is located. Unfortunately the projects received their funding is not completed Vital Villages projects details of the Parish/District in year when each of these recorded on this list.

Annex 2—A list of unsuccessful applications for Vital Villages grants. Unfortunately the Parish/District location been recorded of each of these has not been recorded.

Water Storage (South-east)

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans she has to build new water storage capacity in the South East of England. [64974]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 24 April 2006]: Water companies rather than Government are responsible for considering new reservoirs as part of their duty to maintain adequate supplies of water. Water companies serving customers in the South East have identified a number of schemes to build new reservoirs or expand existing ones in their 25-year water resources plans prepared in 2004.

Company	Scheme	Year
New Reservoirs
Southern	Broad Oak	2019
South East Water	Clay Hill	2015
Portsmouth	Havant Thicket	2020
Thames	Abingdon	2020
Extended Reservoirs
Southern, Mid Kent	Raise Bewl	2015
South East Water	Bray Enlargement	2008
Essex and Suffolk Water	Abberton	2014

DEFENCE

Aircraft

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the role of the Jaguar aircraft in Royal Air Force service will be after April 2006; and if he will make a statement. [64794]

Mr. Ingram: The role of the Jaguar Force from April 2006 is to continue to contribute to any UK or NATO commitments which require its capability, especially in the role of ground attack or reconnaissance.

Army

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to his Answer of 18 April 2006, Official Report, column 12W, on the army, when he expects the full Territorial Army strength of 45,590 to be attained based on current levels of recruitment. [65524]

Mr. Ingram: The current strength of the Territorial Army (TA), excluding the Officer Training Corps (OTC), stands at some 31,950 against an establishment of approximately 38,500, excluding OTC. This represents approximately 83 per cent. of the manning requirement. Achieving full manning of the TA is dependent not only upon recruitment levels but also retention. Major efforts are under way to address both issues and recent increases in TA recruitment are encouraging. It is not possible at this time to predict when full manning of the TA might be achieved.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many and what proportion of (a) staff and (b) new staff employed in (i) his Department and (ii) each of the agencies for which he has responsibility were registered as disabled in each of the last three years for which data are available. [61373]

Mr. Touhig: Departmental records of disabled staff are solely based on voluntary declarations of disability under the Disability Discrimination Act and not connected to a formal register of disability.

The following table gives the civilian staff headcount strength and details of disabled staff, employed by the Ministry of Defence, as recorded at 1 April 2004 and 1 April 2005. Comparisons between agencies should be treated with caution due to the different response rates for self declaration. Data prior to 1 April 2004 has not been published and are not available due to insufficient quality.

[1] Army Training and Recruitment Agency was formed in July 1997 by absorbing AITO plus recruiting.
[2] Known as the Defence Postal and Courier Services Agency until 1 July 1999.
[3] Defence Analytical Services Agency formed July 1992.
[4] Defence Bills Agency was formed in December 1996.
[5] Defence Communications Service Agency formed April 1998 and absorbed lots of bits from DGIC, CHOTS, RAF Comms, RAFSEE and LISA.
[6] Defence Dental Agency was formed February 1996. Ceased Agency status on 1 April 2005.
[7] Known as the Defence Estates Organisation until 1 March 1999 and subsequently merged with Defence Housing Executive on 1 April 2005.
[8] Level 1 is defined as civilian permanent and casual personnel employed by the department and the Royal Fleet Auxiliaries. Level 0 all those at Level 1 plus staff in the Trading Funds and Locally Engaged Civilians. The revised definitions of civilian personnel are used throughout, full details of which are available on the DASA website at www.dasa.mod.uk

Notes:
1. Figures quoted are headcount.
2. All figures are rounded to the nearest 10, as a result totals may not always equal the sum of the parts. For visibility rounding has only been applied to figures of 10 and above.
3. Armed Forces Personnel Administration Agency was formed in April 1997.
4. Defence Geographic Imagery Intelligence Agency formed April 2000 and included JARIC and Mil Survey. In April 2005 was absorbed into the Chief of Defence Intelligence (CDI).
5. Defence Intelligence and Security Centre was formed October 1996. In April 2005 was absorbed into the Chief of Defence Intelligence (CDI).
6. Defence Medical Education and Training Agency was launched on 1 April 2003, and subsumed the Defence Medical Training Organisation and the Defence Secondary Care Agency.
7. Launched on 1 April 1999 assuming responsibilities of the Specialist Procurement Services Agency.

Disability data for new staff employed in the department are given as follows. Only the full financial year 2004–05 is currently available.

Number and proportion of new staff employed within Ministry of Defence

Financial year	Declared disabled	Declared not disabled	Unknown	Disabled personnel as a percentage (exec. unknown)
2004–05	90	8,720	610	1.0

Notes
1. Data relate only to staff who have declared a disability and whose disability was recorded centrally at the time of commencing employment with the department.
2. New staff to the department have been classified to include recruited, reinstated/re-hired, loaned and transferred from other Government Departments.
3. The proportion of staff with disabilities is calculated only from the numbers where a disability status declaration has been made by the individual.

Gulf Veterans

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what funding has been received by the Gulf Veterans' Medical Assessment Programme in each year since 1993. [64762]

Mr. Touhig: Information on the funding of the Gulf Veterans' Medical Assessment Programme (GVMAP) from 1993 is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. However, for the financial year 2005–06 the cost of running the GVMAP was in the region of £150,000. This figure included accommodation, staffing and patient travel costs.

Land Assessment (Cotswolds)

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what his planned land quality assessment programme is for sites within the Cotswold District. [64649]

Mr. Touhig: The Ministry of Defence is committed to a programme that will achieve a minimum of a phase one desk-top land quality assessment for all of the defence estate in the United Kingdom by the end of 2007.

There are no sites of particular concern in the Cotswold area.

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on how many of his Department's sites within the Cotswold District land contamination assessments have been undertaken; and what the findings were in each case. [64650]

Mr. Touhig: This information is not held centrally and will take time to collate. I will therefore write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what his communication strategy is for providing information to the public on sites of concern in the Cotswold District, with particular reference to Aston Down; and what steps his Department has taken to prevent public access to such sites. [64651]

Mr. Touhig: As the Ministry of Defence does not have any sites for concern in the Cotswold District there is no need for a communication strategy for any site in the area.

With regards to Aston Down a communication strategy was developed by MOD together with the current site owners. This reflected specific public interest in the site.

There is a presumption in favour of public access to the defence estate, wherever this is compatible with operational and military training uses, public safety, security, conservation and the interests of our tenants. Aston Down was sold in February 2002 and public access is a matter for the new owners.

Ministry of Defence Stores

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to the answer of 20 January 2006, Official Report, column 1650–1W, on Ministry of Defence stores, why no financial recoveries were received in the first half of the financial year 2000–01. [65219]

Mr. Ingram: [holding answer 24 April 2006]: From October 1999, the process for pursuing such financial recoveries was de-centralised within the Ministry of Defence. During a period of transition to the new process, no recoveries were notified centrally as being attributable to the first half of 2000–01. To gather the information on recoveries made during this period could only be done at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Nick Pope

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to the answer of 18 April 2006 to Question 63392, on Mr Nick Pope, if he will list the persons employed since 1994 to investigate unidentified aerial phenomena. [65363]

Mr. Touhig: Mr Pope was succeeded in post in July 1994 by Miss Kerry Philpott who filled the post until October 1998. This post was vacant for a period and the task of examining reports of unidentified aerial phenomena to establish whether they contained anything of defence significance was covered by a member of support staff, Miss Gaynor South, until the post was filled by Mr Adrian Nash in January 1999. Mr Nash left the post in October 1999 and these duties were again covered by Miss South until the present incumbent of the post, Mrs Linda Unwin, took up office in February 2000.

Submarines (Pollution)

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to the answer of 19 December 2005, Official Report, column 505W, on Southampton Docks, what assessment he has made of the environmental impact of the Z berth in Southampton hosting a visit from a Royal Navy nuclear-powered submarine, with particular reference to reactor cooling water discharges; and if he will make a statement. [64785]

Mr. Ingram: The discharge of reactor coolant water from RN nuclear-powered submarines at Z berths is not permitted. These submarines are operated in accordance with the relevant environmental protection legislation, national and international treaties and protocols. The environmental impact of their presence at a Z berth is therefore no greater than that for a commercial ship.

The Defence Science and Technology Laboratory (DSTL) Environmental Sciences Department monitors the level of radioactive pollution on foreshores close to the locations of Z berths as part of its wider marine environmental survey programme, and the findings are published annually.

Trial Bishop Report

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make the Trial Bishop report available to members of the Defence Select Committee; if he will place a copy of the report in the Library; and if he will make a statement. [65099]

Mr. Ingram: The Trial Bishop report contains information that if released could prejudice the safety and security of UK armed forces. Therefore it would not be in the public interest for a copy of the report to be placed in the Library of the House at this time. I will consider a separate request from the Defence Committee in the usual way.

Ulster Defence Regiment

Mr. Donaldson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will consider establishing a fund to support the widows and children of Ulster Defence Regiment soldiers who lost their lives as a result of terrorist violence in Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement. [65930]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 25 April 2006]: The possibility of establishing an Ulster Defence Regiment (UDR) widows' fund on the basis that they were disadvantaged compared with similar RUC widows was examined by the Ministry of Defence, culminating in a comprehensive analysis in July 2005.

This study indicated that post-1974 UDR widows were no worse off than their RUC counterparts and most are somewhat better off. The pre-1974 widows of part-time soldiers were slightly worse off when their main pension and compensation benefits are compared to that of their counterparts. However, the comparison did not take into account a number of other factors. For example, armed forces occupational widows pensions are paid for life and war widows pensions and special payments are paid tax-free and disregarded when calculating income-related and housing benefits. If these factors were taken into account case by case, the UDR widows would generally not be worse off than their RUC counterparts.

Should there be any individual hardship cases, those concerned would be eligible for assistance either from the UDR Benevolent Fund or through the Royal Irish Regiment Welfare Staff, but there are no plans to establish a separate fund on the lines suggested.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Construction Industry Training Board

Mr. Prisk: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether Construction Industry Training Board (CITB) funding for on-site assessment and training in construction will be subject to the full oversight of the committees and board of the CITB; and if she will make a statement. [65753]

Phil Hope: CITB-ConstructionSkills funding for the On-Site Assessment and Training Programme (OSAT) is provided through its annual grants scheme which I can confirm is subject to the scrutiny of CITB Board and its relevant sub-committees.

Mr. Prisk: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what discussions her officials have had with officials of the Construction Industry Training Board on future initiatives on on-site assessment and training. [65754]

Phil Hope: The On-Site Assessment and Training Programme (OSAT) underpins the construction industry's drive to qualify the whole of its site work force and is a key component of the Sector Skills Agreement published in 2005 by CITB-ConstructionSkills, the Sector Skills Council covering the construction industry.

The aim of the programme is to qualify 250,000 adults to Level 2 through this route, with almost 62,000 achievements to date and over 29,000 registrations in 2005. Future projections are stretching, and to achieve the aim of a fully skilled construction work force it is important that OSAT remains a key focus for the industry and for the Learning and Skills Council (LSC), who plan and fund all post-16 provision of publicly funded training.

OSAT is one of only a small number of LSC funding priorities, and my officials have recently been in discussion with colleagues from both the LSC and CITB-CS to ensure that OSAT remains central to LSC planning and that the programme is effectively supported and funded.

Correspondence

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills when her Department will reply to the letter of 16 February 2006 from the right hon. Member for Warley regarding Mr. McKenzie-Ward of Oldbury. [66062]

Ruth Kelly: I expect to respond to my right hon. Friend's letter on 26 April.

Enterprise Advisor Service

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment she has made of the effectiveness of the Enterprise Adviser Service. [55666]

Phil Hope: The delivery of the Enterprise Adviser Service has been implemented by the Learning and Skills Council (LSC). The LSC is also responsible for the assessment of the Service. Mark Haysom, chief executive of the LSC, has written to my hon. Friend and a copy of his reply will be placed in the Library.

Letter from Mark Haysom, dated 25 April 2006:

I write in response to your recent Parliamentary Question about the effectiveness of the Enterprise Adviser Service. Initial evaluations from the Lead LSCs responsible for the delivery of the service have been very positive. The first two years of the service involved Enterprise Advisers working with nearly 1000 secondary schools in the most disadvantaged areas. This work was subsequently built on with the 2005–06 re-focus of the service which brought more schools within its remit. Initial evaluations suggest that over 2000 schools are now within the scope of the service.

Evaluations from the Lead LSCs and the Regional Enterprise Advisers all suggest that this service has had significant impact and is valued by the Head teachers and staff with whom they are working. The Enterprise Advisers were recruited from a largely private sector back-ground and as such have brought a significantly different perspective and skills set to schools. The knowledge, skills, experience and enthusiasm of the Enterprise Advisers has been a positive addition to the field of enterprise in education. Specific DfES resources for the service are due to end at the end of this academic year and the LSC is looking at how best to embed the good practice that has been fostered through this service into local and regional enterprise activity.

Prison Education

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what steps she has taken to broaden the prison education curriculum key and basic skills as recommended by the Education and Skills Select Committee report, HC114–1 on Prison Education. [65570]

Phil Hope: Improving the literacy, numeracy and English language skills of offenders continues to be a high priority, and underpins success in vocational and employment training. We have introduced a much broader curriculum through the Offender's Learning Journey which is being tested in three development regions in England. This new offer includes a focus on work-related learning as well as the arts curriculum and personal and social development.

Speech and Language Teaching (Hillingdon)

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the cost is per child of a placement in a speech and language unit run by Hillingdon local education authority. [65293]

Maria Eagle: This information is not collected centrally.

Statemented Children

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many statemented children there are in each (a) ward in West Lancashire constituency and (b) Lancashire; and what percentage of all children in each area these figures represent. [64118]

Maria Eagle: The requested information is given in the following table.

Sure Start

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what is the average expenditure per child was in Sure Start schemes in each year since 2001–02; what the average expenditure planned for each year to 2009–10; and if she will make a statement. [63985]

Beverley Hughes: 524 Sure Start local programmes were opened on a rolling programme between 1999 and 2003, reaching around 400,000 children aged under four years. In their first two to three years programmes were building up their services and, generally, did not operate at peak levels until the third or fourth year. The average expenditure per child for every year for which grant has been paid or allocated is in the following table. With effect from the current financial year, the earliest programmes' grants are beginning to taper to a level consistent with delivering the children's centre offer. We expect that local authorities will be in a position to make savings through economies of scale, for example on administration, finance and evaluation arrangements, now that the grant for programmes is paid directly to them.

The Government have announced its intention to conduct a Comprehensive Spending Review in 2007 and we will await the outcome of that review before decisions are taken on the level of funding from April 2008. The Government have indicated on many occasions in the past the high priority it attaches to improving outcomes for children, including in the early years.

Television Sets

Jo Swinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many television sets are in operation in the Department (a) in total, (b) in Ministers' private offices and (c) in each office building in the Department; and how many television licences are held by the Department. [62796]

Bill Rammell: The information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost. However, there are 24 TV sets in Ministers' offices.

MINISTER FOR WOMEN

Equal Pay

John Bercow: To ask the Minister for Women and Equality what representations she has received regarding the gender pay gap (a) in the private sector and (b) in the public sector. [65625]

Meg Munn: I have ongoing dialogue with trade unions, employers from both the public and private sector, and others including the Equal Opportunities Commission concerning the gender pay gap. I recently supported the launch of Opportunity Now's Benchmarking Report, which was a culmination of 159 in-depth assessments of UK organisations in the private, public and education sectors. The report contains case studies, advice, action plans and recommendations on how employers can address gender equality and diversity in the workplace, including tackling the gender pay gap.

The Government also warmly welcomes the report Shaping a Fairer Future from the Women and Work Commission and is in discussion with key stakeholders with a view to issuing an action plan to take forward recommendations on tackling the gender pay gap later this year.

HOUSE OF COMMONS COMMISSION

Capita

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission what services to the House are provided by Capita; at what cost; and for what periods. [65771]

Nick Harvey: Services provided to the House over the last two years by companies within the Capita group have included staff recruitment, training, pensions administration and other specialist advice. The total cash costs were:

2005–06	619,442

The only specific long-term contract with Capita is for pensions administration at a cost of some £45,000 per year over five years. Recruitment, advertising and response handling contracts are in the process of being tendered.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Abortion and Poverty

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development pursuant to the Answer of 21 March 2006, Official Report, column 182W, on abortion and poverty, (1) how (a) hon. Members, (b) Members of the House of Lords and (c) members of the public are able to obtain copies of the booklet Death and Denial: Unsafe Abortion and Poverty; and if he will make a statement; [64623]

(2) what terms and conditions were set in requesting the International Planned Parenthood Federation to produce the booklet Death and Denial: Unsafe Abortion and Poverty; how many copies his Department obtained; to whom they were sent; how much was spent on (a) postage and packing and (b) officials' time in dealing with the publication; and if he will make a statement; [64622]

(3) whom he consulted before requesting the International Planned Parenthood Federation to produce the booklet Death and Denial: Unsafe Abortion and Poverty; what views were expressed; and if he will make a statement; [64758]

(4) when the statement by the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State in the foreword to the booklet Death and Denial: Unsafe Abortion and Poverty was drafted; by whom; and if he will make a statement. [64759]

Mr. Thomas: I asked the International Planned Parenthood Federation (IPPF) to survey the global scene on unsafe abortion, which resulted in the report "Death and Denial: Unsafe Abortion and Poverty". No specific terms and conditions were set in making this request. The report provides an overview of the current situation regarding unsafe abortion around the world. Without stopping unsafe abortion, which causes over 13 per cent. of all maternal deaths, the Millennium Development Goal to lower maternal mortality by 2015 is unlikely to be met.

DFID was not involved in the production or printing of the booklet which was undertaken by the IPPF. I agreed to write the foreword given the pressing need for an open and informed discussion on this issue. The foreword was written by officials and agreed by Ministers. No outside consultation was undertaken or required as the DFID policy position with regard to abortion is already established.

DFID obtained 150 copies of the booklet for internal distribution only. DFID is not involved in the distribution which is the responsibility of the IPPF from whom copies of the booklet can be obtained. I have arranged for copies of the document entitled 'Death and Denial; Unsafe Abortion and Poverty' which has been produced by the IPPF, to be placed in the Libraries of the House. I am sure that the IPPF would provide copies of the report to interested members of the public requesting it.

It is not possible to provide an estimate of the cost of officials' time in dealing with all aspects of the production of the booklet, from advice to Ministers, responding to correspondence and parliamentary questions, without incurring a disproportionate cost.

China

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if he will make a statement on the United Nations Population Fund's (a) country programme document and (b) sixth country programme in its application to China. [65356]

Hilary Benn: The United Nations Populations Fund (UNFPA)'s country programme document (also known as the sixth country programme) guides the UNFPA's work in China.

UNFPA have successfully demonstrated that non-coercive family planning methods can be effective in China. The UNFPA's policy of constructive engagement with the Chinese Government should help further improve this. We look to the UNFPA to take forward its work with the Chinese Government within the framework of the new programme.

The UNFPA's activities in China, as in the rest of the world, are in strict conformity with the unanimously adopted programme of action at the International Conference on Population and Development (ICPD).

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if he will discuss with the United Nations Population Fund the statements made by its spokesman in China that the government of China has solved its population problem; and if he will make a statement. [65357]

Hilary Benn: We have been advised by the United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA) representative in China that they have not made any statements to the effect that the UNFPA consider that the Government of China had solved its population problem.

The UNFPA's rationale for their presence in China is to help the Government of China to live up to its international commitments, such as the International Conference on Population and Development (ICPD).

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development whether the United Nations Population Fund's (a) standard service delivery protocols and (b) quality of care principles include the right of individuals to refuse the use of contraception (i) in China and (ii) elsewhere without penalty; and if he will make a statement. [65359]

Hilary Benn: The United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA) assistance in China and other developing countries abides by the principles of the 1994 Cairo International Conference on Population and Development, which says that family planning should enable individuals and couples to exercise their human right to decide freely and responsibly on the number and spacing of their children and to have the information and means to enjoy that right. The principle of informed choice is essential to the long-term success of family planning programmes. Any form of coercion has no part to play.

The service delivery protocol used by the UNFPA office in China specifically provides free contraceptive choice and for clients to receive such service based on their informed consent. The UNFPA assistance in approximately 140 other developing countries is based on the same principle of free and informed decisions and consent.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if he will make representations to the United Nations Population Fund that it refuse to operate in China if the Chinese government does not guarantee that all couples are free to determine the timing of child-bearing; and if he will make a statement. [65360]

Hilary Benn: The United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA) works in a number of provinces in China, that have agreed to comply with the principles from the International Conference on Population and Development (ICPD), where it promotes the principle of voluntary family planning. Any developments which are contrary to ICPD in counties that receive UNFPA assistance would be reported to the UNFPA Executive Board, which makes decisions on whether to continue UNFPA assistance in China and any other developing country.

The UK supported the approval of the new country programme for China at the January 2006 Executive Board, which is based on the above principles. We believe that the UNFPA's work in China improves policy and practice through advocacy and assistance.

Democratic Republic of the Congo

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what discussions he has had with the Government of the Democratic Republic of Congo on addressing violence and abuse against children, with particular reference to those accused of sorcery. [65657]

Ian Pearson: I have been asked to reply.

I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to him today (UIN 65706).

Global Fund to Fight AIDS, TB and Malaria

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment he has made of the financial situation of the Global Fund to Fight AIDS, TB and Malaria. [64718]

Mr. Thomas [holding answer 24 April 2006]: The UK recognises that the funding gap which exists for the 2006 and 2007 replenishment period poses a challenge. At present US$46 million is available for Round 6 of the Global Fund, but approximately US$1 billion is needed to enable new grants to be approved and fully funded in 2006. This is a substantial funding gap for the 2006–07 replenishment period.

There will be a mid-term review of the Global Fund's replenishment process in June. This will be an opportunity for the international community to review further, the Global Fund's performance and urge new and existing donors to put in more money. The UK has pledged £359 million to the Global Fund for 2002 to 2008. This exceeds our "fair share" based on gross national income, and demonstrates our ongoing commitment to the Global Fund. The UK will continue to encourage other donors to provide additional support to fill the funding gap. In particular, we will be encouraging support from the oil producing countries and calling for a greater effort by the private sector.

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what position the UK will take regarding the launch of a Round 6 of grants at the Global Fund's next board meeting at the end of April; and if he will make a statement. [64719]

Mr. Thomas [holding answer 24 April 2006]: The UK will support the launch of Round 6 at the April board. At present US$46 million is available for Round 6, but approximately US$1 billion is needed to enable new grants to be approved and fully funded in 2006.

The UK has pledged £359 million to the Global Fund for 2002 to 2008. Last September, we doubled our commitment to the Global Fund for 2006 and 2007 to £100 million per year. This exceeds our "fair share" based on gross national income, and demonstrates our ongoing commitment to the Global Fund. Other donors need to do more to meet their share of Global Fund resources and the UK will continue to encourage them to provide additional support to fill the funding gap. In particular, we will be encouraging support from the oil producing countries and calling for a greater effort by the private sector.

Nigeria

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps are being taken by his Department to support the implementation and enforcement of Nigeria's transparency code. [65720]

Hilary Benn: Nigeria does not have a single transparency code, but is in the process of implementing and attempting to enforce a range of transparency initiatives. DFID is involved at various stages in assisting the Nigerian Government in this as a key element of its support to improved governance, which is one of the three parts of Nigeria's poverty reduction strategy, the National Economic Empowerment and Development Strategy (NEEDS).

DFID has also provided support for Nigeria's leading role in implementing the Extractive Industries Transparency Initiative (EITI) to promote transparency in the use of oil revenue. DFID in Nigeria has also provided technical and financial support to a unit in the Nigerian Finance Ministry responsible for co-ordinating the audits of oil and gas revenue that have been recently published.

In the area of enforcement of transparency and other elements of anti-corruption codes, DFID and the Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) are jointly providing technical support to the work of the Economic and Financial Crimes Commission (EFCC), which is responsible for the investigation and prosecution of a number of high profile corruption cases in recent months which include the provision of evidence that led to the impeachment of the former Governor of Bayelsa State and his subsequent prosecution, as well as the conviction and imprisonment of the former Inspector General of Police. The UK's support to EFCC is designed to complement a much larger programme of support from the EC.

At the Federal level, DFID continues to support Nigeria's Federal Economic Reform Team, in implementing other reforms to promote transparency and improve accountability, including improving Public Financial Management, publishing Federal Government allocations of budget to state and local government level and supporting civil society involvement in the Federal Government's Medium-Term Sector Strategies.

DFID also provides support to increased transparency at a state level by making clear its assistance will go to those states that have shown the most commitment to transparency and other elements of improved governance.

DFID has been a leading partner in driving forward the G8 Transparency Compact with Nigeria. In response the Federal Government has recently created the Technical Unit on Governance and Anti-Corruption Reforms (TUGAR), an inter-departmental Government initiative to measure and communicate the impact of various anti-corruption initiatives in Nigeria.

DFID is also implementing other programmes of assistance which include elements of support for increased transparency in the justice sector, policing, the electoral process and the National Assembly.

Palestine

Richard Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment he has made of the humanitarian situation in Gaza, with particular reference to the availability of essential items of food. [65453]

Hilary Benn: Earlier this month, the closure of the Kami crossing caused food shortages in Gaza. Israel is now allowing sufficient food to be imported into Gaza. We are aware that humanitarian needs could increase. Gaza's economy is affected by the closure of the Kami crossing to exports. In the future, if the Palestinian Authority cannot pay salaries, livelihoods in Gaza may be further affected. DFID is working closely with the UN Office for the co-ordination of Humanitarian Affairs to monitor the situation.

Richard Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment he has made of the effects of the closure of the Karni crossing in Gaza on the humanitarian situation in that area; and if he will make a statement. [65454]

Hilary Benn: The closure of the Kami crossing in Gaza to imports of basic food commodities created considerable food shortages in early March. Israel is now allowing food to be imported into Gaza regularly. The ongoing restrictions on exports through the Kami crossing continue to have a damaging effect on the Gaza economy. This is contributing to an increase in humanitarian need in Gaza. DFID is working with the UN Office for the co-ordination of Humanitarian Affairs to monitor the humanitarian situation, to ensure that the needs of the most vulnerable are met.

Sao Tomé

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment he has made of the impact of the discovery of oil in Sao Tomé on poverty reduction. [65729]

Hilary Benn: DFID has no bilateral programme with Sao Tomé, and has not made a direct assessment of the impact of the discovery of oil on poverty reduction. Over the past two years, Sao Tomé and Principe has moved to open the country to oil exploration and development. The Joint Development Zone (JDZ) with Nigeria is the first area to be explored. In June 2004, the Presidents signed the Abuja Declaration requesting that all oil operations in this zone follow strict transparency principles, including the publication of all state payments in accordance with the Extractive Industries Transparency Initiative (EITI). We encourage the adoption of these principles which will help promote poverty reduction along with good governance and transparency.

In December 2004, President Fradique de Menezes of Sao Tomé and Principe signed a Revenue Management Law. In anticipation of significant oil revenues, this Law promotes transparency and establishes detailed measures to ensure responsible management of petroleum wealth. In January 2005, Sao Tomé signed the first Production Sharing Contract, setting a new standard through a clause on transparency that makes specific mention of the EITI principles. This clause is expected to become a precedent for future contracts in the JDZ and in the Exclusive Economic Zone of Sao Tomé and Principe.

The International Monetary Fund (IMF) and the World Bank estimate that Sao Tomé is likely to reach heavily indebted poor countries (HIPC) completion point in 2006, which indicates that the country is broadly on track in terms of improving economic and fiscal governance, with an adequate strategy for reducing poverty.

South Africa

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment he has made of the prevalence of alcohol abuse in South Africa; and what steps he is taking to support the government of South Africa in tackling alcohol and drug abuse. [65705]

Hilary Benn: The South African Medical Research Council is the primary agency measuring the nature and extent of alcohol use and its associated consequences. It has detailed information concerning its impact on mortality, trauma and violence and risky sexual activity that increases the risk of HIV. For example, recent studies in Cape Town, Durban, and Port Elizabeth (PE) have found that:

45 per cent. of all non-natural deaths had high blood alcohol concentrations. Levels of alcohol were particularly high for transport-related deaths and homicides.

39 per cent. of trauma patients had high breath alcohol concentrations. 73 per cent. of patients with violence-related injuries in Port Elizabeth had levels above the legal limit for driving.

Between 33 per cent. and 50 per cent. of crimes categorised as "family violence" were committed by people who were reported to be under the influence of alcohol at the time of the alleged offence.

DFID does not provide support to the Government of South Africa to address alcohol abuse. Our support for the health sector concentrates on HIV prevention and care as the priority area of intervention.

For more information on alcohol and drug abuse in South Africa, the South African Medical Research Council provides useful additional information at www.mrc.ac.za

Strategic Defence Reviews

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how the aid allocated to the Ugandan strategic defence review was spent, broken down by budget heading. [64846]

Hilary Benn: DFID provided approximately £500,000 between December 2001 and December 2005 to help the Ugandan Ministry of Defence carry out Uganda's first strategic Defence Review. This was provided as technical assistance to support the review process which came largely from the UK Government's Security Sector and Defence Advisory Team and the Centre for Defence Studies King's College. The support provided included consultancy services, training in areas such as change management, management of local consultation, dissemination of the review's findings and an assessment of lessons learned.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Bank Holidays

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he plans to bring forward proposals to allow agency workers to have paid bank holidays without having to take them as part of their annual leave allowance. [65715]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The Government intend to make paid leave for bank holidays additional to the annual leave entitlement, on a pro-rata basis for those working part-time. To ensure that the impact of this change does not affect the employment security of those involved, we will consult with stakeholders before detailed proposals are made.

Bankruptcies

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many individuals have declared themselves bankrupt in each year since 1997, broken down by age. [66035]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Figures quoted in the following table relate to England and Wales. Bankruptcy figures make up only part of the headline individual insolvency series, which also includes individual voluntary arrangements (IVA's) and deeds of arrangement. These figures are not analysed by age, however, the Insolvency Service has recently published the report "Characteristics of a Bankrupt", which includes information by age group for financial years 2001–02 to 2004–05 and is available here:

http://www.insolvency.gov.uk/insolvencyprofessionandlegislation/policychange/cob.pdf

	Total	Bankruptcy orders	IVA's and deeds of arrangement
1997	24,441	19,892	4,549

2005	67,580	47,287	20,293

British Energy

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what stake the Government hold in British Energy; what its value is; and what plans he has to sell off that stake. [63590]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 25 April 2006]: The Nuclear Liabilities Fund holds £265 million of British Energy bonds as well as a right to approximately 65 per cent. of British Energy's annual adjusted free cash flow (the 'cash sweep'), a right that is convertible into British Energy shares. The Department applies a proxy valuation to the cash sweep based on the prevailing British Energy share price.

Based on a market valuation, at the close of play on 24 March 2005, the British Energy bonds were valued at about £284 million and the 'cash sweep' was estimated to be around £6.6 billion based on converting the 65 per cent. stake at current share prices.

As the Chancellor stated in his Budget statement, the Government are prepared to consider selling part of the stake in British Energy but only after the Energy Review has concluded.

British Nuclear Group

Mr. Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when the Health and Safety Executive will decide whether to prosecute British Nuclear Group over the leak at the Thorp reprocessing plant in April 2005. [64356]

Malcolm Wicks: As Minister with accountability to Parliament for matters relating to civil nuclear safety, this question has been passed to me for reply. Decisions regarding enforcement action against British Nuclear Group are quite rightly a matter for the independent safety regulator, the Health and Safety Executive. I understand that HSE is still considering what, if any, action to take, but that a decision is anticipated by the end of April.

Coal

Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much coal was produced by each company licensed by the Coal Authority in each year since 1994. [65898]

Malcolm Wicks: The Department collects data from the Coal Authority on the basis that information relating to individual coal companies is not disclosed in published statistics unless they are already publicly available. The available information on coal production is contained in Table 2.1.1 of the Digest of United Kingdom Energy Statistics 2005 and Table 2.1 of Energy Trends. Both are available on the DTI website at:

www.dti.gsi.gov.uk/energy/inform/energy_stats/coal/index.shtml

An extract showing total production by licensed mines since 1994 is as follows:

Thousand tonnes

Compensation Claims

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the 20 firms of solicitors who (a) have received the most in costs, (b) have the most claims outstanding, (c) have received the highest average settlement, (d) have had most claims (i) refused and (ii) withdrawn and (e) have pursued the most claims through common law court action in relation to (A) vibration white finger, (B) chronic obstructive pulmonary disease and (C) noise-induced hearing loss. [64455]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 19 April 2006]: The figures requested are set out in the tables, which I have placed in the Libraries of the House.

Debt Advice Helpline

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) how much was spent on advertising the Debt Advice Helpline before the launch of the helpline; and how much has been spent since the launch of the helpline; [65839]

(2) in what ways the Debt Advice Helpline has been advertised; [65840]

(3) how many people per month were expected to use the Debt Advice Helpline pilot before its launch; [65841]

(4) how many people used the Debt Advice Helpline pilot in the first month since its launch. [65842]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The Government welcome the establishment of the Debt Advice Helpline, which is an important initiative to look at ways of ensuring that those who need it get help with their debt problems. However, it is an initiative of the debt advice sector, and DTI has no direct involvement in it. The Helpline is operated on behalf of all the participants by the Consumer Credit Counselling Service (contact Jan Smith on 0113 2355 333) and is governed by an independent charity, The Debt Advice Gateway Trust (contact Geron Walker on 020 7653 9725).

Energy Suppliers

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what information and assistance his Department provides to vulnerable groups to assist them in selecting electricity, water and gas suppliers. [64620]

Malcolm Wicks: Energywatch, the statutory gas and electricity consumer body, is responsible for providing customers, including vulnerable customers, with comparative information about energy suppliers and the range of tariffs they offer. The Security of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs is responsible for water industry issues.

Financial Assistance (Heating)

Mr. Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry on how many days financial assistance with heating costs was provided to disabled people in receipt of benefits in (a) the North West and (b) England in each of the last five years. [64378]

Mr. Plaskitt: I have been asked to reply.

During the winter months disabled people in receipt of benefits may be eligible to receive a cold weather payment. Cold weather payments are intended to provide extra help to the most vulnerable people towards additional heating costs during a period of cold weather. People receiving pension credit are eligible as are income support or income-based jobseeker's allowance customers with a pensioner or disability premium, or who have a child under five or a child who is disabled.

The cold weather payment scheme is in place each winter from 1 November to 31 March. Every residential postcode in the country is linked to one of the 74 weather stations used in the scheme. A payment is made when the average temperature at a given weather station is recorded as, or is forecast to be, zero degrees or below over seven consecutive days. Thus, when a payment is 'triggered', it in effect covers seven days.

In the last five years, it has never been the case that all weather stations covering the north west or all weather stations covering England have triggered payment at the same time.

For each of the last five years, the number of weather stations triggering payment for a particular number of times is given in the following table.

Number of weather stations with stated number of triggers

Number of triggers	North West	England
2001–02
0	2	20
1	3	25

Notes:
1. The north west has been interpreted as the area covered by the north west Government office region.
2. Some weather stations cover areas which straddle regional or country boundaries. Any weather station which covered part of the north west or part of England has been included, even if it covered part of another region or country as well.
3. The number of weather stations and the areas they cover have changed slightly over the years.
4. The number of people who qualify for a cold weather payment varies greatly by weather station. For example, for weather stations covering England which triggered payment in 2005–06, the number of people who qualified per weather station varied from an estimated 8,000 (for a weather station covering an area straddling England and Scotland) to an estimated 141,000.

Geothermal Energy

John Pugh: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what Government support is available for geothermal energy; and if he will make a statement. [65251]

Malcolm Wicks: Between 1976 and the early 1990's the UK carried out a major Geothermal Research Programme at a cost in excess of £50 million. The key conclusions from the programme were that the UK is unlikely to see major developments based upon geothermal aquifers or the hot dry rock (HDR) method due to a limited resource, poor economics and limited scope for their application.

Unless the technical, practical and economic constraints identified under the previous Geothermal Programme can be addressed, the prospects for geothermal power in the UK would appear to be limited.

More recently interest has been growing in the use of Ground Source Heat Pumps. This technology can be applied to buildings of virtually any scale including domestic dwellings. It relies on heat exchange with the ground immediately beneath or close to buildings. There are at least 15 installations connected to commercial or public buildings in the UK, including the recently opened Welsh Assembly building.

Both DEFRA and the DTI, in collaboration with the Heat Pump Association, have helped establish a UK Heat Pump Network to develop a partnership between manufactures, specialist advisers, and user groups. This network will ensure that independent and authoritative advice is available on the application and use of heat pumps.

The recently launched Low Carbon Building Programme with a £80 million budget over three years, will provide support for a range of micro-generation technologies including ground source heat pumps. More information on the grant levels and how to apply is available at www.lowcarbonbuildings.org.uk

Low Carbon Buildings Programme

Mr. Fallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he expects to confirm the starting date of the Low Carbon Buildings Programme; what the planned date for the first funding round is; if he will list the grant eligible technologies; and if he will make a statement. [63251]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 18 April 2006]: The Low Carbon Buildings programme was launched on 28 March 2006 as part of the Government's strategy for the promotion of micro generation. Applicants under the household stream 1 of the programme can start registering for application forms from 24 April 2006 and applications will be processed from the beginning of May 2006. You can find more information on the programme's website at: www.lowcarbonbuildings.org.uk, including a list of eligible technologies, grant levels and how to apply.

NIG Ltd

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many complaints have been made to his Department about NIG Ltd in the last five years. [64444]

Malcolm Wicks: The Department is not aware of any complaints having been made about NIG Ltd in the last five years.

Noise-induced Hearing Loss (Mining)

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry which solicitors and claims handlers have had a fixed cost agreement with the Department for miners' claims for noise-induced hearing loss since 1999; for how much in each case; and when each (a) began and (b) ended. [64440]

Malcolm Wicks: The solicitors and claims handlers with whom we have fixed cost agreements for handling miners' hearing loss claims are listed:

Barber Cartain, Ben Hoare Bell, Beresfords, Brian Mcardle, BRM, Browells, Campbell Smith , Comes, DMH Stallard, Drummond Miller, Gorman Hamilton, Gorvin Smith Fort, Graysons, Hickmotts, Houseman & Hailes, Hugh James, Ingrams, Irwin Mitchell, Kidd & Spoor Harper, Lathams, Lopian Wagner, Marrons, Mcardles, McConville O'Neill, Meloy Whittle Robinson, Morisons, Moss, Mortons, O H Parsons, Oxley & Coward, Pannone And Partners, Raleys, Randell Saunders, Saffmans, Simpson Miller, Thompsons, Union of Democratic Mineworkers, Watson Burton.

Many of these agreements were in place at the time British Coal's liability was transferred to the Department in 1998. The agreements continue in force as long as the listed firms continue to submit claims. The Department is unable to divulge specific details of any particular agreement as these are commercial agreements and the terms are confidential between the parties.

Nuclear Decommissioning

Jenny Willott: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether the full costs of (a) decommissioning nuclear power plants and (b) disposing of spent nuclear fuel will be taken into account in cost-benefit analysis of each nuclear power plant in (i) future energy White Papers and (ii) the current energy review; and if he will make a statement. [64414]

Malcolm Wicks: The Energy Review is examining potential costs of decommissioning any new nuclear plants and managing spent fuel.

Jenny Willott: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how the full costs of (a) decommissioning nuclear power plants and (b) disposing of spent nuclear fuel are calculated; and if he will make a statement. [64415]

Malcolm Wicks: The Nuclear Decommissioning Authority (NDA) assumed responsibility for the decommissioning and clean up of the UK's civil nuclear legacy on 1 April 2005. The cost of the decommissioning and clean up of the NDA's sites is calculated by means of Life Cycle Baselines—which are long-term plans providing a detailed assessment of the scope, methodology, and timescale of proposed site clean up activities. Life Cycle Baselines are published by the NDA and are available on their website at:
www.nda.gov.uk

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to the answer of 21 March 2006, Official Report, column 197W, on the Nuclear Decommissioning Authority, how many shipments of reprocessed uranium have been returned to customers in each year since such dispatch from Sellafield began; to which countries uranium has been returned; what quantities of uranium were involved in each shipment; over what time period interim storage or reprocessed uranium has been offered to each customer; how much revenue has been raised from such storage contracts in each year since the storage contracts were activated; what the country of origin was in each case where the title of the reprocessed uranium did not reside with the originator of the reprocessed spent nuclear fuel; and what plans there are for the management of the reprocessed uranium not covered by return-to-sender clauses. [63589]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 24 April 2006]: The terms and conditions of British Nuclear Group's contracts with its reprocessing customers are confidential. This applies to historical information about shipments in previous years, including to which countries uranium has been returned, the quantities involved and the revenue raised from storage contracts.

It is the decision of the customer to which country their reprocessed uranium is exported and who transports it. Once chosen, the destination country is incorporated into British Nuclear Group's contract with its reprocessing customer and is confidential.

British Nuclear Group has agreed relatively long storage periods with UK customers. Overseas reprocessing customers are entitled to a much more limited period of storage under their reprocessing and associated contracts. In respect of reprocessed uranium stored in the UK, it is currently stored in steel drums within designated stores located on nuclear licensed sites. Options for reprocessed uranium are currently being considered by the Nuclear Decommissioning Authority as announced in its strategy published on 30 March 2006.

Nuclear Waste

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the total amount of nuclear waste produced by research establishments that use nuclear material has been in the last 30 years. [63779]

Mr. Morley: I have been asked to reply.

The total amount of nuclear waste produced by research establishments that use nuclear material in the last 30 years is estimated to be about 80,000 cubic metres, excluding future decommissioning wastes of about 170,000 cubic metres.

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the total amount of waste from nuclear power stations which is purely from the civil programme has been over the last 30 years. [63783]

Mr. Morley: I have been asked to reply.

The total amount of nuclear waste produced by nuclear power stations which is purely from the civil programme in the last 30 years is estimated to be about 60,000 cubic metres, excluding future decommissioning wastes of about 410,000 cubic metres.

Oil Companies (Engagements)

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he last called a meeting with the executive directors of each of the main oil companies in the UK; who attended; what was discussed; how long the meeting lasted; if he will place in the Library a note made by his officials of the meeting; and if he will make a statement. [65478]

Malcolm Wicks: The Energy Minister convened a meeting with executive directors of the main oil companies and their trade association UKPIA, the United Kingdom Petroleum Industry Association, on 10 January 2006. UKPIA represents all of the UK's major oil refining companies. The meeting lasted for about an hour. The main purpose of the meeting was to discuss supply issues following the Buncefield Oil Terminal fire plus emergency stocking obligations. Under Competition Policy rules, at no stage was pricing of petrol and diesel discussed. A record of the meeting will not be placed in the Library, as doing so would prejudice commercial interests.

Photovoltaic Industry

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the annual budgets for (a) the Clear Skies and (b) the Solar Photovoltaics Major Demonstration programmes was in each of the last three years. [63593]

Malcolm Wicks: The Department did not allocate annual budgets for the Clear Skies and Major Demonstration PV programmes. The Clear Skies programme had a £13,250,000 budget over the last three years and the Major PV Demonstration programme had a £31,750,000 budget over the last four years. The amount of grant committed in each year over the last three years is as follows:

	Clear Skies	MDP PV
2003–04	4,406,040	7,950,643
2004–05	4,337,485	8,253,471
2005–06	3,472,715	9,425,805

Road Fuel

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what advice his Department (a) publishes and (b) gives to members of the public about how to conserve (i) petrol and (ii) diesel; and if he will make a statement. [65479]

Malcolm Wicks: The Department of Trade and Industry does not publish this information, as it is matter for the Department for Transport (DfT). However, the New Car Fuel Consumption and Emission Figures booklet published annually by the Vehicle Certification Agency (VGA) includes advice on more efficient driving. The DfT's Logistics Policy Unit also publish advice on Safe And Fuel Efficient Driving (SAFED) for commercial drivers.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the average price was of a litre of (a) unleaded petrol and (b) diesel in (i) England, (ii) Essex, (iii) inner London and (iv) outer London in each week of 2006. [65358]

Malcolm Wicks: The DTI does not collect data in the above format. It is commercially available from Catalist. The following data has been provided by Catalist and consists of the average price of petrol and diesel on a Monday.

Stress Laminated Timber

Alison Seabeck: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps his Department is taking to ensure there are test facilities in the UK large enough to fire test a new form of stress laminated timber (SLT). [61799]

Jim Fitzpatrick: I have been asked to reply.

The testing of construction materials falls within ODPM policy responsibilities. The DTI does not directly support the establishment or maintenance of fire test facilities. There are several testing halls within the UK capable of undertaking large scale testing of stress laminated timber.

Sunday Trading

Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what research his Department has (a) assessed and (b) commissioned on the social implications of relaxing Sunday trading restrictions; [65376]

(2) how potential social effects will be taken into account in his Department's review of Sunday trading restrictions. [65377]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The DTI issued a press and website notice in January asking for views and evidence on all aspects of Sunday trading.

Supermarkets

Mr. Malik: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will assess the merits of introducing measures to regulate the sale by national supermarket chains of goods at below wholesale prices. [65977]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The Office of Fair Trading (OFT) has responsibilities for enforcing the UK competition and consumer protection regimes.

The OFT has consulted on a proposed referral of the grocery market to the Competition Commission for a market investigation. The statutory consultation closed on 6 April and we expect the OFT's decision in early May.

The Competition Commission (CC) has noted that prohibitions on below-cost selling in other countries have not been effective. The Irish Government has recently announced its intention to repeal the Restrictive Practices (Groceries) Order 1987 in its entirety. One of the key aims of the Order was to prevent below cost selling by larger retailers in a manner that that would damage their smaller competitors. Micheal Martin the Minister for Enterprise, Trade & Employment said that the Order has kept the prices of the vast majority of grocery products in Ireland at an artificially high level.

In their reference the OFT have included consideration of the buying power of the supermarkets and its effect on the differential between prices to supermarkets and those to wholesalers and buying groups. Whether there are problems in the sector, and whether there are any remedies that should be put in place to address them will be a matter for the CC to consider should the OFT make a reference.

Torture Equipment

Anne Snelgrove: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps he is taking to prevent British companies from brokering the sale of items for torture overseas. [65270]

Malcolm Wicks: The Government have had a national prohibition on the export of equipment used for torture since 1997, and deplore the use of such equipment. The UK has been at the forefront of global efforts to control the trade in torture equipment and has recently played an important role in the introduction of a related EU Regulation, which will also bring many other EU states up to our own level of control.

In addition to the UK national ban on the export of torture equipment, trafficking and brokering has also been controlled under UK national controls since 2003. This will continue after implementation of the EU Regulation. Brokering of the controlled items is prohibited without a trade licence.

UK Trade and Investment

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the contracts won in 2004–05 by British companies from (a) China, (b) Japan, (c) Turkey, (d) the Far East and (e) the Middle East following the Duke of York's travels for UK Trade and Investment. [63156]

Ian Pearson: HRH The Duke of York is the UK's special representative for international trade and investment. In this role HRH makes a significant contribution in promoting the interests of UK industry and the UK as a whole, through an extensive programme of targeted engagements both in the UK and overseas. It is not possible to try to directly attribute contracts won to any individual contribution, as contracts are achieved through the efforts of many individuals and agencies, often over some years.

There is a high demand from British business for The Duke's assistance in lobbying for both inward and outward investment.

Women in Work

Ed Balls: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what proportion of women in (a) Wakefield district and (b) Normanton constituency are working (i) part-time and (ii) full-time. [66026]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The following table shows the proportion of all women (aged 16 and over) in either full-time or part-time employment[1], for Wakefield and Normanton. Estimates refer to place of residence and are from the Annual Population Survey from the Office for National Statistics and cover the period from April 2004 to March 2005.

Proportion of all women (aged 16 and over) in either full-time or part-time employment: April 2004-March 2005

	Wakefield	Percentage Normanton
In employment[1]
Full-time	32	37
Part-time	26	28
Not in employment[2]	42	36
All women aged 16 plus	100	100

[1] Employment includes: employees, self-employed, Government employment and training programmes, and unpaid family workers.

[2] "Not in employment" includes unemployed and economically inactive women.

SCOTLAND

Departmental Leave (Stress)

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many staff have been on sick leave suffering from stress in the Department in each of the last three years; and what percentage of the total staff number this represents. [63530]

David Cairns: Fewer than five people have been affected; to avoid disclosure, the Office does not specify actual figures where the number is below five.

Grievance Procedures

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many grievance procedures have been initiated in the Department in each of the last three years. [63531]

David Cairns: None.

Harassment Procedures

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many complaints of (a) bullying and (b) sexual harassment have been investigated in the Department in each of the last three years; and how many complaints have been upheld. [63532]

David Cairns: No complaints have been received.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

British Library

Mr. Grogan: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement on the future role of the British Library at Boston Spa. [66051]

Mr. Lammy: The future role of the British Library at Boston Spa is a matter for the British Library Board.

Mr. Grogan: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement on the respective roles of the reading rooms at the British Library premises in (a) London and (b) Boston Spa. [66052]

Mr. Lammy: The British Library reading rooms at St. Pancras provide 1,100 reader seats. The reading room at Boston Spa provides 76 reader seats. There are no current plans to alter the reading room provision at Boston Spa.

Commonwealth Games

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement on the performance of the British Commonwealth teams in the recent Commonwealth Games. [65307]

Mr. Caborn: The Games were a marvellous occasion, both for the participants and spectators, and there were some truly excellent and inspiring performances by the British teams. As sport is a devolved issue, I will not comment further on the performance of the Scottish, Welsh and Northern Irish teams.

The English team had some considerable successes, not least in the swimming pool, the boxing ring and the velodrome, and consolidated its position as the number two Commonwealth nation.

The team's performance also gave some indications of success at future competitions, including the Beijing Olympics in two years' time, the Commonwealth Games in Delhi in 2010, and London 2012. UK Sport, the Government's lead agency for elite sport, will be working with the English and UK National Governing Bodies to help bring performances in line with the very best.

Digital Switchover

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what recent progress her Department has made on digital switchover; and if she will make a statement. [65378]

Tessa Jowell: Good progress continues to be made. The Government have confirmed the regional timetable for switchover and announced support schemes to help the most vulnerable households to make the switch. The not-for-profit organisation Digital UK, which will co-ordinate the switch to digital television, has now been set up.

We will shortly publish the report of the trial conducted in the Bolton area in association with the BBC. The conclusions of the trial together with other research and discussions with the consumer experts group and other stakeholders will inform the development of the nationwide support scheme.

High Definition Television

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when high definition television is expected to be available to viewers across the UK. [65873]

James Purnell: The equipment needed to receive High Definition TV is already available to all Telewest consumers. Customers with such equipment can access free of charge a limited amount of High Definition content from the on-demand library. There are plans to roll out similar equipment to ntl customers but no specific timescales are currently available.

Sky plan to offer high definition services nationally via satellite from late May.

Internet Gambling

Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what discussions she has held with the Remote Gambling Association on the effectiveness of its code of practice in discouraging internet gambling addiction. [65471]

Mr. Caborn: The Remote Gambling Association contacted the Department with a draft version of their social responsibility code prior to its publication and asked for comments, which officials provided.

Later this year I will be hosting a Government level international summit to consider the scope for building on best practice and developing international norms in social responsibility for remote gambling operators around the globe.

Olympic Games

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much Exchequer funding forms part of the funding package for the London Organising Committee of the Olympic Games. [65040]

Mr. Caborn: As is normal practice, the local organising committee will be largely funded through sponsorship; sale of tickets; and directly from the International Olympic Committee (IOC).

There are no plans to provide Exchequer funding for the London Organising Committee of the Olympic Games (LOCOG) although the Government have, as required by the IOC, given an assurance that they will act as the ultimate financial guarantor should there be a shortfall between Olympic costs and revenues. However, over £50 million from the Public Sector Funding Package will be going to LOCOG to fund the delivery of the Paralympic Games.

Olympic Games (Shooting)

Mr. Bone: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans there are for the use of the facility being built in London for indoor and outdoor shooting activities after the 2012 Olympic Games has ended. [65428]

Mr. Caborn: The shooting hall for the 2012 Olympic Games and Paralympic Games is one of a number of temporary venues that will be relocated after the Games has finished.

Decisions on the future use and location of all of the temporary venues will be made on a needs basis, in close consultation with the Home Country Sports Councils and UK Sport, closer to 2012.

Olympic Levy (Bexley)

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what representations she has received on the Olympic Levy from residents in the London Borough of Bexley. [65691]

Mr. Caborn: Since 1 April 2005, DCMS has received around 60 letters concerning the Olympic element of the London council tax. Of these, two are from addresses in the London Borough of Bexley.

Smoking

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) what representations her Department has received from the (a) theatre, (b) film and (c) television industry regarding possible exemptions to the ban on smoking in public places for the purposes of artistic productions; and if she will make a statement; [65733]

(2) what discussions her Department has had with the Secretary of State for Health regarding possible exemptions to the ban on smoking in public places for the purposes of (a) theatre, (b) film and (c) television productions; and if she will make a statement. [65734]

Mr. Lammy: I have discussed smoking in public places for the purposes of artistic productions with the Theatrical Management Association/Society for London Theatre. I have received no other representations from the film, broadcasting and theatre industries and I have not discussed this particular point with my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health.

However, my officials have been kept fully informed of the progress of discussions between the Department of Health, Equity and the Theatrical Management Association regarding possible exemptions from the workplace smoking ban.

Sport Funding (South-east London)

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what central Government funding has been allocated to sport in South East London during the past eight years. [65692]

Mr. Caborn: Financial support for sport from public sources is primarily channelled through Sport England and UK Sport, the two DCMS sponsored bodies which award Lottery grants and dispense Exchequer funds for sport from DCMS.

Sport England

Since 1997, Sport England has awarded Exchequer funding of approximately £157,000 to South East London[1] boroughs. This is in addition to Lottery funding of £33.5 million[2] which Sport England has awarded to this area for the same period.

UK Sport

It is not possible for UK Sport to determine an amount of Lottery or Exchequer funding allocated to South East London as its funding is not directed to specific regions. However, UK Sport has identified 18 athletes with a declared address in South East London who have benefited from Lottery funded Athlete Personal Awards of approximately £487,000[3].

[1] For the purposes of this question, Sport England has included funding awarded to the London boroughs of Bexley, Bromley, Greenwich, Lambeth, Lewisham and Southwark in its definition of South East London.

[2] This figure includes Lottery awards of approximately £25 million made through programmes such as: Community Capital, Community Investment Fund, Active Communities Development Fund, Active Sports, Active England, Community Athletics Refurbishment Programme, Sport Action Zones and Green Spaces. This also includes mixed Lottery and Exchequer awards of approximately £8.5 million made through programmes such as: School Sports Partnerships and Space for Sport and Arts.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Carswell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures exist to deal with asylum seekers who leave the UK under the voluntary return scheme but return to the UK subsequently. [64000]

Mr. McNulty: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given on 10 April 2006, Official Report, column 281W.

Carlile Report

Ms Keeble: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he plans to take concerning the problems with the use of restraint and isolation in secure training centres identified in the Carlile Report. [63422]

Fiona Mactaggart: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given on 10 April 2006, Official Report, column 284W.

Criminal Justice Act

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the operation of section 118 of the Criminal Justice Act 2003. [64697]

Fiona Mactaggart: I see no need to do so, but if the hon. Member has a particular concern about the operation of the law in this area perhaps he will write to me.

Drug Treatment Programmes

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many Class A drug users who are in treatment have committed an offence in the last three months. [47722]

Paul Goggins: The information is not available in the format requested.

Forensic Science Service

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether spending by the Forensic Science Service on DNA tests in murder cases is subject to a cash limit. [64685]

Andy Burnham: Decisions relating to the costs involved in commissioning the Forensic Science Service to carry out a scientific examination of evidence in a criminal investigation are made by individual police forces, who have responsibility for determining the levels of spending appropriate to each investigation.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department in how many cases in which proceedings are complete the Forensic Science Service has (a) lost and (b) misinterpreted evidence since 2000; and how many cases were not proceeded with as a result. [64689]

Andy Burnham: The Forensic Science Service (FSS) has reviewed its records and has not identified any completed cases since 2000, in which evidence was lost or misinterpreted. Differences in opinion can arise between expert witnesses providing evidence, based on their interpretation of the information available. The FSS has identified two cases within this time period where timeliness of the identification of evidence could have been improved. Decisions as to whether cases are proceeded with are made by individual police forces and the Crown Prosecution Service.

Prisons

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people under 18 years are detained in each adult prison. [64935]

Fiona Mactaggart: On 30 June 2005 two such persons were held in Eastwood Park.

These young prisoners were female and held in female prisons, in accommodation specially set aside for juveniles on young offender wings. Under 17 year old girls are no longer placed within the Prison Service estate, unless exceptional circumstances apply in an individual case; and four dedicated units, within the Prison Service estate, have now been created for 17 year old girls; a fifth is due to open later this year.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to build medium-secure units within the prison infrastructure to provide support for prisoners who have mental health concerns. [55576]

Fiona Mactaggart: We have no such plans. Low, medium and high secure units are health-care facilities that are part of the hospital system rather than the Prison Service.

Where prisoners require treatment in a medium secure psychiatric setting for a mental disorder, they should be transferred to hospital rather than being treated in prison.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of inmates' (a) access to and (b) use of acupuncture at each London prison. [62780]

Fiona Mactaggart: None. The provision of therapies for prisoners is a matter for the PCT responsible for commissioning the primary health service at the establishment concerned.

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much time is allowed for meetings between inmates and their families, including children, in (a) men's and (b) women's prisons; and to what extent arrangements for such visits differ between the two types of prison. [65490]

Fiona Mactaggart [holding answer 24 April 2006]: The statutory allowance for visits is the same for both men and women and is audited. For convicted prisoners, the statutory minimum is one hour. In exceptional circumstances, the establishment can apply for a temporary reduction to 30 minutes. For unconvicted prisoners, the minimum is one and a half hours a week where the establishment offers visits on a daily basis, or a minimum of one hour in prisons where visits are allowed three days a week as opposed to daily. Visiting arrangements are administered locally at the discretion of governors and directors, taking into account operational requirements. The actual duration of visits is not recorded centrally.

Many prisons offer more than the prescribed minima and the length of the visit may also be linked to the incentives and earned privileges scheme, which is managed by each establishment. An increasing number of establishments also offer extended family or children's visits, typically lasting a half or full day, as well as focussed visits which are structured around the needs of the child and imprisoned parent.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on progress in delivering an electronic system for the transfer of records between prisons. [65798]

Fiona Mactaggart: An electronic case management system enabling both the prisons and probations services to share information in real time (C-NOMIS) will be introduced in July 2006 and rolled out across the services over a period of 24 months.

Road Protests

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the cost has been of removing protestors from road protest sites in (a) England, (b) Essex and (c) Southend-on-Sea in each year since 1997. [64660]

Paul Goggins: This information is not collected centrally.

Road Traffic Offences

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) males and (b) females driving an emergency vehicle received a notice of prosecution for committing an offence under section 89 of the Road Traffic Regulation Act 1984 in (i) Southend-on-Sea, (ii) Essex, (iii) the Metropolitan Police area of London and (iv) England and Wales in each year since 1996. [64682]

Paul Goggins: The information is not collected centrally.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) males and (b) females were imprisoned for failure to pay a fixed penalty as a result of their committing an offence under section 14 of the Road Traffic Act 1988 in each of the last two years for which figures are available, broken down by age. [64704]

Fiona Mactaggart: The information is not available.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the fixed penalty was for a contravention of (a) section 33A of the Road Traffic Act 1972 and (b) section 14 of the Road Traffic Act 1988 in each year since 1983. [64703]

Fiona Mactaggart: The Road Traffic Act 1972 has been repealed, but its provisions concerning the wearing of protective helmets by riders of motor cycles were re-enacted in the Road Traffic Act 1988. Section 14 of the 1988 Act concerns the wearing of seat belts. The offences are non-endorsable. In 1983 the fixed penalty for non-endorsable offences was £10. In 1986 the penalty was raised to £12. In 1990 the penalty was raised to £16 and in 1992 was raised to £20. From 1 November 2000 the penalty was raised to its current level of £30.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many speed camera tickets have been cancelled in (a) England, (b) Essex and (c) Southend because the driver could show he was attending an emergency in each year since 1997. [64691]

Paul Goggins: Information is not available centrally on the number of drivers of emergency vehicles who elect to challenge a speed camera ticket.

Sentencing Guidelines Council

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions he has had during the last two years with the Sentencing Guidelines Council on the consistency of sentencing; what the (a) date, (b) time, (c) location and (d) duration was of each meeting; and if he will make a statement. [64698]

Fiona Mactaggart: Section 170(5)(a) of the Criminal Justice Act 2003 provides that the Sentencing Guidelines Council (SGC) must have regard to the need to promote consistency in sentencing when framing or revising sentencing guidelines. Courts are required to have regard to relevant sentencing guidelines and, when departing from them, state the reasons for doing so.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Home Department has not met with the SGC within the last two years.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent assessment he has made of the likely impact of the Sentencing Guidelines Council on the size of the (a) probation and (b) prisons case load over the next 10 years; and if he will make a statement. [65005]

Fiona Mactaggart: Published projections of future workloads for prison and probation take into account legislative and other changes with an agreed timetable. This includes the new sentences under the Criminal Justice Act 2003 where the Sentencing Guidelines Council (SGC) guideline, published in December 2004, has been taken into account in estimating the likely impacts on workloads. The "Updated and revised prison populations projections: 2005–2011 England and Wales (HOSB 10/05)" were published in July 2005. There may be impacts from future SGC guidelines on specific offences, but until these have been finalised and published, it is not possible to take account of them in our estimates.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the occasions in each of the last three years when he has proposed to the Sentencing Guidelines Council (a) that sentencing guidelines and (b) allocation guidelines be framed or revised by the council (i) in respect of offences or offenders of a particular category and (ii) in respect of a particular matter affecting sentencing. [65008]

Fiona Mactaggart: The Sentencing Guidelines Council was set up in March 2004. In 2004, the council was asked to consider the level of fines imposed by courts where a fixed penalty notice had been declined for the offence of driving while uninsured. In 2005, the council was asked to consider issuing guidance on the provisions in the Criminal Justice Act 2003 relating to the assessment of dangerousness.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Council Tax Rebate

Mr. Leech: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many pensioners received the council tax rebate announced in the 2005 Budget in (a) Manchester, Withington and (b) England. [64073]

Mr. Timms: This information is not currently available. I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as it is. I expect this to be by the summer.

Government Buildings (Lytham St Annes)

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) whether he plans to end in the next five years any of his Department's activities currently undertaken on the Government building site at Heyhouses Lane, Lytham St. Annes; and if he will make a statement; [47074]

(2) if he will list (a) the sections of (i) his Department and (ii) its agencies and (b) those working on contract for the Department located on the Government building site at Heyhouses Lane, Lytham St. Annes. [47075]

Mrs. McGuire [holding answer 31 January 2006]: The Department continues to look for more efficient use of its property and is currently reviewing the size and shape of its Head Office estate as part of its efficiency challenge. Proposals, which include consideration of the Department's buildings in Blackpool and Lytham St. Anne's, including Heyhouses Lane, are currently with the Department's Executive Team and Ministers. Any proposals for change will, of course, be subject to full consultation with staff and departmental trade unions.

The following sections of the Department have staff that are located on the Government building site on Heyhouses Lane, Lytham St. Anne's.

Finance Directorate
Human Resources Directorate
Information Division
Programme and Systems Delivery Group
Work, Welfare and Equality Group

The following agencies of the Department have staff that are located on the Government building site on Heyhouses Lane, Lytham St. Anne's.

Child Support Agency
Jobcentre Plus
The Pension Service

The following contractors of the Department have staff that are located on the Government building site on Heyhouses Lane, Lytham St. Anne's.

Incapacity Benefit

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) how many recipients of incapacity benefit in Tamworth had their benefit reduced in each of the last five years, broken down by reason; and if he will make a statement; [48647]

(2) how many people living in Tamworth constituency claimed incapacity benefit in each year since 1997; and what proportion of the working age population in the constituency this represents in each year. [48648]

Mrs. McGuire [pursuant to the reply, 15 February 2005, Official Report, c. 2184W]: The only reason for a claimant's incapacity benefit to be reduced is the receipt of an occupational pension in excess of £85.00 a week. The number of cases so affected in Tamworth is too small to be able to provide a precise figure.

Information on the number of incapacity benefit and severe disablement allowance claimants in the Tamworth parliamentary constituency is in the table. Working-age population figures are not available for parliamentary constituencies, so the information about proportions cannot be estimated.

Incapacity Benefit (IB) and Severe Disablement Allowance (SDA) claimants in the Tamworth parliamentary constituency

August	Number
1997	3,800
1998	3,600
1999	3,400
2000	3,500
2001	3,600
2002	3,600
2003	3,700
2004	3,600
2005	3,600

Notes:
1. The parliamentary constituency figures for the years 1997 to 1998 have been produced using the 5 per cent. data and have been rated up proportionally using the Great Britain WPLS 100 per cent. IB/SDA totals.
2. Figures are rounded to the nearest 100.
3. 'Claimant' figures include all IB and SDA, including IB credits only cases.

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many of those making an incapacity benefit claim on grounds of (a) certain infectious and parasitic diseases, (b) neoplasms, (c) diseases of the blood and blood forming organs and certain diseases involving the immune mechanism, (d) endocrine, nutritional and metabolic diseases, (e) mental and behavioural disorders, (f) diseases of the nervous system, (g) diseases of the eye and adnexa, (h) diseases of the ear and mastoid process, (i) diseases of the circulatory system, (j) diseases of the respiratory system, (k) factors influencing health status and contact with health services, (l) diseases of the digestive system, (m) diseases of the skin and subcutaneous system, (n) diseases of the musculoskeletal system and connective tissue, (o) diseases of the genitourinary system, (p) pregnancy, childbirth and the puerperium, (q) certain conditions originating in the perinatal period, (r) congenital malformations, deformations and chromosomal abnormalities, (s) symptoms, signs and abnormal clinical and laboratory findings, not elsewhere classified and (t) injury, poisoning and certain other consequences of external causes; were disallowed following a personal capability assessment in each of the last three years. [64497]

Mrs. McGuire: The available information is in the table.

Incapacity benefit and severe disablement allowance terminations following personal capability assessments; Great Britain

	Year ending 31 August:
	2003	2004	2005

Teleclaiming

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions at what date a claim is deemed to have commenced under the teleclaiming system where (a) there is a gap between the initial telephone contact and the issuing of a claim form and (b) there is a delay to the interview date due to the need for an interpreter, advocate or other facilitator to be present. [66068]

Margaret Hodge: To make a new claim to working age benefits through Jobcentre Plus, a customer telephones a contact centre. Contact centre staff ask the customer a series of questions to assess their potential eligibility to Jobcentre Plus benefits. They then arrange to call the customer back at a mutually agreed time, to assist in completion of a claim form.

The customer's date of claim normally commences from the date they first contact the contact centre, except where the customer wishes to claim in advance or in retrospect, in which case there are different processes in place. Any delay that might occur in dealing with a customer's claim does not impact on the initial date of claim. Likewise, if a customer needs an interpreter, advocate or facilitator at any point of the new claim process, any delay in arranging this will not adversely affect the date of claim.

Pathways to Work

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the off-flows from incapacity benefit at six months for each of the pathways to work pilot areas (a) were in the last 12-month period for which figures are available prior to the start of pathways to work and (b) have been since the start of pathways to work. [41171]

Margaret Hodge [holding answer on 18 January 2006]: The following table shows the average six month off-flow rate by district for the twelve months immediately prior to the pathways roll-out and the average six month off-flow rate since the pathways roll-out.

The National Benefits Database does not include a proportion of short term incapacity benefit claims, therefore, the off-flow rates presented will be lower than the actual rates; however, trends over time will be consistent.

Percentage

	Phase 1
	Bridgend Rhondda Cynon and Taff	Derbyshire	RIAB[1]

The statistics quoted in this response are taken from the Department's National Benefits Database.

Pensions

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the basic state pension was for (a) single pensioners and (b) pensioner couples in each year since 1997–98; and what the pension will be for each category in 2006–07. [66246]

Mr. Timms: The information is in the table.

	Basic state pension for a single pensioner	Basic state pension for a pensioner couple
1997–98	62.45	99.80
1998–99	64.70	103.40
1999–2000	66.75	106.70
2000–01	67.50	107.90
2001–02	72.50	115.90
2002–03	75.50	120.70
2003–04	77.45	123.80
2004–05	79.60	127.25
2005–06	82.05	131.20
2006–07	84.25	134.75

Both members of a pensioner couple are entitled to the full basic category A state pension for a single pensioner if they satisfy the contribution conditions. However, the combination of Category A and Category B (based on the husband's contributions) rates is commonly referred to as the couple's rate and is shown in the table.

Remploy

Mr. David: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what plans he has for Remploy. [53502]

Mrs. McGuire: The Minister for Disabled People made a written ministerial statement to the House of Commons on the 16 March announcing a review of Remploy. Since then, PricewaterhouseCoopers have been appointed to conduct the review. To ensure that the employment needs of disabled people are fully taken into account, Dr Stephen Duckworth of Disability Matters has joined the review team. The review team will report to Ministers by the end of May.

Social Fund

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many Social Fund grants were made in each year since 1995–96. [63374]

Mr. Plaskitt: The available information is in the table.

Community Care Grants

	Initial awards (thousands)
1995–96	275
1996–97	251
1997–98	234
1998–99	225
1999–2000	220
2000–01	225
2001–02	233
2002–03	245
2003–04	256

Winter Fuel Payment

Mr. Dunne: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether his Department has paid the winter fuel payment automatically to anybody who is not in receipt of another form of benefit since 2000–01. [64916]

Mr. Timms: People who have made a successful claim for a winter fuel payment since winter 2000–01 do not have to claim again in subsequent years, as long as there is no break in their eligibility and they keep us informed of their changes in circumstances.

Anyone who becomes newly eligible for a winter fuel payment and who is in receipt of a DWP benefit will receive a winter fuel payment automatically; others will need to submit a claim.

PRIME MINISTER

Correspondence

Mr. Harper: To ask the Prime Minister when he will reply to the letter, dated 19 January 2006, from the hon. Member for Forest of Dean with regard to Mr. Robin Caulkett. [65549]

The Prime Minister: My Office has replied to the hon. Member.

World Cup (Complimentary Tickets)

Mr. Hands: To ask the Prime Minister how many complimentary tickets his Office has received for games taking place at the FIFA World Cup 2006 in Germany. [63896]

The Prime Minister: I have not received any complimentary tickets for World Cup matches taking place in Germany this summer.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH OFFICE

Argentina

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has had with the Government of Argentina about the prosecution of those guilty of human rights violations during the 1976 to 1983 Dirty War. [65644]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: The UK and our EU partners welcome the Government of Argentina's decision to tackle impunity and bring to justice those responsible for human rights abuses during the 1976–83 "dirty war". Although my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has had no recent discussions with the Government of Argentina on the issue, it is a frequent subject of conversation between our embassy officials in Buenos Aires and a wide range of government and non-governmental contacts.

Better Regulation

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress was made on better regulation at the recent EU Council. [65396]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: The Council reinforced the good progress made during the UK presidency, urging the EU Institutions to continue to deliver on their commitments including robust impact assessments and simplification of existing regulations. It asked the Commission to focus on concrete actions, including measuring administrative costs on business and reporting on measurable targets for reducing these burdens by the end of 2006; and to bring forward proposals to benefit small and medium sized enterprises such as longer transition periods for implementation of legislation, reduced fees, simplified reporting requirements and exemptions.

Burma

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when the British ambassador to Burma last met with (a) Aung San Suu Kyi and (b) members of the democracy movement. [65557]

Ian Pearson: Our ambassador in Rangoon last met Daw Aung San Suu Kyi on 25 April 2003. Since her arrest on 30 May 2003, the Burmese regime has refused all requests by our ambassador to call on her.

Our ambassador last met the leadership of the National League for Democracy on 21 April. She has regular contact with a wide range of opposition and civil society figures in Burma.

Chad

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with the Government of Chad about the deterioration of Chad's relations with Sudan. [65558]

Ian Pearson: We are concerned about the deterioration in relations between the Governments of Chad and Sudan and its potential negative impact on the Darfur peace talks in Abuja. Our non-resident ambassador to Chad met the Chadian Foreign Minister in N'Djamena on 4 April. He made clear that the UK expects Chad to do its utmost to reduce tensions on the border with Sudan. We continue to call on all sides to show restraint and on the Governments of Chad and Sudan to resolve their differences and restore calm to the region without the use of violence.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what assessment he has made of the extent of involvement of the Government of Sudan in rebel movements operating in Chad; [65646]

(2) what assessment he has made of the extent of support provided by the Government of Sudan to the rebels seeking to overthrow the Government of Chad. [65647]

Ian Pearson: We are aware of reports concerning the Government of Sudan's alleged support for Chadian rebels. We welcome the African Union's (AU) initiative to send a mission to Chad to examine the political situation and investigate such allegations. This mission arrived in N'djamena on 21 April 2006 and will report to the AU Peace and Security Council this week.

We continue to call on all sides to show restraint, and on the Governments of Chad and Sudan to resolve their differences and restore calm to the region without the use of violence.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with the Government of Chad about the protection of refugees from the conflict in Darfur. [65648]

Ian Pearson: We are concerned about the impact of the current political and security situation in Chad on over 200,000 refugees from Darfur, now sheltering in camps in eastern Chad. Our non-resident ambassador to Chad met the Chadian Foreign Minister on 4 April 2006. He made clear that the UK expects Chad to do its utmost to reduce tensions on the border with Sudan. Nothing should be done to threaten the lives or safety of either the refugees in Chad or the displaced persons in Darfur. We welcome President Deby's announcement on 17 April 2006 that none of these refugees would be forcibly relocated back into Darfur.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of statements by the President of Chad that oil revenues are needed to pay for weapons. [65650]

Ian Pearson: We believe that African oil revenues should be used for sustainable development and poverty reduction, not for weapons purchases. We do not contest the Government of Chad's need to pay and equip the Chadian army for legitimate self-defence. But we believe the immediate priority should be efforts through negotiation to tackle Chad's internal instability and its dispute with Sudan.

Charles Taylor

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with the Governments of (a) Nigeria, (b) Sierra Leone and (c) Liberia on the prosecution of Charles Taylor. [65686]

Ian Pearson: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary and other Ministers have discussed Charles Taylor with the Nigerian authorities and a range of other Governments. The UK has worked hard with international partners to achieve his transfer to the Special Court for Sierra Leone.

My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister has written to the Presidents of Nigeria, Liberia and Sierra Leone to thank them for their role in achieving this outcome. We remain in close touch with them and with our international partners on managing the next steps of the trial process, and stand ready to continue to assist as best we can.

Colombia

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has had with the Government of Colombia about (a) respect for human rights, (b) progress towards democracy, (c) the freedom of the press and (d) tackling corruption in Colombia. [65643]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: My noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, Lord Triesman of Tottenham, last met Colombian Vice President Santos in November 2005 in London to discuss a number of issues, including the human rights situation, democratic development and the fight against corruption. Our ambassador in Bogota and other British officials regularly meet Colombian government Ministers and officials, both bilaterally and through the EU and other international groupings, to discuss progress in implementing the UN High Commissioner for Human Rights recommendations on human rights.

Embassy officials in Bogota have recently discussed the question of freedom of the press with the Vice President's Office. In addition, under the UK Presidency, the EU carried out a lobbying campaign to raise awareness of the importance of freedom of expression in Colombia, particularly in relation to human rights defenders. As Presidency we talked with senior government representatives, including the Fiscal General and the Head of the Armed Forces Human Rights Unit, as well as with non-governmental organisations and the media.

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether recent discussions have taken place between Colombian and UK authorities in relation to those citizens travelling on British passports in Colombia during August 2001 who were subsequently convicted by a Colombian court. [65866]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: There have been no recent discussions between the British and Colombian authorities about the case of those individuals who were convicted in 2004 by the Colombian authorities of travelling on false Irish and British passports within Colombia. The individuals concerned are Irish nationals and have returned to Ireland. The case is a matter between the Irish and Colombian governments.

Conference on Disarmament

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list individuals who have served as the UK Permanent Representative to the Conference on Disarmament since 1992; on what date each (a) began working for his Department, (b) took up this post, (c) left this post and (d) left employment with his Department; and what post each of those still employed by his Department now holds. [65229]

Dr. Howells: Sir Michael Weston was UK Permanent Representative to the Conference on Disarmament (CD) from April 1992 to July 1997. Rejoined the Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) in 1961 and retired from the service in 1997.

Ian Soutar was UK Permanent Representative to the CD from August 1997 to September 2001. He joined the FCO in 1968 and retired from the service in 2003.

David Broucher was UK Permanent Representative to the CD from October 2001 to August 2004. He joined the FCO in 1966 and retired from the service in 2004.

Dr. John Freeman was UK Permanent Representative to the CD from September 2004 to March 2006. He joined the FCO in 1986, following a three year secondment, and is currently seconded as Deputy Director General to the Organisation for the Prohibition of Chemical Weapons.

John Duncan is the current UK Permanent Representative to the CD. He took up his position on 24 April 2006.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list each honour bestowed since 1 May 1997 on present and former holders of the post of UK Permanent Representative to the Conference on Disarmament; and on what date each honour was bestowed. [65230]

Dr. Howells: No honours have been bestowed on present or former holders of the post of UK Permanent Representative to the Conference on Disarmament since 1997.

Democratic Republic of Congo

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Government of the Democratic Republic of Congo on addressing the needs of street children. [65655]

Ian Pearson: The UK regularly reminds the Democratic Republic of Congo (DRC) authorities of the need to protect the rights of all vulnerable groups, including street children. The UK contributes to programmes through the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF), Save the Children and other non-governmental organisations which aim to protect children. We maintain close and regular contact with the DRC President's ambassador for children, and will continue to work with civil society groups and the Congolese Government to push for further action to bring those who abuse children to justice. We will continue to urge the DRC Government to take more action on child welfare.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps are being taken by his Department to support and promote reform of the (a) security sector and (b) army in the Democratic Republic of Congo. [65683]

Ian Pearson: Effective security sector reform is essential in ensuring long-term resolution of conflict in the Democratic Republic of Congo (DRC) and in the great lakes region. It is a UK priority. We are providing experts to the EU's Security Sector Reform Mission which offers advice to the DRC Government on integrating rebel factions into a unified army, on options for longer term comprehensive security sector reform and which is also implementing a military pay and administration reform project to ensure monthly salaries reach the soldiers on the ground. The UK is allocating approximately £5 million to support soldiers and their families in the newly integrated brigades, and an additional £3 million this year to other army-related interventions. We have contributed US $25 million over five years to the regional Multi-Country Disarmament, Demobilisation, and Reintegration Programme, through which DRC's national disarmament, demobilisation and reintegration programme is funded, £9 million to a multi-donor police reform project, and £2 million to a justice reform project in the war-affected east of the country, an integral part of which will be support to the military justice system.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Government of the Democratic Republic of Congo on (a) prohibiting physical and sexual abuse of children by law enforcement personnel, (b) creating child protection units in all major cities, (c) outlawing churches which practise abusive child deliverance ceremonies and (d) providing rehabilitative centres for children as an alternative to prison. [65706]

Ian Pearson: The UK frequently reminds the Democratic Republic of Congo (DRC) authorities of the need to protect the rights of all vulnerable groups, especially children, and to bring to justice all perpetrators of abuse. We and EU colleagues have focused on eliminating abuses committed by security personnel. On 23 January, we and international partners presented President Kabila with a dossier of serious abuses committed by Congolese soldiers, which hon. Members of the All Party Parliamentary Group followed up on 6 April. We continue to support the UN Peacekeeping Mission's work in the human rights field, including their child protection units in major cities.

As part of our presidency of the EU, the UK led an initiative to raise awareness of the problem of so-called "child witches" in DRC. We continue to work with the UN, civil society groups, established churches and the Congolese Government to address this problem and bring those who abuse children to justice. The UK has contributed to training programmes for justice sector workers, which includes training on child protection and the proper treatment of children within the justice system.

Gibraltar

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he will consider the result of the forthcoming referendum in Gibraltar to approve the new constitution as an act of self-determination for the purposes of Government policy on Gibraltar. [65375]

Mr. Douglas Alexander [holding answer 24 April 2006]: As my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary made clear in his written ministerial statement on 27 March 2006, Official Report, columns 44–46W, the new constitution confirms that the people of Gibraltar have the right of self-determination.

Nevertheless, the referendum process to approve the new constitution has yet to be settled. It would therefore be premature for the Government to comment at this stage.

India

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what his assessment is of trade relations with India. [65394]

Ian Pearson: Trade relations between India and the UK are traditionally strong and bilateral trade continues to show excellent growth.

The value of bilateral trade with India for goods and services in 2004 was approximately £6.41 billion (2005 figures will be released in July 2006). This was an increase from £5.91 billion in 2003. UK exports to India show a 25.4 per cent. increase to December 2005 compared to the same period in 2004.

The UK is currently the fifth biggest investor in India.

To further strengthen bilateral commercial ties the Government have worked with its Indian counterparts in creating the Joint Economic Trade Committee (JETCO). Under JETCO the UK and Indian governments are working on the main action points to enhance bilateral trade and investment in specific sectors.

The Asia Task Force was also created to identify and remove barriers to trade across the whole of Asia, but with particular focus on India and China.

The Government also supports the private sector led Indo-British Partnership Network (IBPN). The main objectives of the IBPN are to provide a networking forum for all UK businesses interested in trade between India and the UK; to identify ways for UK firms to better access the India market and to inform government of the private sector's view of the barriers to trade between the two countries.

Inward Investment

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how he encourages foreign business to invest in the UK. [65395]

Ian Pearson: UK Trade and Investment (UKTI) is the key Government body tasked with attracting inward investment into the UK. It works in partnership with the Regional Development Agencies and the Devolved Administrations. UKTI is focusing its efforts on attracting high tech investments to ensure that the UK meets the challenges and opportunities of globalisation and remains the No. 1 location in Europe for inward investment.

As part of the budget announcement on 22 March 2006, it was announced that UKTI is to take responsibility for co-ordinating a new drive to market the UK internationally as a business centre and to take the lead in a new strategy to attract Research and Development business into the UK.

Iraq (Trade Unions)

Rob Marris: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received concerning the independence of trade unions in Iraq; and if he will make a statement. [65276]

Dr. Howells: I have received a number of representations concerning the independence of trade unions in Iraq.

In June 2005, I met a delegation from the Iraqi Federation of Trade Unions and the Iraqi Kurdistan General Workers during their visit to the UK. Foreign and Commonwealth Office officials met Iraqi trade union representatives at our Embassy in Baghdad in February 2006.

Article 22 of the Iraqi Constitution guarantees the right of Iraqis to form and join unions and professional associations. However, the Iraqi transitional Government issued Decree 8750 on 8 August 2005, which froze union finances while a new law on trade unions was developed. Unfortunately the hiatus in forming a new government and Parliament has also delayed the legislative programme. The freeze on finances is therefore still in force.

Our embassy in Baghdad raised our concerns about citizens' fundamental right to form trade unions with the Iraqi Minister for Industry in September 2005 and with the Ministry of Civil Society in November 2005. We will continue to raise this issue with the new government, when it has formed.

Israeli Air Force

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the answer of 18 April 2006, Official Report, column 537W, what the outcome was of the UK embassy in Tel Aviv raising on 22 March 2006 the issue of the Israeli Air Force operating low-flying aircraft over the Gaza Strip. [65970]

Dr. Howells: At the meeting on 22 March 2006, our Embassy in Tel Aviv re-enforced our position on the effects of low flying aircraft. There have been no subsequent deliberate sonic booms. The last deliberate sonic boom over Gaza that we are aware of was on 2 January 2006.

Libya

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with the Government of Libya on the detention of women and girls for social rehabilitation. [65684]

Dr. Howells: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has not discussed the detention of women and girls for social rehabilitation with the Libyan Government. As part of our human rights work with Libya, the Foreign and Commonwealth Office has funded a project providing guidance and training for senior managers and individual prison officers. The project will help to address the needs of women in Libyan prisons.

Marshall Plan

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what sums are being paid to the US Administration arising out of the Marshall Plan. [65379]

Ian Pearson: The UK completed repayment of aid loans under the Marshall Plan in 1987.

Nepal

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the extent of (a) extortions and abuses perpetrated by Maoist insurgents in Nepal and (b) the importation of explosives and detonators into Nepal by such insurgents. [64636]

Dr. Howells: The Maoists carry out widespread human rights abuses including torture, kidnap, rape, murder and extortion for money. These acts of abuse perpetrated against innocent civilians, including women and children. We condemn these acts of violence. In early April 2006 the Office of the High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR) reported that a large number of children were being used by the Maoists forces as helpers and porters during military operations. The OHCHR assessed that 60 civilians were abducted during March 2006, but OHCHR had seen the return of about 14 of those who were abducted by early April 2006.

During the run up to Municipal elections in 8 February the Maoists killed at least two election candidates and abducted at least one other. Abductions and extortion continued throughout the period covered by the OHCHR report, though we have not seen a figure for such incidents.

We are aware that the Maoist have been involved in importing explosives and detonators into Nepal. The Royal Nepalese Army seized over 5,000kg of commercial explosives and in excess of 30,000 commercial detonators in separate operations, in March 2006, along the Nepal-India border. We cannot judge what proportion of the overall total of Maoist imports this represents.

Parental Access (Germany)

Mr. Crabb: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions (a) he and (b) diplomatic and consular staff in Germany have had with German authorities on child custody cases in Germany where British parents experience restrictions on legitimate access. [66046]

Dr. Howells: There have been no recent discussions with the German authorities on this issue involving my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary or other Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) Ministers. The FCO provides appropriate consular assistance, when requested, to British nationals involved in disputes over child residence and contact, in conjunction with the Department for Constitutional Affairs as the central authority handling cases brought under the 1980 Hague Convention on the Civil Aspects of International Child Abduction. This assistance may include consular staff contacting the relevant German authorities on individual cases. Officials have also attended meetings of a taskforce set up by the Federal Ministry of Justice in Germany to discuss such cases.

Mr. Crabb: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many British parents have contacted his Department since 1990 regarding assistance with cases relating to access to children involved in custody disputes in the German courts. [66053]

Dr. Howells: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office's Child Abduction Section, which was established in 2003, does not have full records of all such cases since 1990. The section does, however, have records of 19 cases concerning child residence or contact disputes in Germany since 2003. seven of which are classified as disputes over access. I also refer the hon. Member to the answer given by the then Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (Mike O'Brien) to my hon. Friend the Member for Leicester, East (Keith Vaz) on 7 November 2002, Official Report, column 638W, that outlined child contact cases dealt with by consular staff in Germany between 1997 and 2002.

Philippines

Ms Katy Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) if he will make representations to the Philippine government concerning the parliamentarians trapped in their offices in Congress under threat of arrest; [65834]

(2) if he will make a statement on the Philippine parliamentarians who are trapped in their offices in Congress under threat of arrest. [65835]

Ian Pearson: Charges have been laid against the parliamentarians in a Regional Trial Court. In response to questions about the case, the Philippine authorities have specifically assured the diplomatic community of their commitment to, and respect for, due process for all those facing charges in respect of the events leading to the imposition of a State of National Emergency in February. Therefore, at present, my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has no plans to make representations to the Philippine government.

Sudan

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what assessment he has made of the extent of the involvement of Salah Abdullah Gosh in human rights abuses in Darfur; [65743]

(2) what assessment he has made of the impact of the relationship between Salah Abdullah Gosh and (a) the British security services and (b) the American security services on his immunity from prosecution for human rights abuses in Darfur. [65746]

Ian Pearson: We do not comment on individual cases or on intelligence matters. But the Government have made clear that there can be no impunity for any of those responsible for crimes committed in Darfur. We sponsored United Nations Security Council Resolution 1593, referring the situation in Darfur to the International Criminal Court, which has now begun its work.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with the Governments of (a) China and (b) Russia about the proposal to impose UN sanctions on perpetrators of violence in Darfur. [65559]

Ian Pearson: The UK is a leading proponent of sanctions against those who violate human rights or impede the peace process in Darfur. We have identified several individuals from all sides to the conflict who we believe meet this criteria, and on 12 April proposed to the Security Council that they face targeted sanctions under Resolution 1591. Since then we have held discussions on an almost daily basis with our Security Council partners, including China and Russia, on the imposition of sanctions against these individuals. We will continue to press for sanctions against these and other such individuals who meet the criteria.

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what (a) financially and (b) military (i) unilateral and (ii) multilateral assistance the UK Government is prepared to give to enforce peace agreement for Darfur. [64642]

Ian Pearson: The Government stand ready to provide assistance in support of a peace agreement for Darfur. We pledged funding in excess of £250 million for humanitarian, development and other assistance to Sudan for the next two years at the Consortium Meeting in Paris in March 2006. We will allocate development, reconstruction and humanitarian assistance for Darfur once a peace agreement is reached. We are providing practical and financial support to the African Union Mission in Darfur. We have recently pledged a further £20 million, in addition to the £32 million already provided.

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations the UK Government has made to the African Union on upholding the United Nations mandate in Sudan. [64645]

Ian Pearson: We welcome the decision by the African Union (AU) Peace and Security Council on 10 March to support in principle hand-over of the AU Mission in Darfur to the UN and to request the Chairperson of the AU to work closely with the UN Secretary-General on joint planning. We are working with both the AU and the UN to support a smooth transition.

Terrorism (Compensation)

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what compensation is available to (a) British citizens who are injured in terrorist attacks abroad and (b) the relatives of those killed; and if he will make a statement. [65556]

Dr. Howells: Those injured abroad, or the relatives or dependants of someone killed abroad, are not currently eligible for compensation under the UK compensation schemes. The Government have been considering the issue of compensation in detail. This was made clear in a consultation paper about the criminal injuries compensation scheme and support for victims of crime which the Home Office issued on 7 December 2005, under the title "Rebuilding Lives: supporting victims of crime". The Home Office will make an announcement in due course.

My right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer announced in the Budget a £1 million initial endowment to a charitable fund to help the British victims of terrorism. The fund will provide rapid relief to meet the immediate financial needs of those caught up in a terrorist attack, whether in the UK or overseas. The Department for Culture, Media and Sport is working in consultation with the voluntary sector, partners in Government and victims' groups to finalise the details and will make a further announcement in due course.

Separately, the Foreign and Commonwealth Office has in place a package of immediate assistance measures to help victims of terrorism overseas and their families in the immediate aftermath of a terrorist incident overseas.

Uganda

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with his counterparts on the UN Security Council on the merits of a resolution on violence and conflict in Uganda. [65685]

Ian Pearson: The UK has been actively involved in securing two UN Security Council Resolutions in 2006 (1653 and 1663) which have condemned the activities of militias and armed groups such as the Lord's Resistance Army (LRA). The LRA continue to attack civilians and UN and humanitarian personnel and commit human rights abuses in Uganda, and elsewhere in the region.

On 19 April the Ugandan Foreign and Defence Ministers briefed the UN Security Council on measures to address the humanitarian and security problems caused by the LRA. Jan Egeland, UN Under-Secretary General for Humanitarian Affairs, briefed the Security Council on 20 April following his recent trip to Uganda.

The UN Secretariat has indicated that they will brief the Security Council on possible options for tackling the LRA on 26 April. Once this has taken place we will discuss with Security Council colleagues the best way to further international community engagement on this issue.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with the Government of Uganda on reducing violence and conflict in Uganda. [65718]

Ian Pearson: We hold regular talks with the Government of Uganda on efforts to find a sustainable solution to the conflict in northern Uganda and alleviate the humanitarian situation for the 1.7 million people living in camps for internally displaced people.

On 20 March my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for International Development (Mr. Thomas), attended a ministerial meeting in Geneva where the conflict was discussed with the Ugandan Foreign Minister, Sam Kutesa.

On 12 April the acting British high commissioner in Kampala met the Ugandan Foreign Minister and on 19 April officials from the UK's Mission to the United Nations in New York exchanged views on northern Uganda with the Ugandan Foreign and Defence Ministers in the UN Security Council.

Uzbekistan

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps are being taken by his Department to build the capacity of (a) Kyrgyzstan, (b) Tajikistan and (c) Kazakhstan to cope with the economic and political consequences of possible future instability in Uzbekistan, with particular reference to (i) assistance with crisis planning, (ii) management of refugee flows, (iii) improving policing and border security, (iv) providing emergency aid and (v) reducing these countries reliance on Uzbekistan for (A) energy and (B) transport. [65687]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: The EU encourages greater inter-regional co-operation through regular meetings with all of the countries of Central Asia. The most recent of these EU-Central Asia regional dialogue meetings took place in Kazakhstan on 7 April 2006. The EU supports the efforts of all the countries in the region to diversify their energy supplies. Regional transport co-operation has been identified as a key area in EU programmes in the region.

As an Organisation for Security and Co-operation in Europe (OSCE) participating State, the UK supports the work of the OSCE in Central Asia as a primary instrument for early warning, conflict prevention, crisis management and post-conflict rehabilitation. The OSCE field missions in Kyrgyzstan, Tajikistan and Kazakhstan are currently implementing projects related to border security, policing, trafficking and economic development. The OSCE Police Assistance Programme for Kyrgyzstan in 2006 includes coverage of the problems of refugees. The programme will include the compilation of a manual for police officers on the legal rights of refugees, training for police officers on handling refugee crises and technical equipment for police stations in the Osh border region.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps are being taken by his Department to support (a) independent news gathering and (b) (i) human rights activists and (ii) journalists operating in Uzbekistan. [65690]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: Under our EU presidency, we led a sustained EU lobbying campaign on behalf of individuals in Uzbekistan who were harassed and imprisoned in relation to the events in Andizhan in May 2005. These included human rights defenders such as the journalist Saidajon Zainatbidinov from Andizhan.

Our ambassador and his team in Tashkent are in regular contact with the international press and local independent journalists, as well as non-governmental organisations and other members of civil society. We support their work through a variety of projects and through training and educational support. We made representations to the Uzbek authorities over the closure of the BBC Office, Internews and Radio Liberty. We keep in close contact with the staff of the BBC Monitoring Office in Tashkent.

Promotion of media freedom is also a key part of the Organisation for Security and Co-operation in Europe's (OSCE) mandate in Uzbekistan. The OSCE centre in Tashkent runs a media programme focusing on professional development for journalists, media development and the promotion and protection of freedom of the media.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps are being taken by his Department to support broadcasting into Uzbekistan from abroad with particular reference to news and educational programmes. [65693]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: We support a variety of activities by central and regional media outlets in the region, including media outlets in the regions bordering on Uzbekistan.

Last year under the Global Conflict Prevention Fund, we spent £165,000 on a regional media project which provided training to media outlets, supported local publications, encouraged cross border information exchange and cross community special reports, election reporting, public debates and international awareness. The project increased the regional flow of information, and strengthened local networks. Another cross border media training programme supported by the UK encouraged media exchanges between Tajikistan, Kyrgyzstan and Uzbekistan.

Our embassies will continue to support media development as a key area of democratic reform.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps are being taken by his Department to support journalism training in Uzbekistan and the surrounding region. [65694]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: Since 2003 the Foreign and Commonwealth Office has contributed over £350,000 to a variety of media-based projects with a training component, including to promote cross-border media co-operation and strengthen the independent media in Kyrgyzstan, Tajikistan and Uzbekistan.

Our embassies work closely with the Organisation for Security and Co-operation in Europe's (OSCE) field missions in the region. The OSCE mission in Tashkent runs a media programme focussing on professional development for journalists, media development and the promotion and protection of freedom of the media. We also support the work of the OSCE mission in Tajikistan, where there is a resource centre for journalists which provides specialist literature, training, legal advice and supports independent publications.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps are being taken by his Department to support (a) political activity, (b) civil society and (c) educational opportunities in Uzbekistan. [65695]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: Our ambassador and his team in Tashkent meet regularly with non-governmental organisations (NGOs) and other members of civil society and support their work through project funds where possible. We use the Chevening Scholarship and Fellowship programmes to provide capacity building in key areas of democratic reform.

The embassy financed the annual conference for disabled peopled NGOs in Tashkent in March. This brought together around 50 local NGOs. The embassy has also funded a project in conjunction with a local NGO and the British Council to make an educational video for school children on the effects of our everyday lives on the environment.

The British Council has been working with the Ministry of Public Education to produce a new generation of textbooks for secondary schools and to ensure that they are affordable and available to pupils around Uzbekistan.

The British Council has also been working with the Ministry of Higher and Specialised Secondary Education to build close partnerships between vocational colleges and relevant businesses or industry in the design of vocational education.

With the Ministry of Public Education, the British Council has been preparing a team of trainers representing all regions of Uzbekistan and a wide range of curriculum subjects to introduce the latest teaching techniques to teachers around the country.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment

he has made of the impact of political instability in Uzbekistan on (a) European security and (b) stability and security in central Asia. [65896]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: We continue to follow closely the political situation in Uzbekistan. As the Foreign and Commonwealth Office's new White Paper "Active Diplomacy for a Changing World" says, the peaceful transformation of the European continent which promotes security, prosperity and democracy depends upon maintaining the EU's active commitment to engage with neighbours. European countries and the wider international community have an interest in stability in Uzbekistan and the region. We believe the best way of maintaining stability in the region is by encouraging substantive democratic and economic reform.

Zimbabwe

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the human rights situation in Zimbabwe. [65652]

Ian Pearson: The human rights situation in Zimbabwe remains of great concern. We will continue to pressure the Government of Zimbabwe to restore respect for democratic values, human rights and the rule of law.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent assessment he has made of the safety of failed asylum seekers returned to Zimbabwe. [65653]

Ian Pearson: We continue to assess that individuals repatriated from the United Kingdom are not systematically singled out for abuse by the Zimbabwean authorities. Our embassy in Harare maintains close and regular links with Zimbabwean and international human rights non-governmental organisations, and other relevant institutions, to ensure that we are in the best possible position to know and take appropriate action if there are any genuine cases of failed asylum seekers being mistreated on their return.

We remain concerned at widespread human rights abuses in Zimbabwe. We will continue to provide protection to those individuals who genuinely need it through the asylum process.

Mr. Hands: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with his Chinese counterpart on the level of that country's investment in Zimbabwe. [65756]

Ian Pearson: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has not discussed this subject with the Chinese Foreign Minister, although senior Foreign and Commonwealth Office officials have raised concerns about Zimbabwe with their Chinese counterparts.

The UK Permanent Representative to the UN raised our concerns about the political and economic crisis in Zimbabwe at the United Nations on 19 December 2005, when the Security Council discussed the subject for the third time. As my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary said in his Abuja speech on 14 February, we would like to see China's engagement in Africa support democratic and accountable governance and we will work closely with China to that end.

TREASURY

Avian Influenza

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the expected economic consequences of an avian influenza pandemic in the UK. [65853]

Mr. Des Browne: The Government are closely monitoring the risks posed by a potential avian influenza pandemic and is assessing all relevant aspects, including the possible economic effects.

The economic implications of an avian influenza outbreak would depend on the nature, extent and duration of an outbreak, and associated policy responses.

Births

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many live births there were in (a) 2002, (b) 2003 and (c) 2004 in each primary care trust in England. [65146]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Colin Mowl, dated April 2006:

The National Statistician has been asked to reply to your question about how many livebirths there were in (a) 2002, (b) 2003 and (c) 2004 in each primary care trust in England. I am replying in her absence. (65146)

The figures requested are shown in the attached table and have also been placed in the House of Commons Library. They are based on the place of mother's usual residence irrespective of where the birth occurred. To allow comparability between years, they all relate to the areas covered by primary care organisations in October 2005.

Child Tax Credit

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the savings to the Exchequer from tapering away the family element of the child tax credit for incomes between £30,000 and £38,000; and if he will make a statement. [63406]

Dawn Primarolo: The current second income threshold is £50,000. The estimated saving from reducing the second income threshold to £30,000, holding all other rates constant, is £0.8 billion. Around 1.5 million families would see their tax credit award reduced as a result of such a change.

Combined Cadet Forces

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what discussions he has had with Defence Ministers on plans to create branches of the Combined Cadet Force in state schools which he announced in February 2006. [65829]

Mr. Des Browne: Treasury Ministers have discussions with Defence Ministers on a variety of issues on a regular basis.

Council Tax

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the answer of 9 February 2006, Official Report, column 1419W, to the hon. Member for Meriden (Mrs. Spelman), on council tax, on what dates each of the current 66 value significant codes were first collected [54530]

Mr. Woolas: I have been asked to reply.

Value significant codes (VSCs) record the existence of a feature that may affect value—but whether a particular feature does affect value in any individual case is a question of fact or degree.

The capability to input VSCs electronically was introduced from March 2003, at which time there were 13 codes. These were expanded to 66 in January 2005. Information about features that are "value significant" has always been collected as part of the process of arriving at fair bandings for council tax purposes, but has not previously been recorded electronically. However there is no mass data collection process under way, nor are VSCs being used to amend existing council tax bands.

EU Budget

Mr. Cash: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he will be in a position to introduce the legislation necessary to implement the EU budget agreed on 15 and 16 December 2005. [65811]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply given on 31 January 2006, Official Report, column 400W, to the hon. Member for Castle Point (Bob Spink).

Gold Sales

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the loss on gold sales by the Bank of England since 1997; and if he will make a statement. [65097]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The decision to rebalance the reserves portfolio by selling gold was a long-term investment decision not a short-term attempt to play the market. Reducing the riskiness of the portfolio can only be assessed meaningfully in the medium to long term because short-term fluctuations in assets prices could mask the benefits of risk reduction.

Income Tax

Andrew George: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the number of people with (a) salaries and (b) income generating business who did not earn enough to pay income tax in each of the last 10 years for which records are available. [63876]

Dawn Primarolo: The estimated number of people with self-employment income who have no income tax liability is shown in the following table for the period 1996–97 to 2005–06. Data on the number of employees who did not earn enough to pay income tax are not held.

[1] Estimates obtained from the survey of personal incomes. Estimates for later years should be more accurate and subject to less sampling variation, due to the sample size of the survey increasing from around 50,000 in 1996–97 to over 400,000 by 2002–03.

[2] A person can be both employed and self-employed in the tax year.

[3] Estimates from the 2003–04 survey of personal incomes and projected forward in line with March 2006 Budget assumptions.

London Olympics

Philip Davies: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what systems are in place to collect tax from foreign contractors used for work on the 2012 Olympics. [64818]

Dawn Primarolo: The systems and rules for foreign contractors used on Olympics related projects are the same as those for foreign contractors working on non-Olympics related projects.

Lung Cancer

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many new cases of lung cancer there have been in each of the last six years, broken down by region. [64614]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 26 April 2006:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking how many new cases of lung cancer there have been in each of the last six years, broken down by region. [64614]

The most recent available figures for newly diagnosed cases (incidence) of cancer are for 2003. Figures by Government Office Region for the years 1998–2003 are given in the attached table.

Newly diagnosed cases of lung cancer[1] by Government office region, 1998–2003

Ministerial Flights

Nick Harvey: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether air passenger duty is payable on ministerial flights on official business. [64968]

John Healey: Air passenger duty (APD) is payable by aircraft operators that are defined as Air Transport Undertakings under the Air Navigation Order 1982. APD is charged on the number of passengers on board a chargeable aircraft on departure from a UK airport. This includes ministerial flights on official business when commercial flights are used.

Full details of eligibility to pay APD are set out in HM Revenue and Customs Public Notice 550, which is available on their website (www.hmrc.gov.uk)

Online Goods Declaration

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people used the free online service by which traders can declare goods to HM Revenue and Customs in each of the last five years for which records are available. [65858]

Dawn Primarolo: HMRC provide a range of on line communications channels for which we do not charge, enabling our customers or their representatives to submit declarations to us in a way that best suits their business needs. CHIEF is our main frame computer for the processing of third country import/export declarations, it is used by 150,000 customers or their representatives and processes in excess of 20,000,000 declarations per annum—trade take up of our electronic CHIEF services is 99.9 per cent.. Channels to CHIEF include EDI/e-mail, a web service and XML for exports. We also maintain a manual presentation facility for those that are not e-enabled.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment was made of commercial companies already operating in the same field before HM Revenue and Customs launched the free online declaration service. [65860]

Dawn Primarolo: HMRC have an established and comprehensive customer consultation programme. HMRC have actively engaged with individuals and representatives of all those working in the online services area and customers who use the services provided. Ongoing consultation is an essential element of the HMRC online and EU Change programmes, providing suppliers and users with the opportunity to comment on and shape our technical products. Communications mediums/routes are implemented in accordance with our Channels Strategy, focussing on meeting customer needs and making it easier for our customers to comply whilst driving take up of online services.

Parish Councils

Mr. Todd: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will ensure that parish meetings have the same VAT status in relation to works carried out on their behalf as parish councils. [65663]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Parish meetings, unlike parish councils, are not regarded as local authorities. The question of extending the VAT relief given to local authorities to parish meetings has been looked at many times. In general, the amounts of tax involved would be exceeded by the cost of administration and processing each claim. For this reason, successive Governments have concluded that a change in the law would result in disproportionate costs and could not be justified.

I have instructed my officials to explore with parish meetings, relevant representative bodies and other stakeholders whether this remains the case.

However, a different solution is possible. I understand that, under Section 9 of the Local Government Act 1972, a parish meeting can request its district council to establish a parish council for the parish, which is able to recover VAT under the provisions of Section 33 of the VAT Act 1994.

Pensions (Tax Relief)

Chris Huhne: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will estimate the number of people who would be affected if pension contributions were allowable for tax relief only against the basic rate of income tax; [65763]

(2) if he will estimate the effect on Government revenues of allowing relief on pension contributions only at the basic rate of income tax. [65764]

Dawn Primarolo: Around 2½ million taxpayers would be affected if tax relief on their pension contributions were limited to the basic rate of income tax.

The estimated yield from restricting income tax relief on employee and self-employed pension contributions to the basic rate is £1.5 billion in 2004–05. The yield from restricting employer contributions is around £3 billion. This estimate assumes that the proportion of total employer contributions relating to higher rate taxpayers is the same as that for employees. The estimates take no account of any behavioural effects that are likely to result from such rule changes. Nor do they account for any knock-on implications for the taxation of pension payments should full relief on contributions be withdrawn.

The information is based on the 2003–04 Survey of Personal Incomes projected to 2004–05.

PFI/PPP Contracts

Adam Price: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether, in Table 1.10 and Tables 8.10 of Public Expenditure Statistical Analyses 2005, Cm 6521, the capital includes the capital expenditure elements of private finance initiative and public private partnership contracts. [63046]

Mr. Des Browne: PFI/PPP deals may be on or off the government's balance sheet depending on where the balance of risks in the project lies. The decision as to whether a deal is treated as on or off balance sheet is taken by the National Audit Office in the case of central government projects, and the Audit Commission in the instance of local government projects.

Where the NAO or Audit Commission judge that projects are on balance sheet, Public Expenditure Statistical Analyses (PESA) capital expenditure includes the capital expenditure imputed to the public sector, where appropriate for the coverage of each statistical table. For off balance sheet projects, where the asset economically as well as legally belongs to the private sector, the capital expenditure is the private sector's and is not included in PESA 2005, the same as in previous years.

Public Sector Pensions

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the Answer of 2 March 2006, Official Report, column 388, on public sector pensions, and the technical note placed in the Library, if he will break down the amount referred to in paragraph 8 by scheme; how the error came to be made; and what steps have been taken to prevent a recurrence. [61347]

Mr. Des Browne: Prior Year Adjustments of £6 billion recorded in the scheme accounts for 2004–05 break down as follows:

	£ billion
Armed Forces Pension Scheme	-0.4
NHS Pension Scheme (E&W)	3.0
NHS Pension Scheme (Scotland)	3.5
Teachers Pension Scheme (E&W)	-0.5
Total	5.6

These adjustments arise because new data became available which were not taken into account in earlier estimates. These primarily related to deferred pensions and guaranteed minimum pensions in NHSPS (England and Wales). Details for the other schemes are given in their resource accounts: Armed Forces (HC 286), Teachers Pension Scheme (HC 627).

Responsibility for NHSPS (Scotland) is devolved to the Scottish Parliament.

Schemes keep their data and administration systems under regular review.

Road Fuel Prices

Mr. Amess: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent representations he has received requesting that the price of (a) petrol and (b) diesel be reduced; and if he will make a statement. [65258]

John Healey: The Chancellor receives many representations on a wide range of subjects including fuel duty levels.

These are considered carefully in the context of his Budget statement.

Smuggling (Northern Ireland)

David Simpson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many prosecutions there were in relation to cross-border fuel smuggling in Northern Ireland in the 2005–06 financial year; how many prosecutions were successful; what the names were of the persons prosecuted in cases in which all proceedings are complete; and what penalties were imposed. [65155]

John Healey: The latest details of prosecutions were published in HMRC Annual Report 2004–05 in which the prosecution details relate to all types of hydrocarbon oils fraud and smuggling, including cross-border smuggling. Prosecution figures for 2005–06 will be published in HMRC's Annual Report 2005–06.

David Simpson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many fuel tankers were seized in Northern Ireland in the 2005–06 financial year as a result of fuel smuggling. [65156]

John Healey: The HM Revenue and Customs Annual Report records the total number of vehicles seized as a consequence of fuel related offences. This number is not broken down into sub categories. The Annual Report for 2005–06 has not yet been published.

Stamp Duty

Mr. Todd: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer for what period the stamp duty lease calculator was unavailable to users as a consequence of the Budget; and if he will make a statement. [65668]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The online Stamp Duty Land Tax (SDLT) lease calculator tool, available through HMRC's website and offering customers an indicative calculation of the SDLT charge on the grant of a new lease, was temporarily withdrawn for 12 working days following the Chancellor's Budget Statement on 22 March 2006. The Budget change raised the starting Stamp Duty Land Tax threshold of 1 per cent. from £120,000 to £125,000 for all residential transactions including the grant of a new lease. The calculator required revisions to ensure it provided a robust service for those customers who needed it. While the lease duty calculator was offline HMRC invited practitioners to phone their enquiry line where their operators would make the calculation for them.

Mr. Todd: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many penalties were issued for delays in filing stamp duty returns in each year since 2001. [65669]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Inland Revenue (since April 2005, HMRC) has issued the following number of penalties on late-filed stamp duty and stamp duty land tax cases as follows:

	Number
2001–02	20,609
2002–03	14,916
2003–04	6,889
2004–05	82,302
2005–06	161,016

Mr. Todd: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many penalties were issued for delays in filing stamp duty returns in 2004–05 where the subsequent filing demonstrated stamp duty payable to be nil. [65670]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: In 2004–05 the Inland Revenue issued 82,302 penalty notices for late filed stamp duty land tax (SDLT) and stamp duty cases. The Inland Revenue did not record how many of those notices were for transactions where the SDLT or stamp duty payable was nil.

Mr. Todd: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received on the (a) functionality and (b) ease of completion of stamp duty returns; and if he will make a statement. [65671]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Both issues are regularly reviewed by practitioners and HMRC in the Stamp Tax Working Together Group. Changes made in the summer of 2005, as a result of discussions with the law societies, were welcomed by, for example, the Law Society of England and Wales. Use of HMRC's online filing facility provides the simplest and quickest method of completing Stamp Duty Land Tax Returns.

Suicide Statistics

Norman Baker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many individuals have died as a consequence of their ulnar artery being severed in each year since 1997. [65172]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 26 April 2006:

As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking how many individuals have died as a consequence of their ulnar arteries being severed in each year from 1997. (65172)

The most recent year for which figures are available is 2004. The attached table shows the number of deaths where the main injury was to the ulnar artery in England and Wales for the years 1997 to 2004.

Number of deaths from injury to the ulnar artery[1], England and Wales, 1997 to 2004[2]

[1] The cause of death was defined using the International Classification of Diseases, Ninth Revision (ICD-9) code 903.3 for the years 1997 to 2000, and the International Classification of Diseases, Tenth Revision (ICD-10) codes S55.0 and S65.0 for the years 2001 to 2004.

[2] Figures are for deaths occurring in each calendar year.

Norman Baker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many individuals died as a consequence of suicide through the slitting of a wrist or wrists in each year from 1997. [65193]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 26 April 2006:

As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking how many individuals died as a consequence of suicide through the slitting of a wrist or wrists in each year from 1997. (65193)

The most recent year for which figures are available for England and Wales is 2004. It is not possible to tabulate mortality data that exactly fits the cause of death category requested. The closest, shown in the attached table, contains the number of deaths with an underlying cause of suicide or injury of undetermined intent from contact with a sharp object by type of injury sustained for the years 1997 to 2004.

Sun Lotion (VAT)

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make representations to the EU to enable him to introduce a zero rate of VAT on sun lotion. [64776]

Dawn Primarolo: Under agreements with our European partners we can keep our existing VAT zero rates, but we may not extend them or introduce new ones. This is the case for all member states that retain zero rates. It is therefore not possible to introduce a zero rate of VAT for sun lotion.

Tax Credits

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when (a) HM Revenue and Customs officials and (b) Ministers were first made aware of identity fraud in the tax credit system; and how many suspected cases of identity fraud there were as of (i) 31 March 2005, (ii) 30 June 2005 and (iii) 30 September 2005. [58460]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer the hon. Gentleman to my written answer of 10 January 2006, Official Report, columns 550–51W, and my letter to the Treasury Committee of 9 March. Information relating to suspected cases of identity fraud is not held in the form requested.

Taxation

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he plans to (a) calculate and (b) publish marginal tax rate tables for disabled people. [66067]

Dawn Primarolo: Information on the number of all taxpayers in each income tax band can be found at http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/stats/income_tax/2_1_dec05.pdf.

This table uses data from the Survey of Personal Incomes (SPI). It is not possible to replicate this table for disabled people only because the SPI does not collect information on whether someone is disabled or not.

However, with the exception of those eligible for blind person's allowance in income tax, disabled people face the same marginal income tax rates as non-disabled people for a given level of taxable income.

NORTHERN IRELAND

IRA

9. David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what recent assessment he has made of the IRA's commitment to exclusively peaceful and democratic means. [64532]

Mr. Woodward: The IMC Report published earlier today states it is > "their absolutely clear view that the IRA leadership has committed itself to following a peaceful path."

Decommissioning

11. Angela Watkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what estimate he has made of the quantity of arms and explosives put beyond use by the Provisional IRA in each of the acts of decommissioning that took place between October 2001 and September 2005. [64534]

Mr. Hain: In September last year the IICD witnessed a momentous act of decommissioning, and declared in January that "all the arms under [the IRA's] control were decommissioned in September", under its supervision.

The 10th Report of the Independent Monitoring Commission published earlier today states that any weapons reported as having been retained "would have been withheld under local control despite the instructions of the leadership". It goes on to say that "the amount of un-surrendered material was not significant in comparison to what was decommissioned."

Northern Ireland Executive

12. Mr. Gauke: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make it a condition for all parties serving in the Northern Ireland Executive to make a declaration of support for the police. [64535]

Mr. Hanson: The pledge of office which all Ministers must affirm before taking up posts already requires a commitment to non-violence and exclusively peaceful and democratic means.

In addition, amendments to the Northern Ireland Act 1998 to facilitate consideration of Independent Monitoring Commission recommendations provide sufficient safeguards where Ministers and parties fail to observe the pledge of office.

13. Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to bring forward proposals to revise the pledge of office in the Northern Ireland Act 1998 for Ministers serving in the Northern Ireland Executive. [64536]

Mr. Hanson: We would consider legislating to amend the pledge of office as part of a package of changes to the Strands 1–3 institutions of the Belfast Agreement in the context of a commitment by all to enter an inclusive power-sharing Executive.

Victims Commissioner

14. Mr. Ian Austin: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether he plans to appoint a permanent Victims Commissioner when the current interim appointment comes to an end. [64537]

Angela E. Smith: The Government will bring forward legislation to establish the post of Commissioner for Victims and Survivors. The appointment of the Commissioner will be made as soon as practicable after the legislation comes into force. The appointment will be subject to the public appointment process.

Ageing Initiative

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what his assessment is of the effectiveness to date of the ageing in an inclusive society initiative. [65330]

Angela E. Smith: The older people's strategy, "Ageing in an Inclusive Society", which was launched in March 2005, includes an implementation plan for 2005–06 which identifies actions for Northern Ireland Government Departments aimed at, amongst other things, improving the services of older people.

Good progress has been made throughout the year on implementing these actions and a mid-year progress report was placed in the Libraries of the House. The Office of the First Minister and Deputy First Minister is carrying out an end of year review and will publish a report on the Department's website. Copies of the report will also be placed in the Libraries of the House.

Avian Influenza

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many dead (a) wild and (b) domesticated birds have been tested for avian influenza in Northern Ireland in each of the past 12 months. [64978]

Angela E. Smith: For the period April 2005 to March 2006 the figures requested are as follows:

Year/month	Number of dead wild birds tested	Number of dead domesticated birds tested
2005
April	0	0
June	0	49
July	1	28
August	7	29
September	0	23
October	2	20
November	44	14
December	21	46
2006
January	8	3
February	31	14
March	9	10

All test results were negative for avian influenza.

Civil Servants (Welfare Rating)

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many civil servants have been given a welfare rating on transfer lists in each Department in Northern Ireland in each of the last five years. [63451]

Angela E. Smith: The information requested is set out in the following table:

Department	2001	2002	2003	2004	2005
DHSSPS	0	1	2	4	3
DETI	0	1	0	4	2

DSD	7	9	3	12	19
DFP	1	8	9	4	2
NIO	3	7	8	5	2

Notes:
The figures relate to staff whose names are currently held on the Central Transfer List, together with the years in which they were awarded their respective welfare ratings. Records are not held for those staff who were awarded such ratings and whose transfer requests were subsequently accommodated.

Craigavon Divisional Planning Office

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps are being taken by his Department to assist staff dealing with the applications backlog at Craigavon Divisional Planning Office. [64193]

Angela E. Smith: The Planning Service as a whole has been facing unprecedented operational pressures due to a growth in the number of planning applications received. However, steps are being taken to address those pressures in the short, medium and long-term through the Modernisation and Reform programme.

Since the introduction of revised council consultation procedures last October, across the Agency the number of deferred cases has dropped significantly (by 47 per cent.) and this has released staff time to tackle the live caseload (down by 11 per cent.) and to issue decisions, up 11 per cent. on the same period last year. (Up-dated to the end of February 2006)

In addition, a new procedure to return all invalid planning applications was introduced in Craigavon Divisional Planning Office on 27 February 2006. The new procedure is aimed at improving the quality of applications being made and to help ensure that applications progress smoothly through the system without delay. This will be rolled out across the Agency over coming months.

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when staff vacancies at Craigavon divisional planning office will be filled. [64194]

Angela E. Smith: There are currently two substantive vacancies within the Craigavon divisional planning office and it is anticipated that these will be filled within the next four to six weeks. The planning service management board will continue to monitor the situation and take whatever action is possible to ensure that the Craigavon office has adequate resources to deal with the volume of applications it receives.

Disabled People

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what estimate he has made of the number of households in Northern Ireland which have at least one adult with a disability living in the home. [65410]

Angela E. Smith: For the financial year 2004–05 the proportion of households with at least one adult with a limiting long-standing illness was 38 per cent.

Domestic Rates

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people in Northern Ireland receive a reduction in their domestic rates assessment on account of their disability; and how this assessment is arrived at. [65409]

Angela E. Smith: During 2005–06 just over 8,000 domestic rate payers in Northern Ireland were awarded disabled persons allowance reducing their rates.

Entitlement to disabled persons allowance depends upon how much the property has been altered or adapted to meet the disabled persons needs, that the disabled person lives in the property and that they are a person to whom section 1 of the Chronically Sick and Disabled Persons (Northern Ireland) Act 1978 applies.

Properties are inspected to assess the extent of any alternations or adaptations made and to confirm that they are for the benefit of the disabled person. The rateable valuation of such property in the valuation list is reduced accordingly thereby reducing the rate liability.

Driver and Vehicle Testing Agency

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the (a) costs and (b) receipts were of the driver and vehicle testing agency in each of the last five years. [64190]

Angela E. Smith: The following table details (a) costs and (b) receipts for the Driver and Vehicle Testing Agency in each of the last five years.

£000

	Income	Costs
2000–01	11,261	12,240

Education and Library Boards

Sammy Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much has been allocated by each education and library board in Northern Ireland in each of the last five years. [63386]

Angela E. Smith: The following tables show the funding (recurrent and capital) allocated to each of the education and library boards by the three funding Departments, Department of Education (DE), Department of Culture Arts and Leisure (DCAL) and Department for Employment and Learning (DEL) in the last five financial years i.e. 2001–02 to 2005–06 inclusive.

Mr. Donaldson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many staff are employed centrally by each of the education and library boards in Northern Ireland in (a) human resources, payroll and finance, (b) procurement, (c) ICT, (d) legal services and (e) other roles. [65931]

Angela E. Smith: The following table shows the numbers of staff employed centrally by each of the education and library boards in the functions requested. Figures given have been provided by the boards and relate to full-time equivalent staff employed in headquarters administration (central) functions. They do not therefore include staff employed in the direct provision of education and youth services or staff employed in schools.

WELB	49	11.6	8	5	73.5

Note:
These figures include staff employed by a lead board to carry out services on behalf of all five boards.

Efficiency Initiatives

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what efficiency initiatives have been implemented in each Northern Ireland department in each of the last five years. [63485]

Angela E. Smith: Over the last five years Northern Ireland departments have implemented a wide range of efficiency initiatives. Those implemented in 2005–06 are included in efficiency technical notes posted on departmental websites and a summary of initiatives implemented in the preceding four years has been placed in the Library.

Electricity and Rates Arrears

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much is owed in (a) electricity and (b) rates arrears in (i) Northern Ireland and (ii) each council area of Northern Ireland. [63443]

Angela E. Smith: The following table sets out rate arrears at 31 March 2005. These have been extracted from the Rate Collection Agency's annual report and financial statements for 2004–05.

Final figures for 2005–06 will not be available until June 2006. A copy of the agency's annual report and financial statements for 2005–06 will be sent directly to the hon. Member after it has been laid in the Houses of Parliament in July 2006.

A total of approximately £8,958,000 was owed in electricity arrears across all categories of customers in Northern Ireland at 28 February 2006. A breakdown of this figure on a council area basis could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Farming (Funding Schemes)

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many awards have been made in Northern Ireland under the Farm Nutrient Management Scheme; and what the total cost was, broken down by council area. [65366]

Angela E. Smith: 411 approvals have issued. The total grant cost is £12,259,505. The Department only records scheme data by county area and not by council area. The figures broken down by county area are as follows:

County	Approvals issued	Total grant cost (£)
Antrim	105	3,098,218
Armagh	40	1,338,194
Down	56	2,004,693
Fermanagh	49	1,042,517
Derry	52	1,499,961
Tyrone	109	3,275,922

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many awards were made in Northern Ireland under the Organic Farming (Conversion of Animal Housing) Scheme in 2005–06; and how much of the budget was unspent. [65367]

Angela E. Smith: Of the 76 approved projects under the Organic Farming (Conversion of Animal Housing) Scheme, 34 received payments during the financial year in 2005–06. Although the entire £2 million budget for the scheme has been allocated, some £1.12 million remained unclaimed at 31 March 2006 due to difficulties experienced in completing approved projects and submitting claims for payment by that date. The date for completion was therefore extended to 31 March 2007.

Festivals

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland pursuant to the answer of 21 March 2006, Official Report, column 206W, on festivals, what steps he has taken to ensure equality of funding for cultural events for all community backgrounds. [63453]

Mr. Hanson: The Community Festivals Fund, which became operational on 1 April 2006, has been publicly advertised and is open to any organisation to apply. It introduces core criteria that must be satisfied before an event can receive financial support from the Fund. Amongst other requirements, festival organisers must demonstrate their commitment to promoting social cohesion, social inclusion, equality of opportunity and good relations.

Grievance Procedures

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many grievance procedures have been initiated in each department and government agency in Northern Ireland in each of the last three years. [63471]

Angela E. Smith: The Northern Ireland Civil Service Grievance Procedure deals with grievances arising from a Civil Servant's employment. However there are separate procedures for appeals against non-selection for a promotion board, appeals against a marking in an annual performance review, complaints about harassment or bullying, disciplinary matters, and matters raised under the Northern Ireland Civil Service Code of Ethics or Public Interest Disclosure legislation.

Details of grievances initiated under the Grievance Procedure in each of the NI Government Departments and Agencies and the NIO in 2003, 2004 and 2005 are given in the table below. The figures given are those cases escalated for resolution to Departmental Personnel Divisions, as records are not readily available for grievances resolved with line management at the early stages of the procedure. Details are provided separately for the Child Support Agency (CSA), The Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency (DVLA), the Driver and Vehicle Testing Agency (DVTA), the Environment and Heritage Service (EHS), the Planning Service and the Social Security Agency (SSA). Cases in other Government Agencies are included in the figures for the relevant Department.

Harassment Complaints

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many complaints of (a) bullying and (b) sexual harassment have been investigated in each Department and Government agency in Northern Ireland in each of the last three years; and how many complaints have been upheld. [63472]

Angela E. Smith: The information requested is set out in the tables.

The figures for the number of cases upheld in a year do not necessarily refer to the number of cases investigated in that year as a case may be investigated towards the end of one year while the decision whether or not to uphold the complaint may be taken early in the next year.

[2] Denotes one complaint involving allegations of both bullying and sexual harassment.
[3] Figures relate to all complaints of harassment, as NIO does not require staff to identify specific equality grounds for harassment complaints.

Herceptin

Dr. Blackman-Woods: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the availability of Herceptin to treat early stage breast cancer in Northern Ireland. [64531]

Mr. Woodward: I announced in November 2005, that the cancer drug, Herceptin, may be made available to women with early stage breast cancer where this is clinically appropriate.

The decision to prescribe Herceptin should always be a clinical decision and clinicians must give full consideration to the risks and benefits associated with this treatment.

Home Tuition

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the average waiting time is for an individual assessment for home tuition for children absent from school due to prolonged illness or disability in each Education and Library Board area. [65893]

Angela E. Smith: The Education and Library Boards do not assess whether pupils absent from school due to prolonged illness or short term disability should receive home tuition. Education and Library Boards arrange home tuition for such pupils on the basis of a recommendation from the medical profession.

The average waiting time between the receipt of a referral and the commencement of home tuition is 10 working days.

It should be noted that in more complex medical cases it may be necessary to seek additional information from other medical/educational sources. In such cases the waiting time may be longer.

Housing

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland pursuant to the answer of 21 March 2006, Official Report, column 208W, on housing, how much unpaid Housing Executive rent arrears was recouped in each year; how much new arrears accrued in each year; and how much rent arrears was carried forward into the next financial year in each district in Northern Ireland in each year since 1996. [65154]

Mr. Hanson: The rent account for Housing Executive tenants is a rolling account that contains both the current liability, along with any arrears, and provides an up to date balance. It is, therefore, not possible to provide the information in the form requested.

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people in Northern Ireland were registered as being in urgent need of accommodation on the Housing Executive's waiting list at 1 January (a) 2001 and (b) 2006. [65869]

Mr. Hanson: Complete figures are not available for 1 January 2001, due to the implementation of the common selection scheme at that time. However, figures for the financial year ending 31 March 2001 show that there were 10,639 applicants in housing stress[1]. For the financial year ending 31 March 2006 the comparative figure was 17,433.

[1] Urgent need is now termed "housing stress", and is made-up of applicants and transfer applicants with 3.0-points or more.

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many domestic dwellings in Northern Ireland owned by housing associations and the Housing Executive were vacant or not allocated to prospective tenants on 1 January 2006. [65870]

Mr. Hanson: There were a total of 4,288 vacant Northern Ireland Housing Executive properties as at 1 January 2006. Figures for Registered Housing Associations are only collected on an annual basis for the preceding financial year. At 31 March 2005 the Associations reported 1,443 housing units were vacant.

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many new dwellings in the social housing sector are expected to be built in Northern Ireland between 1 January and 31 December 2006. [65871]

Mr. Hanson: Forward planning information is held by financial year, rather than calendar year.

Around 1,300 new homes are currently programmed for 'contract completion' in 2006–07.

Individual completions are not counted until the whole contract completes. For example in a contract not due for completion until 2007–08, the individual houses completed in 2006–07 will not score until the entire contract completes in 2007–08.

Mr. Donaldson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many dwellings have been granted planning approval as (a) separate units and (b) part of housing developments in the BT17 postal code district of Dunmurry in each of the past 10 years. [65918]

Angela E. Smith: Unfortunately, it is not possible to answer the questions asked because the planning service in Northern Ireland does not routinely collect and hold information that would enable numbers of planning decisions relating to particular types of development to be classified by way of postcode.

InterTradeIreland

Sammy Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the religious composition is of (a) the staff and (b) the board of InterTradeIreland. [64616]

Angela E. Smith: At 1 April 2006 InterTradeIreland employed 38 permanent staff. The religious composition of these staff has been identified as (i) 31 Roman Catholic (ii) six Protestant and (iii) one non-determined. Information on the religious composition of the InterTradeIreland Board is not held.

Invest Northern Ireland

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans Invest Northern Ireland has to promote inward investment into Northern Ireland following the Smithsonian Folklife Festival in Washington DC during July 2007. [65486]

Angela E. Smith: This festival provides a useful platform to position Northern Ireland positively as a strategic investment and trade partner for US corporations seeking to establish a presence in Europe. Invest NI is inputting to a Smithsonian Ancillary Programme with a series of market visits which will run from March to July 2007, heavily focused on investment, trade, and research and development activities.

Key Stage 3 (Pupil Profile)

Sammy Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what changes have been made to the proposed pupil profile at key stage 3 to take account of responses of teachers involved in trialling the profile. [64615]

Angela E. Smith: The key stage 3 pupil profile is scheduled for introduction in the 2008–09 academic year. Initial trialing with a small sample of teachers has identified issues which need to be addressed to ensure that the profile is as relevant as possible for parents and pupils, whilst being manageable for teachers.

CCEA is consulting with teachers on these issues, and piloting will continue during the 2006–07 and 2007–08 academic years.

Planning Applications

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the change was in each Northern Ireland district council area in the number of planning applications submitted in the three months before 16 March (a) 2005 and (b) 2006. [65317]

Angela E. Smith: The following table details the change in the total number of planning applications received in each Northern Ireland district council area between the three month period from December 2004 to February 2005 and the period from December 2005 to February 2006.

District council area	Total December 2004 to February 2005	December 2005 to February 2006	Change	Percentage change

Public Bodies (Membership)

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the membership of the (a) Eastern Border Counties Region, (b) Irish Cross Border Area Network and (c) North West Regional Cross Border Group, broken down by (i) nominating council and (ii) political affiliation. [64358]

Angela E. Smith: The cross border organisations to which the hon. Member refers were all formed by local councils. Those councils are solely responsible for nominating members to both the organisations and to their boards and it would be inappropriate for me to comment on their composition.

Pupil Exclusions

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the exclusion rates were for the 100 (a) primary and (b) secondary schools in Northern Ireland with the (i) highest and (ii) lowest percentage of children receiving free school meals in each the last three years. [65993]

Angela E. Smith: The Department of Education does not collect all the requested information.

The following table details the number of pupils suspended per 10,000 pupils, in the 100 primary and post primary schools with the highest percentage of free school meals entitlement.

	Number of pupils suspended per 10,000 pupils
	Primary schools	Post primary schools

2002-03	3	155
2003-04	5	158
2004-05	2	156

Note:
Figures relate to pupils in post primary schools and in year 1 to year 7 in primary schools.

Schools (Assaults)

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the incidence of reported violence towards (a) staff and (b) pupils was in the 100 (i) primary and (ii) secondary schools in Northern Ireland with the (A) highest and (B) lowest percentage of children receiving free school meals in each of the last three years. [66088]

Angela E. Smith: The Department of Education does not collect all the information requested.

Statistics on the reasons for suspensions (fixed term exclusions) have been gathered annually, since the 2002–03 school year, from each Education and Library Board.

The following table details the number of occasions where pupils were suspended for physical attacks on (a) staff and (b) pupils, in the 100 primary and post primary schools with the highest percentage of free school meals entitlement:

Number of occasions

	Primary schools		Post primary schools
	Physical attack on staff	Physical attack on pupils	Physical attack on staff	Physical attack on pupils
2002-03[1]	31	49	190	1,028
2003-04[1]	27	45	159	1,193
2004-05[2]	24	57	117	983

The following table details the number of occasions where pupils were suspended for physical attacks on (a) staff and (b) pupils, in the 100 primary and post primary schools with the lowest percentage of free school meals entitlement:

Number of occasions

	Primary schools[3]		Post primary schools
	Physical attack on staff	Physical attack on pupils	Physical attack on staff	Physical attack on pupils
2002-03[1]	0	<5	38	335
2003-04[1]	0	<5	31	344
2004-05[2]	<5	<5	29	358

[1] The count of occasions is based on each record of suspension identified by the ELB. In some instances, longer periods of suspension may have more than one record.
[2] The count of occasions is based on each incidence of suspension, where an incident is defined as a count from the first day a pupil is suspended until the last day suspended.
[3] To be consistent with the National Statistics Code of Practice (Protocol on Data Access and Confidentiality), and in accordance with the Northern Ireland Statistics and Research Agency's compliance statement on Confidentiality and Access, a statistical disclosure technique has been employed to meet the confidentiality guarantee. Small cell sizes (counts of 1–4 pupils) have been denoted as <5 rather than state the precise number.

Stillbirths

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many babies have been stillborn in Northern Ireland in each of the last five years; and what percentage of the total this figure represents. [65346]

Angela E. Smith: The following table gives the number of stillbirths registered in Northern Ireland and the percentage of all live births and stillbirths this represents (2001–5):

Registration year	Stillbirths (number)	Percentage of all live births and stillbirths
2001	112	0.5
2002	122	0.6
2003	108	0.5
2004	113	0.5
2005 (Provisional)	90	0.4

Teacher Training

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people qualified from teacher training in Northern Ireland in each year between 1995 and 2005. [65344]

Angela E. Smith: Students gaining initial teacher training qualifications at NI higher education institutions 1994–95 to 2004–05 are as follows:

	Number of qualifications obtained
1994–95	751
1995–96	774
1996–97	753
1997–98	644
1998–99	649
1999–2000	635
2000–01	700

Unemployment Statistics

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the change was in the number of people unemployed in East Londonderry constituency between March 2001 and March 2006. [65341]

Angela E. Smith: The change in the number of people unemployed in East Londonderry constituency between March 2001 and March 2006 was a decrease of 714 persons, equivalent to a 29.9 per cent. decrease. The corresponding levels are provided in the table as follows.

East Londonderry PCA	Claimant count Number	Percentage
March 2001	2,386	—
March 2006	1,672	—
Change 2001 to 2006	-714	-29.9

Vehicle Excise Duty

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the rates of vehicle excise duty evasion were in each Northern Ireland parliamentary constituency in each year between 2000 and 2005. [65310]

Angela E. Smith: Roadside surveys of evasion of vehicle excise duty are carried out across the UK by the Department of Transport, which has responsibility for the registration and licensing of vehicles. No surveys were undertaken in 2000, 2001 and 2003. Surveys were carried out in 2002, 2004 and 2005.

Figures are produced for the whole of Northern Ireland only; figures are not available for individual parliamentary constituencies.

The rate of evasion of vehicle excise duty by vehicles in traffic in each survey is set out in the following table.

Year of survey	Rate of evasion in traffic (Percentage)
2002	8.2
2004	7.2
2005	5.4

Waterways (Pollution)

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people were prosecuted in Northern Ireland between 2000 and 2005 for offences connected with pollution of waterways. [65864]

Angela E. Smith: The number of prosecutions for water pollution offences which occurred during each of the years 2000–05 are as shown.

Because it can take over a year for a case to come to court, a number of prosecution cases from 2005 and some from 2004 are still pending a verdict in court. These pending prosecutions are included in the figures provided.

Year in which pollution offence occurred	Number of prosecutions
2000	83
2001	109
2002	101
2003	123
2004	[1]63
2005	[2]9

[1] Plus 17 cases pending.
[2] Plus 51 cases pending.

It should be noted that, between 1996 and 2005 there was a reduction in the number of water pollution incidents from 2,055 to 1,175, a reduction of some 43 per cent.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Automated Valuation Model

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will list the datasets that are part of the automated valuation model. [49149]

Mr. Woolas: The Valuation Office Agency (VOA) has a single dataset, which is used to provide input to, but is independent of, the automated valuation model (AVM).

Council Tax

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister pursuant to the Answer of 9 January 2006, Official Report, column 250W, on council tax, what the (a) OASIS and (b) Tenet products are; and if he will outline their use for council tax valuations. [47018]

Mr. Woolas: 'OASIS' is the trade name of the valuation modelling software provided by Cole Layer Trumble to the Valuation Office Agency (VOA). 'Tenet' is the name used by the VOA for the enhancements to the base digital mapping software supplied by Tenet IT Mapping Limited. Neither 'Tenet' nor OASIS is used for council tax valuation purposes following the postponement of the 2007 council tax revaluation announced by the Minister for Communities and Local Government on 20 September 2005.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Meriden (Mrs. Spelman) of 24 January 2006, Official Report, column 2060W, on council tax regulations, what recommendation was made to amend regulation 3 of the Council Tax (Chargeable Dwellings) Order. [50962]

Mr. Woolas: The proposals for changes to council tax regulations referred to in the minutes of Valuation Office Agency Local Authorities Liaison Group meeting of 27 September 2004 relate to discussions by officials of the Valuation Office Agency with officials of the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister about amending article 3 of the Council Tax (Chargeable Dwellings) Order 1992 to preclude disaggregation where the whole of a single hereditament is occupied as the sole or main residence of a person. The Government have no current plans to amend this regulation.

Habitat Regulations

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what recent advice he has given to local planning authorities on ensuring that regional and city plans are properly assessed before they are adopted, with particular reference to the Habitat regulations. [64042]

Yvette Cooper: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister sent a letter to all regional planning bodies (RPBs) and local planning authorities (LPAs) on the 9 March 2006[1]. It advised RPBs and LPAs of their responsibilities under the Habitats directive 92/43/EEC to carry out an appropriate assessment (AA) on their plans, and provided guidance on its application in the interim period before the amendments to the UK Conservation (Habitats &c) Regulations, 1994 (Habitats Regulations) come into force this September. The letter also referred RPBs and LPAs to existing guidance produced by the European Commission[2]. The ODPM will also issue draft guidance on the application of AA to land use plans for consultation this summer.

[1] The letter is available on the ODPM website: http://www.odpm.gov.uk/pub/56/ApplicationofAppropriateAssessmentunderArticle63and4oftheHabitatsDirective9243Eb_id1164056.pdf

[2] EC Guidance consists of: 'Managing Natura 2000 Sites: The provisions of article 6 of the 'Habitats' directive 92/42/CEE' 2000' and 'Assessment of plans and projects significantly affecting Natura 2000 sites: Methodological guidance on the provisions of article 6(3) and (4) of the Habitats directive 92/43/EEC, 2001'.

Hereditaments

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many physical inspections of composite hereditaments were carried out by the Valuation Agency for (a) business rates and (b) council tax (i) valuation and (ii) liability purposes in each year since 1996–97. [47024]

Mr. Woolas: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member on 20 January 2006, Official Report, column 1699W. Liability is a matter for billing authorities, not for the Valuation Office Agency.

Liveability Fund

Jonathan Shaw: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what information Medway council has provided to his Department on grants awarded under the liveability fund; and if he will make a statement. [63674]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 18 April 2006]: Medway council was one of 27 areas that benefited from the liveability fund, improving local authority service delivery before investing in public space developments. Areas such as the Weedswood Estate in Chatham have seen physical and social improvements, while the Street Guardian scheme will ensure their continued improvement, keeping them cleaner, safer and greener.

In line with all recipients of the fund, Medway council confirmed completion of milestones set out in the grant agreement. Further information and lessons from the liveability fund in Medway are being shared through a good practice programme run by the Improvement and Development Agency.

Local Government Finance

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will place in the Library a copy of the Valuation Office Agency's How2 toolkit for council tax valuation and appeal work. [47885]

Mr. Woolas: This guidance is held in linked electronic formats within the Valuation Office Agency's main IT systems and can only be viewed with full functionality through the appropriate software package. To provide a copy in the Library could be done only at disproportionate cost.

Mobile Telephone Masts

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Meriden of 20 January 2006, Official Report, column 1693W, on mobile telephone masts, how many communication stations were registered for business rates in England in each local authority area in 1998. [50956]

Mr. Woolas: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Meriden on 20 December 2005, Official Report, column 2836W.

Needs Assessments (Young People)

Mr. Love: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what arrangements are in place to ensure that local authorities assess the needs of young people between the ages of 15 to 18 who are leaving care or prison with no financial or family support; and if he will make a statement. [64110]

Maria Eagle: I have been asked to reply.

The Children (Leaving Care) Act 2000 requires local authorities to assess the needs of care leavers and to draw up a pathway plan for each individual setting out the services and support that they will receive to manage the move to an appropriate level of independence. Each care leaver is entitled to support from a personal adviser who will coordinate the provisions of the pathway plan and keep this under review. Up until the age of eighteen, the local authority will usually be a care leaver's primary source of income. Once care leavers reach 18, they are then entitled to have access to the same mainstream arrangements for obtaining financial help as other young people.

Youth Offending Teams (YOTs) are responsible for resettlement planning for young people who have been made subjects of a custodial sentence, following their cases from pre-sentence stage through custody and into the community. Crucially this involves linking young people to mainstream local services who can to respond to their ongoing needs for accommodation, education, health and other support during and following the end of the period of YOT intervention.

Planning Applications

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what plans he has to publish the (a) criteria and (b) guidance on sequential development tests for planning applications for large warehouse complexes, with particular reference to the South East of England; and if he will make a statement. [64780]

Yvette Cooper: The Deputy Prime Minister currently has no plans to publish any specific criteria or guidance on sequential development tests for planning applications for large warehouse complexes. National planning policy for this type of development is contained in planning policy statement 1: Delivering Sustainable Development (PPS1), planning policy guidance note 4: Industrial and Commercial Development and Small Firms (PPG4), and planning policy guidance note 13: Transport (PPG13). While there is no specific sequential development test for large warehouse complexes, existing planning policy is clear as to the types of location that may be suitable.

PPS1 asks local planning authorities to recognise that in achieving sustainable development they should ensure that suitable locations are available for commercial development, having regard to considerations such as the level of transport accessibility and infrastructure provision.

PPG4 promotes new development in locations which minimise the length and number of trips and which can be served by more energy efficient modes of transport. It also advises that well-planned distribution parks away from urban areas can offer economies of scale, with benefits to business and consumers, and wherever possible should be capable of access by rail or water.

PPG13 requires that sustainable transport choices are promoted for the movement of freight, and it seeks a reduction in the need to travel. It asks for suitable sites which allow road to rail or water transfer of freight to be identified and protected where appropriate. The policy also specifically asks that warehousing which generates substantial freight movements to be located away from congested and residential areas, ensuring adequate access to trunk roads.

To assist planning authorities to make sufficient provision for such development in their plans, we have published guidance on undertaking employment land reviews at both regional and local level ('Employment Land Reviews: Guidance Note' ODPM, 2004).

Regional planning policy for the location of development is set out in the regional planning guidance for the South East (RPG9, 2001), which is the regional spatial strategy for South East England. The strategy is currently under review and the South East England regional assembly has formally submitted the draft South East plan to the Government for consideration. A consultation on the draft plan will run from 31 March 2006 to 23 June 2006.

Once the South East plan has been finalised, following independent testing, it will be published by the Government as a replacement of RPG9. Local authority development plans, and development proposals will need to conform to the South East plan. The South East plan, and the local authority development plans in that region will collectively form the statutory development plan for the South East.

Valuation Office Agency

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister pursuant to his Answer of 30 November 2005, Official Report, column 587W, on the Valuation Office Agency, what the (a) start point and (b) estimated termination point of the contract with Cole Layer Trumble are; and whether the contract is ongoing. [46993]

Mr. Woolas: The contract between EDS (now managed by Aspire, IT suppliers to HMRC and the Valuation Office Agency) and Cole Layer Trumble (CLT) commenced on 1 September 2003. As the Government have made clear, the VOA will ensure that the country has an up-to-date electronic property database, available as a source of accurate data. It is therefore anticipated that there will be an ongoing contract while the software supplied by CLT (the OASIS modelling software) is in use. A termination point of the contract cannot be estimated.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister pursuant to his Answer of 30 November 2005, Official Report, column 587W, on the Valuation Office Agency, how many meetings his officials and staff from the Valuation Office Agency have had with Cole Layer Trumble since the signing of the contract. [46994]

Mr. Woolas: No meetings involving officials of the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister have been held with Cole Layer Trumble (CLT). Staff from the Valuation Office Agency have had regular liaison with representatives of CLT during development of the Agency's Automated Valuation Model (AVM), which is an essential part of ensuring best value for money is delivered from the investment being made in the AVM. No formal count has been kept of the number of meetings held.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister pursuant to his Answer of 30 November 2005, Official Report, column 587W, on the Valuation Office Agency, if he will publish the make and model of the cameras bought in each year. [46995]

Dawn Primarolo: I have been asked to reply.

The VOA has used cameras since the late 1980s. Details of the cameras bought in each year is as shown in the following table: All are standard retail models for amateur photographer use. These replaced circa 1,400 conventional cameras held by the VOA. Digital cameras were introduced on cost savings grounds i.e. to reduce running costs expended on film development costs.

	Number and make	Total
2001–02	150 x Fuji	150
2002–03	11 x Fuji 645 x Olympus	656
2003–04	None purchased	—
2004–05	1,270 x Olympus	1,270
2005–06	50 x Olympus	50

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister pursuant to the Answer of 9 January 2006, Official Report, column 273W, on the Valuation Office Agency, if he will place in the Library a copy of the Valuation Office Agency's document, Dwellinghouse Coding—an Illustrated Guide, or provide a weblink if it is available on the Agency's website. [46999]

Mr. Woolas: In order to protect privacy the document cannot be made publicly available.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if the Valuation Office Agency keeps photographs of properties for (a) business rates and (b) council tax valuation purposes. [47143]

Mr. Woolas: Some photographs are kept on the Valuation Office Agency's (VOA) secure central database. Photographs are rarely taken inside a person's home and only with the express permission of the occupier e.g. to record a poor state of repair where the occupier believes it affects the value for taxation purposes. VOA policy is to delete photographs taken inside a person's home once they have served their purpose.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister whether the individual datasets are part of the Valuation Office Agency's Automated Valuation Model. [47146]

Mr. Woolas: No. The Valuation Office Agency's (VOA) dataset is independent of the Automated Valuation Model (AVM).

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what use the Valuation Office Agency makes of (a) property and (b) individual-related data from Experian. [47147]

Mr. Woolas: The information requested is as follows.

(a) The Valuation Office Agency purchases Goad plans and shopping centre reports including footfall information from Experian.

Goad plans are used for identifying occupiers of retail units when undertaking rating valuations and considering proposals.

Footfall count information is used to monitor the impact on rental value of physical changes to the layout of shopping centres.

(b) The Valuation Office Agency does not use individual-related data such as credit ratings from Experian.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what account the Valuation Office Agency takes of the presence of (a) fixed kennels, (b) stables and (c) animal hutches in making a valuation of a domestic property. [47150]

Mr. Woolas: The banding of a domestic property for council tax purposes is based on the valuer's estimate of the capital value of that property. The items referred to would only be taken into account if they form part of a larger property which is itself a dwelling and to the extent which they add to the capital value of the dwelling.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will place a copy of the Valuation Office Agency guidance on the definition and assessment of a fixture for council tax valuation purposes in the Library. [47434]

Mr. Woolas: Guidance on the definition and assessment of a fixture for council tax valuation purposes is contained in the VGA's Council Tax Manual, which is available on the VGA's website www.voa.gov.uk

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister pursuant to the answer of 5 December 2005, Official Report, column 963W, on the Valuation Office Agency, how many public conveniences were registered for business rates by the Valuation Office Agency in each Government office region in 1998 or the closest year for which figures are available. [47933]

Mr. Woolas: As at 31 March 1998 there were 6,224 public conveniences included in the 1995 Rating List.

Government region	Number of public conveniences
Eastern	590
East Midlands	450
London	475
North East	305
North West	613
South East	918
South West	1,058
Wales	762
West Midlands	453
Yorkshire and Humberside	600
Total	6,224

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister pursuant to his answers of 23 November 2005, Official Report, column 2063W, and 6 December 2005, Official Report, column 1138W, on the Valuation Office Agency, whether the Agency intends to collate dwelling house code data for the remaining homes in England; and whether the agency expects that the number of homes with value significant code data will increase. [48153]

Mr. Woolas: The intention is to continue to develop a database to support the legitimate duty of the Valuation Office Agency's listing officers to compile and maintain valuation lists for council tax purposes, and to do so in a manner that ensures fairness and consistency between taxpayers.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister pursuant to his answer of 28 November 2005, Official Report, column 197W, on council tax revaluation, what targets the Valuation Office Agency has set for collecting dwelling house codes or value significant codes for more domestic properties to maintain valuation lists. [48160]

Mr. Woolas: The Valuation Office Agency has set an internal minimum standard for its newly digitised database so that data on the six main dwelling house codes (group, type, age, area, number of rooms and number of bedrooms) are held in electronic, not paper, form for 97 per cent. of dwellings by 30 June 2006.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Meriden, of 20 January 2006, Official Report, column 1699W, on the Valuation Office Agency, how many properties Valuation Office Agency inspected to determine whether the property is used for both business and domestic purposes in the most recent year for which figures are available. [50912]

Mr. Woolas: The Valuation Office Agency does not hold this information.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Meriden of 19 January 2006, Official Report, column 1546W, on the Valuation Office Agency, if he will place in the Library a copy of the full ruling of the Lands Tribunal of Tully v. Jorgensen. [50951]

Mr. Woolas: A copy of the full ruling of the Lands Tribunal of Tully v. Jorgensen is published and can be obtained from the Lands Tribunal website www.landstribunal.gov.uk.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Meriden of 19 January 2006, Official Report, column 1546W, on the Valuation Office Agency, what changes have been made to the criteria applied by valuation officers since May 1997. [50960]

Mr. Woolas: The criteria applied by valuation officers of the Valuation Office Agency (VOA), as set out in the council tax manual published by the VOA on its website at www.voa.gov.uk, remained unchanged until the update, in 2004, which reflected the decision of the Lands Tribunal in the case of Tully v. Jorgensen.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister whether the Valuation Office Agency has produced proposals on the sale of its council tax datasets for commercial purposes in the last five years. [51071]

Mr. Woolas: The Valuation Office Agency has not produced any proposals on the sale of its council tax datasets for commercial purposes.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister into how many localities the Valuation Office Agency divided England to assist the valuations of individual properties as part of the council tax revaluation preparations. [56184]

Mr. Woolas: As part of the council tax revaluation preparations, the Valuation Office Agency divided England into approximately 10,000 localities.

HEALTH

Acute Hospital Beds

Dr. Pugh: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many acute hospital beds per head of population there are in (a) London, (b) each region and (c) each strategic health authority area. [64332]

Jane Kennedy: Data for the latest available year 2004–05 are shown in the table. Data are not available on a regional basis.

BCG Vaccinations

Justine Greening: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what funding her Department spent delivering BCG vaccinations in (a) 2002–03, (b) 2003–04, (c) 2004–05 and (d) 2005–06 in each London borough; how many were delivered in each case; and if she will make a statement. [64401]

Caroline Flint: This information is not available in the form requested.

Funding for immunisation services including the bacille-calmette guerin (BCG) vaccination programme, form part of the annual allocation to primary care trusts (PCTs). PCTs are responsible for the management of those monies and the running of immunisation programmes.

The number of people vaccinated with BCG vaccine is collected annually by PCTs. This information is published by National Statistics in 'NHS Immunisation Statistics, England', which is available in the Library.

Birth Statistics

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many babies were born at (a) Liverpool Women's hospital, (b) Whiston hospital, (c) Southport and Ormskirk NHS Trust, (d) Wigan and Wrightington NHS Trust and (e) Royal Preston hospital in (i) 2000–01 and (ii) 2004–05. [64231]

Mr. Byrne: The information is not available in the format requested. The information in the table contains figures for deliveries registered for 2000–01 and 2003–04 which is the latest year for which data is available.

	Deliveries registered
	2000–01	2003–04

Blindness

James Duddridge: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what timetable has been set for reviewing progress towards meeting the goal of eradicating preventable blindness under the Vision 2020 initiative; and how her Department plans to measure the progress made. [66115]

Ms Rosie Winterton: We are committed to the principles of Vision 2020 for the elimination of avoidable blindness and have a range of activity in place to improve eye health. By 2008, the maximum waiting time for cataract operations is due to be reduced to 18 weeks from the point of general practitioner referral.

Primary care trusts (PCTs) are expected to deliver the national commitment that by the end of 2007, 100 per cent. of people with diabetes will be offered screening for the early detection (and treatment if needed) of diabetic retinopathy as part of a systematic programme that meets national standards.

The National Institute for Health Clinical Excellence (NICE) issued its guidance on photodynamic therapy on 24 September 2003. Since June 2004, all PCTs have been funding photodynamic therapy treatment for patients with both the wholly classic and predominantly classic forms of age-related macular degeneration.

Glaucoma was referred to NICE in November 2005. NICE will prepare a clinical guideline on the diagnosis and management of raised intraocular pressure and ocular hypertension.

The eye care services steering group has developed evidence-based pathways for four key eye conditions: cataracts, age-related macular degeneration, glaucoma and low vision services. We are currently testing the latter three pathways and will share our findings with the national health service as they progress. The pilots are due to be evaluated later this year.

We expect this programme of work to meet the aims of the Vision 2020 programme. These programmes either have set targets for progress or are subject to regular review as part of mainstream business of delivering health services.

James Duddridge: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps her Department plans to take to increase public awareness of the role an eye test plays in (a) preventing avoidable blindness and (b) diagnosing diabetes. [66116]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Free sight tests are available under the national health service to large parts of the population including children, those aged 16 to 18 in full-time education, people on benefits, those people at particular risk of developing eye disease, and people who are registered blind or partially sighted or who have a complex spectacle prescription. In addition, in April 1999, we extended free sight tests to all people aged 60 and over. Sight tests allow the opportunity to review all aspects of eye health, including investigations for signs of disease. Those at risk of specific eye disease, for example diabetic retinopathy, may be asked to attend regular screening.

Information about the extensive arrangements for providing help with NHS optical services and other health costs are publicised in leaflet HC11 'Are you entitled to help with health costs?' Posters are also available for display in optical practices and hospital out-patient departments.

The Department is also working with the Department for Work and Pensions on updating their leaflet 'Are you over 50?' This leaflet includes information about health and contact numbers for organisations which can provide further advice. We intend to include information in this publication highlighting the four leading eye conditions and promoting the benefits of regular sight testing.

Capita

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much business her Department has placed with (a) Capita Group plc and (b) its subsidiaries in each of the last five years; what the total value is of outstanding contracts placed with Capita Group plc and its subsidiaries by her Department; for which current tenders issued by her Department (i) Capita Group plc and (ii) its subsidiaries have been invited to bid; and whether (A) Capita Group plc and (B) its subsidiaries have seconded staff (1) temporarily and (2) on a longer-term basis to (X) her Department and (Y) its agencies. [61075]

Mr. Byrne: The total amount spent with Capita Group plc and its subsidiaries in 2004–05 and to the end of February 2006 for the financial period 2005–06 is shown in the table.

	Financial year
Capita subsidiary	2004–05	2005–06[1]
Capita Business Services Ltd.	540,112	314,625
Capita Healthcare Solutions	55,419	62,591
Capita SHG Resourcing	Nil	1,002,325

[1] To end of February 2006

Information prior to 2004–05 is not readily available and could not be obtained without incurring disproportionate costs.

The only outstanding contract is with Capita Health Solutions to provide the Department's occupational health services. The total value of this contract is £195,000.

We do not hold centrally information that would allow for an analysis of how many tenders Capita Group plc or its subsidiaries have been invited to bid for, and could not obtain this information without incurring disproportionate costs.

Our records indicate that currently, there are no staff seconded to the Department from Capita Group plc or its subsidiaries.

James Brokenshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the value of contracts held by her Department with (a) Capita plc and (b) its subsidiaries was in the last three financial years. [61465]

Mr. Byrne: The total amount spent with Capita Group plc and its subsidiaries in 2004–05 and to the end of February 2006 for the financial period 2005–06 is shown in the following table.

Capita subsidiary	Financial year 2004–05	2005–06[1]
Capita Business Services Ltd.	540,112	314,625
Capita Healthcare Solutions	55,419	62,591
Capita SHG Resourcing	Nil	1,002,325

[1] As at 28 February 2006

Information prior to 2004–05 is not readily available and could not be obtained without incurring disproportionate costs.

Children's Hospices

Anne Main: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent representations she has received on the funding of children's hospices; and if she will make a statement. [62752]

Mr. Byrne: We have received a number of representations about the funding of children's hospices. On 15 March 2006, Official Report, column 1454, the Prime Minister answered a question from the hon. Member for Castle Point (Bob Spink). I have answered a number of questions on the funding of children's hospices and it was debated on 13 December 2005, Official Report, column 1385WH. The hon. Member for Castle Point also presented a petition from the residents of Essex and others on 25 January 2006, Official Report, column 1476. There have been a number of early day motions and letters to Ministers. I met with my hon. Friend, the Member for Middlesbrough, South and East Cleveland (Dr. Ashok Kumar) on 14 February 2006.

On the 9 February 2006, a number of commissioners of palliative care for children and young people, representatives of the children's hospice movement and other interested parties were invited to discuss a range of issues affecting the provision of palliative care and I attended another seminar on 22 March. I also understand the Sun Campaign petition was presented to the Prime Minister on 16 March.

Our manifesto commitment to double funding for end of life care will give more families the choice to have their child or young person with a life-threatening or life-limiting condition to be treated at home. An announcement about this funding will be made in due course.

Community Hospitals

Mr. Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations she has received regarding the closure of local community hospitals in (a) South West London, (b) Surrey, (c) Middlesex, (d) Greater London and (e) England. [58917]

Mr. Byrne: Providing an exhaustive list of representations in the format requested would be of a disproportionate cost.

However, a brief search has identified representations from the public and hon. Members relating to a number of community hospitals across the country including:

Edward VII in Chichester;

Surbiton;

Epsom;

Townlands in Oxford;

Ludlow;

Telford;

Walnut Tree in Suffolk; and Keswick.

Connecting for Health Computer System

Tim Farron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much her Department has (a) spent on and (b) committed to the NHS Connecting for Health computer system. [65943]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 25 April 2006]: The value of contracts let for the original core components of the programme amounts to £6.2 billion over 10 years. Payments made for work completed under those contracts totalled £502.58 million as at 21 April 2006.

Tim Farron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what her Department expects to be the completion date of the NHS Connecting for Health computer system. [65963]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 25 April 2006]: The Department's NHS Connecting for Health Agency is aiming to achieve substantial integration of health and social care information systems in England under the national programme for information technology by 2010. Information technology systems will need to be upgraded in the light of new technology and new national health service requirements beyond that date.

Continuing Care Assessments

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will take steps to prevent a Director of Finance sitting on a primary care trust review and funding panel which collates the eligibility assessments for continuing care from health and social care professionals. [65145]

Mr. Byrne: Review panels have independent chairmen who lead members appointed by the relevant national health service and local government bodies.

We will soon publish for consultation a national framework for NHS continuing care which will give further clarity and consistency on the responsibilities of NHS and social services for long term care. The national framework will include guidance on the processes and considerations to take into account when making decisions on the responsibility of the NHS and social services for long-term care.

We will carefully consider all responses to the consultation when preparing the final version of the framework.

Dentistry

Ms Diana R. Johnson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what percentage of the (a) adult and (b) child population of (i) East Hull and West Hull primary care trust area, (ii) Yorkshire and the Humber and (iii) England was registered with an NHS general dental practitioner in each year since 1997; [64095]

(2) how many NHS patients were registered with NHS general dental practitioners in the Eastern Hull and West Hull primary care trust area in each year since 1997. [64092]

Mr. Byrne: The information requested is set out in the tables.

Table 1 shows the number of adults and children in England, North and East Yorkshire and Northern Lincolnshire strategic health authority (SHA) (and Eastern Hull and West Hull primary care trusts (PCTS)), West Yorkshire SHA and South Yorkshire SHA who were registered with an national health service dentist as at 31 December in each specified year.

This is expressed as an estimated proportion of the populations for each of these areas. Table 2 shows the number of NHS patients who were registered with NHS general dental practitioners in the Eastern Hull and West Hull PCT area in each year since 1997.

[1] Population estimates are not available at PCT level prior to 2001

Notes:

1. Patients may be registered with a dentist outside the area in which they live. This explains why the number of children registered with dentists in some areas exceeds the size of the children's population for those areas.

2. The drop in registrations between December 1997 and December 1998 is mostly attributable to the reduction in re-registration period from two years to fifteen months.

3. Registration rates, that is the percentage of the population registered with a dentist, have been estimated by including registrations in the area of the dentist, that is according to the postcode of the dental surgery and not the patient's address. So the registration rates for some areas may be affected by some patients receiving dental treatment in a different area from the one in which they live. This can lead to figures being unusually high, even over 100 per cent., for child registrations, whilst other areas may have estimated rates which are lower than the actual (but unknown) proportion of residents who are registered with a dentist in or outside their own area.
4. Personal dental services (PDS) schemes have varying registration periods. To ensure comparability with corresponding general dental services (CDS) data, PDS registrations for established PDS practices are estimated using proxy registrations, namely the number of patients seen by PDS practices in the past 15 months.
5. Data for 2003 and earlier do not include those PDS schemes that do not have any registrations (for example dental access centres), and is therefore not directly comparable with 2004 and 2005 data.
6. Official 2005 population data are not yet available. 2005 data have therefore been estimated using office for National Statistics 2004 mid-year population estimates based on the 2001 Census as these are the latest available.
7. Prison contracts have not been included in this analysis

Diabetes

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will estimate the number of people with diabetes for whom the drug Exubera may be clinically appropriate. [65921]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 25 April 2006]: This information is not centrally held.

The choice of insulin prescribed to a patient is a clinical decision made as a result of a joint decision making process between the patient and their clinician taking into account all available evidence and the individual's specific clinical needs.

Diet-drug Interactions

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she will (a) publish the Committee on Toxicity of Chemicals in Food, Consumer Products and the Environment working paper on diet-drug interactions and (b) make recommendations for action in relation to drug-diet interactions for (i) babies, (ii) young children, (iii) over 75-year-olds and (iv) people with long-term conditions. [64179]

Caroline Flint: The joint statement of the Committee on Toxicity of Chemicals in Food, Consumer Products and the Environment (COT) and the Committee on Safety of Medicines (CSM) on the joint COT/CSM meeting on diet-drug interactions was published on the Food Standards Agency's website on 2 February 2006. The statement will also be included in the 2005 annual reports of the two committees.

As yet, there is insufficient data to draw conclusions or make recommendations for specific population groups, however appropriate information is supplied with specific pharmaceutical agents where necessary.

Emergency Contraception

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what guidance her Department (a) has issued and (b) plans to issue to (i) general practitioners and (ii) pharmacists on the availability of emergency contraception over the counter without prescription from dispensing chemists; [64371]

(2) what follow-up care is available to women prescribed the morning-after pill (a) on prescription and (b) over the counter without prescription from dispensing chemists; and if she will make a statement; [64372]

(3) if she will bring forward proposals to ensure that a woman's medical history is known before she is provided with the morning-after pill (a) on prescription and (b) over the counter without prescription from dispensing chemists; and if she will make a statement. [64373]

Caroline Flint: I refer the hon. Member to the replies I gave on 21 July 2005, Official Report, columns 2159–60W.

Fibromyalgia

Mrs. James: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what (a) recent discussions she has had and (b) representations she has received on fibromyalgia; [65794]

(2) what progress is being made in improving NHS (a) diagnosis and (b) treatment of fibromyalgia. [65795]

Mr. Byrne: I have had no recent discussions about fibromyalgia specifically, and have received no representations other than those from the hon. Member for Jarrow on 14 December 2005, Official Report, column 2143W and on 16 November 2005, Official Report, column 1300W.

I am advised that the Department has received 25 pieces of correspondence on the subject of fibromyalgia since August 2005.

In August 2003, the Chief Medical Officer (CMO) issued a newsletter to all doctors in England, specifically addressing the problem of fibromyalgia information dissemination. The CMO acknowledges the condition and the extent to which it affects the population. He raised awareness of a leaflet about fibromyalgia, which was made available to all general practitioner surgeries in the United Kingdom. The leaflet offers guidance on the main symptoms, diagnosis and treatment of fibromyalgia together with a brief summary of the current ideas for the underlying pathogenesis. In addition, NHS Direct, NHS Direct Online and NHS Direct Interactive have been established to give people access to information on a range of conditions and illnesses, including fibromyalgia.

General Practitioners

Ann Keen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many general practitioner surgeries in Brentford and Isleworth have been (a) newly built and (b) modernised since 1997. [64278]

Jane Kennedy: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Health White Paper

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she expects to make changes to the primary care contracts to ensure better opening hours as described in paragraph 3.58 of the White Paper, 'Our Health, Our Care, Our Say', and if she will make a statement. [49555]

Mr. Byrne: We are continually exploring ways to improve patient access to national health service primary medical care. The revised general practice contract framework for 2006–07 includes incentives to encourage practices to improve access across a broader range of patient experiences. We shall be reviewing that framework again for 2007–08 and later years with the aim of supporting delivery of the commitments set out in the White Paper, including the provision of more flexible opening hours.

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the evidential basis was for the statement in paragraph 3.49 of the White Paper, 'Our Health, Our Care, Our Say', that a minority of practices had stopped taking advance bookings; and what evidence suggests that the number of practices which have stopped taking advance bookings is growing. [49557]

Mr. Byrne: Initial evidence that some practices were denying patients the opportunity to book ahead was based on correspondence and other representations from hon. Members and the public. Since the Department started collecting information about this practice and discouraging it, the incidence reported by practices through their primary care trusts has reduced from affecting over 12 per cent. of patients in November 2004 to less than one per cent. in March 2006. We are continuing action to stop this practice.

Late Terminations

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research her Department has commissioned into the impact of late termination of the foetus; and what effect the result of such research has had on policy. [65971]

Caroline Flint: The Department has commissioned no research into the impact of late termination of the foetus. The Royal College of Obstetricians and Gynaecologists has, however, published various advice for professionals on abortion (including late gestation abortions), including its evidence-based clinical guideline on "The Care of Women Requesting Induced Abortion".

It is accepted parliamentary practice that proposals for changes in the law on abortion are made on the basis of free votes. Parliament agreed in 1990 that the legal limit for most abortions should be 24 weeks gestation. The limit remains therefore a matter for Parliament to decide.

Local Improvement Finance Trusts

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the length is of the lease of each local improvement finance trust company. [61871]

Mr. Byrne: Information is not held centrally on the length of leases held by each individual local improvement finance trust (LIFT) company. Departmental guidance allows for the length of lease period for each LIFT to be up to 30 years. Normally 25 years is the period for the lease, although we are aware of instances where it is up to 30 years.

Major Trauma Centres

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many accident and emergency departments are designated as major trauma centres; and if she will make a statement. [62819]

Mr. Byrne: No accident and emergency departments in England are formally designated as major trauma centres.

Medicine Reviews

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps are being taken to quality assure the conduct of medicine reviews for (a) babies, (b) young children, (c) over 75-year-olds and (d) people with long-term conditions. [64180]

Jane Kennedy: A medicine use review (MUR) service is a nationally specified service within the new contractual framework for community pharmacy, which went live in April 2005 and is underpinned by robust clinical governance arrangements. Where pharmacies choose to provide these services, both the community pharmacist and the premises must be accredited. The purpose of the MUR service is, with the patient's agreement, to improve their knowledge and use of medicines.

Primary care trusts (PCTs) monitor services provided by community pharmacies under the new contractual framework. Directions have been issued to PCTs setting out the requirements for a MUR service.

A leaflet has also been developed by Medicines Partnership, which provides information to patients about what they can expect from a MUR.

Meningitis

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what hospital treatment protocols there are for meningitis; what such protocols have been issued in the last five years; who is responsible for issuing guidance to hospitals about the best and latest protocols for the treatment of meningitis; and if she will make a statement. [61093]

Caroline Flint: There are a number of authorities responsible for the issue of guidance to hospitals on the treatment of meningitis. Like all guidance based advice it should be provided using the most up to date evidence. The Department endorses the guidance produced by the meningitis research foundation (MRF) and has funded the MRF to produce a junior doctor handbook.

The Department has asked the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence to provide guidance on the management of meningococcal disease and meningitis in children and adolescents.

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the ability of hospitals in England to treat meningitis; and what steps her Department is taking to improve the treatment of meningitis in hospitals. [61095]

Caroline Flint: The Department has funded research to carry out an audit of the hospital management of acute bacterial meningitis and meningococcal septicaemia. This work will be published in a peer-reviewed journal and guidance issued following its publication.

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent representations she has received about the standard of care in the NHS for patients with suspected cases of meningitis. [61096]

Caroline Flint: In 2005–06, there were no early day motions or adjournment debates on meningitis. In 2005–06, 15 parliamentary questions were answered that were in relation to meningitis. From August 2005, 67 cases were recorded on the Department's central correspondence system with a mention of meningitis in the reply.

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she next plans to visit Coventry. [65393]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Secretary of State for Health has accepted an invitation to officially open the NHS Institute for Innovation and Improvement in Coventry, at a date to be agreed by the Secretary of State's office and the organisation.

MRSA

Steve Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the merits of phage therapy as a means of tackling MRSA in hospitals; and if she will make a statement. [64185]

Jane Kennedy: The therapeutic use of bacteriophages may be a valuable approach but the safe and controlled use of phage therapy requires more detailed study.

Musculoskeletal Framework

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when her Department will publish the Musculoskeletal Framework. [63619]

Mr. Byrne: Draft musculoskeletal framework proposals are currently subject to comment from key stakeholders. The outcome of this process will be published later this year.

NHS (Private Providers)

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether private providers which carry out NHS work will be subject to the patient involvement schemes which operate in NHS organisations. [54289]

Mr. Byrne: Strategic health authorities and primary care trusts are responsible for ensuring that section 11 of the Health and Social Care Act 2001—the duty to involve and consult patients and the public—s complied with when making arrangements for another organisation, person or people to provide services. This includes independent sector providers.

NHS Appointments

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will take steps to revise the rules for appointments within health bodies to ensure (a) the process is transparent and (b) those appointed have (i) suitable skills and background experience and (ii) do not have a record of financial mismanagement. [61884]

Mr. Byrne: The Secretary of State for Health has delegated her appointments function relating to national health service chairs and non-executives to the NHS Appointments Commission.

Candidates for appointment are measured against detailed appointment and person specifications and are required to declare any potential conflict of interest. These processes are designed to minimise the risk of those without the necessary skills and experience being appointed and to ensure financial probity.

The NHS Appointments Commission processes are required to meet the highest standards of openness, transparency and probity set by the commissioner for public appointments and are also subject to periodic audit by the commissioner.

Recruitment of staff in the NHS is a local matter but NHS employers are expected to have fair and transparent recruitment processes as part of good human resources practice.

NHS Tariff

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the NHS tariff for 2006–07; and what methodology was used for its calculation. [60645]

Mr. Byrne: The corrected national tariff has now been issued for the national health service to refine its planning for 2006–07. The methodology used for its calculation is set out in 'Implementing Payment By Results: Technical Guidance 2006–07: Executive Summary' published on 26 January 2006.

NHS Trusts

Ann Keen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on her Department's plans to tackle deficits in NHS trusts in the new financial year. [64062]

Jane Kennedy: In 2006–07, the priority will be to restore financial balance in the national health service, although this may not be possible for each and every organisation.

We are making a number of changes to deal with the financial problems in a minority of organisations, including the following:

we have increased transparency of reporting so that problems are identified;

the use of turnaround expertise from the private sector combined with the techniques we have used in the NHS to deliver on other targets such as waiting and accident and emergency. This includes the spread of best practice to all overspending organisations, not just those officially part of the turnaround process; and establishing the right culture for financial correction, by:

changing the incentives, such as: increasing the emphasis in the ratings system on financial management, moving forward with the reform programme of payment by results, and practice based commissioning; emphasising the accountability of boards, executives and non-executives, for financial as well as service performance; and strengthening the financial challenge function in the Department to ensure that we do not add to the cost burdens.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she expects to make an announcement on the approval of foundation status for the next tranche of NHS Trusts; what effects changes to NHS tariffs have had on the timing of the announcement; and if she will make a statement. [61649]

Mr. Byrne: Decisions on authorising and announcing NHS trusts as NHS foundation trusts are a matter for Monitor (the statutory name of which is the Independent Regulator of NHS Foundation Trusts).

Monitor has revised the authorisation dates for 24 wave two applicants—if successful—from 1 April and 1 July to 1 May (four mental health trusts), 1 June (six acute trusts) and 1 August (13 acute, and one mental health trust). All 24 trusts have previously received the support from the Secretary of State to go forward to Monitor and will be assessed against the criteria laid down in the Health and Social Care (Community Health Standards) Act 2003.

East Somerset NHS Trust is being considered for authorisation on 1 June.

Patient Costs (Reimbursement)

Mr. Letwin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether provision exists for patients not able to receive timely treatment under the NHS and who paid the cost of their own treatment, to receive reimbursement of those costs. [61722]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 27 March 2006]: No. If a patient receives private treatment without prior authorisation from the appropriate commissioning authority, they will not be a national health service patient for the purposes of that treatment. The patient would be a private patient and therefore be responsible for meeting the cost of the treatment themselves. The powers of the Secretary of State underlying the NHS are in sections 1 to 5 of the NHS Act 1977 and are not such as to enable the Secretary of State, or those to whom her powers have been delegated, to reimburse charges a patient has incurred for private treatment they have themselves acquired.

There are powers under European law for NHS commissioners to authorise treatment overseas within the European Union in some circumstances. Prior authorisation before treatment is currently required. There is no right for NHS patients to be treated outside of the European Economic Area (EEA). All patients seeking treatment outside of the EEA must have prior authorisation from their primary care trust before travelling for treatment. The NHS will not reimburse the cost of any treatment outside of the EEA where prior approval was either not sought or granted.

Primary Care Trusts (Non-local Services)

Mr. Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how much was spent in 2005–06 on the commissioning of non-local services by primary care trusts in strategic health authorities (a) where authorities have been instructed that the sub-regional health economy must balance its budget for 2005–06 and (b) where authorities have not been so instructed; [57102]

(2) what research her Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on the effect of making regional health economies balance their budgets on commissioning of non-local services by primary care trusts. [57103]

Mr. Byrne: The Department does not hold this information centrally nor has it commissioned research on the commissioning of non-local services. This is a matter for primary care trusts.

Public Appointments

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 20 December 2005, Official Report, column 2726W, on public appointments, when she now expects that details of those who have been appointed by the NHS Appointments Commission will be made public. [61558]

Mr. Byrne: The NHS Appointments Commission has given a commitment to publish details of the public appointments it makes on behalf of Secretary of State. This information is now available on the NHS Appointments Commission's website at:
www.appointments.org.uk/publications.asp

School Nurses

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how much her Department spent producing the 2006 edition of the "School Nurse: Practice Development Resource Pack"; which organisations her Department consulted prior to publication; and if she will make a statement; [62880]

(2) if she will list the main changes between the 2001 and 2006 editions of the "School Nurse: Practice Development Resource Pack"; and if she will make a statement; [62881]

(3) to whom copies of the 2006 edition of the "School Nurse: Practice Development Resource Pack" were sent; at what cost; and if she will make a statement. [62882]

Mr. Byrne: The Department spent £14,679 producing the "School Nurse: Practice Development Resource Pack". The pack was prepared in consultation with the Royal College of Nursing, Community Practitioner and Health Visitor Association, National Children's Bureau, Nursing and Midwifery Council, Sheffield University and the Department for Education and Skills.

The original "School Nurse: Practice Development Resource Pack" was published in 2001. It has been updated to reflect the changing policy and health context in which school nurses are now working. It is one product of the work led by the Chief Nursing Officer to promote a modern role for school nurses and to increase the number of school nurses as announced in "Choosing Health". The main changes include an update on Government policy including "Choosing Health, Every Child Matters", the national service framework for children, young people and maternity and healthy schools. It also contains additional information on today's health priorities, such as obesity, smoking and mental health.

There has been no distribution of this pack. Copies are available from the Department's website at:

www.dh.gov.uk

A copy is available in the Library.

Sunsmart Campaign

Mrs. James: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what resources have been made available to the SunSmart campaign for 2006–07; and what assessment she has made of the merits of increasing funding to the campaign. [65084]

Caroline Flint: SunSmart, the national skin cancer and sun protection campaign run by Cancer Research UK is funded by the United Kingdom health Departments. The Department will be writing in the near future to confirm its contribution to the overall amount. All such campaigns are kept under regular review and are assessed in the light of their merits and the overall funding position of the Department.

Mrs. James: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on what issues the SunSmart campaign will be focusing resources during the summer of 2006. [65085]

Caroline Flint: Cancer Research UK runs SunSmart, the national skin cancer prevention campaign, on behalf of the United Kingdom health departments. It advises people about how to enjoy the sun safely, to avoid sunburn by using protective screening methods and about the risks of using sun beds for cosmetic purposes.

In 2006, SunSmart is targeting men and outdoor workers as malignant melanoma rates have quadrupled in men in the last 30 years and outdoor workers are exposed to three to four times more ultraviolet rays than indoor workers.

Tanning Salons

Mrs. James: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what discussions her Department has had with the coin-operated tanning salon industry regarding (a) skin cancer awareness and (b) access to such equipment by under 16-year-olds; [65081]

(2) if she will assess the implications for the incidence of skin cancer of trends in the number of unstaffed coin-operated tanning salons in England; and if she will make a statement; [65082]

(3) whether the Sunsmart campaign has undertaken work to raise awareness of coin-operated tanning equipment use. [65083]

Caroline Flint: Excessive exposure to ultraviolet radiation, both natural and artificial, is the most important modifiable risk factor regarding skin cancer. Recent decades have seen significant increases in the number of people in the United Kingdom being diagnosed with this condition which kills around 2,000 people each year.

The Government are therefore concerned about the apparent increased use of sunbeds for cosmetic purposes, especially by children, including that which takes place in coin operated salons. On our behalf, Cancer Research UK is in discussions with the sun bed industry to review industry practices and the scope for self-regulation. These discussions have covered restrictions on the use of sunbeds by under 16s, the displaying of information about the use of sunbeds, their risks to health especially to children, and specific concerns about unsupervised tanning devices.

. Cancer Research UK also runs SunSmart, the national skin cancer prevention campaign, on behalf of the UK health Departments. It advises people about how to enjoy the sun safely, to avoid sunburn by using protective screening methods and about the risks of using sunbeds for cosmetic purposes. The SunSmart campaign has focused on the dangers of sunbeds generally and the SunSmart website has a dedicated section on this, which includes a recommendation for under 16s never to use sunbeds for cosmetic purposes.

Television Sets

Jo Swinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many television sets are in operation in the Department (a) in total, (b) in Minister's private offices and (c) in each office building in the Department; and how many television licences are held by the Department. [62793]

Mr. Byrne: The Department of Health has a total of 126 television (TV) sets. The number of TV sets in Ministers' Private Offices is 16. The number in each office building is:

Skipton House—3

Richmond House—111

New Kings Beam House—2

Market Towers—5

Quarry House—5

The Department does not hold any TV licences.

Tuberculosis

Justine Greening: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many incidences of tuberculosis were identified in each primary care trust in London in (a) 2002–03, (b) 2003–04, (c) 2004–05 and (d) 2005–06; and if she will make a statement. [64403]

Jane Kennedy: The data for the calendar years 2002, 2003 and 2004 are shown in the table.

Primary care trusts	2002	2003	2004
Barking and Dagenham	35	42	43

Notes:
1. Since case numbers in some primary care trusts (PCTs) are small, numbers may fluctuate from year-to-year, and thus any apparent 'trends' in the data should be interpreted with caution.
2. Population estimates for PCTs are only available from 2001 onwards. Data on tuberculosis rates for the years 2001 to 2004 can only be provided.
3. Data as at 12 April 2006.

Source:
Health Protection Agency enhanced tuberculosis surveillance system.

Justine Greening: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the enhanced tuberculosis surveillance TB incidence rates were for Wandsworth primary care trust for each year since 1998 (a) by rate per 100,000 population and (b) as a mean average over the period; and if she will make a statement. [64404]

Jane Kennedy: The data for the calendar years 2001, 2002, 2003 and 2004 are shown in the table.

Wandsworth primary care trust: tuberculosis case reports and rates 2001–04

	Cases	Rate (per 100,000)	Average rate (2001–04)
2001	51	18.8	30.7
2002	93	34.0
2003	96	35.0
2004	96	34.7

Notes:
1. The numbers of tuberculosis cases in some primary care trusts (PCTs) across London are small. In view of this, numbers may fluctuate from year to year, and thus any apparent trends in the data should be interpreted with caution. Any apparent trend or comparison between Wandsworth PCT and other PCTs in London has little validity.
2. Population estimates for PCTs are only available from 2001 onwards. The Health Protection Agency enhanced tuberculosis surveillance (ETS) system started collecting information on the PCT of residence of reported cases during 2003. Population estimates (Office of National Statistics) by PCT are only available from 2001. Wandsworth PCT rates for 2001 and 2002 have been derived retrospectively based on ONS population estimates.

Winter Report

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health for what reasons a year in which there was an influenza epidemic was chosen as the basis for comparison with the winter of 2005–06 in her Department's Winter Report 2005–06. [63110]

Jane Kennedy: 1999–2000 was the comparison used in the Winter Report for 2005–06 because it was the first year that a comparable report was published examining the performance of the national health service during the winter and so it provides the baseline comparison.

In addition the 10-year NHS Plan was launched in 2000. As this year's report took the theme of reform, comparing performance during winter now with that during 1999–2000 enabled this year's report to explore the improvements due to reforms outlined in the NHS Plan.

World Cup (Complimentary Tickets)

Mr. Hands: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many complimentary tickets her Department has received for games taking place at the FIFA World cup 2006 in Germany. [63903]

Mr. Byrne: The Department has not received any complimentary tickets for FIFA World cup games taking place in Germany in 2006. Ministers currently have no plans to attend any of the matches.

CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

Bullying/Sexual Harassment

David Simpson: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many people in her Department have been (a) disciplined and (b) dismissed in the last 3 years as a result of a complaint against them of (i) bullying and (ii) sexual harassment being upheld. [65933]

Ms Harman: Three individuals were dismissed for bullying, eight received final written warnings, five resigned before charges could be brought and five cases are ongoing.

In the two cases of sexual harassment which were upheld in the last 3 years, both respondents resigned before charges could be brought.

David Simpson: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how much compensation her Department has paid out in the last 3 years as a result of complaints of (a) bullying and (b) sexual harassment being upheld. [65934]

Ms Harman: None.

Electoral Registration

Chris Ruane: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what the advertising budget was for promoting electoral registration in each of the past 10 years for (a) central government and (b) each local authority area. [65900]

Bridget Prentice: The information is as follows.

(a) The Government have not specifically allocated an annual budget for the promotion of electoral registration over the past 10 years. However, the Government have run two campaigns during this period. The first was a Home Office campaign in 2001 jointly to promote the then newly introduced systems of rolling registration and postal voting on demand, as introduced by the RPA 2000. Expenditure figures for this are not available. Recently, the Government, in co-operation with several organisations, lead the 1,824 Collective registration campaign to encourage electors in London to register for the 2006 local elections. Central Government expenditure on the media campaign was £52,618.36.

(b) This information is not held centrally.

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many electoral registration officers there are. [66064]

Bridget Prentice: There are 391 electoral registration officers in Great Britain. In Northern Ireland the Chief Electoral Officer is responsible for electoral registration.

Grievance Procedures

David Simpson: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs pursuant to the Answer of 18 April 2006, Official Report, column 43W, on grievance procedures, how many grievances have been initiated in her Department involving (a) equality issues and (b) diversity issues in each of the last 3 years; and how many such procedures resulted in (i) disciplinary action and (ii) dismissal. [65935]

Ms Harman: My Department's Equality and Diversity Grievances procedure is applied to all grievances with equality and diversity elements; they are not sub-divided into equality grievances and diversity grievances.

The total number of equality and diversity grievances investigated over the last 3 years including those stated in my previous reply are as follows:

	Number of cases
2003–04	16
2004–05	16
2005–06	27

Three individuals were dismissed, nine were given final written warnings, seven resigned before charges could be brought, and seven cases are ongoing.

Written Answers to Questions

Thursday 27 April 2006

HOUSE OF COMMONS COMMISSION

Disabled People

Tom Levitt: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission if he will make a statement on the Commission's progress in fulfilling its statutory obligation to promote the rights of disabled people. [66020]

Nick Harvey: A number of specific actions are in hand to address disability issues. For example:

The visitor reception building currently under construction will facilitate access for those with mobility problems, providing level access for the first time for all visitors to Westminster Hall and the associated public facilities, and an alternative covered route for ambulatory disabled visitors to Central Lobby and the Palace via Star Chamber Court;

A programme to improve signage around the parliamentary estate is in hand;

Hearing loops have been installed in all Committee rooms as well as the Chamber;

The project to upgrade the parliamentary website is addressing disability access, and disabled users have been consulted as part of the trial;

Information is being collated on reasonable adjustments that have been made for staff so as to create a 'one stop shop' for information in this area, making it easier for staff and managers to access the information;

Workshops and guidance notes on supporting staff with disabilities will be available to staff and managers after the summer recess.

European Scrutiny Committee Reports

Michael Gove: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission how many copies of European Scrutiny Committee reports have been sold in each of the last five years. [66131]

Nick Harvey: The number of copies of European Scrutiny Committee publications (reports, special reports and minutes of evidence volumes) sold in each of the last five financial years is as follows:

	Copies
2001–02	3,999
2002–03	5,451
2003–04	5,041
2004–05	3,765
2005–06	2,793

TRANSPORT

Concessionary Travel

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what reasons underlay the Government's decision not to include community transport schemes within the definition of bus services eligible for the purposes of statutory concessionary travel schemes under the Travel Concessions (Eligible Services) Order 2002; and if he will make a statement. [66055]

Dr. Ladyman: The Travel Concessions (Eligible Services) Order 2002 was made under the Transport Act 2000 and reflects the policy that the statutory entitlement to concessionary fares applies to local bus travel. Concessions on community transport services can be provided at the discretion of individual local authorities along with other help towards costs.

Highway Maintenance (Peterborough)

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will instruct his officials to review the Local Transport Plan highway maintenance allocation to Peterborough city council for 2006–07, with particular reference to the impact of the formulaic approach to capital allocation; and if he will make a statement. [66751]

Dr. Ladyman: In December 2004 Peterborough was given indicative allocations for highway maintenance in the Local Transport Plan settlement of £2.409 million for 2005–06 and £2.209 million for 2006–07.

These sums were calculated by formula and included specific amounts for strengthening structures on the primary route network. The formula had a dampening mechanism that prevented maintenance allocations varying by more than 25 per cent. from the previous year, and in the case of Peterborough the sums given to them for primary route work had the effect of depressing the amount available to them for other maintenance work.

A consultation on the LTP maintenance formula took place in 2005, and it was decided that from 2007–08 primary route network allocations will not be included when applying the 25 per cent. year on year dampening mechanism. This will rectify the problem experienced by Peterborough.

Ministerial Cars (Fuel Costs)

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the fuel costs were for ministerial cars used by his Department in each of the last five years. [67005]

Dr. Ladyman: Ministerial cars are provided by the Government Car Service (GCS) in accordance with the Prime Minister's guidance 'Travel by Ministers'. A breakdown of the figures in the format requested is not readily available and could be obtained only at a disproportionate cost.

Parking

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) when the Government last published guidelines to local authorities on parking enforcement and what the title of the publication was; [66288]

(2) what plans the Government has to issue revised guidelines to local authorities on parking enforcement. [66289]

Dr. Ladyman: The Government published Local Authority Circular 1/95 (Welsh Office Circular 26/95), "Guidance on Decriminalised Parking Enforcement outside London" in 1995. The Department is producing regulations and statutory guidance on civil parking enforcement under Part 6 of the Traffic Management Act 2004; in addition the Department is revising Local Authority Circular 1/95. Public consultation will take place later this year with implementation in 2007.

Mr. Burrowes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport with what requirements private parking enforcement companies have to comply to gain access to personal information from the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency in the process of enforcing penalties for parking offences. [66647]

Dr. Ladyman: Regulation 27(1)(e) of the Road Vehicles (Registration and Licensing) Regulations 2002 requires DVLA to release information held on its vehicle record to anyone who can demonstrate 'reasonable cause' to have that information.

Companies that make regular requests for information are required to provide a full résumé of their business practices, detailing how they meet 'reasonable cause' and outline how they will use any information they receive. Information is then released on the basis that it will be used only for that purpose. Applicants are reminded that use of the information for any other purpose is an offence under the Data Protection Act 1998.

Companies that request and receive information electronically are visited by DVLA staff prior to any link being established. These links are operated in the context of clear terms of agreement, which outlines when information may be requested, how it can be used and how it should be stored. The DVLA has the right to carry out ad hoc audits on companies to ensure that all inquires are appropriate. Any suspected abuses will be investigated and, when appropriate, referred to the Information Commissioner for prosecution.

Railways

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on proposals for a high speed rail link between Scotland and England. [66371]

Derek Twigg: The Government have a manifesto commitment to look at the feasibility and affordability of a new North-South high-speed link. The merits of a high speed line need to be rigorously examined before we will be in a position to make an announcement.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Transport announced on 15 March that the Department will publish a long term strategy for the railways along side the High Level Output Specification. The Department will take forward consideration of high speed lines as part of this work.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when (a) he and (b) one of his agencies last carried out a national survey of railway station usage. [62464]

Derek Twigg: The Department for Transport has been collecting usage data from stations across Great Britain over 2004 and 2005 to complete the National Rail Travel Survey. Results from this survey should be available towards the end of 2006.

Seat Belts

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions he has had with representatives of the media on the reporting of serious road traffic accidents and whether those involved were wearing seat-belts. [65180]

Dr. Ladyman: As part of the Think! road safety campaign we engage regularly with the media to encourage the promotion of road safety messages.

Ministers or officials in this Department have not had discussions with the media specifically about the reporting of accidents and whether those involved in the accidents were wearing seat-belts.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Entrepreneurs

Mr. Iain Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps his Department is taking to increase the number of entrepreneurs above the age of 50 years in the North East. [65765]

Alun Michael: The Government encourage people of all ages to become entrepreneurs and I recognise the considerable potential that exists among people also over the age of 50 years. Most business support is available to people over 50, but we do recognise a need for specific advice and assistance to increase entrepreneurial activity in this age group.

ONE North East has produced the North East of England Enterprise Strategy in association with regional partners in the public and private sectors. The strategy draws together the priorities for encouraging and developing existing and potential entrepreneurial talent across all age groups, and outlines the actions, time scales and responsibilities for their delivery.

One example of funding specifically targeted at the over 50s age group is the Challenge Fund strand of the Small Business Service's Phoenix Fund which awarded PRIME (the Prince's Initiative for Mature Enterprise) some £1.4 million in revenue and loan guarantees up to 31 March 2006 to support that organisation's national activities to help people aged over 50 set up in business.

More generally, the following DTI supported initiatives are also contributing to increased entrepreneurial activity in the region across all sectors and age groups:

support provided through the Business Link network in the region, ongoing restructuring and simplification of Government business support, some £2 million Phoenix Fund support for four community development finance institutions in the region to provide finance and support to enterprises and entrepreneurs in under-represented and disadvantaged groups, £26.4 million to be shared by Easington, Derwentside, Wear Valley, Sedgefield and South Tyneside under the local enterprise growth initiative (LEGI).

EU Structural Funds

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry which (a) areas and (b) regions are due to receive less EU structural funds over the next financial perspective than under their current allocation; and what the difference in the sums allocated is in each case. [66251]

Alun Michael: On 20 December 2005 I made a written statement to the House on the outcome of the European Council regarding reform of the EU structural and cohesion funds. My statement set out the implications of the budgetary agreement for the UK for the 2007–13 financial perspective. The progress made was very good news for the UK and a positive achievement of the UK presidency.

The position remains as I set out in my statement. It is not possible at this stage to provide precise figures for the amounts to be received by individual regions post-2006. We will only know this once the European Commission has produced official structural funds allocations for the UK and its regions.

Glass Manufacturing

Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what forecast his Department has made of employment levels in the UK container glass manufacturing industry over the next five years. [64145]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The department does not make forecasts for employment in the glass container industry. However I am aware that the total UK glass industry, including glazing for construction and the automotive sector, employs 31,000[1].

Hearing Loss Compensation

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what consideration has been given by Ministers to the implications for claimants for compensation of noise-induced hearing loss of breaches of rule 4(2)c of the Conditional Fee Agreement Regulations 2000. [65162]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The implications for claimants of a breach of the above regulations are:

1. The compensation to be paid by the Department would be unaffected.

2. If the agreement between the claimant and their representative is deemed to be invalid then the claimant has no liability to his solicitor for his solicitors costs.

3. The claimant's liability for disbursements remains (except possibly for the After The Event Insurance (ATE) premium, depending on what a court might decide) and the Department has therefore instructed that interim payments on account of disbursements be made as appropriate and on a case-by-case basis.

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement about breaches of rule 4(2)c of the Conditional Fee Agreement Regulations 2000 in relation to noise-induced hearing loss cases. [65163]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Matters are presently before the courts and it would be wrong to make a statement while the issue is under consideration.

Sex Discrimination Cases

Ed Balls: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many sex discrimination cases have been initiated by people in (a) Wakefield District and (b) Normanton constituency over the past five years; and how many of these have been successful. [66027]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The following table shows the total number of sex discrimination claims that have been registered by the Employment Tribunals Service over the past five years and the number of successful cases at tribunal. Statistical information for individual districts and constituencies is not readily available and could be produced only at disproportionate cost.

	Total claims registered	Successful at tribunal
2004–05	11,726	299
2003–04	17,722	306
2002–03	11,001	363
2001–02	15,703	368

Sunday Trading

Mr. Malik: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will seek to amend schedule 4 of the Sunday Trading Act 1994 to extend the right not to work on any Sunday exercisable by shop workers to include distribution workers who work in the retail sector. [65980]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The Sunday shopping review is looking at the restrictions on Sunday shop opening hours. The issue of the right not to work on Sundays is not within the scope of the review and we have no plans to extend protection in this area.

Mr. Grogan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether potential liberalisation of Sunday trading hours will be undertaken by (a) primary legislation and (b) an amendment to the Sunday Trading Act 1994 using a regulatory reform order. [66049]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Ministers have yet to take a view on the review of Sunday shop opening hours. However if we were to relax the current restrictions, it would be by primary legislation.

World Heritage Sites

David Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry which Minister in his Department has responsibility for issues relating to world heritage sites. [64829]

Alan Johnson: Lead responsibility for policy on world heritage sites rests with my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport. The Department for Culture, Media and Sport works closely with relevant Government Departments on all issues affecting world heritage sites. Within DTI, there is no single Minister with specific responsibilities for world heritage sites and any issues relating to DTI are dealt with by the appropriate Minister concerned.

WALES

Superannuation Liability

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what total amount of employers' normal contributions accruing superannuation liability charge have been accounted for by his Department in each of the last five years for which data are available. [61355]

Mr. Hain: The amount of employers' accruing superannuation liability charges in respect of Wales Office members of the principal civil service pension scheme in the last five years is as follows:

2005–06	333
2004–05	215
2003–04	202
2002–03	181
2001–02	160

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Fledgling Democracies

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much UK aid will be provided (a) bilaterally and (b) multilaterally to promote and further democracy in 2006–07. [64626]

Mr. Thomas: DFID tracks its bilateral expenditure by monitoring expenditure against specific sector objectives, one of which is improved governance. This includes different aspects of state building such as support to improve popular participation in the decision making process, and building capacity to improve government's accountability to its citizens. It also covers the encouragement of more pluralist and democratic political systems.

Some funding decisions are still being taken, however, given the importance that DFID attaches to governance, I would expect the share of bilateral governance expenditure to be at least maintained at current levels, and probably increased. Based on figures for 2005–06 this suggests somewhere in the order of £347 million or 13.9 per cent. of the total bilateral spend.

In addition, DFID provides funding to a number of multilateral institutions such as the European Development Fund, World Bank, United Nations Agencies and Regional Development Banks, and this is pooled with other donors. In many cases these institutions support a range of activities, including governance. The UK share of this is not tracked.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Departmental Websites

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will list (a) the websites operated by her Department and (b) the reports placed on the internet in March 2006, indicating in each case whether paper copies were also made available. [65213]

Mr. Lammy: The information is as follows.

Internet Gambling

Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) what research her Department has (a) carried out and (b) commissioned into of internet gambling addiction among young people; [65472]

(2) what assessment she has made of the problem of internet gambling addiction among young people; [65473]

(3) what research she has (a) carried out and (b) commissioned into the use of internet gambling sites by underage people; [65474]

(4) what assessment she had made of the use of internet gambling sites by under-age people. [65475]

Mr. Caborn: In 2001, the National Lottery Commission published research monitoring trends in the level of participation in National Lottery games by 12 to 15-year-olds. The research also looked into the prevalence of problem gambling by under-16s and considered under-16s participation in some other forms of gambling, but not internet gambling. (Under-16s and the National lottery Tracking Survey, July 2000.)

This research is being updated currently and the results, which are due to be published at the end of summer 2006, will include some comparative information about under-16s participation in other forms of gambling, irrespective of the way in which facilities to gamble are provided, and will also contain specific information on internet lottery use.

Olympic Games

Meg Hillier: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what discussions she has had with (a) local authorities, (b) the Olympic Delivery Authority and (c) other agencies on the future of Hackney Marshes and the Olympic precinct in Hackney following the Games in 2012. [65111]

Mr. Caborn: The London Development Agency is currently working with the London borough of Hackney to develop a comprehensive proposal of improvements for the future of the Marshes, recognising that it is a very important local recreational facility and ecological site. It is expected that plans for the Marshes will be publicly consulted on over the summer.

In terms of the temporary use of East Marsh during the Games, this part of the Marshes will be fully restored after the Games as part of the overall improvement plan for the Marshes. Restoring East Marsh back to its current use is a commitment that the Games stakeholders are firmly committed to; furthermore it is a legally binding condition of the planning consent granted in October 2004.

In line with Hackney borough council's aspirations, the legacy development will provide space for industrial and other workspace units and areas of new open space. In addition, one of the three indoor arenas will be retained in order to provide a sports venue for Hackney.

The Olympic Delivery Authority, which has recently been established, will be working with boroughs and other stakeholders to ensure that there are viable and sustainable legacy plans for all permanent venues and infrastructure.

Mr. Bone: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will take steps to allow Olympic participants in pistol shooting events to practise for the events in the UK. [65427]

Mr. Caborn: Under current legislation, as a result of the Firearms Amendment Act (1997), three of the 15 shooting disciplines defined as an Olympic sport cannot be practised within Britain.

This legislation is the responsibility of the Home Office.

Strong representations have been made on this matter, which I have brought to the attention of my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary for consideration.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Forestry

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the environmental record of the Australian Forest Standard; and if she will make a statement. [65242]

Mr. Morley: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 19 December 2005, Official Report, column 2394W, about the remit of the Central Point of Expertise on Timber (CPET) and the Australian Forest Standard.

CPET checked the PEFC scheme in February 2006 to see how the endorsed national schemes were implementing the new requirements introduced by the PEFC Council in 2004 and 2005. CPET examined 14 national schemes, one of which was the Australian Forest Certification Scheme.

CPET did not assess the performance outcomes of the Australian Forest Standard. Instead the focus was on whether the PEFC system had been adopted at the national scheme level. The Government have decided to give further consideration to the PEFC scheme as part of a wider review of all the forest certification schemes assessed by CPET in 2004. This was announced in Defra News release 144/06 on 30 March 2006, see: http://www.defra.gov.uk/news/2006/060330g.htm

Further details on the CPET assessments can be found on the website: http://www.proforest.net/cpet

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs in what circumstances the Central Point of Expertise on Timber would remove the Programme for the Endorsement of Forest Certification scheme from its approved list of certifiers of sustainable timber. [65245]

Mr. Morley: The Central Point of Expertise on Timber (CPET) may assess a forest certification scheme as no longer meeting the Government's criteria for robust assurance of sustainable timber sources but it would be for the Government to decide what advice CPET should give to central departments as a result.

The circumstances under which a forest certification scheme would fail the test for credible assurance are explained in the CPET document—"Criteria for Evaluating Certification Schemes"—see CPET website at http://www.proforest.net/cpet. In essence, if a scheme were assessed as scoring zero on any one of the relevant assessment criteria or scoring less than 75 per cent. of the total possible score on the relevant criteria then it would fail the test. Any such failure would cause the Government to consider changing the status of that scheme in respect of the level of assurance it would accept.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what measures the Government are taking to ensure that the Programme for the Endorsement of Forest Certification scheme includes mandatory and enforceable minimum standards for all its national members. [65246]

Mr. Morley: The Government currently accept certificates from the Programme for the Endorsement of Forest Certification (PEFC) scheme as assurance of legal and sustainable timber sources. This acceptance is subject to the UK Government being satisfied that national forest certification schemes endorsed by PEFC are all applying the PEFC standard consistently in their own countries. A sample check has been undertaken to establish to position. The initial findings led the Government to conclude that further examination and consultation should be undertaken before reaching a decision and that the forthcoming review of PEFC and the other schemes assessed by the Central Point of Expertise on Timber would provide an appropriate opportunity to do that.

The Government cannot ensure that PEFC includes mandatory and enforceable minimum standards for all its national members. PEFC is an independent private sector organisation that sets its own standard and system requirements for implementation. However, the UK Government could choose not to accept PEFC certificates as assurance of responsible timber sources and that is why we are undertaking the assessments and reviews already mentioned.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs on what dates discussions have been held between representatives of the British and Australian governments regarding the Programme for the Endorsement of Forest Certification scheme; and if she will make a statement. [65247]

Mr. Morley: Representatives of the UK and Australian Governments, including officials as well as Ministers of State, met with each other on the following dates to discuss the UK Government's timber procurement policy and within those discussions talked about the Programme for the Endorsement of Forest Certification schemes:

07 March 2006—Ministers and officials

20 March 2006—officials only

24 April 2006—officials only

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the 'outstanding issues' were which were found by the review of the Programme for the Endorsement of Forest Certification scheme which caused the probation period to be extended. [65249]

Mr. Morley: The outstanding issues relate to the decision making process for forest management standard setting as adopted by the national schemes that have been endorsed by the Programme for the Endorsement of Forest Certification (PEFC). The PEFC Council's new requirement for standard setting is that

"The formal approval of standards shall be based on evidence of consensus".

An initial examination of some of the national schemes showed that the various national decision making processes were not identical. Subsequent information supplied by the schemes indicated that the processes adopted may nevertheless result in compliance with the PEFC Council requirements but the situation was not at all clear-cut and called for more examination.

Another factor considered was the impending review of all the forest certification schemes assessed by CPET in 2004. The Government has decided that this review will, in addition to examining published scheme requirements, consider evidence of failure to adopt scheme system requirements. A decision now on PEFC's probationary status may be overturned following the review. That would create significant confusion in the market place and loss of credibility for the CPET assessment process.

The UK Government was mindful of the implications any ill judged decision would have on all the stakeholders involved and was anxious to be as objective and fair as possible. Consequently, the decision was to postpone making a decision on PEFC's probationary status until after the review of schemes scheduled for late spring 2006.

Grievance Procedures

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many grievance procedures have been initiated in her Department in each of the last three years. [63545]

Jim Knight: The Civil Service Management Code sets out the requirements for Departments to have procedures in place to deal with grievances. The Defra Grievance Procedures are laid down on the Departmental intranet.

The central guidance lays down that where there have been less than five grievances raised in any one year that the information is suppressed on the grounds of confidentiality.

The number of formal grievances that have been initiated in the core-Department in each of the last three years are as follows:

2003—less than 5

2004—7

2005—less than 5

National Equine Database

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans she has to increase the take-up of the National Equine Database. [64867]

Jim Knight: 75 of the 80 equine data supplier organisations are already providing the compulsory passport data and some voluntary data. It is in the voluntary data that the value of National Equine Database (NED), and its use to the public, lies—to enable the combination of pedigree and performance data to inform the breeding and buying public so that they can purchase horses and make breeding decisions with a greater degree of confidence.

NED already holds over 673,000 records, however we do need more pedigree data in NED if the on-line services are to be launched on schedule later this year. The Industry/Government partnership delivering NED is in direct contact with the few breed societies yet to supply pedigree data, with a view to helping them come to a decision to provide this information this summer. Personal presentations on the benefit of NED to the industry and NED Newsletters have proved an excellent tool to promote NED—see www.ned.uk.com for information.

We are planning an extensive marketing campaign to inform the equestrian public of the value of NED and its relevance to their particular interests. This will begin in August, leading to the launch of www.nedonline.co.uk, which is scheduled for end October.

Single Farm Payments

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the reasons for the difference in the actual and projected number of applications for Single Farm Payment; and how many of these additional applicants she expects to be (a) eligible for entitlement and (b) disallowed. [63334]

Jim Knight: The Rural Payments Agency (RPA) has recorded a total of 120,367 claim forms under the Single Payment Scheme in England, but this may include some duplicates. However, it is expected that the final number will remain in line with forecasts, which ranged from 110,000 to 130,000.

Given that the validation of claims is still progressing it is not possible at this stage to give meaningful figures on the number of claimants who will not receive a payment and/or entitlements.

Social Exclusion

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what funding streams her Department plans to finance in 2006–07 to tackle social exclusion. [56220]

Jim Knight: There are a number of relevant funding streams that will be financed by Defra in the period 2006–07,covering two aspects of social exclusion in particular: fuel poverty and rural disadvantage.

Defra plays a leading role in taking forward the Government's commitment to tackle fuel poverty in vulnerable households in England by 2010. The new phase of the Warm Front Scheme, which is the key tool for tackling fuel poverty in the private sector in England, was launched in June 2005. In addition, it was announced in the 2005 Pre-Budget Report that an additional £300 million would be made available to tackle fuel poverty across the UK over the 2005–08 period. In England, this means that total fuel poverty funding over the same period will exceed £800 million.

The new Rural Social and Community programme, will provide funding for locally-determined activities aimed at tackling social exclusion and community capacity building in rural areas. The programme, worth £27 million over two years, commences on 1 April 2006.

In addition, Defra is investing £21.3 million through the Regional Development Agencies (RDAs) in order to promote sustainable delivery of rural services such as health, transport and education.

Water Companies

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the estimated amount of water lost through broken pipes by each of the privatised water companies was in the last period for which figures are available. [65831]

Mr. Morley: The Director General of Water Services publishes leakage figures annually in the 'Security of supply, leakage and the efficient use of water' reports. Total water company leakage for 2004–05, in megalitres per day, was reported as follows:

	Megalitres
Anglian	214
Bournemouth and W Hants	22
Bristol	53
Cambridge	14
Dee Valley	11
Dwr Cymru	226
Folkestone and Dover	8
Mid Kent	29
Northumbrian North	155
Northumbrian South	67
Portsmouth	30
Severn Trent	502
South East	69
South Staffordshire	74
South West	83
Southern	92
Sutton and East Surrey	24
Tendring Hundred	5
Thames	915
Three Valleys	149
United Utilities	500
Wessex	73
Yorkshire	293

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what assessment she has made of the level of dividends passed by water companies to their shareholders in each year since water services were privatised; [65102]

(2) what (a) amount and (b) proportion of total income of each water company was paid (i) to service debt and borrowing and (ii) in dividend payments to shareholders in each year since privatisation for which records are available. [65103]

Mr. Morley: Ofwat is the economic regulator of the water and sewerage companies in England and Wales. It sets price limits for each water company at price reviews. These are the maximum by which average charges may change each year. Ofwat sets price limits that allow each company to finance and fulfil its functions.

Dividends declared by the regulated companies are paid to their parent companies and are in their regulatory accounts. The companies are also required by Ofwat to provide a comprehensive explanation of the basis of the dividend. The parent companies report in their statutory accounts what is actually paid to shareholders.

Companies report to Ofwat each year in their profit and loss accounts the level of dividends and interest payments to service debt and borrowing. I will place copies in the House Library.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Alzheimer's Disease

Dr. Alasdair McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what response he has made to the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence appraisal consultation document on drugs for the treatment of Alzheimer's disease in relation to Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement. [66143]

Mr. Woodward: Guidance produced by the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence is only applicable to England and Wales and does not currently extend to Northern Ireland. In light of this, the Department of Health, Social Service and Public Safety has not made a response to the Institute's appraisal consultation documents on drugs for the treatment of Alzheimer's disease.

The Department is in the process of establishing formal links with the Institute and will advise the Health and Personal Social Services on the applicability to Northern Ireland of the Institute's final recommendations on the Alzheimer's drugs.

Capital Expenditure (Schools)

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the total capital expenditure has been for each school in the 100 (a) primary and (b) secondary schools in Northern Ireland with the (i) highest and (ii) lowest percentage of children receiving free school meals in each of the last 10 years. [65995]

Angela E. Smith: Free school meals entitlement instead of pupils receiving free school meals is a better measure of need. Data for percentages of pupils actually receiving free school meals are held by Education and Library Boards and it would not have been possible to extract the data for all the years requested inside the allocated timescale.

The information on major works capital expenditure using free school meals entitlement will be placed in the Library.

Child Sex Abuse

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what correspondence he has received from members of the public on child sexual abuse by clerics. [65506]

Mr. Woodward: The Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety has received one letter asking if there was going to be an independent public inquiry into allegations of clerical child sexual abuse and two telephone calls seeking advice on how to report allegations of abuse by clergy.

The Police Services of Northern Ireland (PSNI) has received two pieces of correspondence from members of the public on this subject during the past year.

PSNI and Social Services are the statutory organisations with powers to investigate allegations of abuse.

Civil Partnerships

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland pursuant to the answer of 24 November 2005, Official Report, column 2197W, on homosexual civil partnerships, whether (a) council staff and (b) registrar's office staff who have objections of a religious, moral or conscience nature can refuse to participate in civil partnership ceremonies. [36561]

Angela E. Smith: I am sorry for the delay in replying which was caused by an administrative error.

Each district council in its role as a local registration authority is required to appoint a Registrar of Civil Partnerships. In discharging this duty district councils as employers are required to comply with all relevant legislation.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland pursuant to the answer of 24 November 2005, Official Report, column 2197W, on homosexual civil partnerships, what plans he has to provide (a) information, (b) training and (c) assistance to ensure that (i) council staff and (ii) registrar's office staff with objections to homosexual and lesbian civil partnership ceremonies of a religious, moral or conscience nature are properly protected. [36562]

Angela E. Smith: I am sorry for the delay in replying which was caused by an administrative error.

Each district council in its role as a local registration authority is required to appoint a Registrar of Civil Partnerships. In discharging this duty district councils as employers are required to advise staff of their rights and responsibilities under the law.

Deaf Young People

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much the Department for Education has spent on educating deaf post-primary children and young people outside Northern Ireland in each of the last five years. [65892]

Angela E. Smith: The following table shows the amount spent by each Education and Library Board on educating deaf post-primary children and young people outside Northern Ireland, for the last five years, where available.

Education and Library	2001–02	2002–03	2003–04	2004–05	2005–06	Total

[1] Belfast Education and Library Board Estimate based on average costs.
[2] Western Education and Library Board includes Transport Costs averaged over five years.
[3] No children funded to attend schools outside Northern Ireland.
Note:
Total costs for 2001–02 and 2002–03 in the North Eastern Education and Library Board are not available as separate records were not kept until 2003.

Free Transport (Senior Citizens)

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment has he made of the impact on Northern Ireland of the Chancellor of the Exchequer's announcement on the free national transport scheme for the elderly. [65988]

Mr. Woodward: The provision of concessionary fares on public transport is a devolved matter throughout the United Kingdom. The Chancellor of the Exchequer's announcement referred to arrangements in England. In Northern Ireland the current concessionary fares scheme already allows for free travel for senior citizens throughout Northern Ireland.

Multi-storey Car Parks

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many multi-storey car parks have been constructed in Northern Ireland under the auspices of a Government Department in each of the last 10 years. [65311]

Mr. Woodward: The Chief Executive of Roads Service (Dr. Malcolm McKibbin) has been asked to write to the hon. Gentleman in response to this question.

Letter from Dr. Malcolm McKibbin, dated 27 April 2006:

You recently asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland a Parliamentary Question regarding how many multi-storey car parks have been constructed in Northern Ireland under the auspices of a Government department in each of the last 10 years. I have been asked to reply.

Roads Service has now constructed any multi-storey car parks in the last 10 years. However a two-storey car park was constructed in 1997–98 in Newry by Translink replacing car park spaces lost through construction of a new bus station.

I can also advise that the Department for Social Development has provided support for two retail developments, which include the provision of multi storey car parking facilities, within the last 10 years. These developments are in Londonderry in the Foyleside Shopping Centre which includes two multi-storey car parks, and in Spencer Road/Duke Street which includes one multi-storey car park.

Planning Area Enforcement Orders

Dr. Alasdair McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the penalty is for non-compliance with an enforcement order issued by a planning area in Northern Ireland. [66139]

Angela E. Smith: Failure to comply with an enforcement notice which has taken effect is an offence. A person found guilty of such an offence shall be liable to a fine which shall be determined by the courts. The maximum penalty for an offence is £30,000 on summary conviction in the magistrates court. If a person is convicted in a Crown court then the fine could be unlimited. In determining the amount of any fine to be imposed on a person, the legislation indicates that the court shall in particular have regard to any financial benefit which has accrued or appears likely to accrue in consequence of the offence.

Postgraduate Studentships

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people in Northern Ireland have been awarded postgraduate studentships since October 2005; and at what cost to public funds. [65331]

Angela E. Smith: The Department makes available funding for a number of postgraduate awards for higher degree courses leading to Masters and PhDs at Queen's University Belfast and the University of Ulster and the universities select, by competition, the students to fill these awards. Since the beginning of the academic year in October 2005, the universities have made a total of 218 postgraduate studentships at a cost of £2.095 million.

Public Transport

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland by how much (a) weekly, (b) monthly and (c) daily train and bus fares between (i) Lurgan and Belfast, (ii) Lisburn and Belfast, (iii) Antrim and Belfast, (iv) Bangor and Belfast and (v) Londonderry and Belfast have changed in the last 12 months. [65501]

Mr. Woodward: Translink has advised that the information is not available in the format requested as Ulsterbus issue 10 and 40 journey tickets, rather than weekly and monthly tickets.

There have been two fare increases in the financial year to 31 March 2006. The following table details the percentage increase in NI Railway and Ulsterbus fares.

Percentage

Belfast to	NI Railways		Ulsterbus
Lurgan	Single	9.3	Single	10
	Weekly	12.9	10 journey	10
	Monthly	13.9	40 journey	15.7
Lisburn	Single	8.0	Single	9.5
	Weekly	10.8	10 journey	9.4
	Monthly	13.9	40 journey	9.3
Antrim	Single	8.6	Single	9.1
	Weekly	7.5	10 journey	8.0
	Monthly	13.9	40 journey	8.4
Bangor	Single	8.6	Single	11.1
	Weekly	7.5	10 journey	12.2
	Monthly	13.9	40 journey	11.5
Londonderry	Single	8.9	Single	9.3
	Weekly	13.7	10 journey	10.0
	Monthly	13.6	40 journey	17.4

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland which were the busiest (a) rail and (b) bus routes between Belfast and other provincial towns in Northern Ireland in the last period for which figures are available. [65502]

Mr. Woodward: Translink has advised me that in the last financial year (1 April 2005 to 31 March 2006) the Belfast to Portadown rail route carried the highest number of passengers, as did the Belfast to Londonderry bus route.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many (a) rail and (b) bus passengers were carried on average each day between (i) Lurgan and Belfast, (ii) Portadown and Belfast, (iii) Lisburn and Belfast, (iv) Antrim and Belfast, (v) Bangor and Belfast and (vi) Londonderry and Belfast in the latest period for which figures are available. [65503]

Mr. Woodward: The daily figures in the following tables were calculated by dividing the total figures for the final accounting period of 2005–06 by 35 (as there were 35 days in that accounting period).

The following table provides the average number of rail journeys each day on the routes requested. All journeys are between the station stated and the four Belfast stations taken as a group (Central, Botanic, City hospital and Great Victoria street) and do not include passengers who boarded at intermediate points.

Rail passenger journeys each day, March 2006

Between location	Journey
Belfast and Portadown	760
Belfast and Lurgan	1,056
Belfast and Lisburn	1,364
Belfast and Antrim	170
Belfast and Bangor	2,275
Belfast and Londonderry	82

The following table provides the average number of bus journeys each day on the routes requested. All journeys are between any stage within the named town (e.g. Bangor, Bangor depot, Bangor station, Bangor town centre etc.) and Belfast (e.g. Belfast Great Victoria street, Belfast Laganside, Belfast city centre etc. taken as a group). Again the figures do not include passengers boarding at intermediate points.

Bus passenger journeys each day, March 2006

Between location	Journey
Belfast and Portadown	43
Belfast and Lurgan	68
Belfast and Lisburn	375
Belfast and Antrim	290
Belfast and Bangor	235
Belfast and Londonderry	1,040

Smithsonian Folklife Festival

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to promote in Northern Ireland the Smithsonian Folklife Festival to be held in Washington D.C. during the summer of 2007. [65709]

Mr. Hanson: A communications strategy is being developed to promote to the general public, opinion formers, politicians and the media, the benefits of Northern Ireland's participation in the Smithsonian Institution's Folklife Festival in 2007. Although there has been some publicity, the main actions cannot commence until July when the Smithsonian Institution announce Northern Ireland's representation at the festival.

Superannuation Entitlements

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many part-time members of staff at each health trust in the Province have submitted industrial tribunal applications regarding non-payment of superannuation entitlements. [65347]

Mr. Woodward: 281 industrial tribunal applications have been lodged by part-time staff seeking retrospective access to the HPSS Superannuation Scheme.

Details of numbers of applications by Trust are not held centrally. I will write to the hon. Member with the information as soon as it becomes available and place a copy in the Library.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many industrial tribunal applications by part-time staff from each health trust in the Province regarding superannuation entitlements (a) have been successful, (b) have been rejected and (c) are still to be resolved. [65348]

Mr. Woodward: This information is not held centrally. I will write to the hon. Member with the information as soon as it becomes available and place a copy in the Library.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether job contracts from prior to 1976 stating that part-time staff payments to NHS staff in the Province are not superannuable have been considered significant by the industrial tribunal. [65349]

Mr. Woodward: Any HPSS employee who worked at least half the standard weekly contractual hours has been entitled to join the HPSS superannuation scheme since 1 April 1973. The industrial tribunal has no jurisdiction to consider claims for exclusion from the superannuation scheme in respect of any period earlier than 8 April 1976. This was the date on which the European Court of Justice decided that pensions formed part of pay and that the provisions about equality between men and women applied to access to pension schemes in the public service. These provisions are identical to those applicable in Great Britain.

Undercover Agents

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will review the adequacy of the arrangements for the permanent protection of former undercover agents in the republican movement. [64914]

Mr. Woodward: I am satisfied there are adequate arrangements in place to counter the threat to individuals across a range of circumstances, including where individuals are suspected of providing assistant in confidence to the authorities.

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what provisions exist for the protection of current and former undercover agents in the Republican movement once exposed; and whether such protection was offered to Denis Donaldson. [65385]

Mr. Woodward: It is not Government policy to comment on specific national security and intelligence matters.

Vice Chancellor (University of Ulster)

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the cost to public funds has been of the suspension of the previous Vice Chancellor of the University of Ulster since December 2004. [65091]

Angela E. Smith: The former Vice Chancellor, Professor McKenna, was at no time suspended from duty. The question of cost to public funds as a result of suspension does therefore not apply.

Visitor Attractions

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the change was in annual numbers recorded at each of the 10 most frequented visitor attractions in Northern Ireland over the last 10 years. [65926]

Angela E. Smith: The NITB conducts a voluntary annual survey designed to give an overview of the visitor numbers to the various attractions across Northern Ireland. Of the top 10 attractions participating in the 2005 survey, eight had previously participated in the 1995 survey. The results are presented in the following table.

Top 10 participating tourist attractions visited, 2005

Rank	Attraction	Visitor numbers 2005	1995	Percentage change on 1995
1	Crawfordsburn Country Park, Belfast[1]	850,921	—	—
2	Botanic Gardens, Belfast	700,000	600,000	+16.7
3	Lagan Valley Regional Park[2]	500,000	—	—
4	Giants Causeway Visitor Centre	464,243	408,790	+13.6
5	Cavehill Country Park, Belfast	383,900	410,000	-6.4
6	Roe Valley Country Park, Limavady	317,431	120,000	+164.5
7	Colin Glen Forest Park, Belfast	242,526	10,000	+2,325.3
8	Oxford Island National Nature Reserve	234,925	143,300	+63.9
9	Scrabo Country Park, Newtownards	225,000	200,000	+12.5
10	Ulster Museum	212,073	319,534	-33.6

[1] Nearest survey return for Crawfordsburn Country Park to the year 1995 was in 1993, with 700,000 visitors.
[2] 2005 is the first time that Lagan Valley Regional Park has participated in the survey.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Departmental Websites

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list (a) the websites operated by his Department and (b) the reports placed on the internet in March 2006, indicating in each case whether paper copies were also made available. [65205]

Mr. Charles Clarke: As of 21 April 2006, the Home Office operates 40 websites.

The core Home Office website also has a number of sub-domains, such as police.homeoffice.gov.uk, which act as portal sites for practitioners around policy issues.

After a major redevelopment in September 2005, which brought nine separate websites under the main Home Office domain, a plan is under way to consolidate all of our sites by March 2007.

The Home Office does not keep a central record of all of the reports published on its websites. The information requested about numbers of reports published on the internet in March 2006—and also made available in paper copy—can therefore not be collected without incurring disproportionate cost.

Grievance Procedures

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many grievance procedures have been initiated in his Department in each of the last three years. [63551]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The following table provides the available information about the number of grievances raised within the Department in the last three years.

Number of grievances

Home Office (excluding immigration and nationality directorate)
2004	[1]—
2005	[1]—

[2] Have been raised to date.

Highly Skilled Migrant Programme

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether doctors with existing leave under the Highly Skilled Migrant Programme will require work permits under the new arrangements. [65013]

Andy Burnham: Those with leave under the Highly Skilled Migrant Programme are permitted to take employment or self-employment in the UK without requiring a work permit. Therefore doctors with existing leave under the Highly Skilled Migrant Programme will not require work permits for the duration of this leave. However, they will need to meet other requirements such as registration with the GMC and those employing doctors on the Highly Skilled Migrant Programme need to follow Department of Health recruitment policies.

Offender Assessment System

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on progress in implementing the offender assessment system. [65797]

Fiona Mactaggart: The Offender Assessment System, OASys, has been implemented in all public sector prisons and all 42 areas of the national probation service. Full connectivity between the Prison Service and national probation service OASys systems was achieved in March 2006. Full access to OASys has recently been given to the contracted out prisons although not all have started using it yet.

Prisons

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of prisoners involved in work activity are placed in prison workshops. [65611]

Fiona Mactaggart: In the public sector Prison Service, approximately 13 per cent. of all prisoners are employed in a prison industries workshop on a daily basis. This represents about one in five of all work places.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of prisoners are involved in (a) work activity and (b) education or training. [65612]

Fiona Mactaggart: Data in the specific format requested in the question are not collected centrally. However, the number of prisoners undertaking each type of prisoner activity is provided as a proxy. Prisoners that take part more than one type of activity may be counted more than once. Therefore, the following number cannot be used to calculate a proportion.

In 2005–06, 50,078 prisoners were recorded as undertaking work activities and 43,249 participated in education or training across the prison system.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent estimate he has made of the number of hours of purposeful activity undertaken by each prisoner per week. [65616]

Fiona Mactaggart: Provisional data for 2005–06 show the average number of hours of purposeful activity for the prison system to be 25.2 hours per prisoner per week.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what his estimate is of prison capacity in England and Wales by 2010. [65617]

Fiona Mactaggart: There is no estimate of prison capacity for 2010. Current plans are to increase the total capacity of the prison estate to around 80,400 in 2007.

Mr. Pelling: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which companies provide telephone services for prisoners in each prison. [64169]

Fiona Mactaggart: Telecom services within the Prison Service are provided by British Telecommunications (BT) and Global Communications and Consultancy Ltd. (GCC). These companies provide telephone services throughout the prison estate with the exception of Ashfield and Lowdham Grange prisons. Telecommunication services for Ashfield are provided by Thus telecommunications and Lowdham Grange's service providers are Voice Products Ltd. and Your Communications.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on his plans for continuity of provision of education and training for released prisoners. [65560]

Phil Hope: I have been asked to reply.

The Government's plans for ensuring continuity of provision of learning and skills for released prisoners were set out in the Green Paper 'Reducing Re-Offending Through Skills and Employment', published in December 2005.

No separate estimate has been made of the costs of bridging the gap between education inside and outside prisons. The new providers being appointed by the Learning and Skills Council are required contractually to deliver the requirements of the Offender's Learning Journey, the document that specifies the service to the offender. That document includes a requirement on the provider to join up learning commenced in custody with that available in the community. The costs of bridging that gap are straightforwardly part of the contract price.

Probation/Bail Hostel (West Midlands)

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will place in the Library the letter of 23 June 1994 designating Sycamore Lodge, Langley, Oldbury West Midlands as an approved probation and bail hostel. [66066]

Fiona Mactaggart: I will arrange for a copy of the Home Office letter of 23 June 1994 to be laid in the Libraries of both Houses.

Witnesses

Jenny Willott: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many vulnerable witnesses in each of the pilot schemes have successfully used intermediaries provided for in the special measures for vulnerable witnesses of the Youth Justice and Criminal Evidence Act 1999; and if he will make a statement. [65488]

Fiona Mactaggart: The available data are set out in the table.

Area	Intermediary scheme start date	Number of witnesses assisted by an intermediary as at 21 April 2006[1]
Merseyside	23 February 2004	27
West Midlands	13 September 2004 (Wolverhampton area) 1 November 2004 (all courts in West Midlands)	36
Thames Valley	2 October 2004	85
South Wales[2]	1 February 2005–6 February 2006	5
Norfolk	1 February 2005	31
Devon and Cornwall[3]	20 June 2005	11
Total		195

[1] Data refer to the number of witnesses for whom the Office for Criminal Justice Reform has provided a registered intermediary where the intermediary has, or is expected to, carried out a communication needs analysis relating to the witness or has assisted them to understand questions or to make their answers understood during a criminal investigation or trial. In a small number of these cases the intermediary may not have actually carried out these functions.

[2] Data refer only to pathfinder areas where notification of availability of the intermediary special measure has been made to courts in accordance with section 18(2) of the Youth Justice and Criminal Evidence Act 1999. Intermediaries have also been appointed in other criminal justice areas—such cases are not included in these data.

[3] Initial findings are that intermediaries are bringing considerable benefits to the criminal justice system by helping more vulnerable witnesses to give their best evidence and providing practitioners with more comprehensive information about witnesses to help guide their decisions.

World Cup

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many British football hooligans are banned in each police authority from travelling to the World Cup. [65301]

Paul Goggins: As at 20 April 2006 there are 3,286 Football Banning Orders in place. Details of the police authority area in which the subjects reside is provided in the following table. Each of the individuals concerned will be required to report to a designated police station and surrender their passports 10 days prior to the opening match and on every England match day during the tournament.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH OFFICE

British Nationals Abroad

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to his statement of 21 March 2006, Official Report, column 157, on British nationals abroad, whether the future announcement to which he referred in his statement was that made by the Chancellor of the Exchequer on 22 March 2006, Official Report, column 298, announcing a new charitable fund to support British citizens injured in or affected by terrorist acts at home or abroad. [66759]

Dr. Howells: No. My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary had in mind the future announcement which the Department of Culture, Media and Sport will make once the Government have fully considered the matter.

Colombia

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of (a) the likely effects of the decision by the United States Administration to offer rewards for the capture of Colombian drug dealers and (b) the effectiveness of this policy in (i) tackling the drug trade and (ii) reducing the impact of the drug trade on Colombian politics and society. [65666]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: The Government are committed to tackling the trade in illicit drugs in Latin America. As such we work alongside the US and other partners to counter the activities of those involved in the drugs trade. The decision to adopt a policy of offering rewards is a matter for the US Administration and is just one of many measures taken by them to prevent the flow of drugs from Colombia.

EU Commission (Plan D Programme)

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what contribution the Government (a) have made and (b) are planning to make to the European Commission's Plan D programme. [66129]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: The Government welcomes the principles behind the European Commission's Plan D for Democracy, Dialogue and Debate but insists that its implementation must be in co-operation with Member States and respect national circumstances. The Government welcomes ideas such as visits from Commissioners as part of the Plan D programme. Officials are in frequent touch with the Commission's Representation in London to co-ordinate events and activities and, in particular, work closely with them to make its Europe Direct project a success.

The Government do not plan to make a direct financial contribution to the Commission's Plan D. The Commission will finance Plan D using funding from the budget line for the future of Europe debate.

EU Website

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when the Government plans to launch the website described in the UK's contribution to the EU's interim report on the national debates during the reflection period on the future of Europe; and how much the website will cost (a) to build and (b) to maintain. [66125]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) launched the new Britain in the EU section of the FCO website on 13 April 2006. The new site, which can be found at www.europe.gov.uk, will be both a valuable resource on UK EU policy and the debate on the future direction of the EU. A Future of Europe section will set out a range of opinions on the EU and invite people to contribute to the debate. The site has been developed with a budget of £43,974 in the 2004–05 financial year, and a budget allocation of £80,000 in the 2005–06 financial year. The 2006–07 budget for maintaining the site has not yet been finalised.

Europe Direct

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many calls have been made to Europe Direct in the UK to date; and how much has been spent on (a) setting up and (b) running the service. [66126]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: The Europe Direct information line is based in Brussels and run by the European Commission. According to information published by the Commission, the service handled 112,000 queries from all members of the public in 2005. The total number of queries from the UK was 12,004; this figure represents 7,270 calls, 3,897 e-mails and 837 web-assistance queries. The basic annual cost of the service across the whole of the EU is €2.3 million. Further information on the Commission's Europe Direct service can be found at:

www.europa.eu.int/europedirect.

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs why the launch of the Europe Direct service was delayed for a year. [66127]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: In March 2005, the Government asked the European Commission to postpone the opening of Europe Direct Centres in this country, pending further work on their purpose and scope. In July 2005, having considered the project further, the Government confirmed to the Commission that the centres could go ahead with immediate effect. Based in Brussels, the EU-wide Europe Direct information line was launched in 2000.

Syria (Resolution 1559)

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with his (a) US and (b) EU counterparts on Syrian compliance with the United Nations Security Council Resolution 1559 (2004); and if he will make a statement. [66329]

Dr. Howells: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has discussed Syrian compliance with his US and EU counterparts on a regular basis since the UN Security Council adopted UN Security Council Resolution 1559 on 19 October 2004. He last discussed Syria and Lebanon with EU colleagues at the General Affairs and External Relations Council in Brussels on 20 March and with his US counterpart on 3 April.

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of Syrian compliance with United Nations Security Council Resolution 1559 (2004); and if he will make a statement. [66330]

Dr. Howells: The UN Security Council agreed a presidential statement on 23 January, which noted that several provisions of UN Security Council Resolution (UNSCR) 1559 had yet to be implemented, in particular the disbanding and disarming of militias and free and fair

Lebanese presidential elections. The full text of the statement can be found on the UN website at: http://daccessdds.un.org/doc/UNDOC/GEN/N06/218/09/PDF/N0621809,pdf?OpenElement.

This Government continue to support the full implementation of UNSCR 1559.

While the UN has confirmed that Syria has withdrawn its troops from Lebanon, Syria has yet to establish diplomatic relations with Lebanon or to demarcate its border with Lebanon. Syria also has a role to play in stopping arms transfers to Lebanese-based militias, including Hizballah.

The UK stands ready to assist the Lebanese government to implement the outstanding provisions of UNSCR 1559.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Apprenticeships

16. Meg Hillier: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what recent assessment she has made of the young modern apprenticeship programme; and if she will make a statement. [66220]

Phil Hope: The Learning and Skills Council (LSC) leads on the delivery of the Young Apprenticeship Programme and has put in place a comprehensive national evaluation strategy, supported by the sector skills councils involved. Ofsted is also monitoring the programme. The LSC plans to issue a formal report by early 2007. Interim feedback is positive, and Ofsted has confirmed that the programme has made a positive start and is popular with pupils.

Mr. McGovern: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what steps she is taking to promote apprenticeships among young people. [66218]

Phil Hope: The Department and its key partners such as the LSC and Connexions are very active in promoting apprenticeships to young people. The evidence is compelling, with a quarter of a million young people currently participating, the highest number ever. We pay particular attention to ensuring equal opportunities for all young people. We are also strongly committed to promoting the quality of the Apprenticeship Programme which is celebrated at the annual Apprenticeship Awards.

Community Learning

17. Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what provision is being made for adult learning in the community in 2006–07. [66221]

Phil Hope: We have allocated £210 million of taxpayers money in 2006–07 to support learning for personal and community development. This includes help for family learning, for example, to improve people's literacy and numeracy and for learning in deprived communities.

Head Teacher Vacancies

Mark Pritchard: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many head teacher vacancies there are in England; and if she will make a statement. [66203]

Jacqui Smith: The first release of school workforce statistical information published this morning indicates that in January 2006, there were 180 head teacher vacancies in local authority maintained schools in England—a vacancy rate of 0.8 per cent. This confirms the current trend for low and stable vacancy rates since 1997.

Figures out today also show that the vacancy rate for deputy and assistant head teachers are also low. Down to 0.7 per cent. in 2006 from 1.2 per cent. in 1997.

Correspondence

Sir Gerald Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills when the Secretary of State expects to answer the letter of 21 February from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton, about Mr. J. Horluck, transferred from the Department for Constitutional Affairs. [63929]

Maria Eagle: I responded to my right hon. Friend on 18 April.

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills when she will provide substantive replies to the letters of (a) 9 December, (b) 12 January and (c) 21 February on an NSPCC campaign from the hon. Member for Isle of Wight. [64405]

Maria Eagle [holding answer 18 April 2006]: I responded to the hon. Member on 19 April.

Early-years Education

Patrick Mercer: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many families in Nottinghamshire claimed free nursery education funding in (a) 2004–05 and (b) 2005–06. [65285]

Beverley Hughes: The information is not collected in the form requested.

Since April 2004 all three and four year olds have been entitled to a free, good quality, part-time early education place. The free entitlement consists of a minimum of 12. 5 hours per week for 38 weeks of the year and will be extended to 15 hours a week by 2010. By that time, parents who wish to do so will also be able to access the free entitlement flexibly across a minimum of three days.

Some local authorities may additionally offer subsidised childcare places but this information is not collected centrally.

Figures for January 2005 show that all four year old children receive some form of free entitlement. The figure for three year olds is 96 per cent. This covers all maintained, private, voluntary and independent providers and represents 535,100 three year olds and 568,300 four year olds. Provisional figures for January 2006 will be published in Statistical First Release 17/2006 "Provision for children under five years of age in England—January 2005 (provisional)" at 9:30 am on 27 April 2006, which will be made available on my Department's website www.dfes.gov.uk/rsgateway/.

The available information on the number of free nursery education places taken up by three and four year olds in Nottinghamshire local authority area is shown in the table. Sub-national figures for 2006 will be published in a Statistical First Release in August 2006.

The latest figures on early education places for three and four year olds in England were published in Statistical First Release 43/2005 "Provision for children under five years of age in England—January 2005 (final)" in September, which is available on my Department's website www.dfes.gov.uk/rsgateway/.

Special Needs Tribunals

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what recent estimate she has made of the average cost of special needs tribunal hearings to (a) parents and (b) local education authorities; [65291]

(2) if she will take steps to reduce the cost of special needs tribunals to parents. [65292]

Maria Eagle: No charge is made to parents who bring cases before the special educational needs and disability tribunal and certain necessary expenses are met by the tribunal.

Neither the Department nor the tribunal have made an estimate of the average cost of tribunal hearings to the respective parties.

Foreign Students

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) how many students from Iran have enrolled at universities in the UK in each year since 1997; and which subjects they have studied; [64895]

(2) pursuant to the answer of 17 January 2006, Official Report, column 1232W, on foreign students, what subjects were being studied by the 1,750 Iranian students attending universities in 2004–05; and how many were studying each subject. [64892]

Bill Rammell [holding answer 24 April 2006]: The latest information is given in the following tables. In respect of subjects relevant to weapons of mass destruction counter proliferation concern, the student voluntary vetting scheme has been in operation since 1994. Its guiding principle is to prevent academic contact and access to postgraduate studies that might be of significant value to countries of WMD proliferation concern.

[1] Covers postgraduate and undergraduate students. The figures are based on a snapshot count of students who were in attendance on 1 December in each year. The figure of 1,750 in the earlier answer (43079) was based on a whole year count of students, which counts students who were in attendance at any point in the academic year. It is not possible to give a time series back to 1997/98 using the whole year count for all years, so the snapshot count has been used for consistency. An additional column has been added to the table to show students split by subject in 2004/05 using the whole year count.

[2] In 2002/03, a new subject classification, and a new method of allocating students to subjects, were introduced, which means that the figures for the years up to 2001/02 are not directly comparable with those for later years. The new allocation method takes account of all subjects studied by the student rather than just their main subject, and the main effect of this is to decrease the number of students who are allocated to the "combined" category, and increase the number of students who are allocated to specific named subjects.

Learning and Skills Council

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the estimated cost is of potential redundancies resulting from the current restructuring of the Learning and Skills Council in (a) direct payments to individuals and (b) additional payments into the Principal Civil Service Pension scheme. [66743]

Bill Rammell: The Learning and Skills Council (LSC) is planning to introduce a radical new structure which will enable it to operate more effectively at all levels. As a result of these changes, it is expected that around 1,100 fewer posts will be needed once the new structure is in place. It is estimated that up to £40 million will be saved in management and running costs, which could be redirected to support front-line services.

The LSC is currently in the process of consulting staff and making appointments to posts in the new structure. The final number of staff who leave the LSC as a result of the restructuring will depend to a significant degree on individual circumstances. The LSC is looking for every opportunity to redeploy staff to other suitable positions and has expressed its commitment to maximise the appointments of existing employees and to minimise compulsory redundancies.

The cost of potential redundancies resulting from the restructuring of the LSC depends upon the individual circumstances of each person affected. The current estimate is that the cost of redundancies will be around £32 million.

Prison Education

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what plans she has to change the process whereby contracting arrangements in prisons education and vocational training are organised separately. [65562]

Phil Hope: Separate arrangements for delivering education and vocational training in prisons come to an end as the Learning and Skills Council becomes responsible for planning and funding offender learning. Education and vocational training is already joined up in the North East, North West and South West, and will become so across England from 31 July 2006.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) if she will provide the Learning and Skills Council with the necessary resources to apply its standard funding methodology so that prisons have access to all of the funding streams available to mainstream colleges;

(2) if she will ensure that the additional learning support funding approach is applied to prison education. [65564]

Phil Hope: The Learning and Skills Council is developing a funding methodology for offender learning that aims to replicate as closely as possible that in use for mainstream provision whilst taking into account the costs differences within prisons. The new funding arrangements will ensure that proper regard is paid to the additional learning support needs of offenders, and the Learning and Skills Council will be expected to fund offender learning from within its main Grant from the Department.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what funds she is providing to ensure that the specialist role of teaching staff in prisons is properly rewarded. [65566]

Phil Hope: There are no separately identifiable funds transferring to the Learning and Skills Council to reward the specialist role of teaching staff in prisons. However, as the Green Paper "Reducing Re-Offending Through Skills and Employment" noted, there are issues to be addressed concerning the offender learning work force. The full engagement of the Learning and Skills Council in offender learning, with the introduction of new providers delivering a new joined-up service is expected to have a significant impact on all aspects of the employment conditions of staff who deliver learning to prisoners integrating it with those of their mainstream colleagues.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what proportion of prisoners in 2005 had access to prison education at any one time. [65567]

Phil Hope: All prisoners had access to education in 2005, although not all took up that opportunity.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what proportion of prison education inspected by the Adult Learning Inspectorate in 2005 was judged to be inadequate. [65568]

Phil Hope: The proportion of prison education judged to be inadequate by the Adult Learning Inspectorate in 2004–05, as reported in the Annual Report of the Chief Inspector 2004–05 is 55 per cent. The proportion of prison education judged as inadequate on reinspection over the same period is given as 33 per cent.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what proportion of prisoners have access to the internet as part of their education or training (a) daily and (b) weekly. [65569]

Phil Hope: This information is not collected centrally.

For security reasons prisons have been cautious about opening up access to e-learning facilities, but the government are keen to make more progress in this area. We are actively investigating ways of providing secure access for prisoners who need it to support their learning activities.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what funding was allocated to vocational education provision in prisons in 2005–06; what funding has been allocated for 2006–07; and if she will make a statement. [65572]

Phil Hope: Funding for vocational training in prisons in 2005–06 was £8.8 million and is planned to be £8.8 million for 2006–07.

The new LSC-led delivery arrangements aim explicitly to join up the provision of 'education' and Vocational training in prisons, introducing a seamless service that meets holistically the offender's assessed individual learning needs. In many cases, "Skills for Life" will be embedded in work related learning. In this second year of transition from the old arrangements to the new it is possible to identify separately the funding for vocational training, but that is unlikely to be possible for future years.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what steps she has taken to ensure that closer links are forged between prisons and further education colleges, universities and employers. [65574]

Phil Hope: The new arrangements for Offenders Learning and Skills Service (OLASS) ensures that better links are forged between prisons, further education colleges, universities and employers. OLASS'S approach involves development of different ways of working through new relationships with providers. Regional Partnership Boards provide governance to OLASS and these include representatives from all key stakeholders.

Additionally, we have announced in the December 2005 Green Paper "Reducing Re-Offending Through Skills and Employment" our intention to consult on piloting on a new model for delivery—the "Offender Learning Campus"—to develop new centres of excellence and better links with mainstream education and training, including higher education.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will undertake a review of the different charities working in the prison education sector with a view to identifying the most successful for national recognition, funding and support. [65577]

Fiona Mactaggart: I have been asked to reply.

A recent survey was conducted by the Voluntary Sector Unit of the National Offender Management Unit. This did not focus specifically on organisations engaged in delivering education but these were included among those delivering employment, training and education (ETE). This shows that as of February 2006 there were 583 organisations delivering ETE across the prison and probation services, of which 450 were working with prisons.

Most of these organisations are small and work at a very local level. Funding is already provided to a number of organisations through grants and contracts and it is anticipated that the introduction of full commissioning in NOMS will increase the range of opportunities available to the voluntary and community sector. There are already established recognition schemes such as the Butler Trust which has included awards to organisations providing education services to prisons.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many juvenile prison establishments meet the Youth Justice Board target of 30 hours per week in education and training. [65583]

Fiona Mactaggart: I have been asked to reply.

The Youth Justice Board (YJB) set the young people's secure estate a national average of 25 hours a week education and training provision, rising to 30 when resources become available. Between April 2005 and March 2006, eight young offender institutions (YOI) met the national average and eight did not.

In the 2005–08 service level agreement between the YJB and the Prison Service, each YOI was set an agreed target for the provision of education and training. Between April 2005 and March 2006, five YOIs met their individual target and 11 did not.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the expenditure per head on education in juvenile young offender institutions was in (a) 2001–02, (b) 2002–03, (c) 2003–04, (d) 2004–05 and (e) 2005–06; and what the planned figure is for 2006–07. [65584]

Phil Hope: The expenditure per head on education in juvenile young offender institutions is set out in the following table:

	Expenditure per head (£)
2003–04	6,363
2004–05	7,272
2005–06	8,181

Expenditure in 2001–02 and 2002–03 is not available.

The Department for Education and Skills budget transfer to the Youth Justice Board for 2006–07 has not yet been finally agreed: an estimate of planned expenditure per head on education in juvenile young offender institutions for 2006–07 is not yet available.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what progress has been made in delivering on the commitment to implement a system of individual learning plans for prisoners linked to sentence plans; [65799]

(2) if she will make a statement on progress on introducing a learner-centred system of prison education. [65802]

Phil Hope: The Learning and Skills Council took responsibility for offenders' learning and skills in three development regions (North West, North East and South West) from 1 August 2005, as part of the new Offenders Learning and Skills Service (OLASS). These arrangements will be put in place in the remaining six English regions from 31 July 2006. Under the new Offenders Learning and Skills Service planned and funded by the LSC, contracted providers will be required to assess individual learners' needs, develop a learning plan, and provide the tailored support which addresses these needs.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what research has been undertaken by her Department to identify what type of education and training provision will have the greatest impact on meeting the individual learning needs of prisoners and providing them with real alternatives to crime on release. [65804]

Phil Hope: We recently commissioned a systematic review of the empirical evidence into interventions that promote employment for offenders last year. This showed that employment focused interventions, such as vocational training, can make a significant difference to the employment rates of offenders.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much funding would be necessary for the Learning and Skills Council to bridge the gap between education inside and outside prisons; and if she will make a statement. [65561]

Phil Hope: The Government's plans for ensuring continuity of provision of learning and skills for released prisoners were set out in the Green Paper 'Reducing Re-Offending Through Skills and Employment', published in December 2005.

No separate estimate has been made of the costs of bridging the gap between education inside and outside prisons. The new providers being appointed by the Learning and Skills Council are required contractually to deliver the requirements of the Offender's Learning Journey, the document that specifies the service to the offender. That document includes a requirement on the provider to join up learning commenced in custody with that available in the community. The costs of bridging that gap are straightforwardly part of the contract price.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

Persistent Offenders

23. Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Solicitor-General how persistent and prolific offenders are treated differently from other offenders by the Crown Prosecution Service. [66199]

The Solicitor-General: Persistent and prolific offenders receive a 'Premium Service' from the CPS and other Criminal Justice agencies. CPS prosecutors work with the courts to give these cases priority, and review the progress of these cases with local police crime managers. When presenting these cases CPS prosecutors ensure the full extent of the criminal activity is brought to the attention of the court.

Fraud Review

24. Miss McIntosh: To ask the Solicitor-General pursuant to the written statement of 22 March 2006, Official Report, column 26WS, on the fraud review, what representations he has received on the interim report on fraud. [66201]

The Solicitor-General: The interim report of the Fraud Review was published on 22 March. Since then the Fraud Review team have received representations from the Association of Payment and Clearance Services (APACS) and the Association of British Insurers (ABI).

My right hon. Friend the Attorney-General has also held a seminar involving representatives of the public sector, the legal professions and the private sector to discuss the report's emerging findings.

Victims of Crime

25. Mr. Dodds: To ask the Solicitor-General what steps the Government are taking to ensure victims of crime are kept informed of the progress of prosecutions of defendants accused of crimes against them. [66202]

The Solicitor-General: In England and Wales, joint CPS/police witness care units must notify victims of all court hearings in their cases and if convicted any sentence received. The Prosecutor's Pledge provides that a prosecutor should inform a victim where a charge is dropped or substantially altered and, where practical, seek the views of the victim when considering the acceptability of a plea.

In Northern Ireland, the victim is notified in all cases when a decision has been made and what that decision is and given contact details from which further information may be obtained. A dedicated section of specially trained staff provide an information line to assist with any queries a victim may have, and, if the victim requests will refer them to specialist support agencies, such as Victim Support. In all regions, PPSNI work closely with police Family Liaison Officers.

Crown Prosecution Service

Mr. Amess: To ask the Solicitor-General what action can be taken against those responsible in cases where the Crown Prosecution Service makes a mistake in not laying charges within a given time period. [65662]

The Solicitor-General: The Code for Crown Prosecutors gives guidance on the general principles to be applied when making decisions about prosecutions. In addition, the Crown Prosecution Service (CPS) has a code of conduct, job descriptions and person specifications so that managers and staff know what is expected of them.

In the event of an apparent failure to deliver to the necessary standard, it is for line management to identify the causes and to take action, whether on grounds of capability or conduct, using the appropriate employment procedures.

Ministerial Meetings

Richard Burden: To ask the Solicitor-General what plans the Attorney-General has to meet the family of (a) Tom Hurndall and (b) James Miller. [66029]

The Solicitor-General: The Attorney-General has agreed to meet with the families of Tom Hurndall and James Miller on Friday 5 May 2006.

Police Forces (Reorganisation)

Mr. Bone: To ask the Solicitor-General what assessment he has made of the potential impact on the Crown Prosecution Service of the proposed reorganisation of police forces. [66428]

The Solicitor-General: The Crown Prosecution Service (CPS) will seek to reorganise on a similar basis to the police. Organisational alignments are proving successful on the current boundaries and the CPS would seek to maintain their relationship.

DEFENCE

A400M

Mr. Ellwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much has been spent to date on the A400M future large aircraft; and when it is likely to enter service. [65218]

Mr. Ingram: The amount spent to date for the A400M programme at the end of March 2006 was £1[illegible] million and the In Service Date (defined as acceptance into service of the 7th aircraft) is 2011.

Afghanistan

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of support by the Pakistan government for insurgents in Helmand province in Afghanistan. [65956]

John Reid: The Government have no credible evidence of direct support by the Pakistani Government to insurgents in Helmand province. President Musharraf has made extensive efforts to improve the rule of law in border areas, and we continue to work with Pakistan to ensure that appropriate action is taken to prevent the border area from providing a safe haven for enemy forces.

African Union

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will increase the number of British military advisors to the African Union; and if he will help with strategic transport, including helicopters, in Sudan. [66715]

Mr. Ingram: The Ministry of Defence is making an important and proportionate contribution in support of the African Union Mission in Sudan (AMIS). We are providing one staff officer adviser to the Joint Logistics Operations Centre in El Fashir, and will deploy a second officer to the Joint Operations Centre (JOC) when it is established; both under an European Union umbrella. UK personnel have also deployed from within the NATO Command Structure to help co-ordinate the lift of national contingents, as liaison staff at the African Union (AU) headquarters in Addis Ababa and to provide capacity building training for AMIS staff. Further NATO-hatted UK staffs are likely to be deployed in the event that the AU requests additional NATO support. In addition, one UK officer is currently attached to the UN Department for Peacekeeping Operations to help develop UN plans for Darfur. He may likewise deploy to the JOC in an advisory capacity.

The requirement for helicopters has, to date, been met by Canada, while HMG has made a substantial contribution to strategic lift through payment for the movement of three Nigerian battalions. Any further requests from the AU for additional support will be considered on a case-by-case basis.

Aircraft

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the timescale is for the (a) Future Strategic Tanker Aircraft and (b) Nimrod MRA4 programmes; and if he will make a statement. [64795]

Mr. Ingram: The timescales for these projects will not be set until they have received Main Gate approval.

BAE Systems

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether his Department provided a Crown guarantee to the BAE Systems pension scheme. [66539]

Mr. Touhig: I can confirm that the Ministry of Defence has not given a Crown guarantee to the BAE Systems pension scheme.

Combined Cadet Force

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what progress has been made in implementing the plans announced by the Chancellor of the Exchequer in February 2006 to create branches of the Combined Cadet Force in state schools. [65916]

Mr. Touhig: There continues to be discussions between the Ministry of Defence and officials at the Department for Education and Skills and the Treasury to ensure the opportunities offered by the Combined Cadet Force (CCF) will be available to the widest possible audience. Progress continues to be made along the lines outlined to the House on 27 March 2006, Official Report, column 532.

In addition, the list of candidate schools continues to be developed with the assistance of officials at the Department for Education and Skills.

Combined Services Detailed Interrogation Centres

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent representations he has received about the Combined Services Detailed Interrogation Centres; what response he has made; and if he will make a statement. [65400]

Mr. Ingram: No representations (as distinct from questions) are known to have been made directly to the Ministry of Defence, but to say this with certainty would require a trawl throughout MOD records which could be undertaken only at disproportionate costs.

Diplomatic Contacts

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions British Embassy staff in Washington have had with members of the US Congress on defence technology and related matters in the last 12 months; and if he will make a statement. [64607]

John Reid: British embassy staff in Washington DC regularly meet with members of the US Congress and their professional staff in a wide variety of fora, both formal and informal. Their discussions range across the full spectrum of issues of bilateral interest, including discussions about defence technology and related matters.

Eurofighter Typhoon

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Typhoon aircraft have been delivered to the RAF; how many are currently unserviceable; and if he will list the length of time for which each unserviceable Typhoon aircraft has been in that condition. [65917]

Mr. Ingram: 26 Typhoon aircraft have been delivered to the RAF to date. In common with all aircraft types, the availability of Typhoon varies from day-to-day to take into account planned maintenance and issues arising during flying sorties. As an example, on 25 April 2006 two of the 26 aircraft were out of service as part of a pre-planned retrofit programme being conducted at BAES Warton (seven and 77 days), and one aircraft was undergoing routine technical maintenance (14 days) for which a near-term solution is in prospect. A further three aircraft were awaiting longer-term logistic support solutions that are being addressed as the fleet grows incrementally (30 days, 57 days and 12 months). Finally, one aircraft is awaiting repair following a controlled emergency landing in January 2006.

Ex-Servicemen

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what estimate he has made of the number of surviving ex-servicemen who served at any stage during 1939–1945. [65197]

Mr. Touhig: We do not keep statistics on the total numbers of surviving ex-servicemen who served during 1939 to 1945 and we have not made an estimate. We estimate that there are some 70,000 war pensions in payment to those whose injuries or illnesses relate to their service in world war II though the total number of survivors will be very much larger than this.

Helicopters

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Royal Navy (a) Sea King, (b) Merlin and (c) Lynx helicopters are (i) in service and (ii) fit for purpose. [65449]

Mr. Ingram: The latest information records the number of Royal Navy helicopters in service and fit for purpose as:

	In service	Fit for purpose
Sea King (Mk 4, Mk 5, MK 7)	51	27
Merlin (Mk 1)	24	11
Lynx (Mk 3, Mk 8)	47	23

In service aircraft are those located at front line and training units. "Fit for Purpose" describes an aircraft that is available, reliable, airworthy and capable of carrying out its planned mission on a given date. The numbers of fit for purpose aircraft can vary, depending on operational requirements.

Mr. Arbuthnot: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the underlying cause was of the action for which his Department received damages from Textron Lycoming in respect of damage caused to an RAF Chinook HC Mk1 aircraft during development testing of a pre-production Full Authority Digital Electronic Control system; and whether this underlying cause was removed from the system fitted to Chinook HC2 ZD576. [65736]

Mr. Ingram: It is not immediately possible to provide the information requested and archive records will need to be researched. I will write to the hon. Member as soon as further information is available.

Mr. Arbuthnot: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the differences to the FADEC system between the pre-production system and the system installed in Chinook HC2 ZD576. [65737]

Mr. Ingram: It is not immediately possible to list the differences to the FADEC system between the pre-production system and the system installed in Chinook HC2 ZD576. No records exist in the MOD. The original equipment manufacturer, Honeywell, have been asked to supply the information. I will write to the right hon. Member when the information is available.

Mr. Arbuthnot: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what evidence he has received to discount an uncommanded flying control movement of 12 degree nose down pitch by RAF Chinook ZD576 prior to impact into the Mull. [65738]

Mr. Ingram: There is no factual evidence to either support or discount an uncommanded flying control movement of 12 degree nose pitch down by RAF Chinook ZD576 prior to impact into the Mull of Kintyre. There is, however, the physical evidence at the crash site and wreckage characteristics which indicate that the aircraft first impacted the hillside while climbing at relatively high forward ground speed in an erect, steeply nose up attitude. The evidence for this is the alignment of the aircraft controls. The collective control, which controls power was set at or near full travel at impact, with the cyclic control, which controls pitch or elevation, at 25 per cent. aft and 23 per cent. left of neutral, all indicating a demand for high power and nose-up attitude prior to impact.

Mr. Arbuthnot: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the minimum height is at which autorotation is considered safe for a Chinook HC2; and whether this figure differs from the safe autorotation height for a Chinook with a weight limitation of 18,000 kg. [65739]

Mr. Ingram: Autorotation is defined as the unpowered rotation of helicopter rotor blades that may occur during engine failure, thereby allowing the aircraft to effectively 'glide' to a safe landing. The minimum height at which autorotation is considered safe for a Chinook HC2 is 100 ft above ground level. Weight has no significant impact on autorotation flight performance. However, practice autorotations for Chinooks are not allowed to be carried out above the regulatory maximum weight of 20,000 kg.

HMS Gannet

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the future use of the helicopter search and rescue service HMS Gannet. [66372]

Mr. Ingram: The Ministry of Defence provides a 24-hour search and rescue (SAR) service at HMS Gannet. The MOD and the Maritime and Coastguard Agency (MCA) are currently assessing options for the provision of a replacement UK SAR service when the existing helicopters, including those at Gannet, come to the end of their useful lives around the middle of the next decade. An announcement setting out further details on the way ahead will be made in due course.

Human Centrifuge

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he plans to replace the human centrifuge operated by QinetiQ at Farnborough when its scheduled out of service date is reached in 2008. [63807]

Mr. Ingram: The Ministry of Defence is committed to ensuring that the United Kingdom has ongoing access to the required capability and will be reviewing its options prior to 2008 when the human centrifuge at Farnborough reaches its out of service date.

However, the centrifuge is currently owned and operated by QinetiQ. All questions regarding the current facility should be referred to:

The Chief Executive
QinetiQ Limited
Cody Technology Park
Al Building
Ively Road
Farnborough
Hampshire
GU14 0LX

Iraq

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) serious injuries and (b) fatalities have been sustained by members of the Iraq security forces since March 2003. [61846]

John Reid: This is a matter for the Iraqi Government.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the capacity of the Iraqi regime under Saddam Hussein to have produced a dirty bomb; and if he will make a statement. [65190]

John Reid: In 1987 the Iraqi regime carried out tests to assess the capability of disseminating radioactive material in bombs dropped from aircraft for use possibly as a radiological device (dirty bomb). The project was abandoned and there is no evidence of any subsequent attempts to develop radiological devices.

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether all British service personnel injured in Iraq are being screened for the possibility of a traumatic brain injury. [65915]

John Reid: All service patients who are injured in Iraq and who have symptoms and signs of brain injury are treated appropriately. However, personnel are not automatically screened for brain injury, as screening patients whose injury would have no impact on their brain function (e.g. a sprained ankle) would be clinically inappropriate.

Joint Strike Fighter

Mr. Bone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he has had discussions with his US counterparts on software source code access in relation to the Joint Strike Fighter; and if he will make a statement. [65418]

Mr. Ingram: I refer the hon. Member to my answer of 30 March 2006, Official Report, column 1154W to my hon. Friend the Member for North Durham (Mr. Jones). Regular discussions take place at all levels with the US Administration on all aspects of the joint strike fighter programme. I can assure my hon. Friend that the UK has identified in detail the specific aspects of the Government-to-Government technology transfers that are necessary to ensure operational sovereignty of the Joint Strike Fighter when operated by the RAF and RN. HMG has been similarly clear regarding the absolute necessity of receiving this information.

Mr. Bone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether the UK has the capability to develop a new weapon for the Joint Strike Fighter aircraft separately from the USA; and whether this would be possible without the software access code. [65420]

Mr. Ingram: The ability to upgrade our Joint Strike Fighters through life to meet the needs of our armed forces is an important part of ensuring operational sovereignty in their use. We have made it clear to the United States that to proceed with the purchase of the aircraft we require access to the information necessary for operational sovereignty, and we remain optimistic that this will be achieved.

Campaign Medals

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list campaigns since 1945 for which Naval General Service Medals and/or clasp have been awarded for which the qualifying period would be fulfilled by (a) an aggregated and (b) a continuous period of service in theatre. [65387]

Mr. Touhig: Since 1945 there have been a total of 12 campaigns for which the Naval General Service Medal and/or clasp have been awarded.

The following campaigns required aggregated service.

Campaign	Number of qualifying days	From	To
South East Asia	28	3 September 1945	30 November 1946
Minesweeping	180	3 September 1945	30 September 1951
Bomb and Mine Clearance	180	3 September 1945	30 September 1953
Cyprus	120	1 April 1955	18 April 1959
Bomb and Mine Clearance Mediterranean Clasp	180	1 January 1955	31 December 1960
Arabian Peninsula	30	1 January 1957	30 June 1960

The following campaigns required continuous service.

Campaign	Number of qualifying days	From	To
Palestine	28 afloat	27 September 1945	30 June 1948
Yangtze	1	20 April 1949	20 April 1949
HMS Consort		21 April 1949	21 April 1949
HMS London		21 April 1949	21 April 1949
HMS Black Swan		21 April 1949	31 July 1949
HMS Amethyst		16 June 1948	31 July 1960
Malaya	28 afloat, 1 ashore	16 October 1951	19 October 1954
Suez	30	31 October 1956	22 December 1956
Near East	1	8 December 1962	23 December 1962
Brunei	1

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence for what reason no naval representative was included on Lord Guthrie's sub-committee on the award of service medals and clasps in respect of the Canal Zone. [65388]

Mr. Touhig: The range of expertise encompassed by the membership of the sub-Committee of the Committee on the Grant of Honours Decorations and Medals, which was established in November 2002 to discuss the case for a medal for service in the Suez Canal Zone between 1951 and 1954, was extensive and comprehensive. The Chairman was a former Chief of the Defence Staff and as such represented all three Services.

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether Lord Guthrie's sub-committee on the awarding of medals and clasps for service in the Canal Zone referred to a requirement that the qualifying 30-day period for naval personnel had to be continuous. [65390]

Mr. Touhig: The eligibility criteria for the awarding of medals and clasps for service in the Canal Zone reflect the discussions of Lord Guthrie's sub-committee of the Committee on the Grant of Honours Decorations and Medals, which deliberated the matter in November 2002. This includes the requirement that the qualifying 30-day period for the medal had to be continuous rather than aggregated service.

Mental Health Services

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what (a) charities and (b) other organisations receive funding from his Department for the treatment of veterans with mental health conditions; and how much each received in each of the past five years. [55582]

Mr. Touhig: In relation to income received by the Ex-Services Mental Welfare Society ("Combat Stress") by way of expenses defrayed under article 26 of the Naval, Military and Air Forces Etc. (Disablement and Death) Service Pensions Order 1983, I refer the hon. Member to my answer of 9 March 2006, Official Report, column 1191W, to the hon. Member for Putney (Ms Greening). Costs may be defrayed under article 26 in respect of other veterans with mental health conditions and in relation to other providers of treatment, but such expenditure is not separately identifiable.

In addition the Ministry of Defence also provides grant-in-aid for the Royal Hospital Chelsea, which provides a range of services, including some mental health care, to elderly veterans. However it is not possible to break this down to separate out costs for treatment.

Missile Defence

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to the answer of 30 March 2006, Official Report, column 1154W, on missile defence, what the conclusions were of the NATO Feasibility Study into options for Alliance missile defence. [65955]

John Reid: The NATO Missile Defence Feasibility Study is classified and the disclosure of its conclusions would, or would be likely to, prejudice the capability, effectiveness or security of UK armed forces or our Allies. A number of options are considered in the study, based on a range of assumptions and the expected performance of potential Alliance missile defence capabilities. NATO will now review those assumptions and decide how to take the work forward.

Nuclear Testing

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the risks associated with the use of DDT in nuclear testing conducted by his Department. [64797]

Mr. Touhig: The UK atmospheric nuclear tests took place in areas with high levels of tropical insect pests which presented a risk to health. To minimise this, aerial spraying of DDT was carried out. There is no reliable evidence that DDT causes adverse health effects in man and the Ministry of Defence has not undertaken any specific assessment of the risks associated with the use of DDT in nuclear testing.

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment has been made by his Department of the long-term effect on (a) servicemen and (b) their offspring of exposure to radiation in connection with nuclear testing on Christmas Island in 1958. [64605]

Mr. Touhig: In 1983, the Ministry of Defence commissioned from the National Radiological Protection Board and Imperial Cancer Research Fund an independent epidemiological study of participants of the UK atmospheric nuclear tests, including those present at the 1958 Christmas Island tests. The study compared a representative group of over 20,000 participants with a control group of men who did not take part in the tests but were otherwise similar. Analyses of mortality and cancer incidence in the groups have been published in the peer-reviewed mainstream medical literature in 1988, 1993 and 2003. These studies showed that overall mortality and cancer incidence was similar both in the participant and control groups and lower than the UK national rate, The 1988 study suggested a slightly raised level of multiple myeloma in participants compared with controls. However, this was not confirmed in the 1993 and 2003 reports and is likely to have been due to chance. There does appear, from all three studies, to be a small increased risk of leukaemias in test participants, apart from chronic lymphatic leukaemia, especially in the early years after the test. The MOD has not formally assessed the health of offspring of UK atmospheric nuclear test participants and is unaware of any such studies in the international published peer-reviewed medical or scientific literature.

Nuclear Weapons

Joan Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to debate studies into the costs of replacement of Trident. [65319]

John Reid: The issue of the possible replacement of Trident has been raised on numerous occasions in the House of Commons, most recently during Defence questions on 27 February 2006, Official Report, column 15. I have also discussed this issue with the House of Commons Defence Committee on 1 November 2005.

This work is at an extremely early stage and Ministers have not yet engaged in the process in any detail, nor have they made any decisions. There will therefore be many further opportunities for Members of Parliament to debate this issue, but it is too early to speculate on the possible costs of any replacement programme.

Official Travel

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what percentage of flights out of RAF Northolt was accounted for by (a) Ministers and (b) officials in each of the last three years. [64966]

Mr. Touhig: In 2005, 11.7 per cent. of 32 (The Royal) Squadron flights out of RAF Northolt carried Ministers.

The number of 32 (The Royal) Squadron flights out of RAF Northolt that carried officials is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Pension Schemes

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list those companies to which his Department has given a Crown guarantee in relation to their pension schemes. [66540]

Mr. Touhig: I can advise that the Ministry of Defence has not given a Crown guarantee to any companies in relation to their pension schemes.

Queen's Flight

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what provision he makes for airport landing charges in the fees charged to other Government Departments for use of the Queen's Flight. [64791]

Mr. Ingram: Other Government Departments are charged an hourly rate for use of 32 (The Royal) Squadron aircraft. This hourly rate includes an element covering handling and landing charges.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what adjustment he has made to the price charged to other Government Departments for the use of the Queen's Flight as a result of recent increases in fuel costs. [64798]

Mr. Ingram: The charges to other Government Departments for use of 32 (The Royal) Squadron aircraft are kept under regular review. The review earlier this month confirmed that existing charges (introduced in August 2005) remain appropriate.

RAF Aircraft Servicing

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many times RAF (a) Harrier GR7 and (b) Jaguar aircraft were cannibalised during (i) 2003, (ii) 2004 and (iii) 2005. [65445]

Mr. Ingram: The removal of serviceable parts from one aircraft for use on another is a short term, temporary measure to ensure that the maximum number of aircraft are available to the front line.

The number of these instances over the last three years is given in the following table.

Number of cannibalisations

	Aircraft type
	Harrier GR[1]	Jaguar
2003	1,119	592
2004	958	714
2005	530	400

[1] These figures include cannibalisations in respect of Harrier GR7 and G7a.

Shipbuilding

Mr. Kevan Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the implications for his Department of possible mergers of UK shipbuilding firms; and if he will make a statement. [62042]

Mr. Ingram: As we recognised in the Defence Industrial Strategy (DIS), the maritime industry in the United Kingdom is currently fragmented and inefficient. Different organisations undertake submarine and surface ship build and support, even though skills and facilities cross over in some areas.

We further recognised that Industrial restructuring and consolidation is a priority and fundamental to creating a viable and sustainable maritime industrial base; one that retains in the UK those technologies, infrastructure, skills, Intellectual Property and capacity needed to ensure appropriate sovereignty. The aim is to encourage greater efficiency and profitability within the industry, while maximising the opportunities for exports, in order to meet the anticipated demand for ensuring in future that the UK's armed forces are provided with the equipment they need, on time, and at best value for money.

Having stated the case for streamlining the business, it is not for Government to micromanage the industrial restructuring. However we recognise that as the predominant client we must be confident that consolidation will be beneficial to Ministry of Defence and industry. We expect to be consulted early and are likely to express preferences as any approaches emerge.

Given the MOD's substantial Warship build programme over the next decade, now is the time to address these issues to position the industry for a strong future in times when orders will be fewer.

Side Arms

Mr. Ellwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether the Army has plans to update the standard 9mm Browning side arm. [65380]

Mr. Ingram: There are currently no plans to update the 9mm pistol.

Mr. Ellwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to re-allocate the Sig Sauer P220 side arms that were recently replaced by Glock 17s; and if he will make a statement. [65766]

Mr. Ingram: Neither the Sig Sauer P220 nor the Glock 17 is in current service with the Ministry of Defence.

Undercover Agents

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what provision has been made by his Department for the permanent protection of current and former undercover agents in the Irish republican movements who were service personnel when engaged in this role; and what discussions have been held between his Department and other relevant Departments about the duty of care for present or former such undercover agents in the republican movement, in the event of their role being exposed. [64903]

Mr. Ingram: We do not comment on matters relating to intelligence because to do so would be to the detriment of national security and the safety of individuals.

TREASURY

Gross Debt

Adam Price: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether the Gross debt (Maastricht basis) shown in Table C23 of Budget 2006 (HC986) includes the capital debt component of private finance initiative and public-private partnership contracts. [65740]

Mr. Des Browne: General Government gross debt on a Maastricht basis (as forecast in Table C1 of Budget 2006) includes estimates for imputed liabilities for finance leases including those taken out under on balance sheet PFI contracts.

Business Rates

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many communication stations were registered for business rates by the Valuation Office Agency in England in each local authority area in 1998. [59126]

Mr. Woolas: I have been asked to reply.

I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 20 December 2005, Official Report, column 2836W, to the hon. Member for Meriden (Mrs. Spelman).

Community Shops

Angela Browning: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the impact on community shops of the abolition of 0 per cent. corporation tax on small businesses. [66399]

John Healey: The replacement of the starting and non-corporate distribution rates of corporation tax with a single banding for small companies set at the current small companies' rate will only impact on businesses and organisations within the charge to corporation tax and will not impact those operating in the self-employed form or not making profits. A full regulatory impact assessment can be found at: http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/ria/ria-corporation-tax.pdf

Where community shops operating within the charge to corporation tax donate all or part of their profits to community or other charities under Gift Aid, there will be no tax paid on the profits donated.

Council Tax

John Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the effect on pensioner poverty of the decision not to continue the annual council tax rebate for pensioners. [65624]

Mr. Timms: I have been asked to reply.

The payment of £200 to help households with someone aged 65 or over not in receipt of the guarantee element of pension credit to help with council tax bills was for last year only. Available data do not allow for a precise assessment of the impact on pensioners on low income of not making a similar payment in 2006–07.

Departmental Websites

Norman Baker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list (a) the websites operated by his Department and (b) the reports placed on the internet in March 2006, indicating in each case whether paper copies were also made available. [65199]

John Healey: The information is as follows.

Government Spending

Adam Price: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the total capital expenditure was in England on (a) education and skills and (b) health in each year since 1999–2000. [65732]

Mr. Des Browne: As set out in Public Expenditure Statistical Analyses 2005 http://www.hm-treasury.gov.uk/media/172/47/pesa2005_complete.pdf the total capital expenditure in England on (a) education and skills and (b) health since 1999–2000 is presented in the following table.

Accruals, £ million

	Education and Training	Health
1999–2000	1,534	917
2000–01	1,992	1,255
2001–02	2,637	1,738
2002–03	3,128	2,091
2003–04	3,575	2,638
2004–05	4,321	3,575

The capital expenditure figure for 2005–06 will be published in Public Expenditure Statistical Analyses 2006 (for publication in May 2006).

Laundered Diesel (Northern Ireland)

David Simpson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many motorists in Northern Ireland have been detected driving with laundered diesel fuel in each of the last five years. [65353]

John Healey: HM Revenue and Customs carry out tests to detect statutory markers in rebated fuel and, where these are detected in the running tank of a road vehicle, action is taken. Tests do not establish with any certainty whether or not fuel in a vehicle's engine is laundered.

Medical Staff (Pay)

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he expects to announce the pay increases to be awarded to (a) doctors and dentists and (b) nurses in the 2006–07 financial year; and whether he intends these pay increases to be phased over the course of the financial year. [62723]

Mr. Byrne: I have been asked to reply.

I refer the hon. Member to the written ministerial statement the Secretary of State for Health gave on 30 March 2006, Official Report, column 89WS.

Ministerial Meetings

Jo Swinson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer on what dates in the last year Ministers in his Department have held meetings with Ministers in the Scottish Executive. [66753]

Mr. Des Browne: Treasury Ministers meet Scottish Ministers from time-to-time to discuss matters of common interest.

Pension Liabilities

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the liabilities are of each company issued with Crown guarantees in respect of their pension fund deficits; and if he will make a statement. [66351]

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what contingent financial liabilities have been entered into by the Government in respect of employees pension funds of companies privatised since 1980; and what his Department's estimate is of its liabilities in relation to (a) British Telecom, (b) the former British Rail, (c) National Freight Corporation and (d) the former National Coal Board; [66357]

(2) what estimate he has made of the contingent public sector liabilities in respect of employee pensions of companies in which the Government retain a shareholding; and what the liabilities are for each company. [66358]

Mr. Des Browne: Where a Department retain a shareholding in a company or where a Department has provided a guarantee of any pension scheme, it is a matter for that Department to report any obligations created by the guarantee to Parliament in accordance with the requirements of Government accounting and in its departmental resource accounts in accordance with the Government's financial reporting manual, which complies with generally accepted accounting practice.

It is a matter for that Department to report any obligation created by that shareholding.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the public sector pension liabilities are in respect of (a) the Civil Service, (b) local government, (c) the NHS, (d) other government agencies, (e) companies in which the Government have a majority or minority shareholding and (f) privatised entities which were formerly state-owned. [66355]

Mr. Des Browne: The information is not available in the form requested. A technical note detailing the unfunded public service pension liability was placed in the House of Commons Library pursuant to my reply to the hon. Member for Ludlow (Mr. Dunne) of 2 March 2006, Official Report, column 388, and this covers the liability position of all the unfunded public service pension schemes including the Principal Civil Service Pension Scheme and the NHS Pension Scheme. In addition the liabilities of the funded Local Government Pension Scheme at the last reporting date were estimated to be approximately £130 billion with assets of £100 billion.

Information on the pension liabilities of companies in which the Government has a minority or majority shareholding and those of private sector bodies which were formerly state owned is not held centrally but is publicly available in the relevant accounts.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what account is taken of the contingent public sector liabilities in respect of employee pension funds of privatised companies in his Department's estimate of public sector debt liabilities. [66356]

Mr. Des Browne: The UK Government are one of the few in the world who has a statutory obligation to report liabilities in the same way as private companies, and whose accounts are subject to independent audit.

Contingent liabilities are reported in government accounts and to Parliament. They are defined as being contingent on an event, or a set of events, whose likelihood of occurring has been judged as remote. They are not, by their definition, actual liabilities, and so it would not be right to include them in measures of Public Sector Net Debt.

Road Fuel Prices

Mr. Amess: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what assessment he (a) has made and (b) plans to make of the effect of an increase in the price of (i) petrol and (ii) diesel on the UK economy; and if he will make a statement; [65254]

(2) what assessment he (a) has made and (b) plans to make of the long-term consequences for (i) employment and (ii) the British economy of (A) continued increases in the price of petroleum and (B) a decrease in the output of oil; and if he will make a statement; [65256]

(3) what assessment he has made of the impact on the UK economy if the price of (a) petrol and (b) diesel were to be reduced by (i) five pence and (ii) 10 pence per litre; and if he will make a statement. [65257]

John Healey: The Government continually monitor developments in petroleum markets. The effects of higher oil and fuel prices on the UK economy were discussed on Box 2.5, p.26 of pre-Budget report 2005 (Cm 6701) and in Chapter B of Budget 2006 (HC 968).

Mr. Amess: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent representations he has made to Arab States about (a) an increase in the price of petroleum and (b) a decrease in the output of oil; what response he has received; and if he will make a statement. [65255]

John Healey: The Chancellor engages in dialogue with the representatives of Arab States—and other oil producers—on a regular basis, both bilaterally and through multilateral fora. These conversations cover a range of issues of common interest and therefore include oil market developments. The Chancellor has repeatedly encouraged major oil producers to increase their investment throughout the oil supply chain in order to ensure that supply growth keeps pace with the growth in demand.

Scottish Executive

Jo Swinson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what criteria are applied to requests from (a) the Scottish Executive to draw down money from the account held by the Treasury on its behalf and (b) Government Departments to draw down underspends; [66752]

(2) what the balance is on the account held by his Department on behalf of the Scottish Executive. [66754]

Mr. Des Browne: Details of the end-year flexibility scheme are set out in the Public Expenditure Out-turn White Paper 2005–06 (Cm 6639). Table 6 of that publication details the end-year flexibility entitlements for all Departments.

Jo Swinson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what funds were (a) requested to be drawn down and (b) drawn down from the savings account held by his Department on behalf of the Scottish Executive in each year from 2000–01 to 2005–06. [66757]

Mr. Des Browne: Details of the agreed draw-down of end-year flexibility are set out in the relevant supplementary estimates and accompanying ministerial written statements.

Self-invested Personal Pensions

Mr. Bone: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the (a) role and (b) regulation of independent trustees for self-invested personal pensions. [65422]

Mr. Des Browne: It is common for trustees to administer personal pension schemes. Under current legislation trustees are often exempt from requiring FSA authorisation. Many self-invested personal pensions (SIPP) providers use this route for exemption.

Self-Invested Personal Pensions (SIPP) operators will, from April 2007, need to be authorised by the FSA with all the protection for consumers that this entails. That includes any trustees who are operating the scheme unless they are not doing so by way of business or are just 'bare trustees'. The FSA is currently consulting industry on the detailed implementation of how this relates to trustees.

Smuggling (Northern Ireland)

David Simpson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many Customs and Excise officers were assigned to tackling smuggling activities in Northern Ireland in the 2005–06 financial year; and how many man hours this represents. [65157]

John Healey: The staff employed by HM Revenue and Customs in Northern Ireland who contribute to anti-smuggling activities was 159 in 2004–05. They are deployed across a range of activities that contribute to, but are not solely allocated to, our anti-smuggling efforts; including investigation, detection and intelligence. As a consequence we are unable to attribute a single staffing figure to anti-smuggling work.

All staffing figures for 2005–06 are not yet available but will be published in the HMRC Annual Report 2005–06.

David Simpson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how many and what percentage of detections of smuggling in Northern Ireland were made by HM Revenue and Customs in the last period for which figures are available; [65158]

(2) how many and what percentage of detections of smuggling in Northern Ireland were made by the Police Service of Northern Ireland in the last period for which figures are available. [65148]

John Healey: HM Revenue and Customs work closely with many other agencies to tackle smuggling, including the Police Service of Northern Ireland.

The number of detections of smuggled goods in the financial year 2004–05 in Northern Ireland was 1,939 but it is not possible to distinguish what number, if any, were the result of working with any other agency, or referred to HMRC by that agency.

Stillbirths

David Simpson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many babies have been stillborn in each of the regions of the UK in each of the last five years; and what percentage of the total number of births this represented in each case. [65413]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Jill Matheson, dated 27 April 2006:

The National Statistician has been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking how many babies have been stillborn in each of the regions of the UK in each of the last five years; and what percentage of the total number of births this represented in each case. I am replying in her absence. (65413)

Valuation Office Agency

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the answer of 25 January 2006, Official Report, column 222W, to the hon. Member for Meriden (Mrs. Spelman), on the Valuation Office Agency, whether Tenet software is used for council tax valuation purposes; and if he will list the products purchased from Tenet. [49738]

Mr. Woolas: I have been asked to reply.

Products purchased from Tenet IT Mapping Limited are (i) a digital mapping system, available to all Valuation Office Agency staff and (ii) a locality delineation tool, available to a limited number of VGA users.

The digital mapping system supports work on the current (1993) council tax lists as it allows staff to identify the location of individual properties (especially in rural locations).

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the answer of 7 March 2006, Official Report, columns 1308–9W, on the Valuation Office Agency, what the purpose is of the electronic image management application; and whether it stores images of domestic properties for council tax valuation purposes. [59172]

Mr. Woolas: I have been asked to reply.

The Valuation Office Agency (VOA) has a digital photography application, which links photographs of properties and land to addresses held in its property database. The photographs are of both domestic and non domestic properties as well as land. They are used to assist the VOA in carrying out its functions, including those for council tax and non domestic rating. Images, including those of domestic properties, are stored in a secure database.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what role the OASIS PC market applications plays in the Valuation Office Agency's council tax valuations. [60135]

Mr. Woolas: I have been asked to reply.

The OASIS PC market application plays no role in undertaking council tax valuations.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will place in the Library copies of the minutes of the Valuation Office Agency Programme Board that was preparing for the council tax revaluation in England. [60192]

Mr. Woolas: I have been asked to reply.

The minutes of the Valuation Office Agency's Programme Board for the (now postponed) council tax revaluation in England contain commercially sensitive information and information linked to the formulation and development of Government policy.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Child Support

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when he will answer Question 52727 tabled on 14 February 2006 by the right hon. Member for Birkenhead on child maintenance. [62038]

Mr. Plaskitt: I replied to my right hon. Friend on 19 April 2006.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what his estimate is of the real costs of running the Child Support Agency for each year from 1997–98 to 2007–08, using 2004–05 prices; and if he will make a statement. [62036]

Mr. Plaskitt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Hilary Reynolds:

In reply to your Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive. As the Chief Executive is unavailable, I am responding on his behalf.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, what his estimate is of the real costs of ruing the Child Support Agency for each year from 1997–98 to 2007–08 using 2004–05 prices; and if he will make a statement.

The costs of running the CSA for each year from 1997–98 to 2007–08, is shown I the attached tables.

A change in accounting policy within DWP means that from 2005–06 all costs associated with the modernisation programme will be charged to individual Agencies. The numbers in this response are based on a consistent application of this new accounting policy across all years.

The upward movement of costs in the 2006–07 and 2007–08 years is representative of a one off investment to clear current backlogs and reduce historic debt (in line with the Agency's Operational Improvement Plan), rather than an increase in recurrent cost.

I hope you find this helpful.

Correspondence

Sir Gerald Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when he expects to answer the letter of 27 February 2006 from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton, about Mr. W Beckett. [63923]

Mr. Hutton: I replied to my right hon. Friend on 19 April 2006.

Councillors' Remuneration

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how the responsibility allowance allocated to leaders and cabinet members of local councils is treated for benefit purposes. [66332]

Mr. Plaskitt: Councillors with significant extra responsibilities, for example the leader of a council, can receive an additional allowance.

When assessing benefit entitlement this allowance is taken into account as earnings, subject to the appropriate disregards.

Departmental Documentation

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will make a statement on the Department's compliance with accessibility targets for its public documentation. [56334]

Mrs. McGuire: My Department takes the issue of accessibility very seriously—both as an employer and a provider of services to the public.

Internal guidance and standards are in place to ensure that there is a consistent approach to meeting the communication needs of members of the public. This includes the provision of material in alternative formats (such as audio tape, easy read, Braille and large print) and a commitment to the use of plain English. Information translated into other languages is also available (such as bilingual leaflets, audio and video tape). Our websites are working towards the highest standards of accessibility.

We will as a matter of course further review accessibility of documents as we develop our Disability Equality Scheme.

Departmental Estate (Parklands Building)

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what total liability arose through the reconstruction of his Department's Parklands building; and if he will make a statement. [52579]

Mrs. McGuire: Legal actions were raised in the Court of Session by the Department against the original builders of this estate and their design team in early 2001. These actions were settled out of court and the Department has been compensated. The Department's total liability is to rectify the defects on this estate as defined by the Building Investigation Corporation investigative reports, by 2008, to the satisfaction of our Facilities Management contractor. It is estimated that the total costs associated with any reconstruction works will be £2.9 million.

Financial Assistance Scheme

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much was paid in (a) bonus payments and (b) performance related pay to senior civil servants administering the Financial Assistance Scheme in the last 12 months. [66482]

Mr. Timms: The operational unit of the Financial Assistance Scheme was set up on 1 April 2005 and opened for business to the public on 1 September 2005. Any senior civil servant's performance related pay and bonus related to the work of the unit would be payable in the senior civil service pay round for 2006. Pay increases and bonuses in the Department for Work and Pensions for the year ending 31 March 2006 will be awarded in June 2006 and paid in July 2006.

Jobcentres

Justine Greening: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many jobseeker's allowance and incapacity benefit claimants were dealt with in the Putney jobcentre in (a) 2004–05 and (b) 2005–06; and if he will make a statement. [64398]

Margaret Hodge [holding answer 18 April 2006]: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lesley Strathie:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question asking how many Jobseeker's Allowance and Incapacity Benefit claimants were dealt with in the Putney Jobcentre in (a) 2004–05 and (b) 2005–06. This is something which fall within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

Information on the total number of claimants dealt with in Putney Jobcentre during 2004–05 and 2005–06 is not available. However, Putney Jobcentre had on average 1649 claimants to Jobseeker's Allowance during each day of 2004–05 and 1700 during each day of 2005–06.

Incapacity Benefit claimants could have used Wandsworth Social Security office (now the site of Wandsworth Jobcentre Plus) for any enquiries, or they could have contacted a processing centre by telephone. They would not have used the Putney office.

I hope this helpful.

Link Age Plus Scheme

Ed Balls: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) whether he plans to pilot the Link Age Plus Scheme in West Yorkshire; [66021]

(2) what progress has been made in the Link Age Plus Scheme and Steering Group; and if he will make a statement. [66022]

Mr. Timms: We announced in "Opportunity Age" our intention to pilot a LinkAge Plus service, providing a fully integrated service for older people. The Social Exclusion Unit Report 'A Sure Start to Later Life' also proposed a new approach to delivering services to and for older people, building on the principles of the Sure Start model for children and families, LinkAge Plus will deliver this service.

The programme will test ways of delivering fully integrated services for older people—from employment, health and benefits to leisure and learning. This will involve working with older people to identify effective models that meet their needs and aspirations and involving them in the design.

The whole programme is overseen by a steering group drawn from a range of central government, voluntary sector and local government organisations. In fact, the whole programme is based on partnership working—with older people, national key stakeholder organisations and agencies, local authorities and Government Departments, all playing a crucial role.

The programme plans to run up to eight pilots in England and a number of local authorities are currently helping to develop the 'LinkAge Plus' concept further and advise on how it can be delivered practically on the ground. One of these local authorities is Leeds City Council. Final announcements on the programme will be made shortly, including details of final pilot selection. We anticipate that the first pilot will start in July.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when he will answer Question 47250 tabled by the hon. Member for Portsmouth South on 26 January on learning disability. [62666]

Mrs. McGuire: I answered question 47250 on 30 March 2006.

Winter Fuel Allowance

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what would the annual winter fuel allowance now be if it had changed in line with (a) the retail price index and (b) domestic fuel costs since 2000–01. [65974]

Mr. Timms: The annual winter fuel payment was £20 in winter 1997–98, rising to £200 from winter 2000–01. If the winter fuel payment had been increased in line with the retail price index from 2000–01, the value of the payment in 2005–06 would have been £225. If it had been increased in line with the increase in domestic fuel costs, the value of the payment would have been £258. From 2003–04, an extra £100 has been paid to households which include a person aged 80 or over.

Note:

For 'domestic fuel' we have used the ONS' Fuel and Light index which incorporates: coal and solid fuels, electricity, gas and oil, and other fuels.

CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

Electoral Registration

Chris Ruane: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs if she will give line performance indicators for electoral registration, at each stage of registration, for each local authority area in each of the last 10 years. [65899]

Bridget Prentice: Electoral services are delivered by local electoral registration officers and returning officers. No uniform line performance indicators have been required of local authorities in respect of these areas in the past and so the information sought is not available from central government but may be held by individual local authorities. The Electoral Administration Bill currently under consideration in Parliament contains provisions that will in future allow the independent Electoral Commission to set performance standards for elections in order to promote best practice and consistency in the delivery of electoral services.

Chris Ruane: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what the current guidelines are for staffing levels of local authority registration departments. [65901]

Bridget Prentice: Electoral services are delivered by local electoral registration officers and returning officers. No guidelines have been issued centrally to local authorities in the past on staffing levels in registration departments and so the information sought is not available from central Government. The Electoral Administration Bill currently under consideration in Parliament contains provisions that will in future allow the independent Electoral Commission to set performance standards for elections in order to promote best practice and consistency in the delivery of electoral services.

Chris Ruane: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs if she will consider introducing a carry forward policy for voter registration of one general election cycle. [65902]

Bridget Prentice: In Great Britain, the Representation of the People Regulations 2001 currently provide for entries on the register to be retained for one year where no form is returned relating to a particular property at an annual canvass.

Within the system of electoral registration in place in Great Britain, the Government believes that a carry-forward period of a General Election cycle would be likely to increase levels of inaccuracy in the register to unacceptable levels. However, we will keep this policy under review, particularly in the light of changes to the registration system in Northern Ireland which are proposed in the Northern Ireland (Miscellaneous Provisions) Bill, currently before Parliament.

Chris Ruane: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs if she will list the local authorities electoral registration departments that (a) do and (b) do not use bar coding on their electoral registration forms. [65903]

Bridget Prentice: A number of local authorities print a barcode on electoral registration forms to aid with the administration of the annual canvass. A list of which local authorities do and do not operate this system is not held centrally.

Chris Ruane: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs which local authorities have reduced their electoral budgets over the past 10 years. [65906]

Bridget Prentice: As electoral services are delivered and funded at local level this information would be held by individual local authorities, and is not something that is held centrally by Government. The Electoral Administration Bill currently under consideration in Parliament contains provisions that will in future allow the independent Electoral Commission to ask electoral officers for information about expenditure in connection with the performance of their functions, including registration. This will enable more detailed information to be made available on the funding of electoral registration.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Capita

Chris Grayling: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how much business his Department has placed with (a) Capita Group plc and (b) its subsidiaries in each of the last five years; what the total value is of outstanding contracts placed with Capita Group plc and its subsidiaries by his Department; for which current tenders issued by his Department (i) Capita Group plc and (ii) its subsidiaries have been invited to bid; and whether (A) Capita Group plc and (B) its subsidiaries have seconded staff (1) temporarily and (2) on a longer-term basis to (X) his Department and (Y) its agencies. [61085]

Jim Fitzpatrick: I refer the hon. Member to my answers given on 27 March 2006, Official Report, columns 97–98W, to the hon. Member for Hornchurch (James Brokenshire). In addition no staff from Capita Plc or any of its subsidiaries have been seconded either temporarily or on a longer term basis to the Department or any of its agencies.

Councillors' Expenses

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister whether the responsibility allowance allocated to leaders and council members of councils in England and Wales is for (a) their personal use and (b) expenses. [66331]

Mr. Woolas: Special responsibility allowance is paid to members of local authorities as recognition of the time commitment likely to be incurred by those members in the discharge of their duties. The allowance is paid at a rate fixed by the local authority in relation to the responsibility held. It is for the members themselves to decide how they spend this money.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Weir: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister pursuant to the answer of 19 December 2005 to the hon. Member for Dundee, East, Official Report, column 2559W, on departmental staff, what the average additional payment to staff paid the London area pay rate was for 2005–06; how many and what proportion of staff are entitled to this rate; and if he will estimate the annual saving to his Department if London staff were paid at the national pay rate. [66054]

Jim Fitzpatrick: There are a number of grades of staff in the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister (ODPM). Below the senior civil service, there are London and national pay rates for each grade. Pay rates are determined by negotiation with the trade unions, and take account of a number of factors including market rates. Differences between London and national pay rates are proportionately larger for more junior grades.

In 2005–06, the overall average salary difference for London and national staff in ODPM headquarters was around 11 per cent. Around 2,000 (92 per cent.) of staff were on London pay rates. If all staff had been on national pay rates, we estimate salary costs would have been some £5.5 million lower.

Corresponding figures for the Government offices were a 10 per cent. difference between London and national average salaries. Around 300 (11 per cent.) of staff were on London rates. If all staff had been on national pay rates, we estimate salary costs would have been some £1 million lower.

Disabled People

Tom Levitt: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make a statement on his Department's progress in meeting its statutory obligation as a public body to promote the rights of disabled people. [65814]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Disability Discrimination Act 2005 placed new duties on public authorities to promote equality for disabled people, 'the Disability Equality Duty'. The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister (ODPM) is working closely with the Disability Rights Commission as a pathfinder Government Department while it develops its disability equality scheme over the next few months. The partnership should help ODPM to develop a high quality disability equality scheme, develop best practice to share with other Government Departments, and provide experience for the Disability Rights Commission on implementing the duty.

In 2004 ODPM carried out a benchmarking exercise developed by the Employers Forum on Disability, to find out more about the problems faced by disabled people in the Department. As a result, a disability action plan was developed. Most of the actions from the plan are underway, and over half have already been completed, such as a major consultation with disabled staff, guidance on organising accessible events and improved building access. Other actions taken by ODPM to help it prepare for the Disability Equality Duty include:

The screening of ODPM policies and functions to ensure that they promote equality of opportunity for disabled people;

Engaging with ODPM stakeholders to help ensure compliance with the duty;

The delivery of a consultation implementation plan, following a major consultation of disabled staff in ODPM;

Organising of a series of seminars on making events accessible to disabled people;

The development of an evidence base to support implementation of the duty.

Implementing the Disability Equality Duty within local government is a matter for the local authorities. However ODPM has commissioned a study which examined the extent to which local authorities are implementing the Disability Discrimination Act (DDA) in ways that promote and support the social inclusion of disabled people. The findings of this study should help local authorities fulfil their duties under the Act. My senior officials and I have also spoken at conferences held by the Disability Rights Commission on the importance of the duty to local authorities.

Other actions taken by my Department to help promote equality for disabled people include the following:

Removing the means test for families of disabled children who apply for Disabled Facilities Grant;

Incorporating disability accessibility standards into the new Code for Sustainable Buildings;

Together with the Department for Work and Pensions and the Department of Health, piloting individualised budgets for disabled people by bringing together sources of funding, services, equipment and adaptations;

Publishing reports on the experiences that certain vulnerable groups—including disabled people—have of accessing and using mainstream public services.

Through the Supporting People programme, enabling the provision of housing-related support services at local level to help vulnerable people (including disabled people) to maintain or improve their ability to live independently.

Fire and Rescue

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many people were (a) rescued alive from fires and (b) led to safety from fires by fire and rescue service personnel in each of the last 10 years for which figures are available. [65673]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The following table shows the number of people that were (a) rescued alive from fires, and (b) led or carried out from fires, by fire and rescue service personnel in England in each year from 1995 to 2004.

People rescued alive from fires by fire and rescue service personnel, England, 1995–2004

	Total[1]	Led/carried out	Other rescue method
1995	3,472	2,721	751
1996	3,464	2,774	690
1997	3,573	2,896	677
1998	3,504	2,820	684
1999	3,924	3,187	737
2000	4,883	3,917	966
2001	4,080	3,236	844
2002[2]	4,592	3,763	829
2003[2]	4,341	3,592	749
2004	3,833	3,195	638

[1] The total number of people rescued alive includes people who were injured, those who needed precautionary check-ups and those who were unharmed by the fire. The latter is based on a grossed up 20 per cent. sample of primary fires attended.

[2] Data include estimates for incidents not recorded during periods of national industrial action in 2002 and 2003.

Note:
Figures are based on primary fires attended by the fire and rescue service.
Source:
Fire and Rescue Service FDR1 returns to ODPM.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many water rescues the fire and rescue service were involved in in each of the last 10 years for which figures are available. [65672]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The information requested is not held centrally, and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Hereditaments

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister pursuant to the Answer of 7 March 2006, Official Report, column 1358W, on hereditaments, for what reason the number of composite hereditaments on the Council Tax List is different from the number on the Ratings List; and what assessment he has made of the reason for the decline in the number of composite hereditaments on the Ratings List since 2001. [60185]

Yvette Cooper: No assessment has been made of the reason for the decline in the number of composite hereditaments entered in the Rating List since 2001. There is no apparent reason for this. A composite hereditament comprises both non-domestic and domestic elements. Dwellings are listed in the Valuation List but a corresponding entry may not appear in the Rating List if the non-domestic part is exempt, for instance a farm or market garden. Numbers in the two lists will not therefore be identical.

Social Policy

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what measures the Government are taking (a) to promote social inclusion and (b) to reduce social exclusion among young people; and if he will make a statement. [65938]

Mr. Woolas: The Social Exclusion Unit continues to work across government to tackle social exclusion and is undertaking more strategic work to promote social inclusion.

Work on young people is carried out in a number of departments and we are all working closely together to ensure that young people achieve good outcomes in all areas of their lives. In 2004–05 there were 700,000 fewer children living in relative poverty (after housing costs) compared to 1998–99 and educational attainment has improved at all key stages since 1997, including improvements for all of the main ethnic groups and progress in schools in disadvantaged areas.

Around 400,000 young children and families in the most disadvantaged areas are benefiting from over 500 Sure Start programmes and there are further developments—such as integrated targeted support for young people—expected from Youth Matters: Next Steps which was published by the Department for Education and Skills in March this year.

Last year the Social Exclusion Unit published "Transitions: Young Adults with Complex Needs". The report contains new evidence and new action that will help 16 to 25-year-olds with severe or multiple problems become successful, independent adults.

HEALTH

Administration Spending

Steve Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much was spent on (a) administration and (b) management costs by each primary care trust in England in the last year for which figures are available, expressed (i) as a percentage of their total budget and (ii) as the cost per head of population in areas they cover. [34206]

Mr. Byrne: Administration and management costs as a percentage of total net operating costs and as the cost per head of population for all primary care trusts in England for 2004–05 has been placed in the Library.

Agenda for Change

Angela Browning: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) when she expects to complete the Agenda for Change review process; [66454]

(2) how many staff have been recruited to oversee the Agenda for Change review of NHS staff pay and conditions since 2003; [66455]

(3) what the costs of the administration of the Agenda for Change review of NHS staff pay and conditions exercise were in each year since its inception. [66456]

Mr. Byrne: While the Department led the formal review of the early implementer process in 2003, the ongoing review of the national roll-out of agenda for change since October 2004 is the responsibility of NHS Employers through the NHS Staff Council process. Given this position, the Department does not hold centrally information on staff employed on these issues or administrative costs.

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 2 February 2006, Official Report, column 724W, on NHS contracts, what follow-up work is being carried out on the cost of implementing agenda for change in each strategic health authority; when the results of this follow-up work will be reported to her Department; what plans she has to increase the funding envelope for agenda for change in (a) 2006–07 and (b) 2007–08; what her Department estimated the additional costs of implementing agenda for change to be for each financial year between 2004–05 and 2008–09; and whether her Department has estimated the difference between the cost of implementing agenda for change and her Department's estimates. [65061]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 24 April 2006]: Monitoring of the costs of agenda for change in 28 sample sites in 2005 suggested that in the first 12 months from October 2004 to September 2005 direct earnings costs exceeded those originally estimated by 0.5 per cent., of the agenda for change pay bill, or around £120 million a year in cash terms. In the same period, this data suggested that the indirect earnings costs of replacing additional hours and leave arising from agenda for change exceeded those originally estimated by at least £100 million a year. An exercise was subsequently carried out by strategic health authority (SHA) finance directors in late 2005 to validate these effects. This broadly confirmed the findings from the sample site monitoring in terms of the overall effect, although there were significant variations between SHAs.

The funding envelope for agenda for change is £1.4 billion in 2006–07 and £1.8 billion in 2007–08, an increase of £440 million and £830 million respectively over 2005–06. Actual costs for 2006–07, 2007–08 and 2008–09 will depend to a significant extent on experience of the operation of the new agenda for change pay progression arrangements and matters are being kept under review.

Asthma

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people aged (a) nought to six, (b) seven to 11, (c) 12 to 15, (d) 16 to 18, (e) 19 to 21 and (f) 22 to 25 years in (i) the north east, (ii) the Tees Valley and (iii) each parliamentary constituency in the north east have been diagnosed with asthma in each year since 1997. [62833]

Mr. Byrne: The Department does not collect data on the number of people diagnosed each year with asthma. However, the Health and Social Care Information Centre publishes data on the total number of people in each general practitioner (GP) practice and primary care trust (PCT) area recorded with asthma. Information relating to the County Durham and Tees Valley strategic health authority and the Northumberland, Tyne and Wear strategic health authority areas has been placed in the Library. This is also available on their website at www.ic.nhs.uk.

Bone Marrow Donors

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what mechanisms are in place to facilitate international bone marrow donations. [66632]

Caroline Flint: There are three bone marrow registries in the United Kingdom. These are linked to an international register known as Bone Marrow Donors Worldwide (BMDW). BMDW is an internet-based organisation, and allows registries to quickly identify potential donors anywhere in the world.

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps she is taking to increase the number of registered bone marrow donors (a) in total and (b) from under-represented ethnic groups. [65698]

Caroline Flint [holding answer 25 April 2006]: NHS Blood and Transplant (NHSBT) is responsible for managing blood supplies in England and north Wales and for managing the British Bone Marrow Register (BBMR). It does this through its operating division—the National Blood Service (NBS). The NBS recruits blood donors from the general public and potential bone marrow donors from the active blood donor populations.

Over the last three years, the NBS has added over 100,000 people to the BBMR. The NBS's strategy over the coming year is to maintain the BBMR at its current size and focus their recruitment activity towards under represented ethnic groups.

In 2004 the NBS commissioned the Central Office of Information (COI) to lead on a long-term strategy to attract more people from ethnic communities to give blood and join the BBMR. A campaign called "One Blood" is addressing existing barriers by raising awareness of the importance and relevance of blood donation; encouraging individual and community ownership of the issue;

tackling religious objections and myths; and encouraging blood donation.

The NBS has also developed an advertising campaign "Are you my Type?" which features black and minority ethnic celebrities.

Care Homes

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many care homes there are in (a) the West Midlands region and (b) Coventry. [65941]

Ms Rosie Winterton: I understand from the chair of the Commission for Social Care Inspection (CSCI) that there are there are 1,953 care homes in the West Midlands region, with 44,337 registered places. In Coventry, there are 87 care homes, with 1,902 registered places.

Carlisle Primary Care Trust

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of patients were offered a first appointment with a general practitioner within two working days in the Carlisle primary care trust area. [65751]

Mr. Byrne: Latest figures at December 2005 show that 100 per cent., of patients were offered an appointment with a general practitioner within two working days in the Carlisle primary care trust area.

"Choosing Health"

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much funding has been allocated to each primary care trust to implement Choosing Health. [62526]

Mr. Byrne: Data showing the allocations made to each primary care trust (PCT) in the years 2006–07 and 2007–08 to support implementation of the "Choosing Health" White Paper have been placed in the Library.

It is the PCTs' responsibility to decide how best to utilise these funds, depending on the needs of their local populations. However, the "Choosing Health" White Paper delivery plan sets out in more detail expectations of how this funding should be utilised.

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether "Choosing Health" revenue allocations to primary care trusts are ring-fenced. [61149]

Mr. Byrne: The funding included in the 2006–08 revenue allocations, to support the "Choosing Health" White Paper was not ring-fenced. However, the revenue allocations do separately identify £211 million in 2006–07 and £342 million in 2007–08, over half of the £1 billion promised, to support implementation of the "Choosing Health" White Paper. This funding has been targeted to reach the most deprived areas, to allow primary care trusts (PCTs) to deliver the commitments in "Choosing Health".

It is PCTs' responsibility to decide how best to utilise these funds, depending on the needs of their local populations. The "Choosing Health" White Paper delivery plan sets out in more detail expectations of how this funding should be utilised.

ComMedica

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) why Connecting for Health has suspended its contract with ComMedica; [61685]

(2) which Minister approved the suspension of the contract with ComMedica; and if she will place in the Library the advice that Minister was acting upon; [61730]

(3) how much the suspension of the contract with ComMedica has cost since 10 January; [61731]

(4) what part of the National Programme for Information Technology ComMedica was delivering; how it was delivering that part of the programme; what alternative delivery system Connecting for Health requires; and what the bidding process will be to deliver that system; [61733]

(5) what assessment she has made of the impact of the suspension of the contract with ComMedica on the costs and the delivery of the part of the National Programme for Information Technology for which the company was responsible; [61734]

(6) what assessment she has made of the costs to date of the decision of Connecting for Health to suspend its contract with ComMedica; and what estimate she has made of the likely consequential costs in the next two financial years. [61870]

Mr. Byrne: NHS Connecting for Health has never had a contract with ComMedica.

ComMedica was selected as a sub-contractor to provide picture archiving and communications services (PACS) for the national programme for information technology's North West and West Midlands regional cluster area, under contract to the CSC consortium, in September 2004. CSC is one of four supplier organisations that have contracts as local service providers (LSPs) with NHS Connecting for Health under the national programme.

The role of the LSPs is to integrate existing local systems, and where necessary implement new systems, to ensure that the programme's national applications can be delivered locally in each of the five cluster areas. They do this largely through contracts with sub-contractor companies such as ComMedica providing, for example, hardware, software and consultancy support. NHS Connecting for Health's contractual relationship is with the LSPs.

CSC is negotiating with another company for the supply of a PACS solution in the North West and West Midlands cluster area as a result of repeated failure by ComMedica to deliver its solution to agreed deadlines. This company will deploy its PACS product within the next three months. NHS Connecting for Health has not incurred, and will not in future incur, any additional financial costs as a result of this change of provider.

Tim Farron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment her Department has made of potential security risks associated with the NHS Connecting for Health computer system; and if she will make a statement. [65964]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 25 April 2006]: Systems and services delivered through the national programme for information technology incorporate stringent security controls and safeguards to prevent unrestricted or uncontrolled access to personal information. Access is controlled via a unique user identity, involving a passcode and smartcard, which can be obtained only on verification of identity and through a formal user registration process. Only those National health service staff having a legitimate relationship with the patient will be able to see a patient's health record, and under arrangements known as role based access control, access to a patient's care record is limited to only as much information as is needed for the purpose of the care or other job role being performed in relation to the patient.

In addition, up-to-the-minute security protection has been designed in, across the system, and international security standards are applied across all system implementations. These include the use of encryption to communication links between systems, and to user interfaces with systems. The quality of both the logical and physical security of data centres is assured using both international and British standards, and all suppliers to the national programme are contractually bound to auditing their adherence to these.

Over and above these implemented safeguards, the NHS maintains an effective liaison with the United Kingdom's information security authorities and others for the sharing of relevant advice and guidance on known information security threats and vulnerabilities.

Complementary Medicine

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she intends to bring forward legislation providing for the regulation of practitioners of complementary and alternative medicines and therapies. [66004]

Jane Kennedy: A working group which will actively prepare for statutory regulation of these groups is currently being set up. We have appointed a chair for a new working group and are currently seeking nominations for its members. The group will hold its first meeting in June 2006.

Contracts (Voluntary Sector)

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many contracts are let by her Department to voluntary sector organisations; how many of those are let on an annual basis; and how many of those had received finalised contracts for 2006–07 by 31 March. [63207]

Mr. Byrne: The Department does not collect the information of its contracts with voluntary sector organisations that would allow specifically for the analysis requested without incurring disproportionate costs.

Correspondence

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she will reply to the letter of 6 March 2006 from the hon. Member for Walsall, North regarding funding of residential homes. [64739]

Mr. Byrne: [holding answer 24 April 2006]: This letter was replied to on Tuesday 25 April 2006.

Dentistry

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of dentists have signed the new NHS contract in each primary care trust in (a) Lincolnshire, (b) Doncaster, (c) Hull, (d) East Yorkshire, (e) Wakefield, (f) Rotherham, (g) Sheffield and (h) Leeds. [64997]

Mr. Byrne: Figures are not yet available at a primary care trust level. The following information shows the number of dental contracts that have been signed in the three strategic health authority (SHA) areas covering Yorkshire.

SHA	Contracts signed	NHS service levels[1] (Percentage)	Contracts rejected
North and East Yorkshire and Northern Lincolnshire	211	93.8	63
South Yorkshire	198	99.0	6
West Yorkshire	297	95.7	41

[1] Compared with rejected contract.

Disabled People

Tom Levitt: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on her Department's progress in fulfilling its statutory obligation as a public body to promote the rights of disabled people. [65816]

Mr. Byrne: The Disability Discrimination Act 2005 placed new duties on public authorities to promote equality for disabled people, the disability equality duty.

The Department has agreed a comprehensive joint programme of work with the Disability Rights Commission (DRC) that is—among other things—designed to deliver compliance with the new statutory duty, both within the Department and across health and social care.

In addition, the Department and the DRC have jointly produced leaflets for front-line staff in both primary and secondary care. These leaflets are aimed at improving services for disabled people by giving practical examples of ways in which front-line staff can meet the access requirements of the Disability Discrimination Act 1995. First published in 2004, over 130,000 have so far been ordered, and they have recently been reprinted. To further ensure that all health and social care staff are properly aware of the needs of disabled people, the Department and DRC are producing a comprehensive education and learning programme for national health service and social care staff that will be available later this year.

Tom Levitt: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress her Department has made towards achieving its 2005 aim that each social services locality should be complemented by a local user-led organisation of disabled people modelled on existing centres for (a) independent and (b) inclusive living by 2010. [66007]

Mr. Byrne: The Department is currently considering how to take forward the recommendation in "Improving the Life Chances of Disabled People" about user-led organisations.

Elderly Care Costs

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 20 December 2005, Official Report, column 2701W, on elderly care costs, whether the estimated cost of £1.7 billion for free personal care for 2005–06 excludes the saving in means-tested assistance with personal care costs. [64074]

Mr. Byrne: Making personal care free for everyone carries a very substantial and increasing cost, but would not raise the standard or range of services available. The cost for 2005–06, estimated by the Department, is £1.7 billion. This represents the increase in net expenditure on adult social services needed to deliver free personal care in all settings. The estimate covers implications for net social services expenditure. Savings on the Department for Work and Pensions disability benefits, however, that would result from making free personal care available are not subtracted.

Embryo Experimentation/Stem Cell Research

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what treatments for (a) children and (b) adults with disabling conditions have been developed by use of (i) human embryo experimentation and (ii) stem cell research; and if she will make a statement. [65484]

Jane Kennedy: I refer the hon. Member to the replies given on 29 November 2005, Official Report, column 404W, and 14 December 2005, Official Report, column 2173W respectively.

General Practitioners

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what increase in salary general practitioners have received in the last year. [63935]

Mr. Byrne: This information is currently not available centrally.

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many pounds per point general practitioners earned from the quality and outcomes framework in (a) 2004–05 and (b) 2005–06; and how many pounds per point GPs can expect to earn from the framework in 2006–07. [66001]

Mr. Byrne: The Department does not collect centrally the pounds per point earned from the quality and outcomes framework by individual general practitioners. The pounds per point earned by the average practice, subject to adjustment by prevalence and practice list size, are:

	£ per point
2004–05	77.50
2005–06	124.60
2006–07	124.60

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what average hours general practitioners worked per week in England in (a) 1995, (b) 2000 and (c) 2005. [62495]

Mr. Byrne: The information requested is not held centrally. General practitioners are self-employed contractors and therefore have direct control themselves of the number of hours a week they work. Regulations determine the hours during which services are available to patients, but individual working hours are a matter for each practice.

Health Professionals

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate her Department has made of the requirement for education and training places for (a) nurses, (b) midwives, (c) physiotherapists, (d) podiatrists, (e) radiographers and (f) professions complementary to dentistry over the period 2006 to 2010. [60390]

Mr. Byrne: Workforce planning is a matter for local national health service organisations to deal with. They are best placed to assess the health needs of their local health community and will commission the required number of education and training places to meet those needs.

Hospitals

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what (a) advice and (b) instructions she has issued to primary care trusts on the closure of community and cottage hospitals. [64900]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 25 April 2006]: I refer the right hon. and learned Member to the reply given on 29 March 2006, Official Report, column 1064W.

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many primary care trusts in England are proposing to close community or cottage hospitals within their jurisdiction; and if she will list them; [64902]

(2) if she will list the hospitals which are proposed for closure; and what the reason for closure is in each case; [64923]

(3) what estimate she has made of the number of (a) cottage and (b) community hospitals in England which will close in 2006–07; and what proportion this number represents of the total number of community and cottage hospitals in England. [64924]

Mr. Byrne: Making decisions on local healthcare provision, including the closure of community or cottage hospitals, is a matter for primary care trusts (PCTs) and strategic health authorities (SHAs) in consultation with the local population.

The White Paper, "Our health, our care, our say: a new direction for community services", makes clear that any current proposals on the future of community hospitals in an area should follow the principles that it sets out. The Department wrote to SHAs on 16 February outlining how SHAs should test PCT community hospital proposals against these principles. A copy of this letter has been placed in the Library.

The Department has not made any recent assessment of the number of (a) cottage and (b) community hospitals in England which will close in 2006–07; and what proportion this number represents of the total number of community and cottage hospitals in England.

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) hospital doctors, (b) hospital doctors on training programmes and (c) other hospital staff work for free; and of these how many are non-British nationals. [65822]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 25 April 2006]: All staff employed by the national health service are done so under a contract of employment and therefore receive a salary. Some international medical graduates have arranged clinical attachments in NHS United Kingdom hospitals in order to observe medicine. There is no information collected centrally regarding the number of these clinical attachments.

Infant Pain

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list neonatal units in England which regularly use a pain tool to assess chronic pain in infants; and if she will make a statement. [64656]

Mr. Byrne: This information is not collected centrally. It is for individual national health service hospital trusts to consider the use of pain tools to assess chronic pain in infants in their neonatal units.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what research her Department has conducted into experience of pain in premature babies; and if she will make a statement; [64658]

(2) what research her Department has (a) undertaken and (b) assessed on the capability of newborn infants to display (i) behavioural, (ii) physiological and (iii) metabolic signs of pain and distress; and if she will make a statement. [64659]

Jane Kennedy: The main agency through which the Government support medical and clinical research is the Medical Research Council (MRC). The MRC is an independent body funded by the Department of Trade and Industry via the Office of Science and Innovation.

The MRC has provided long-term grant support to Professor Maria Fitzgerald of University College, London for her work on infant and paediatric pain. Her current, £1 million award, is for research into infant pain mechanisms that aims to provide the fundamental knowledge required to understand and prevent paediatric pain.

Further details are available on the WellChild Pain Research Centre website at: www.wprc.ucl.ac.uk/

Local Improvement Finance Trusts

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many local improvement finance trust schemes (a) have been completed, (b) have been commissioned and (c) are being constructed and established, broken down by (i) area served, (ii) value and (iii) year of completion; [61752]

(2) what estimate has been made of the number of local improvement finance trust schemes to be built or established in each of the next three financial years, broken down by (a) area served, (b) estimated value and (c) estimated year of completion; and how many are delayed or postponed. [61759]

Mr. Byrne: The information has been placed in the Library.

Up to the end of 2005–06, this information is for buildings that are open to patients.

For the years 2006–07 and 2007–08, this information is estimated on the basis of financial closes achieved to date. There are no schemes beyond the end of 2007–08 that have yet reached financial close. The Department does not centrally hold information on schemes prior to them reaching financial close.

In summary there are 68 new buildings open to patients with another 74 under construction supported by £812 million investment.

The Department does not hold information centrally on how many schemes are delayed or postponed. This is a local issue for the strategic partnering board of each local improvement finance trust company.

Low Birth Weight Babies

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what definition of a low birth-weight baby the Department uses; and if she will make a statement. [64657]

Mr. Byrne: The Department defines low birth-weight as babies weighing less than 2,500 grams. This is in line with the Office for National Statistics definition.

Malnutrition (Older People)

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps she plans to take following the living well in later life initiative to identify and implement action to address malnutrition among older people. [64177]

Mr. Byrne: One of the aims in the report "Next Steps in Implementing the National Service Framework for Older People" due to be published shortly is to continue to improve and upgrade the patient environment in hospitals and care homes, ensuring that the environment of care more closely meets the needs of older people and they receive the assistance they require with eating and drinking.

This will be supplemented by work to improve skills and competencies across the workforce and developing identifiable or named practice based leaders in nursing, who will be accountable for ensuring older people are treated with respect for their dignity.

In March, the Commission for Social Care Inspection published a bulletin, "Highlight of the Day?", designed to assist care staff to improve the delivery of meals to older people, and to improve their experiences of mealtimes.

Newham University Hospital NHS Trust

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the Newham University Hospital NHS Trust referred to in her written ministerial statement on NHS deficits of 1 December 2005 is the same as the Newham Healthcare NHS Trust of the answer of 12 July 2005, Official Report, column 989W; and what the projected six months deficit was of the latter as of the end of 2005. [63928]

Jane Kennedy: I can confirm that the trust referred to in both these written answers is one and the same. The trust changed its name by statutory instrument from Newham Healthcare National Health Service Trust to Newham University Hospital NHS Trust in July 2004. The forecast deficit at six months is therefore the figure given for Newham University Hospital NHS Trust in the table published on 1 December 2005.

NHS Practice Schemes

Ann Keen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many qualified (a) nurses, (b) midwives and (c) health visitors have (i) entered and (ii) completed return to practice schemes in the NHS in England since May 2004. [64328]

Mr. Byrne: Between February 1999 and April 2004, over 18,500 former nurses, midwives and health visitors returned to work in the national health service. The Department has ceased to collect this information since then.

NHS Finance

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations she has received on NHS trust financial deficits in South East London. [65688]

Jane Kennedy: There has been one letter from a Member of Parliament received by the Department on this issue.

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the effect of withdrawing the purchaser's parity adjustment over two years on the finances of NHS trusts with deficits. [60749]

Mr. Byrne: We do not expect the withdrawal of the purchaser parity adjustment for primary care trusts over a two-year period to prevent the great majority of national health service trusts in deficit to return to financial balance in that period.

Non-slip Floors

Dr. Vis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many NHS patients were recorded as (a) being injured and (b) dying as a result of slipping and falling on shiny non-slip floors in each of the last five years. [64087]

Jane Kennedy: The Department does not specifically collect data on the number of patients injured and dying as a result of slipping and falling on shiny non-slip floors.

The National Patient Safety Agency administers the national reporting and learning system (NRLS) which collects reports of patient safety incidents across all care settings. The current NRLS was developed during 2002 and by December 2004, all national health service organisations in England and Wales were able to report into the system.

A search of NRLS data was conducted using the term slips on non-slip surfaces. No incidents involving slips on non-slip surfaces were identified prior to January 2004. During the period 1 January 2004 to 1 January 2006, four such incidents were identified. The degree of harm reported was either low or no harm. No incidents of serious harm or deaths were reported. The figures do not include patient falls where matting or other surfaces were involved.

Total Purchasing Pilots

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the written answer of 16 February 2006, Official Report, column 2323W, on total purchasing pilots, whether her Department has made an assessment of the effectiveness of total purchasing pilots. [57441]

Mr. Byrne: Total Purchasing: "A Profile of National Pilot Projects", was published in January 1997 and provided a preliminary assessment of how total purchasing was implemented in the 53 first wave projects in England and Scotland. Although the study was funded by the Department and the then Scottish Office, the views expressed in the report were those of the King's Fund who conducted the research and not necessarily those of the Department. A copy has been placed in the Library.

Waiting Times

Susan Kramer: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people are waiting for operations in the boroughs of (a) Richmond upon Thames and (b) Kingston upon Thames; and if she will make a statement. [65068]

Jane Kennedy: Waiting list data are collected at national health service trust and primary care trust (PCT) level. At the end of February 2006, Kingston PCT had 2,687 patients waiting for elective admission and Richmond and Twickenham PCT had 2,337 patients waiting.

Working Time Directive

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the effect of the EU Working time directive on doctors' (a) overtime and (b) hours of work. [65940]

Mr. Byrne: The Government agreed to implement the European working time directive (WTD) as United Kingdom legislation to improve the health and safety and working lives of all employees in this country. The vast majority of staff groups have been covered by the 48-hour week since 1998. The Government negotiated an extension to the WTD for doctors in training to enable phased implementation from August 2004. There have been significant increases in staffing levels across all professional groups, grades and disciplines in recent years which has contributed to supporting implementation.

While implementation of the WTD is the responsibility of local national health service trusts the Department of Health in England worked with the health professions and NHS employers to provide joint guidance and invested an extra £46 million to support implementation, including 20 national pilots and the hospital at night project.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Climate Change

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the impact of climate change on UK agriculture. [65750]

Mr. Morley: The UK climate impacts programme is conducting ongoing work to provide scenarios to show how our climate might change and co-ordinating research on dealing with our future climate. This includes work on climate change impacts on the agriculture sector.

Research suggests that climate change impacts do not appear to threaten the viability of the agriculture industry as a whole in the UK due to the adaptability of UK systems., However, individual agricultural businesses and land managers will need to be alive to the need to adapt.

The UK national adaptation policy framework is currently being developed. It will help to provide a more strategic approach to adaptation, identifying key risks and opportunities common across a number of policy areas and to coordinate approaches where possible. The first phase of the framework will be structured on a sectoral basis, and these sectors will include agriculture, horticulture and forestry as well as water resources, biodiversity and nature conservation.

The new UK climate change programme 2006 has also assessed the role of agriculture in addressing climate change and seeks to raise awareness of the issues across the sector and develop measures to allow the sector to play a full part in tackling climate change.

We have an ongoing programme of research to provide a robust evidence base to support our policy development on climate change impacts and adaptation in agriculture. A project of particular relevance is CC0366: "Publication of outputs arising from Defra research on impacts and adaptation in the agricultural sector", which can be found at: http://www2.defra.gov.uk/research/project_data/More.asp?I=CC0366&M=K WS&V=cc03&SUBMIT1=Search&SCOPE=0.

Our report "Climate change and agriculture in the United Kingdom" also provides information on the new climatic and market conditions that may be experienced and enables farmers to consider strategies that will maintain or enhance their ability to anticipate climate change in their decision-making and take steps to reduce emissions of greenhouse gases. The report can be found on Defra's website at: http://www.defra.gov.uk/environ/climate/climatechange/index.htm.

Air Quality (Bexley)

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent assessment she has made of air quality in the London borough of Bexley. [65681]

Mr. Bradshaw: Local authorities have a duty under Part IV of the Environment Act 1995 to review and assess the current, and likely future, air quality in their areas. Where local authorities consider that one or more of the nationally prescribed air quality objectives for each of the seven pollutants is unlikely to be met by the relevant deadline, they must declare an air quality management area (AQMA), covering the area where the problem is expected. These local authorities must then take action, along with other agencies and organisations, to work towards meeting the air quality objectives. The Mayor has responsibility for ensuring the local air quality management regime is undertaken appropriately by London boroughs.

Following the first round of reviews and assessments, the London borough of Bexley declared an air quality management area in respect of Particulate (PM10), in the Manor road area, in August 2001. In fulfilment of its obligations under Part IV of the Environmental Protection Act, Bexley carried out a further assessment of existing, and likely future, air quality within the AQMA in the borough, and submitted a report to my Department in May 2003 and the Mayor of London in March 2003. The report concluded that the air quality management area as declared was still justified.

The council consulted my Department on its draft plan in July 2003, and the Mayor of London in June 2003. The Greater London Authority has asked Bexley to provide an update on its action plan.

The last round of reviews and assessments started in 2003 and London boroughs had to submit their updating and screening assessments (USA) by December 2003. They were expected to submit either a detailed assessment, where further investigation was required, or a progress report by December 2004. The London borough of Bexley submitted its USA to my Department in September 2004, and the Mayor of London in October 2004. The conclusion was that further investigation (detailed assessment) was needed at Manor road in respect of the likely exceedences of nitrogen dioxide and PM10 objectives. The Department is still awaiting a report on its detailed assessment of air quality.

The next round of review and assessments has now started and local authorities are asked to submit a new updating and screening assessment by the end of April 2006, which will be considered by my officials. My Department will be assessing the London borough of Bexley's report as part of this exercise.

Badger Body Snares

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) whether her Department has begun field trials of badger body snares. [64938]

(2) when her Department's study of badger body snares is scheduled to end; and when its conclusions will be made available to the public. [64941]

Mr. Bradshaw: Field trials of badger body snares have not yet begun.

If the body snares are found to be humane in pen trials currently being undertaken, a licence will be sought to conduct field trials to determine the effectiveness, utility, non-target risk and humaneness of the body snare under normal operating conditions.

The pen trials are expected to finish by May this year and, subject to the results of those trials and the securing of an appropriate licence, field trials should be completed before the end of June. The results of the field trials will be made public, after peer review, shortly after.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what frequency of inspections will be studied in her Department's study of badger body snares; [64939]

(2) what behavioural and physical data will be collected in her Department's study of badger body snares. [64940]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Department is currently undertaking an assessment of the humaneness, efficacy and non-target risks of a body snare specifically designed to restrain badgers.

The trials are initially being undertaken in captivity—pen trials—under Home Office licence with continuous observation by researchers. This ensures that if any animal is injured during capture immediate assessment and, if necessary, intervention can occur. In the absence of such signs the animals are restrained for a maximum of eight hours. At the end of the restraint period the badgers are examined for injuries by a veterinary surgeon. They are then held for a further four days and re-examined by a veterinary surgeon for signs of any sub-dermal damage—necrosis—before release back to the wild. The available evidence is reviewed after each trial to determine whether further studies should proceed.

The aim is to release all animals back to the wild unharmed within a maximum period of 10 days following initial capture. Advice from veterinary surgeons and badger experts is that removing the badger from its home territory for this length of time should not affect the social structure of the family group.

If the humaneness of the body snare is found to be acceptable in these pen trials, then field trials will be conducted to confirm its humaneness and to assess effectiveness, utility and non-target risks. It is anticipated that body snares will be inspected approximately every four hours during such trials.

Bovine Tuberculosis

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what response her Department has had from veterinary surgeons on their willingness to undertake pre-movement checking of cattle for bovine TB. [66413]

Mr. Bradshaw: An independent review of veterinary capacity and preparedness was carried out prior to the implementation of pre-movement testing in England. The review surveyed local veterinary inspectors' (LVI) in high incidence areas in England. The review found that most LVIs had a good general awareness of the new requirements and felt they would be able to respond to and meet the expected demand for testing. The full report can be found on the DEFRA website at: www.defra.gov.uk/animalh/tb/premovement/report.pdf

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the forecast annual cost is arising from the decision by her Department to pay for one pre-movement bovine tuberculosis test. [66626]

Mr. Bradshaw: Based on 2005 monthly cattle movement data and assuming cattle are tested in groups of 20, the maximum cost to Government of paying for all pre-movement testing to the end of June is estimated at £714,000.

However, as Government support is limited to one test per herd owner, and as the figure does not take account of herd owners who use their routine herd test, the actual costs to Government will be lower. These transitional support arrangements end on 30 June 2006.

Michael Jabez Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will put the evidence accumulated from Government sponsored cattle post-mortems in cases of suspected bovine tuberculosis in the public domain to facilitate the tracing of the source of the infection. [64928]

Mr. Bradshaw: Each month Defra publishes provisional cumulative data on the total number of TB cases identified at slaughterhouses and reported to the State Veterinary Service (SVS), along with the number of slaughterhouse cases that have been confirmed by visible lesion or laboratory culture. The data form part of Defra's regular TB statistics report, which is available on the Defra website at: http://www.defra.gov.uk/animalh/tb/stats/latest.htm.

All slaughterhouse cases notified by the Meat Hygiene Service are subject to traceback investigations by the SVS, and have samples taken that are fast-tracked to the Veterinary Laboratories Agency for histology and culture. Where Mycobacterium bovis infection is confirmed, the molecular typing data derived from those tests are used by the SVS to identify the origin of the infection.

A summary of the culture results from individual slaughterhouse cases identified in 2005 will be included in the Chief Veterinary Officer's annual report, which will be published later this year.

BSE/Scrapie

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many cases of (a) BSE and (b) scrapie there were in 2005. [66622]

Mr. Bradshaw: In 2005, there were 225 confirmed cases of BSE and 299 confirmed cases of scrapie for sheep and goats in the UK. The figure for confirmed scrapie cases includes 28 atypical results.

Cemetries

Mr. Iain Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what (a) regulatory and (b) statutory quality guidelines local authorities are required to comply with in their management of cemeteries and burial grounds relating to (i) avoidance of land pollution from decontaminated land and (ii) flooding of ground. [65761]

Mr. Morley: The principal means of control to protect the water environment are the Environment Agency's powers and duties under the Water Resources Act 1991, the Environment Act 1995 and the Groundwater Regulations 1998. The Environment Agency's booklet "Assessing the Groundwater Pollution Potential of Cemetery Development" gives advice to operators on assessing the risk to groundwater from existing and planned cemeteries. The booklet also addresses such factors as the soil nature and type, and the depth to the water table.

In the case of a new cemetery, or a change of use of an existing cemetery, planning permission would be required from the Local Planning Authority under the Town and Country Planning Act 1990 and the Planning and Compensation Act 1991. The Local Planning Authority would consult with the Environment Agency before giving permission and would use refusal refuse permission, or impose conditions in a Decision Notice, to control a cemetery development and ensure that human health and the environment are protected.

There are no statutory water quality guidelines relating to burial grounds. A site specific approach would apply based on any risks to human health or the environment at any particular location. Good practice requires that cemeteries are, where possible, located in well drained areas with a reasonable depth of unsaturated ground between the base of the grave and the water table so that flooding of the ground should not normally be an issue.

Where redevelopment is taking place on any land which may be affected by contamination due to the presence of substances in, on, or under the land, decontamination may be required. This should be carried out in line with the guidance in the publication "Contaminated Land Report 11: Model procedures for the management of land contamination" (DEFRA and Environment Agency, 2004).

Cetaceans

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans she has to meet (a) the European Commission, (b) France and (c) other EU member states regarding actions necessary to reduce cetacean by-catch. [67149]

Mr. Bradshaw: The UK has always recognised that a solution to the problem of cetacean by-catch can be achieved only on an European scale, because of the nature of the fisheries.

We have significantly raised the profile of cetacean deaths within the Commission, such that Commissioner Borg wrote to all Fisheries Ministers back in September 2005 on the subject of dolphin by-catch in fisheries and expressing his view on the importance of this issue. We will continue to build on this and take every opportunity to urge a European solution to this problem.

Chewing Gum

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the quantity of illegal littering of public areas by chewing gum. [63995]

Mr. Bradshaw: The latest results from the Local Environmental Quality Survey of England showed that chewing gum staining affected 91 per cent. of town and city centres surveyed.

Correspondence

Sir Michael Spicer: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when the Minister of State will reply to the letter from the hon. Member for West Worcestershire of 3 March 2006. [67132]

Mr. Bradshaw: I apologise for the delay in replying to the hon. Member's letter. My officials are currently liaising with the Environment Agency in order to draft a response, which we will issue shortly.

Fisheries

Robert Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) if she will make a statement on the bass management plan; [66601]

(2) whether it is her policy under the bass management plan to provide protection for the 2002 year class in the growing season commencing in April 2006; [66602]

(3) on what criteria she will base her decision as to whether to increase the minimum landing size for bass. [66604]

Mr. Bradshaw: The bass management plan is a proposal for revised management measures for the species, compiled by the Bass Anglers Sportfishing Society and presented to DEFRA.

DEFRA's consultation on measures to increase the number and size of bass available to commercial and recreational fishermen closed on 8 February 2006.

The regulatory impact assessment (RIA) will set out the available evidence and our assessment of the costs and benefits of the proposed measures, on which my decision will be based. Once this analysis has been completed I will make an announcement on next steps, at which stage the RIA will also be published.

Scientific advice suggests that the state of the stock and levels of exploitation are such that there is no pressing reason to introduce urgently measures to protect the 2002 year class in particular.

Robert Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will place in the Library a copy of the responses to her consultation on proposals to increase the minimum landing size for bass. [66603]

Mr. Bradshaw: DEFRA's consultation on measures to increase the number and size of bass available to commercial and recreational fishermen closed on 8 February 2006.

The letter accompanying the consultation documents outlined my intention to make publicly available a copy of the responses to the consultation, provided the respondent had not asked for their response to be treated confidentially. In line with normal practice a copy of the responses will be placed in DEFRA's information resource centre when our analysis is complete. A summary will be available on the DEFRA website.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether her definition of the local population of Western Sahara for the purposes of the EU-Morocco Fisheries Partnership Agreement includes illegal Moroccan settlers. [66494]

Mr. Bradshaw: Western Sahara is defined by the United Nations as a non-self governing territory. Morocco is the de facto administering power. For all purposes, including revenue from the EU/Morocco fisheries agreement, Morocco is obliged under international law to ensure that economic activities under their administration do not adversely affect the interests of the people of the Western Sahara.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the views of the local Saharawi population on the EU-Morocco fisheries partnership agreement; and if she will make a statement. [66495]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Frente Polisario, recognised in United Nations resolutions as the representatives of the Saharawi people, have written to the Government setting out their opposition to the EU/Morocco fisheries partnership agreement. In deciding the UK's position on the agreement, we have taken their position into account. Morocco is obliged under international law to ensure that economic activities under their administration do not adversely affect the interests of the people of the Western Sahara.

Fly-tipping (Lancashire)

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many incidents of fly-tipping have (a) been reported and (b) led to prosecution in (i) Ribble Valley and (ii) Lancashire in each year since 1997. [65300]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 24 April 2006]: Defra has worked with the Environment Agency to establish Flycapture, the national database on fly-tipping incidents, which has been operational since April 2004. No national data were previously available on illegal waste disposal or fly-tipping. Flycapture collects data at local authority level only.

The data are probably an underestimate and will increase as authorities get better at collecting and reporting the data.

Ribble Valley borough council reported 506 incidents of fly-tipping between April 2004 and March 2005 (an average of 46 per month) and 490 between April 2005 and February 2006 (an average 44.5 per month). During the same time periods all Lancashire waste collection authorities reported 32,724 incidents (an average of 2,878.6 per month) and 40,705 incidents (an average of 3,728.2 per month) respectively.

During the same time periods, the Environment Agency investigated three and one incidents respectively in Ribble Valley, and 157 and 46 respectively in Lancashire.

Prosecution data are only available from April 2005 to February 2006. During this period no prosecutions were reported by Ribble Valley borough council or the Environment Agency. The local authorities of Lancashire took forward 79 prosecutions, the Environment Agency took forward no prosecutions within Lancashire.

Hazardous Waste

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the Government's policy is on the EU Commission's plan to merge the Waste Framework Directive with the Hazardous Waste Directive. [66412]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Government's views on the proposed revision of the Waste Framework Directive (WFD) were set out in an explanatory memorandum submitted to Parliament on 18 January 2006 and in a supplementary memorandum submitted on 5 April 2006. Paragraph 11 of the former confirms that the Government welcomes the simplification of EU legislation proposed in the repeal of the Waste Oils Directive and the repeal and integration of the Hazardous Waste Directive into the revised WFD.

Light Pollution

Mr. Carswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether local authorities have a statutory obligation to deal with light pollution; and if she will make a statement. [68052]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Clean Neighbourhoods and Environment Act 2005 amended section 79 of the Environmental Protection Act 1990 to introduce artificial light emitted from premises so as to be prejudicial to health or a nuisance as capable of constituting a statutory nuisance. Local authorities have a statutory duty to check their areas periodically for existing and potential statutory nuisances from artificial light, and to take reasonably practicable steps to investigate complaints of nuisance from artificial light. If satisfied that a statutory nuisance exists or is about to occur or recur, the local authority must serve an abatement notice under section 80 of the Environmental Protection Act 1990 requiring that the nuisance is ceased or abated within a specified timescale.

It is an offence to breach or fail to comply with an abatement notice, which upon summary conviction carries a fine of up to £5,000 for domestic premises and £20,000 for industrial, trade and business premises.

The statutory nuisance regime offers a legislative framework to address cases of artificial light nuisance emitted from one premises and affecting another in specific ways. It is not an appropriate tool with which to address light pollution per se. A statutory nuisance from artificial light may also be a source of light pollution. It does not follow that all light pollution constitutes a statutory nuisance.

Nappies

Chris Huhne: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the environmental impact of the use of (a) reusable and (b) disposable nappies; and if she will make a statement. [66623]

Mr. Bradshaw: In May 2005, the Environment Agency published a report entitled "A Life Cycle Assessment of disposable and reusable nappies in the UK". The report concluded that there was no significant difference between any of the environmental impacts of the disposable, home use reusable and commercial laundry systems that were assessed. None of the systems studied was more or less environmentally preferable.

The Environment Agency has commissioned a modest amount of further work to test the validity of some of the assumptions on which these conclusions were based.

Noise Pollution

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps the Government is taking to decrease noise pollution in the UK. [67089]

Mr. Bradshaw: Tackling noise is a key Government concern. Local authorities now have more power to deal with neighbourhood noise under the Clean Neighbourhoods and Environment Act 2005.

In order to provide a more strategic approach to the management of the noise environment, Defra is currently developing a Noise Strategy; the intention being to publish the Strategy by the end of 2007.

The Environmental Noise Directive requires member states to produce strategic noise maps for roads, railways, airports and agglomerations by June 2007 and action plans to manage noise issues and effects by July 2008. Noise mapping in London has already been completed. Work is underway on other areas.

The Department also sponsors Noise Action Week, run annually in May by the National Society for Clean Air, to raise awareness of noise issues and solutions through local authority engagement with their local communities.

Organic Products

Joan Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether it is Government policy that consumers buying organic products should be enabled to select UK-sourced organic products when these are available. [65778]

Mr. Bradshaw: A key objective of the action plan to develop organic food and farming in England is for the UK produced share of the market for organic foods that can be grown here to increase to at least 70 per cent. similar to the level for conventional produce. Good progress is being made towards achieving this target.

Joan Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the effect of a compulsory logo on all UK-sourced organic products sold in the UK on consumers who wish to buy products produced in the UK. [65779]

Mr. Bradshaw: No such assessment has been made.

Joan Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the effects of the current proposals from the European Commission to replace Council Regulation 2092/91 on Organic Production for the roles and responsibilities of member states in this issue. [65780]

Mr. Bradshaw: Our view is that the European Commission should be assisted by a Regulatory Committee rather than a Management Committee as proposed in COM (2005) 671.

Joan Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what her Department's policy is on revisions to Council Regulation 2092/91 on Organic Production in relation to organic farmers delivering positive environmental outcomes; and what representations she has received from (a) conservation organisations and (b) English Nature on achieving environmental outcomes in any revision of Council Regulation 2092/91 on Organic Production. [65782]

Mr. Bradshaw: We have proposed that it should be an objective of the proposed regulation that it contributes to environmental sustainability. We do not have records of representations from specific conservation organisations, but comments from organic bodies referred to this issue.

Joan Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans she has to consult with (a) the Organic Action Plan Group, (b) small and medium-sized organic businesses and (c) other interested parties before proposals to (i) amend or (ii) replace Council Regulation 2092/91 are taken forward by the European Commission. [65783]

Mr. Bradshaw: The proposal is on the agenda for the meeting of the Action Plan Group on 27 April. The Advisory Committee on Organic Standards discussed the proposal at its meetings on 9 February and 30 March. Other stakeholders were consulted by letter in January and received reports on the negotiations on the proposal as they proceed.

Joan Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment her Department has made of the European Commission's proposal to replace Council Regulation 2092/91. [65784]

Mr. Bradshaw: Our initial assessment was set out in the Explanatory Memorandum submitted to the House on 19 January 2006.

Railways (Litter)

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what powers (a) local authorities and (b) parish and town councils have to compel the rail authorities to keep stations and tracks free of litter. [66349]

Mr. Bradshaw: Under section 89 of the Environmental Protection Act 1990, railway undertakers and operators have a duty to keep their "relevant land" clear of litter and refuse. This includes station areas to which the public have access, tracks that are within 100 metres of platforms (provided that the public have access to the platforms) and tracks in urban areas. Where this duty is not complied with, local authorities may issue a litter abatement notice on the railway undertaker or operator, requiring the clearance of the litter and refuse and prohibiting further defacement of the land. A parish or community council can take action via the magistrates' court, seeking a litter abatement order to get the litter cleared.

There is no duty on rail undertakers or operators to keep other track areas clean. However, where such land becomes defaced by litter and refuse and this is detrimental to the amenity of the area, local authorities can issue a litter clearing notice on the occupier or owner (if unoccupied), requiring the clearance of the litter and, if necessary, reasonable steps to be taken to prevent future defacement.

It is an offence to fail to comply with a litter abatement notice, a litter abatement order or a litter clearing notice.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what guidance she issues on whether the Clean Neighbourhoods and Environment Act 2005 applies to railway stations and track. [66350]

Mr. Bradshaw: DEFRA has issued detailed guidance on legislation dealing with litter and refuse in Part 4 of the Environmental Protection Act 1990, as amended by the Clean Neighbourhoods and Environment Act 2005. This includes guidance on the extent to which railway stations, track and other areas of railway land are affected. The revised code of practice on litter and refuse provides practical guidance on the extent of the litter duty, and includes standards and practicability issues to assist rail undertakers and operators in managing litter and refuse on their land. Both the guidance and code of practice are available on DEFRA's website: http://www.defra.gov.uk/environment/localenv/legislation/cnea/index.htm.

Recycling/Composting

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how she plans to prevent commercial waste from being transferred into domestic waste streams; and when she plans to set recycling targets for local authorities for commercial waste. [64603]

Mr. Bradshaw: The waste duty of care is set out in section 34 of the Environmental Protection Act 1990 and associated regulations. It applies to anyone who is the holder of controlled waste—which includes commercial, industrial and household waste.

Persons concerned with controlled waste must ensure that the waste is managed properly, recovered or disposed of safely, does not cause harm to human health or pollution of the environment and is only transferred to someone who is authorised to receive it.

Breach of the duty of care is an offence, with a penalty of up to £5,000 on summary conviction or an unlimited fine on conviction on indictment.

We will shortly announce statutory targets for recycling household waste for 2007–08. For beyond 2008, we are undertaking a review of the recycling and composting targets as part of the review of the Government's Waste Strategy for England.

Waste collection authorities have a duty under Section 45(1) of the Environmental Protection Act 1990 to arrange for the collection of commercial waste where requested to do so. We are consulting on whether local authorities should have a wider role with regards to commercial waste, including strategic planning for all waste and the provision of recycling services for business waste. In light of this we will be considering whether there is a need to place further requirements on local authorities, including setting local authority targets aimed at improving the management of commercial waste. The deadline for responses to the consultation is 9 May.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether the provision and use of municipal domestic garden waste shredding services count towards best value performance indicators for recycling or composting. [66245]

Mr. Bradshaw: The relevant best value performance indicators (BVPI) are 82 a & b. These measure, respectively, household waste sent by the authority for recycling, or composting or treatment by anaerobic digestion. Household garden waste that has not been home composted can count towards the indicators, provided it is collected from a source and processed or treated to a standard according to the appropriate guidance.

The guidance for both indicators can be accessed via the ODPM's website at:

http://www.odpm.gov.uk/pub/119/BestValuePerformanceIndicators200506GuidanceDocumentAmended010405PDF6386Kb_id1136119.pdf (See P131–139).

Rural Payments Agency

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many farms have received the correct payment in full from the Rural Payments Agency; and by what date all farmers will have received full payment. [56013]

Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she expects the payments due to (a) Mr. Andrew Ramply and (b) other farmers who received their statement of entitlement for the single farm payment on 1 March to be validated. [57077]

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what proportion of entitlement statements for the single farm payment being sent to farmers were unvalidated; and what steps she is taking to ensure that these farmers receive their payments before the end of March; [57896]

(2) what plans she has to assist those farmers who will not receive single farm payments before 31 March; [57985]

(3) what estimate she has made of the number of farmers who will not have received their single farm payments by 31 March. [57986]

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many farms have received the correct single farm payment in full from the Rural Payments Agency; and by which date she expects all farmers to have received full payment. [60483]

Sir Michael Spicer: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she expects to complete the single farm payments for financial year 2005–06; and if she will make a statement. [62395]

Mrs. Dorries: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps her Department is taking to improve the level of efficiency in processing single farm payment payments and receipts; and if she will make a statement. [63055]

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what percentage of eligible farmers in England had received their full entitlement to single farm payment as at 31 March 2006; [62110]

(2) how many eligible farmers in England are awaiting payment of outstanding single farm monies due to them. [62111]

Mr. Bone: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the progress towards making outstanding payments under the single payment scheme since 16 March; and if she will make a statement. [63881]

Jim Knight: In total, 120,367 applications were received for the single payment scheme (SPS). By the end of Friday 21 April 51,003 claims (42.5 per cent.) had been paid.

The remaining claims will be paid as soon as legally possible following the positive action set out in my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State's written statement on 16 March 2006, Official Report, column 104WS, the response to the hon. Member for South-East Cambridgeshire (Mr. Paice) on 27 March 2006, Official Report, column 543), and the written statement on 19 April 2006, Official Report, column 13WS.

Waste

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what representations her Department has received on the definition of waste. [64049]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Department has received a range of representations about the definition of waste and its interpretation. These representations are wide-ranging in nature and, as a consequence, it would not be possible to provide a comprehensive list without incurring disproportionate cost.

A significant number of the representations have been made in the context of the Waste Incineration Directive coming fully into force on 28 December 2005 and have concerned issues such as the burning as fuel of (i) waste oil and (ii) tallow in compliance with the EU Animal By-Products Regulation. Summaries of our responses to these representations are available on the Department's website at http://www.defra.gov.uk/environment/airquality/lapc/aqnotes/pdf/aq04–06.pdf and http://www.defra.gov.uk/environment/ppc/pdf/tallow-wid.pdf.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many farmers and landowners have obtained a waste management licence or pollution prevention and control permit for use on their holdings in advance of the implementation of new regulations on 15 May. [66080]

Mr. Bradshaw: None. The effect of regulation 13 of the Waste Management (England and Wales) Regulations 2006 is to provide a 12-month transitional period from 15 May 2006 in which any farmer or landowner wishing to do so may apply for a waste management licence for the recovery or disposal of agricultural waste.

Because of the engineering requirements and the costs involved, it is unlikely to be a viable option for most farmers and landowners to obtain a pollution and control permit to continue to operate an existing "farm dump". However, the effect of regulation 9 of the 2006 regulations is to provide that, if the operator of a farm dump proposes to continue to use it for the disposal of agricultural waste on or after 15 May 2006, he or she must prepare and submit a conditioning plan to the Environment Agency by 15 June 2006.

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what measures she has put in place to assist rural constituencies in meeting waste management targets. [64602]

Mr. Bradshaw: Defra recognise the challenge that all local authorities in England face in meeting their statutory performance standards in recycling and composting and their obligations under the landfill allowance trading scheme. Accordingly, we are providing increased levels of support and funding to all types of authorities.

Rural areas benefit, in common with all other local authorities, from the wide range of support available through the Waste Implementation Programme and the Waste Resources Action Programme.

We recognise that different types of local authorities face different challenges in waste management. It is for this reason that Defra-funded pilot projects aim to cover as diverse a range of local authorities as possible, including those in rural areas. Examples include Defra's household incentives pilot scheme, aimed at encouraging recycling, and trials of kerbside collection of waste batteries, funded by the Waste and Resources Action Programme.

WALES

Council Tax

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much the average council tax payment per dwelling for band D dwellings was, broken down by local authority in Wales in each year since 1997–98. [66432]

Mr. Hain: The information is published annually by the National Assembly for Wales in "Welsh Local Government Financial Statistics", and is attached in the following table:

Departmental Staff

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many people in his Department have been (a) disciplined and (b) dismissed for (i) inappropriate use of the internet while at work and (ii) using work telephones to access premium rate telephone numbers in each of the last five years. [67993]

Mr. Hain: None.

Ministerial Meetings

Mr. Crabb: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales on what occasions since May 2005 (a) he and (b) the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State has met the Welsh Assembly Minister for Health and Social Services. [66919]

Mr. Hain: My ministerial colleague regularly meets the Minister for Health and Social Services in the National Assembly for Wales. He has done so on five occasions since May 2005: May, July, October and November 2005, and April 2006.

I have regular meetings with the First Minister, where we discuss a range of issues including health. I have also had periodic meetings with the Minister at various formal and informal occasions.

Mr. Crabb: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales pursuant to the answer of 30 November 2005, Official Report, column 250, on what date the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State discussed the future of Withybush hospital with the Welsh Assembly Minister for Health and Social Services; and what views on the downgrading of the hospital the Minister expressed. [66901]

Nick Ainger: I discussed the future of Withybush hospital with the Assembly Minister for Health and Social Services in November 2005. I subsequently wrote to the hon. Gentlemen in December, setting out the latest position at that time and my views. I am placing a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Missing Children

Helen Southworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many children on the Child Protection Register were reported missing to the police in each local authority area in each of the last three years. [67604]

Maria Eagle: The Department for Education and Skills does not collect this information centrally.

Helen Southworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many children in local authority care were reported missing from care to the police in Warrington in each year since 1995. [67606]

Maria Eagle: This information is not collected centrally.

Pupil Numbers

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many children are forecast to be aged (a) up to four years, (b) primary school age, (c) secondary school age and (d) 16 to 18 years in each of the next 25 years for which figures are available. [65991]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Colin Mowl, dated 2 May 2006:

The National Statistician has been asked to reply to your question about how many children are forecast to be aged (a) up to four years, (b) primary school age, (c) secondary school age and (d) 16 to 18 years in each of the next 25 years for which figures are available. I am replying in her absence. (65991)

The attached table shows the projected number of children in the United Kingdom aged 0 to 4, 5 to 11, 12 to 15 and 16 to 18 for the years 2004 to 2029 inclusive.

The 2004-based national population projections are based on assumptions about future migration, fertility and mortality. Future experience may well differ from these assumptions. More information, including alternative high and low variant assumptions, can be found on the GAD website at: http://www.gad.gov.uk/Population/index.asp?dp=Current+projections&subYear=Proceed.

Service Children's Education

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what percentage of (a) A-level and (b) GCSE pupils from service children's education schools achieved each grade of examination qualification during the academic year 2004/05. [65440]

Mr. Touhig: I have been asked to reply.

The following results were achieved by pupils attending schools operated by Service Children's Education during academic year 2004/05:

(a) A-level achievement during academic year 2004/05 by SCE pupils as a percentage by grade

	Percentage
Grade A	14.4
Grade B	22.1
Grade C	27
Grade D	23.4
Grade E	11.3

Note:
Other (includes ungraded, no award): 1.8 per cent.

(b) GCSE achievement by SCE pupils during academic year 2004–05 as a percentage by grade

	Percentage
Grade A*	3.1
Grade A	10.8
Grade B	21.2
Grade C	29.3
Grade D	19.5
Grade E	10.7
Grade F	3.6
Grade G	1

Note:
Other (includes ungraded, no award): 0.8 per cent.

Teachers

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what steps are being taken to address the shortage of qualified school teachers in key subjects. [67306]

Jacqui Smith: In January 2006 the vacancy rate for teachers of most subjects, including mathematics, science, ICT and English, was lower than in 2005.

Since 2000, we have provided bursaries to PGCE trainee teachers in a range of priority subjects. We have also provided them with a "Golden Hello" after their first year teaching. From September 2005 the bursary for mathematics and science trainees rose to £7,000, with a £5,000 "Golden Hello". From September 2006, financial support will increase to £9,000 for all priority subject trainees. Mathematics and science teachers will also be provided with a "Golden Hello" of £5,000 (£2,500 for other priority subjects).

Courses to enhance subject knowledge for those planning to train to teach mathematics and physics began in January this year, and chemistry courses will start next January. Financial incentives are offered to training providers who recruit extra trainees to teach maths and science.

The Budget announced additional funding to encourage more undergraduates to pursue teaching as a career, and to provide additional training to prepare a wider range of graduates to become teachers of priority subjects. It also said that the School Teachers Pay Review Body would be remitted to advise both on improving current pay flexibilities to improve the recruitment, retention and quality of science and mathematics teachers and also on whether sciences teachers should receive an incentive to complete training to enhance their ability to teach physics and chemistry.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Palestinian Territories (Funding)

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development whether the terms and mechanism put in place by the Reform Trust Fund to protect against the diversion of EU funding to the Palestinian territories into terrorist activities are currently being reviewed; and if he will make a statement. [66235]

Hilary Benn: The Hamas-led Government have not yet met the principles for aid partnership as set out by the Quartet on 30 January. These are recognition of Israel, renunciation of violence and acceptance of previous peace agreements and obligations. The EU is a member of the Quartet, and EU member states and the European Commission are currently reviewing their programmes of support to the Palestinians.

While we will continue to do everything we can to reduce the suffering of the Palestinian people we will not be funding any organisations that we believe might divert funds to terrorist activities. In line with our standard practice, we will continue to monitor all programmes carefully to ensure that aid is used only for poverty reduction.

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if he will define development support as put in place for the Palestinian people since the recent Palestinian legislative elections; and if he will make a statement. [66236]

Hilary Benn: DFID's programme of development support to the Palestinian Territories is focused on helping to meet the basic needs of the Palestinian people. This means finding ways to prevent an increase in poverty, including funding for essential services such as health, water and electricity. We believe the best way to do this would be to continue providing direct budget support to the Palestinian Authority; but we cannot do this unless the Hamas-led PA government complies with the Quartet principles. These are: the recognition of Israel; the renunciation of violence; and the acceptance of previous agreements and obligations.

DFID is in close contact with the UN and international partners to identify alternative means of supporting the basic needs of the Palestinian people.

DFID has made £30 million available to the Palestinian programme for 2006–07. This includes a £15 million contribution announced on 25 April to the UN Relief and Works Agency (UNRWA) which provides direct assistance to Palestinian refugees.

Asian Tsunami

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what recent discussions he has had with his counterparts in (a) the United States, (b) France and (c) Germany on the payment of funds pledged in aid to assist those affected by the tsunami. [65717]

Hilary Benn: In the immediate aftermath of the tsunami, the UK held discussions with the United States, France, Germany and other donors about meeting the relief and reconstruction needs of the affected countries. According to United Nations' figures, the United States pledged some $351 million to the relief effort, of which it has committed over $134 million, France pledged $61 million of which $26 million has been committed and Germany pledged $129 million and has committed the whole pledge.

The relief phase was very well funded, and many government pledges were made before the full extent of the world's generous and unprecedented response was known. Private commitments alone exceeded $4 billion. Funds that were not committed in the relief phase may have been made available for reconstruction support.

The UK has continued to discuss the ongoing response with other donors. Sufficient funds are, however, only one of the constraints to meeting the needs of those most affected by the tsunami.

Corruption

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what use his Department makes of Transparency International's evaluation of the level of corruption in particular countries. [65888]

Hilary Benn: Tackling corruption is a priority for DFID. We are working closely with Transparency International and other development partners to gain a better understanding of the true scale and impact of corruption in developing countries.

Transparency International is an important advocate in the fight against corruption, having helped to raise public awareness and create pressure for action. The Transparency International Corruption Perception Index is widely credited for putting the issue of corruption on the international agenda and its global corruption barometer is a useful tool for assessing the perceptions of the public in the sixty countries where it has undertaken research. It also publishes valuable information in its annual global corruption report.

The comparative indices produced by Transparency International, which aggregate perception-based information, cannot be used in isolation to evaluate the level of corruption in particular countries. These indices are therefore only one element of the information gathered by DFID to analyse the nature and impact of corruption.

DFID supports Transparency International's work and since 2001 has contributed over £1 million to its International Secretariat and to 11 of its national chapters (in country offices).

Democratic Republic of the Congo

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps are being taken by his Department to work with international child protection agencies to improve awareness of child protection issues in the Democratic Republic of the Congo. [65658]

Hilary Benn: The UK has been involved in discussions with the Democratic Republic of the Congo's (DRC) Ministry of Justice, the UN and NGOs on the subject of child protection issues in the DRC. We continue to remind the DRC Government of its responsibility to protect all its citizens, particularly vulnerable groups such as children.

DFID has funded the non-governmental organisation "RCN—Justice and Democracy" to train magistrates, prosecutors, other court officials, judicial police and customary chiefs in four provinces in the DRC on a range of justice and human rights issues, including child protection and the appropriate treatment of children within the justice system. This project is being implemented in partnership with the Ministry of Justice in the DRC.

DFID has also given £3 million to the International Committee of the Red Cross for their 2006 appeal. Their programme includes tackling child protection issues in the DRC, and supporting children in vulnerable circumstances, such as those in detention, or children associated with fighting forces.

We are giving £30 million to the 2006 UN Humanitarian Action Plan for the DRC, which includes aims to address humanitarian needs throughout the DRC and includes programmes on child protection and promoting the rights of children.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development (1) what discussions he has had with the Government of the Democratic Republic of the Congo on (a) protecting street children during the electoral period, (b) ensuring that law enforcement personnel respect the right to peaceful protest, (c) educating police officers about issues affecting street children and (d) ending the practice of arbitrary arrest and roundups of street children; [65659]

(2) what steps are being taken by his Department to provide support for street children living in Kinshasa. [65661]

Hilary Benn: The UK frequently reminds the authorities in DRC of the need to protect the rights of all vulnerable groups, including street children. We maintain close and regular contact with the DRC President's Ambassador for Children, and will continue to work with civil society groups, established churches and the Congolese Government to address this problem, push for further action to protect the DRC's vulnerable children, and bring those who abuse children to justice.

The UK is giving £30 million to the 2006 UN Humanitarian Action Plan for the Democratic Republic of Congo (DRC), which includes programmes on protecting and providing for vulnerable children, including street children. We also contribute to programmes through UNICEF, Save the Children and other NGOs which aim to protect children.

DFID has supported the Government of the Democratic Republic of Congo (DRC) to design a programme to train and equip the police to provide security during the elections. DFID has now given £9 million to support the implementation of this programme through the UN and the police service of South Africa. It includes training for the police on respecting the right to peaceful protest and how to deal with vulnerable groups, such as children. The programme also incorporates a public information campaign to ensure the Congolese people know their rights and how they should expect police officers to behave.

DFID has also funded the non-governmental organisation "RCN—Justice and Democracy" to train magistrates, prosecutors, other court officials, judicial police and customary chiefs in four provinces of the DRC on a range of justice and human rights issues, including child protection and the appropriate treatment of children within the justice system. This project is being implemented in partnership with the Ministry of Justice in the DRC.

DFID has also contributed £3 million to the International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC) 2006 Emergency Appeal. Part of the ICRC's work is to follow up vulnerable people in detention, particularly children formerly associated with armed groups, minors in general and women, and to encourage the detaining and judicial authorities to uphold the rights of detainees who are particularly at risk.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps are being taken by his Department to (a) support children's rights and (b) improve access to education in the Democratic Republic of the Congo. [65660]

Hilary Benn: The human rights situation in the Democratic Republic of the Congo (DRC) remains poor. The UK frequently reminds the DRC's authorities of the need to protect the rights of all vulnerable groups, including children.

DFID is funding a non-governmental organisation, "RCN—Justice and Democracy" to train magistrates, prosecutors, other court officials, judicial police and customary chiefs in four provinces in the DRC on a range of justice and human rights issues, including child protection and the appropriate treatment of children within the justice system. This project is being implemented in partnership with the Ministry of Justice in the DRC.

DFID is contributing £30 million to the 2006 UN Humanitarian Action Plan for the DRC, which includes programmes for the protection of vulnerable children, to rebuild schools destroyed by conflict and to continue basic education of children in communities ravaged by war.

DFID has also contributed £3 million to the International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC) 2006 Emergency Appeal. Part of the ICRC's work is to follow up vulnerable people in detention, particularly children formerly associated with armed groups, minors in general and women, and to encourage the detaining and judicial authorities to uphold the rights of detainees who are particularly at risk.

The Government of the DRC is at a very early stage in its planning of service delivery in the social sectors, but we are working with them, as part of the international community, to support the development and implementation of a long-term plan for the provision of education and health services to the Congolese population. In the meantime DFID is providing £641,000 to the Catholic Relief Service for school equipment and teacher training in the North Sankuru district of Eastern Kasai.

Education

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if he will set out the Government's proposals to increase capacity funding to help African and other developing countries develop their 10 year plans for providing education under his delivering education for all initiative. [65187]

Hilary Benn: We anticipate that the fast track initiative's education programme development fund, to which we are doubling our contribution from £2.5 million to £5 million, will be used to help provide technical support to countries with weak capacity to develop or implement sound 10-year education sector plans. This will be the main channel for identifying where technical help is needed, in consultation with other donors who are supporting the education sector. We are also increasing our support to the fast track initiative's catalytic fund from £50 million to £150 million over two years.

Equal Pay

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps are undertaken within his Department to ensure that women are obtaining equal pay to men doing work of equal value. [65848]

Hilary Benn: The Cabinet Office undertook an equal pay review for the senior civil service (SCS) in 2002 which has been re-examined each year since then as part of the Government's evidence to the Senior Salaries Review Body.

DFID carries out a full diversity review, including an equal pay analysis, prior to the implementation of its annual senior civil service (SCS) pay award.

In response to "Just Pay", the Equal Pay Task Force report published in January 2001, the Government committed Departments and agencies to review their pay systems for all staff below the SCS, and to address any equal pay gaps by April 2003.

DFID carried out a fundamental equal pay audit and produced a detailed action plan in April 2003. All aspects of pay and reward are audited for diversity purposes, including equal pay, on an annual basis.

Eritrea

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what discussions he has had with the Government of Eritrea about its decision to expel three international aid charities. [65728]

Hilary Benn: The British ambassador and DFID staff have raised this issue, in the wider context of the constraints placed on the humanitarian operations by the Government of Eritrea with the Minister for National Development, the Minister for Labour and Human Welfare, the Director General Europe (Ministry of Foreign Affairs) and the Director of the Office of the President, during a DFID visit to Eritrea earlier this month. The Government of Eritrea said they were concerned about the amount of assistance that they have received, with little impact.

The British ambassador and DFID officials also met with the three international NGOs concerned.

I also spoke with the UN Secretary-General's Special Humanitarian Envoy for the horn of Africa, Mr. Kjell Bondevik, before he departed for Eritrea this week and also with the UN Emergency Relief Co-ordinator, Mr. Jan Egeland. I highlighted my concern about this issue and the lack of reliable information on the humanitarian situation in Eritrea, and encouraged Mr. Bondevik to raise these issues during his visit.

Ethiopia

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what development assistance (a) his Department and (b) the EU has provided to Ethiopia in each of the last five years. [66487]

Hilary Benn: DFID's development assistance to Ethiopia (in the last five complete financial years) is as follows:

£ million

	Amount
2000–01	16.2
2001–02	11.8
2002–03	42.7
2003–04	43.3
2004–05	62.4

Assistance from the EU (in calendar years) is as follows, with DFID's share of this funding shown in brackets:

£ million

	Amount
2000	45.6 (10.2)
2001	69.4 (11.8)
2002	77.7 (9.3)
2003	91.3 (10.3)
2004	61.5 (11.3)

Gurkha Welfare Scheme

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what financial support his Department made available to the Gurkha welfare scheme in 2005–06; what such support is planned for 2006–07; and what the reasons are for the change in the level of support. [66364]

Mr. Thomas: In 2005–06, DFID provided £1.25 million through the Gurkha welfare scheme (GWS) for improvements to water and sanitation facilities in rural Nepal.

For 2006–07, DFID has allocated £900,000 to the GWS. Other competing demands within declining DFID allocations for the Nepal programme meant that it was not possible to maintain or increase the previous levels of support.

Logging

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment he has made of the (a) scale of illegal logging transfers from Burma to China and (b) impact illegal logging has on each country. [65723]

Hilary Benn: In April 2005, DFID funded the NGO Forest Trends, in co-operation with the World Agroforestry Centre (formerly ICRAF), to produce a report: 'Navigating the Border: An Analysis of the China-Myanmar Timber Trade'. In addition, Her Majesty's Government officials were consulted on the October 2005 Global Witness Report: "A Choice for China: Ending the destruction of Burma's frontier forests". We believe that the analysis of the trade and its impact contained in these reports is broadly accurate. They report that:

China imported 1.3 million m^3 of timber from Burma in 2003, almost 60 per cent. of total world imports of Burmese timber. In financial terms this equates to illegal timber exports worth $250 million to $300 million annually across the border from northern Burma to China's Yunnan province. Global Witness estimate that two-thirds of Burma's total revenue from timber exports came from illegal trade, mostly with China, and that more than 100 Chinese timber companies and 20,000 Chinese loggers are involved in the trade inside Burma.

In Burma, logging is having an adverse effect on both the local population and the environment. Deforestation has caused localised flooding, drought and resulting crop failure, the disappearance of wild animals and birdlife associated with the forests. Local people in Burma derive little direct financial benefit from the logging industry and are frequently worse off as a result of the presence of Chinese logging companies.

In China, the increased concentration of logging firms and workers along the Yunnan-Burma border has meant that the timber buyers on China's eastern seaboard largely bypass inland Yunnan and procure materials directly on the border. The recent wave of migration to the Yunnan-Burma border has, in some areas, led to a visible increase in gambling, drugs and commercial sex work.

In March 2006, in response to these reports, the Chinese Foreign Affairs Ministry took the unusual step of admitting that some of its companies and individual citizens are involved in illegal logging in Burma, and said the Government were "paying high attention" to the problem and "requests the Chinese companies and individuals to abide by local laws and regulations."

The Foreign and Commonwealth Office have funded follow-up work by Global Witness to identify 'Opportunities for Action' with recommendations for the Burmese Government, Burmese civil society and international community, which should also be considered in the framework of the EU's commitment to fight against illegal logging worldwide as part of the FLEGT (Forest Law Enforcement, Governance and Trade) process. The Commission have made a proposal for 'voluntary partnerships' with producer countries to identify legal logs for import into the EU.

Middle East

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development pursuant to his answer of 29 March 2006, Official Report, column 979–80W, to the hon. Friend Member for Teignbridge, (Richard Younger-Ross), and of 18 April 2006 to Question 63655, on the Middle East, what is meant by programmes aimed at meeting Palestinians' basic needs; what the budget for such funds is; and how such funds will be administered. [65954]

Hilary Benn: Meeting Palestinians' basic needs is about finding other ways to stop poverty getting worse including funding for essential services such as health, water and electricity.

DFID has made £30 million available to the Palestinian programme for 2006–07. This includes a £15 million contribution announced on 25 April to the UN Relief and Works Agency (UNRWA) which provides direct assistance to Palestinian refugees.

We are in close contact with the UN and international partners on identifying other mechanisms for supporting basic needs. We will not be funding organisations where there is a risk of resources being used for anything other than poverty reduction.

Mount Merapi (Eruption)

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment his Department has made of the potential humanitarian impact of (a) the predicted eruption of Mount Merapi in Indonesia and (b) the refusal of villagers in the vicinity of Mount Merapi to evacuate; what plans his Department has drawn up to assist in the event of an eruption; and if he will make a statement. [66505]

Mr. Thomas: DFID takes very seriously the potential humanitarian impact of an eruption of Mount Merapi in Indonesia. We are monitoring the situation closely through daily situation reports from the UN Office for the Co-ordination of Humanitarian Affairs (OCHA) and other sources. These include updates on the latest efforts to evacuate the region. Thousands of villagers have already been evacuated to safe areas, but we are aware that some are reluctant to leave their homes until the alert level is raised to level IV (eruption could be within 24 hours). The UN Resident Co-ordinator's Office has deployed an emergency officer to the area to review co-ordination and preparedness mechanisms and identify gaps. We will continue to monitor the situation closely and stand ready to assist in the event of an eruption.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment his Department has made of official efforts to evacuate the region surrounding Mount Merapi in Indonesia; what assistance has (a) sought from and (b) provided by his Department; and if he will make a statement. [66506]

Mr. Thomas: DFID is closely monitoring the situation in the Mount Merapi region, through daily situation reports from the UN Office for the Co-ordination of Humanitarian Affairs (OCHA) and other sources. These include latest assessments of official efforts to evacuate the region and information on numbers and condition of those evacuated. The UN Resident Co-ordinator's Office has deployed an emergency officer to the region to review co-ordination and preparedness mechanisms and identify any gaps. Evacuation sites and routes have been identified and logistics are in place.

Central and local government agencies, as well as the World Health Organisation, Indonesian Red Cross, International Federation of the Red Cross, and other non-governmental organisations are involved in efforts to evacuate the region and meet displaced people's needs. No assistance has yet been formally requested from DFID. We will continue to monitor the situation closely and stand ready to contribute emergency humanitarian assistance should such a response become necessary.

Somalia

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps are being taken by his Department to avoid famine in Somalia. [65721]

Hilary Benn: The UK recognises the severity of the current humanitarian situation in Somalia and the risks of further deterioration. The most pessimistic predictions, however, including famine, are only likely if the 2006 long rains fail. Fortunately these have now started and are continuing well. So far we see malnutrition and mortality rates that are high but not yet catastrophic, and some of the predicted drought enforced migrations that had been envisaged have not taken place. This is likely to be, at least in part, due to the efforts of the relief agencies.

The UK is one of the leading donors to humanitarian response in Somalia and provided one of the first contributions to the World Food Programme (WFP) food aid operation in December 2005. Since then, we have contributed over £12 million to the WFP, the International Committee of the Red Cross, to other UN agencies and non- governmental organisations to deal with the humanitarian crisis there.

We continue to follow developments closely. It will be some time, however, before the rains result in better conditions and prospects for people in the worst effected areas. Indeed, the immediate effect on weakened human and livestock populations may be increased risks for example from water-borne disease and flooding, and interruptions to the supply of relief.

Sub-Saharan Africa

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps are being taken by his Department to improve the business and investment climate in sub-Saharan Africa. [65707]

Hilary Benn: Helping African Governments get their business and investment climates right is a priority for DFID. We support a wide range of programmes in Africa to address this. These include improving business regulation (such as registration and licensing of companies), infrastructure development, financial sector reform, customs administration, promoting fair competition, and stimulating public-private dialogue about investment climate reform.

In response to the Commission for Africa and G8 Gleneagles' commitments, the UK Government have committed US$30 million to the Investment Climate Facility (ICF) for Africa over the next three years. Three private sector companies have also committed support and other donors are showing positive interest with both the World bank and the Republic of Ireland planning to make contributions. The ICF will address many issues related to the investment climate—helping to develop improved policies, laws, regulations and procedures that impact on business. The ICF trustees (drawn mainly from Africa) are planning to launch the ICF around the middle of this year.

DFID has also committed US$20 million to a complementary initiative—the Africa Enterprise Challenge Fund (AECF). It is in the design stage and should be launched this autumn. The AECF will provide grants to private sector enterprises, on a competitive basis, which will allow them to test innovative business models and higher-risk ventures.

Sudan

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what discussions he has had with the Government of Sudan on attitudes towards women with particular reference to (a) assaults on women, (b) rape and (c) female genital mutilation. [64930]

Hilary Benn: I deplore the continuing crimes of rape and sexual violence in Darfur. Such attacks are abhorrent and totally unacceptable. We have made, and continue to make clear to the Government of Sudan that more must be done to provide security for the citizens of Darfur, and that perpetrators of such crimes must be brought to justice. The UK Government oppose female genital mutilation and we support local initiatives to discourage it. Tackling rape and gender-based violence has been a key point at the regular meetings between the international community and the Government of Sudan. The Government of Sudan have formulated an action plan to eliminate violence against women, but we continue to press the Government of Sudan to implement the plan.

The Gambia

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps he has taken to support the economic development of The Gambia. [66164]

Hilary Benn: DFID is working in partnership with the Gambian Government, international partner and civil society groups to support the national Poverty Reduction Strategy, which aims to create an enabling environment for economic and social development, poverty reduction, enhancement of productive capacity, and social protection for the poorest.

In this context, DFID is working to strengthen governance performance and combat social exclusion of the poorest, particularly in the education sector. Our support is focused on the following main areas:

Basic Education Support for Poverty Reduction (2005–08) to enhance the capacity of the Department of Education to deliver quality education and support the development of national education policy.

Legal Capacity Building (2004–07) to improve the accessibility, impartiality and efficiency of the judicial system for the rural poor majority; includes training for professional and administrative staff in the Judiciary and Department of State for Justice.

Financial governance (2005–2008) will help strengthen public financial management and ensure best use of financial resources in implementing the Poverty Reduction Strategy. Training for the National Assembly Public Accounts Committee and capacity building in the Department of State for Finance are included.

Civil society capacity building (2004–06) supporting civil society's role in monitoring and tracking planned and actual budgetary expenditure against Government policies.

Debt management (2004–06) assisting the Government with the design and implementation of a domestic debt management strategy.

Foreign private capital capacity building (2004–2006) aiming to build capacity at national level and raise awareness for monitoring private capital flows.

DFID has a bilateral development programme allocation of £3 million for 2006–07, and also provides support through contributions to multilateral organisations, such as the European Union, the World Bank and United Nations Agencies. Our estimated share of this assistance was £1.4 million in 2004.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

Crown Prosecution Service

Mr. Amess: To ask the Solicitor-General what action can be taken against officials in the Crown Prosecution Service (a) who make (i) a negligent and (ii) an unintentional mistake during the course of their work and (b) who deliberately fail to implement the prosecutor's code; and if he will make a statement. [66853]

The Solicitor-General: The Code for Crown Prosecutors gives guidance on the general principles to be applied when making decisions about prosecutions. In addition, the Crown Prosecution Service (CPS) has a code of conduct, job descriptions and person specifications so that managers and staff know what is expected of them. The CPS is also in the process of rolling-out a professional skills and valued behaviour framework, which will further underline and specify the performance standards required of staff. In the event of an apparent failure to deliver to the necessary standard, it is for line management to identify the causes and to take action, whether on grounds of capability or conduct, using the appropriate employment procedures.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Solicitor-General if he will list the occasions when action has been taken against officials employed by the Crown Prosecution Service for negligence in each month since 1997. [66854]

The Solicitor-General: It is for line management to identify whether the acts and/or omissions of staff could constitute negligence and to take action, as appropriate, in accordance with the Crown Prosecution Service's capability and conduct procedures. Management actions would not ordinarily be captured centrally unless disciplinary action for serious or gross misconduct was involved. No such cases are recorded for the period in question.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Solicitor-General how many staff were dismissed from the Crown Prosecution Service in each month since 1997, broken down by grade; and what the reason was in each case. [66855]

The Solicitor-General: Data setting out the reasons for leaving are not available for staff who left the CPS prior to 1 April 2001. This date coincides with the change of the human resources database. Details of dismissals can be provided with effect from April 2001 and these are shown by month and pay band below.

The reasons for dismissal are either on inefficiency or disciplinary grounds. The details of the inefficiency cases are as follows:

Mr. Amess: To ask the Solicitor-General (1) if he will make a statement on progress in improving public (a) awareness of and (b) confidence in the Crown Prosecution Service; [66856]

(2) who in the Crown Prosecution Service (CPS) is responsible for improving public (a) awareness of and (b) confidence in the CPS; to whom that person reports; and if he will make a statement. [66857]

The Solicitor-General: The Crown Prosecution Service (CPS) is making good progress in improving public awareness and public confidence in its work. A communication strategy has been developed to improve public awareness of the CPS's role in prosecuting crime. The strategy includes proactively engaging with the media; working with other criminal justice system agencies on communication initiatives; improving stakeholder engagement; and promoting the CPS's vision of becoming a world-class prosecution authority. Greater awareness is important in raising public confidence in the CPS. The latest British Crime Survey report on policing and confidence, published on 30 March 2006, suggests that public satisfaction with the CPS's work has increased.

Chief Crown Prosecutors (CCPs), in charge of each of the CPS's 42 areas, are locally responsible for improving public awareness and confidence in the CPS. CCPs report to the Director of Public Prosecutions and to the Chief Executive. Progress is also assessed by the independent CPS Inspectorate.

At a national level the Director of Business Development has responsibility for improving public awareness of the CPS and the Director of Finance, has responsibility for improving public confidence in the Service. Both report to the Chief Executive.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Solicitor-General when the Prosecutor's Code was last updated; who was consulted; if he will place in the Library responses received; how (a) hon. Members, (b) Members of the House of Lords and (c) members of the public can obtain copies; at what cost; and if he will make a statement. [66860]

The Solicitor-General: The Code for Crown Prosecutors is reviewed and reissued from time-to-time, the latest edition being published on 16 November 2004.

The Attorney-General announced the review of the Code on 18 March 2004, Official Report, column WS25, indicating that the review would be limited in scope to take account of recent developments and that there would be appropriate consultation. The completion of the review was announced by the Attorney-General on 16 November 2004, Official Report, column WS50, stating that copies of the revised Code had been printed and placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Consultation on the latest edition of the Code included prosecutors from other prosecuting agencies and departments; criminal justice system partners; interest groups; the senior judiciary; academics; and Crown Prosecution Service (CPS) staff. It would not be appropriate to publish their responses since they were not informed that this would happen at the time.

The Code is a public document, which is available free of charge on the CPS's website www.cps.gov.uk. Copies are also available free of charge on request from the CPS publications branch.

Insurance Fraud

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Solicitor-General what steps the Crown Prosecution Service is taking to prosecute insurance fraud. [67203]

The Solicitor-General: The Crown Prosecution Service (CPS) prosecutes all cases of dishonesty, including insurance fraud, vigorously. When a case is received from the police it is reviewed in accordance with the Code for Crown Prosecutors. If there is sufficient evidence to provide a realistic prospect of conviction and it is in the public interest to prosecute, the CPS will do so.

The CPS is participating in the Attorney-General's Review of Fraud which was announced in Parliament on 27 October 2005, Official Report, columns 16–17WS. The Review is an interdepartmental review of the arrangements for tackling fraud with the aim of reducing the amount of fraud and minimising the harm it causes to the economy and wider society. The Review is expected to report to Ministers by the early summer of 2006.

DEFENCE

Afghanistan

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the (a) number and (b) scale of insurgent attacks which have taken place in Helmand province in Afghanistan in each of the last six months. [65957]

John Reid: We continually assess the number of insurgents believed to be operating in Helmand province and our understanding will develop further as the number of United Kingdom forces and Afghan security presence increase in the area.

For reasons of operational security we would not wish to elaborate upon our assessment of the numbers of insurgents or our assessments of their capability.

Annington Homes

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what ongoing involvement his Department has with (a) individual domestic dwellings and (b) communal areas of former military housing which Annington Homes has sold to private owners; and if he will make a statement. [66918]

Mr. Touhig: The Ministry of Defence (MOD) has no ongoing involvement with either individual domestic dwellings or communal areas of former military housing, which Annington Homes Ltd. (AHL) has sold to private owners.

However, in a few cases, some properties continue to be supplied with water and or sewerage treatment from military bases and MOD raises the relevant charges for these services.

The communal areas are generally operated by management companies formed and owned by committees of housing estate residents to whom the areas were sold.

Armed Forces Recruits

Jim Dowd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the (a) nationality and (b) residential qualifications required by recruits to HM armed forces are. [67024]

Mr. Touhig: To be accepted for employment in the armed forces an applicant must satisfy the following conditions:

That at all times since birth he/she has been a British or Commonwealth citizen, or a Republic of Ireland national, and

That he/she was born in a country which is (or then was) within the Commonwealth or in the Republic of Ireland.

A waiver of these requirements may be granted, in exceptional circumstances, to applicants who are British or Commonwealth citizens, or Republic of Ireland nationals, at the time of their application. This would also cover those applicants who had been granted British citizenship.

With regard to residential qualifications, all applicants for the armed forces are normally required to spend a minimum five years residency in the UK immediately prior to application before being accepted into the services. Waivers to this rule are granted: they are based on an individual's circumstances and are dependent on the country in which the applicant has been living and the ease with which background security checks can be made.

Atomic Weapons Establishment

Mr. Crausby: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what research has been undertaken at the Atomic Weapons Establishment into the development of a new nuclear warhead for (a) Trident and (b) a replacement deterrent. [66283]

John Reid: I have nothing to add to the answer I gave on 21 March 2006, Official Report, column 364W, to the hon. Member for New Forest, East (Dr. Lewis).

Correspondence

Sir Michael Spicer: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the Minister for Veterans will reply to the letter from the hon. Member for West Worcestershire of 13 March, reference 01611/2006. [67131]

Mr. Touhig: I wrote to the hon. Member on 28 April.

Defence Munitions Centre Crombie

Willie Rennie: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to his written statement of 28 February 2006, Official Report, columns 9–10WS, on Defence Munitions Centre Crombie, what assessment his Department has made of the likely impact on levels of road freight on routes to and from Defence Munitions Centre Crombie following its proposed downgrading. [65090]

Mr. Ingram: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 18 April 2006, Official Report, column 5W.

Defence White Paper

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects to publish the next Defence White Paper; and what plans he has to revise the Defence Planning Assumptions. [67001]

John Reid: The Government are committed to producing a Defence White Paper within the life of the Parliament.

Defence Planning Assumptions are normally subject to routine review as part of the Department's planning cycle. On current plans this would lead to revised assumptions being issued in 2008.

Defensive Aids Suite

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent assessment he has made of the effectiveness of the IRCM ALQ-157 as a defensive aids suite; and if he will make a statement. [64828]

Mr. Ingram: The Air Warfare Centre undertakes regular assessments to gauge the effectiveness of defensive aids against current and emerging threats. Details of these assessments cannot be released as this would be likely to prejudice the capability, effectiveness and security of our armed forces.

Departmental Websites

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list (a) the websites operated by his Department and (b) the reports placed on the internet in March 2006, indicating in each case whether paper copies were also made available. [65204]

Mr. Touhig: The Ministry of Defence and armed forces collectively maintain four corporate websites:

Organisation	Website address
Ministry of Defence	www.mod.uk
Royal Navy	www.royalnavy.mod.uk
British Army	www.army.mod.uk

Hercules Aircraft

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what representations he has received in the last five years on fitting reticulated foam devices to all Mk1 Hercules aircraft. [57108]

Mr. Ingram: Any such representations would not be recorded centrally. We are aware of working level correspondence in 2000 about the possible fitting of 'self-sealing' fuel tanks to C-130s, but nothing further between them and the publication of the Board of Inquiry report into the crash of XV179. However, a comprehensive trawl of records could be undertaken only at disproportionate cost.

Information Requests

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what his timetable is for responding to Mr. D. Laybourne's request for an Internal Review of Request for Information (departmental reference 27-01-2005-154135-006); and what the reasons are for the delay in responding to this request beyond the deadline given by his Department on 1 February 2006. [64782]

Mr. Touhig: The internal review of the handling of Mr. Laybourne's request for information will be conducted when the request has been substantively answered. As my right hon. Friend the Minister of State for the Armed Forces explained to him in a letter (reference D/MSU/2/5/1) dated 7 April 2005, the request cannot be answered until a departmental review of the Board of Inquiry report and associated papers relating to the sinking of HMS Sheffield is complete. Work on that review is well advanced, and we expect to be able to make the outcome known before the summer recess. Release of information should follow shortly afterwards.

Iraq

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many military (a) fatalities and (b) casualties were sustained by personnel deployed to Iraq on Operation Telic in each month since March 2003; what the date was of each incident; and how many (i) deaths and (ii) casualties had been sustained in respect of each incident one week after the event. [60537]

John Reid [holding answer 22 March 2006]: The best information centrally available for Operation Telic fatalities and casualty statistics is published on the MOD website at: http://www.mod.uk/DefenceInternet/FactSheets/OperationsInIraqBritishFatalities.htm.

With one exception, all of the UK personnel listed died within one week of the incident occurring; the exception concerned an individual who was injured in a road traffic accident and subsequently died of his wounds in hospital in the UK three weeks later. We do not hold information on the status of casualties one week after the incident occurred.

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the degree of ethnic and religious balance in Iraqi (a) police and (b) security forces of the (i) Ministry of Defence and (ii) Ministry of the Interior. [61850]

John Reid: In the Iraqi police service, which is provincial in structure, there is no formal system with which to track demographics. In the army, which recruits nationally, we estimate that six of the 10 divisions are overwhelmingly Arab, reflecting the ethnic mix in the areas from which they recruit, and of the remaining four, three are majority Kurdish. In the Iraqi Ministry of Defence, as at 1 April 2006, the distribution of senior posts is as follows:

	Number	Percentage
Sunni Arab	15	26
Shia Arab	38	66
Kurdish	4	7
Turkoman	1	1
Total	58	100

Comparable information is not held for the Iraqi Ministry of the Interior.

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to his answer of 2 February 2006, Official Report, columns 704–05W, on Iraq, how many soldiers treated following service in Iraq had (a) physical injuries and (b) a mental illness. [64653]

John Reid: Between January 2003 and December 2005 inclusive, 1,551 UK service personnel who had served in Iraq on Operation Telic were subsequently assessed by the Defence medical services as suffering from a mental health disorder. This represents around 1.5 per cent. of total UK service personnel deployed to the region during the same period. Of those 1,551 personnel, 208 were assessed as suffering from post traumatic stress disorder. A further 696 personnel were diagnosed with an adjustment disorder, which will include some who have post traumatic symptoms not amounting to full PTSD but with some symptoms of post traumatic stress. Other personnel were diagnosed with a range of other mental health conditions, including mood and neurotic disorders, and psychoactive substance misuse.

Figures on the total number of personnel treated following service in Iraq for physical injuries sustained in theatre are not collated centrally. Nor is it possible, for example, to break down the medical evacuation figure given in my previous answer of 2 February 2006, Official Report, column 704–05W, because the database which records the data does not contain information on treatment received after evacuation. Complete information on medical treatment could only be compiled from personal medical records which are held by individual unit commands. These can only be viewed for non-clinical reasons with the express consent of the individual concerned, to protect patient confidentiality. I cannot therefore give a figure for the total number of personnel treated following service in Iraq for physical injuries sustained in theatre.

You may wish to note that an update of the figures I provided in my answer of 2 February 2006 has been published on the MOD website at: http://www.mod.uk/DefenceInternet/FactSheets/OperationsInIraqBritishCasualties.htm.

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what provision is being made for the long-term care of British soldiers returning from Iraq with a traumatic brain injury. [65914]

John Reid: The Defence Medical Services (DMS) has a range of referral options depending upon the nature of the medical treatment required. The DMS refers Service personnel with complex musculoskeletal or neurological needs requiring hospital care to one of the six Ministry of Defence Hospital Units (MDHUs) embedded within National Health Service (NHS) Trusts, or to a suitable non-MDHU NHS facility if the location and availability of clinical service is more socially convenient and clinically appropriate for the patient than MDHU care.

If a traumatic brain injury is detected, the individual will be given appropriate medical treatment, including physical rehabilitation or psychiatric treatment, with the aim of returning them to duty. In serious cases where it becomes apparent that the individual will be unable to remain within the armed forces, personnel will be medically discharged (or demobilized in the case of reservists) and managed through the transition from military to NHS care.

Kieran Heggarty

Mrs. Humble: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence who led the investigation into the death of Kieran Heggarty at Moscow army barracks on 19 February. [66929]

Mr. Touhig: The investigation into the death of Kieran Heggarty at Moscow Camp, Belfast on 19 February 2006 is being carried out by the Police Service of Northern Ireland.

RAF

Mr. Ellwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Eurofighters the UK plans to purchase; and how many will be used by the RAF. [66606]

Mr. Ingram: The United Kingdom has, to date, contracted for 144 Eurofighter-Typhoon aircraft for use by the Royal Air Force. A decision by the Eurofighter Partner Nations on the third production buy of the aircraft (known as Tranche 3) is not required until at least 2007.

Military Appointments

Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many appointments of one to five star general rank are (a) command and (b) staff appointments, broken down by service; [64610]

(2) how many appointments of one to five star general rank there are in his Department, broken down by service; and how many are (a) gapped and (b) unfilled, broken down by service. [64609]

Mr. Touhig: Please note that the following figures include tri-service posts that the single services fill on a rotational basis and are therefore a 'snap shot' of the manning situation at the end of April 2006.

Royal Navy

Rank	Officers	Appointments held that are designated as Command	Gapped posts	Number Unfilled posts
1 star	64	19	0	0
2 star	30	9	0	0
3 star	9	2	0	0
5 star	0	0	0	0

Army

Rank	Officers	Appointments held that are designated as Command	Gapped posts	Number Unfilled posts
1 star	170	[1]58	0	0
2 star	43	17	0	0
3 star	9	8	0	0
5 star	0	0	0	0

[1] There are no gapped posts and no unfilled posts, although three of the appointments at 1* level are being filled by Colonels pending the correct Brigadier for the post.

RAF

Rank	Officers	Appointments held that are designated as Command	Gapped posts	Number Unfilled posts
1 star	82	15	1	0
2 star	25	6	0	0
3 star	7	3	0	0
5 star	0	0	0	0

Notes:
1. A gapped post is defined as one where the post is currently vacant but there is a nominated future incumbent and an unfilled as a post where there is no officer yet nominated to take up the position.
2. Please note that in line with MOD policy all figures over 100 have been rounded to the nearest 10.

Nevada Nuclear Test Site

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment his Department has made of the contribution of the Vito and Krakatau subcritical tests to the US programme to sustain and improve the readiness to resume nuclear testing at the Nevada test site; and if he will make a statement. [66676]

John Reid: None. The purpose of tests such as Vito and Krakatau is solely to provide information to help maintain the safety and reliability of the existing nuclear weapon stockpile without the need to conduct underground nuclear tests.

Queen's Flight

John Hemming: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the total cost was of the Queen's Flight in each of the last four financial years; how much of these costs were (a) fixed and (b) variable; and how many miles were flown by the Queen's Flight in each year. [64790]

Mr. Touhig: The total cost of the 32 (The Royal) Squadron in each of the last four financial years and the breakdown of these costs into (a) fixed and (b) variable costs are shown in the following table:

Fixed and variable costs for 32 (The Royal) Squadron

£ million

Financial year	Fixed costs	Variable costs	Total
2002–03	20.2	5.0	25.2
2003–04	14.5	4.8	19.3
2004–05	11.7	4.6	16.3
2005–06	11.4	5.8	17.2

We are not able to provide a figure on how many miles are flown by 32 (The Royal) Squadron as this information is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

US Missiles Projects

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions his Department has had with its counterparts in the US concerning (a) the W76–2 nuclear warhead design, (b) the Mk4A Reentry Body and (c) the Reliable Replacement Warhead project; and if he will make a statement. [66677]

John Reid: Officials from the Ministry of Defence regularly discuss a range of nuclear matters with their US counterparts under the auspices of the 1958 Mutual Defence Agreement.

Warrant Officer Michael White

Mrs. Humble: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the result was of the coroner's inquest into the death of Warrant Officer Michael White held on 22 January. [66930]

Mr. Touhig: Inquest verdicts in Northern Ireland take the form of a statement of facts surrounding the death. I shall send a copy of the coroner's findings in relation to the death of Warrant Officer Michael White to the hon. Member and place a copy in the Library of the House.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Art Collection (Security)

Mr. Mark Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what financial losses have been suffered in each of the last five years from items having been stolen from the Government's art collection. [66826]

Mr. Lammy: Within the last five years, financial losses of £240,000 occurred in 2001 as a result of the theft of five works of art in the Government art collection. These were stolen from the British ambassador's temporary residence in Buenos Aires, Argentina.

Mr. Mark Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will list items from the Government's art collection which have been recovered after having been stolen in the last five years. [66827]

Mr. Lammy: The works of art which have been reported stolen from the Government art collection in the last five years have not been recovered.

Capita Group

James Brokenshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many tenders (a) Capita plc and (b) its subsidiaries have submitted to her Department in each of the last three years; and how many tenders were successful. [61472]

Mr. Lammy: DCMS has not awarded any contracts to Capita plc or its subsidiaries in the last three years. Information on the numbers of tenders submitted could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

James Brokenshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many contracts her Department holds with (a) Capita plc and (b) its subsidiaries which still have a potential duration of five years or more. [61473]

Mr. Lammy: DCMS has no contracts with Capita plc or its subsidiaries for this period of time.

Charitable Fund

Dr. Tony Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) what the eligibility criteria will be of the charitable fund announced in the Budget to support British citizens affected by terrorist acts; and how the fund will operate; [66169]

(2) whether the charitable fund announced in the Budget to support British citizens affected by terrorist acts abroad will include financial help to the spouses of British soldiers killed in Iraq. [66168]

Tessa Jowell: I am replying as Minister responsible for humanitarian assistance of those affected by major emergencies. There is more work to be done on exactly how the fund will operate, and I continue to work in consultation with the voluntary sector, partners in Government and victims' groups to finalise the details. We hope to be able to make a further announcement in the summer.

Digital Television

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport pursuant to her answer of 11 April 2006, Official Report, column 63W, on digital television, which organisation supplies a television licensable content service licence; what its criteria are for so doing; what criteria Ofcom uses for deciding on an application for a digital programme service licence; if she will list the platform operators for carriage of a channel; whether the Government has a role in respect of the criteria for the contract; what procedures are in place to control the power of a platform operator over price for carrying a channel; whether there is an appeal process if (a) the licence applications are turned down and (b) the platform operator refuses to carry the channel; and if she will make a statement. [66780]

James Purnell: Under the Communications Act 2003, Ofcom is responsible for the licensing of television licensable content services and section 235(3) of the Act sets out the criteria for doing so. Section 18 of the Broadcasting Act 1996 (as amended by paragraph 90 of Part 2 of Schedule 15 to the 2003 Act), sets out the criteria for Ofcom's licensing of digital programme services. Essentially, Ofcom can refuse the application only if precluded from granting it because they consider that the applicant is not a fit and proper person to hold a licence; by the rules on media ownership; or (in the case of a television licensable content service) if they are satisfied that the service would involve a breach of the programme standards or fairness and privacy codes under the Act.

Having obtained a licence for the service, the licence holder then has to enter into a contractual agreement with a platform operator. Current platform operators are:

Digital Terrestrial Television Multiplexes: Digital 3 and 4 Ltd; SDN Ltd; BBC Free to View Ltd.; and National Grid Wireless plc

Cable Television: Telewest; ntl; and Wight Cable

Satellite Television: BSkyB plc

The price and conditions for carriage on a digital platform are based on contractual negotiations and subject to Ofcom regulation on certain aspects of the terms on which platform operators give access to programme service providers (in particular, to prevent discrimination). Further details are available from Ofcom. There is no right of appeal under broadcasting legislation if an application for a licence is refused, but there is the possibility of judicial review. Ofcom can consider a complaint if an operator refuses to carry channels on a platform if, for example, that is a breach of the operator's licence in the case of a multiplex, or if it raises an issue under competition law or the EU laws regulating access to platforms.

The Government does not have a role to play in the licensing of broadcast services. Nor does it have a role in relation to the contractual agreements between service providers and platform operators, except in the limited case of "must-carry" arrangements on cable TV services under section 64 of the Communications Act 2003, but no must-carry obligations are currently in force.

Diversity/Social Inclusion

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what targets her Department has set for public libraries to promote (a) diversity and (b) social inclusion. [66290]

Mr. Lammy: There are no DCMS set targets for public libraries in these areas. However, by their very nature, public libraries are institutions that are safe, neutral and welcoming to all and most of the services they provide are free. Provisional DCMS adult participation data showed, for example, that adults from black and ethnic minority backgrounds had higher rates of attendance at public libraries than those from white ethnic backgrounds.

In addition, the Museums, Libraries and Archives Council (MLA), one of DCMS's sponsored bodies, is leading on work to develop impact measures to encourage improved provision to whole communities including, for example, those who rely on home library services. This is in addition to the MLA's advice to library staff on matters such as addressing access and equal opportunities for people with disabilities.

East Midlands (Tourism Deficit)

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the estimated regional tourism deficit was for the East Midlands area in (a) money and (b) numbers of visitors in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [67036]

James Purnell: The estimated expenditure and visits from inbound, outbound and domestic tourism in the East Midlands are shown in the following tables. Figures are provided for 2000 to 2004, the latest year for which data are available.

These tables exclude expenditure and visits by domestic leisure day visitors as these figures are not available over the required time period. Please note the latter two tables refer to number of visits not visitors.

Sample sizes at regional levels will be small and so estimates will be subject to a high margin of error. Caution should therefore be exercised when interpreting the data.

United Kingdom Tourism Survey data for 2004 should be treated with particular caution owing to concerns about the methodology used to produce these figures. An extensive review of this survey has since taken place and a new methodology has been adopted.

Due to the level of non-response to the question of area of residence on the International Passenger Survey, figures for expenditure and visits by East Midlands residents abroad are likely to be slightly under-estimated.

Gambling

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what steps the Gambling Commission will take to ensure that the findings of the prevalence study are sufficiently robust to allow Parliament fully to consider the causes of problem gambling by gambling type. [66833]

Mr. Caborn: No gambling prevalence study, on its own, can identify the causes of problem gambling. However, a series of studies, carried out with regularity and consistency, such as those planned by the Gambling Commission, can provide data to assist in the identification of factors which are associated with an enhanced risk of problem gambling.

High Definition Television

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what percentage of new television sets being sold are estimated to be high definition ready. [65874]

James Purnell: According to Ofcom, around 40 per cent. of 'high-end' TV sales (plasma, LCD, rear projection) are now estimated to be high definition ready. We do not have a figure for the percentage of total TV sales, but it would be lower.

Licensing

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what representations she has received on the impact of the Licensing Act 2003 in South East London; and if she will make a statement. [65679]

James Purnell: The Department has received a number of representations concerning the impact of the Licensing Act 2003 in South East London, Last year I received a representation about the Act from the hon. Member, enclosing correspondence from a constituent about carol singing under the Licensing Act 2003, to which I replied on 6 March 2006.

We are currently monitoring and evaluating the impact of the Licensing Act 2003 nationally, but it is too early as yet to draw firm conclusions.

Ed Balls: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport whether an assessment has been made of the impact of the change in licensing hours on the (a) Wakefield district and (b) Normanton constituency; and if she will make a statement. [66023]

James Purnell: The Department has made no specific assessment of the impact of the change in licensing hours on the Wakefield district or the Normanton constituency. We are currently monitoring and evaluating the impact of the Licensing Act 2003 nationally, but it is too early as yet to draw firm conclusions.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment she has made of the impact of the change in licensing hours in (a) Coventry South and (b) the West Midlands region as a whole. [66497]

James Purnell: The Department has made no specific assessment of the impact of the change in licensing hours in Coventry South and the West Midlands region. We are currently monitoring and evaluating the impact of the Licensing Act 2003 nationally, but it is too early as yet to draw firm conclusions.

Millennium Projects

John Hemming: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will list the millennium projects with a capital cost in excess of £25 million; and what the (a) deficit and (b) surplus was of each project for each financial year since 2000. [64943]

Mr. Caborn: Millennium Commission funded projects with a total capital cost of over £25 million are set out in the table.

The Commission monitors projects to satisfy itself that capital assets funded by lottery grant remain in use, and requires projects to provide it with their annual reports and to notify it if they cease operating or become insolvent. To date, three projects out of 223 supported by the Commission have ceased to operate. However, information about the individual performance of each project is not held centrally.

NDPBs/Agencies

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport which (a) non-departmental public bodies and (b) executive agencies for which she is responsible have been subject to a peer review in 2005–06; what the (i) purpose, (ii) terms of reference and (iii) outcome was of each review; and what reference to the outcome of the review has been made when making funding decisions for those organisations. [65093]

Tessa Jowell: During 2005–06 one full peer review was undertaken, of Arts Council England (ACE), plus a one-day follow-up review of the Museums, Libraries and Archives Council (MLA). The purpose of peer review is to take an independent, strategic view of an organisation's effectiveness and capacity, in order to help that organisation improve its performance.

The terms of reference and the report of the ACE peer review can be found on the ACE website www.artscouncil.org.uk/peerreview. The conclusions of the review will be taken into account in drawing up the funding agreement between DCMS and Arts Council England for the 2006–08 period.

The MLA follow-up review concluded that the MLA had made considerable progress towards implementing the recommendations of the original peer review, but that MLA and DCMS would have to work together closely to deliver the full, challenging agenda. The peer review conclusions underpin the current funding agreement between DCMS and MLA.

Shooting Training

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what representations her Department has made to the Home Office concerning a possible relaxation of the handgun legislation to enable Olympic target shooters to train in the country. [67141]

Mr. Caborn: The Department is committed to supporting its very best athletes, and looks carefully at reducing any barriers that may restrict the development of talent.

In the case of the sport of shooting, the Firearms Amendment Act (1997) has limited the practice of three of the 15 shooting disciplines defined as an Olympic sport.

In light of representations from the sport, this matter has been brought to the attention of the Home Secretary. He has been asked to consider ways in which our Olympic hopefuls in those three disciplines affected under the current legislation may be able to train in Britain, while respecting the very important issue of public safety.

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what proportion of the money recently awarded by UK Sport to shooting will be used to fund the costs of training outside the UK. [67142]

Mr. Caborn: UK Sport's total allocation of £4.817 million to the sport of shooting between 2006–9, announced in April, is based on its investment model which calculates how many athletes should be supported at each stage of the performance pathway in order to deliver a potential number of medals in that sport.

The allocation per athlete is calculated according to a number of criteria, including the cost of training in the UK and the cost of training and competing abroad.

These costs have been averaged across all the sports, which means that each national governing body has some flexibility about how it allocates the funding to its athletes, while being required to deliver against a set of agreed milestones.

Great Britain Target Shooting Federation, the national governing body, in discussion with UK Sport, is in the process of planning precisely how it will spend its allocation across the world class talent, development and podium programmes. It is estimated that this process will take approximately three months.

However, for those high performance athletes on UK sport's world class performance programme over the course of the Athens cycle (2001–05), we understand that target shooting spent approximately £375,000 on funding the cost of training and competing abroad. UK Sport estimate that the cost of overseas training alone was in the region of £155,000.

Sports Funding (Coventry)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what central Government funding has been allocated to sport in Coventry in each of the last eight years. [66498]

Mr. Caborn: Financial support for sport from public sources is primarily channelled through Sport England and UK Sport, the two DCMS sponsored bodies which award Lottery grants and dispense Exchequer funds for sport from DCMS.

Sport England

The table shows the Exchequer and Lottery funding which Sport England has awarded to Coventry between 1997 and 2005.

	Lottery[1] awards	Exchequer awards	Total for year
1997	1,781,993	—	1,781,993
1998	552,787	—	552,787
1999	181,954	—	181,954
2000	—	58,000	58,000
2001	741,908	40,000	781,908
2002	339,477	12,000	352,477
2003	1,120,355	—	1,120,355
2004	383,125	—	383,125
2005	2,732,678	—	2,732,678

[1] The figures provided include Lottery awards made through programmes such as: Community Capital, Community Investment Fund, Active Communities Development Fund, Active Sports, Active England, Community Athletics Refurbishment Programme, Sport Action Zones and Green Spaces. They also include mixed Lottery and Exchequer awards made through programmes such as: School Sports Partnerships and Space for Sport and Arts.

UK Sport

It is not possible for UK Sport to determine an amount of Lottery or Exchequer funding allocated to Coventry as its funding is not directed to specific regions.

Sports Infrastructure (Northamptonshire)

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what discussions her officials have had with the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister on the provision of appropriate sports infrastructure in Northamptonshire in connection with growth area housing expansion. [67308]

Mr. Caborn: My officials are in regular contact with the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister about the development of all four housing growth areas including Milton Keynes South Midlands.

On the provision of appropriate sports provision for the area, Sport England, my Department's lead delivery agency, is working closely with regional and local government. In 2005 the Government launched "Living Spaces"; guidance for Local Delivery Vehicles on culture and sustainable communities in the MKSM Growth which was developed by a number of DCMS's NDPBs including Sport England.

A copy of the guide can be downloaded from the Culture South East website at:

http://www.culturesoutheast.org.uk/media/uploads/18/final%20april05living%20spaces.pdf

Telephone Advice Lines

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many telephone advice lines her Department and its non-departmental public bodies support; how many telephone advisers each employs; and how much funding is provided to each by (a) her Department and its non-departmental public bodies, (b) other Government departments, (c) the private sector and (d) the voluntary sector. [66590]

Mr. Lammy: My Department does not hold the information requested. The question could be answered only at disproportionate cost.

Television Companies (Financial Returns)

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) whether Ofcom has received and reviewed financial returns from all relevant television companies over the last five years; [66971]

(2) if she will make a statement on the approach Ofcom takes where (a) a television company fails to provide required returns and (b) issues are found with the returns provided; [66972]

(3) if she will make a statement on Ofcom's system for receiving and reviewing financial returns from relevant television companies. [66973]

James Purnell: The matter raised is the responsibility of the Office of Communications (Ofcom), as independent regulator for the communications sector. Accordingly, I have asked the chief executive of Ofcom to reply directly to the hon. Member. Copies of the chief executive's letter will be placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Television Licences

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport pursuant to her answer to the hon. Member for Maldon and East Chelmsford (Mr. Whittingdale) of 27 February 2006, Official Report, column 221W, on television licences, when her Department will publish the expert analysis it has commissioned from PKF; and if she will make a statement. [64598]

James Purnell: The independent report by PKF "Review of the BBC value for money and efficiency programmes" was published by the Department for Culture, Media and Sport on 26 April 2006.

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the television licence fee crude evasion rates were for (a) England, Scotland and Wales and (b) Northern Ireland at the end of February (i) 2005 and (ii) 2006. [67543]

James Purnell: The Department for Culture, Media and Support does not collect so-called crude evasion estimates. I have therefore asked the BBC's head of revenue management to consider the questions raised by the hon. Member and to write to him direct. Copies of the reply will be placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Alternative Energy

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps he is taking to promote the use of alternative, permanent sources of energy; and if he will make a statement. [65481]

Malcolm Wicks: The Government main mechanism to support renewable generation is the renewables obligation (RO). The RO is simply a way of making all electricity suppliers obtain an increasing amount of their electricity from renewable sources of electricity.

In addition to the RO, renewables are also supported by around £500 million of investment between 2002–08 to help develop renewables and other low carbon technologies. This will take the form of spending on RD&D and funding for capital grants and includes: grants of £117 million for offshore wind; over £60 million for energy crops and biomass; £31 million for solar PV and £12.5 million for community/domestic schemes; £50 million for the Marine Renewables Deployment Fund—£42 million of which has been earmarked to kick-start construction of large-scale demonstration farms that will for the first time see wave and tidal power feeding into the national grid.

British Airports Authority

James Duddridge: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made in relation to competition policy of the tax treatment of goodwill in Spain; what assessment he has made of the implications of the tax treatment for (a) British companies, (b) (i) EU and (ii) domestic policy on mergers and acquisitions and (c) the recent bid by Spanish consortium group Ferrarial for the British Airports Authority. [66360]

Mr. Sutcliffe [holding answer 27 April 2006]: We have noted that the Commission found this scheme to be an illegal state aid. We naturally give very careful consideration to the state aid implications when formulating UK tax measures.

Mergers are a matter for the appropriate competition authority.

Cold Calling

Mr. Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps his Department has taken to tackle cold-calling from countries outside the European Union in the past five years. [66120]

Alun Michael: The Department introduced the Telephone Preference Service (TPS) scheme in 1999, under the Telecommunications (Data Protection and Privacy) Regulations, which were updated by Privacy and Electronic Communications (EC Directive) Regulations in 2003. The TPS scheme provides protection to consumers from cold calling if they have previously notified the caller that they do not wish to receive such calls or have been registered with the TPS for at least 28 days. Those making cold calls from within the UK or on behalf of UK companies from outside the European Union are legally required not to call a number that has registered on the TPS list. However, cold calls from non-UK companies marketing a service or product are not covered by the TSP scheme, as the companies and products have no link with the UK. The Information Commissioner has responsibility for the enforcement of the TPS scheme and considers complaints about breaches.

Commission for Equality and Human Rights

Mr. Malik: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what (a) powers and (b) duties the Commission for Equality and Human Rights will have to deal with tackling (i) basic community relations, (ii) extremism, (iii) terrorism and (iv) race relations at a local level. [65979]

Meg Munn: The Government are committed to ensuring that the new commission is able to serve all the communities it will work with. A focus on basic community relations will be at the heart of the commissions work and a key priority for Government.

New powers will be introduced to allow the commission greater flexibility in the enforcement of public duties.

The Equality Act (S.10) confers a duty on the CEHR to encourage good practice and promote understanding of the importance of good relations between members of different groups and between members of groups and others. The CEHR will have a responsibility to work towards the elimination of prejudice against, hatred of and hostility towards members of groups, enabling all individuals to participate in society. While there are six 'equality strands': race, faith, sexual orientation, gender, disability and age, the Act allows for the number of 'groups' to be extended.

To carry this out the CEHR (S.19 of the Act) will have new powers to monitor, as well as to make, co-operate with or assist in any arrangements designed to reduce hate crimes. We would expect the Commission to undertake activities to involve members of community groups.

Extremism while not directly within the remit of the CEHR may be a by-product of poor relations between communities and associated with hate crime. Consequently work to strengthen the bonds between different groups will contribute to our efforts in combating it.

Terrorism is outside of the CEHR's scope.

The CEHR will have particular regard to the importance of its work with different groups. This reflects the historical origins of the "good relations" duty, which the Commission for Racial Equality is required to promote. The CEHR is uniquely placed to build bridges between different communities—this work will build on the CRE's local race equality work, undertaken through the network of race equality councils and others.

Company Registration

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many registered companies have issued stock. [66738]

Mr. Sutcliffe [holding answer 27 April 2006]: Section 121*(c)* of the Companies Act 1985 permits a company to convert any or all of its paid up shares into stock, and reconvert that stock into paid-up shares of any denomination. There are no available figures on the number of existing registered companies that have used this procedure. However, the ability to convert shares into stock is believed to be obsolete.

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what proportion of medium-sized companies registered in the UK are (a) public companies and (b) public listed companies. [66739]

Mr. Sutcliffe [holding answer 27 April 2006]: The information requested is not available. The only authoritative source we would have for information of this sort is through the number of filings of accounts made by medium-sized companies with the Registrar of Companies. A medium-sized company is defined for the purposes of special accounting provisions of the Companies Act 1985 as a company that satisfies at least two of three requirements: turnover of not more than £22.8 million, balance sheet total of not more than £11.4 million, and number of employees totalling not more than 250. Such companies can take advantage of certain accounting and reporting exemptions in the accounts and reports they prepare for members and file with the Registrar of Companies. However, public (including public listed) companies are excluded from these special provisions, and, so, cannot qualify to file as medium-sized. Since no public companies can file medium-sized accounts with the Registrar, it is not possible to estimate the proportion of medium-sized companies that are public companies.

Departmental Websites

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list (a) the websites operated by his Department and (b) the reports placed on the internet in March 2006, indicating in each case whether paper copies were also made available. [65210]

Alan Johnson: We operate one core DTI website, www.dti.gov.uk, and within that there are links to a wider community of websites managed by partner agencies and other arms-length bodies. There are 42 DTI websites hosted by other domains and a list of these has been placed in the Libraries of the House.

There were 67 departmental publications notified to the Publications Team and placed on the DTI website in March 2006; of these 21 were made available as paper copies.

A list has been placed in the Libraries of the House.

EU Commissioner for External Trade

Mr. Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he last met the EU Commissioner for External Trade; how many times in the last 12 months he has met him; when he next expects to meet him; and if he will make a statement. [64676]

Ian Pearson: My right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State has met Peter Mandelson, the European Trade Commissioner, on several occasions over the last 12 months, to discuss current trade policy issues, including ways to secure an ambitious, pro-development outcome to the Doha Development Agenda.

EU Committees

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the UK members of the (a) EU anti-dumping and anti-subsidy committee, (b) Article 133 committee and (c) Customs Union committee. [66409]

Ian Pearson: The UK member of the EU anti-dumping and anti-subsidy committee is Eugene MacAleese, of the Europe and World Trade Directorate's Trade Defence Unit.

For information on UK membership of the Article 133 committee I refer the right hon. Member to my answer of 28 November 2005, Official Report, column 93W.

Attendance at the Customs Union committee is the responsibility of HM Revenue and Customs.

EU Directives/Regulations

Peter Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to the answer of 27 March 2006 to the hon. Member for Salisbury (Mr. Key), Official Report, column 640W, on EU directives/regulations, if he will seek an exemption from the Restriction of Hazardous Substances directive for lead used in the pipes of pipe organs which rely on electricity to operate. [63828]

Malcolm Wicks: The Department of Trade and Industry has sought clarification from the European Commission as to whether pipe organs fall under the scope of the directive. If the Commission concludes that they do, the Department stands ready to work with the industry to build a suitable exemption request.

Peter Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made in the context of regulations under the EU Restrictions of Hazardous Substances Directive of the environmental effects of the use of lead in organ pipes; what estimate he has made of the proportion of such pipes which (a) are disposed of by landfill and (b) are recycled by organ builders; and what estimate he has made of the value to the economy of the pipe organ industry. [63829]

Malcolm Wicks: No estimates have been undertaken in relation to the pipe organ industry.

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what response he has received from the pipe organ industry following his Department's offer of assistance with a formal application under article 5.1b for the exemption of new pipe organs from the Restriction of Hazardous Substances Directive. [64861]

Malcolm Wicks: The UK pipe organ industry has yet to submit a formal exemption application. We stand ready to help them if they choose to do so.

Robert Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) if he will establish a review of the EU waste electrical and electronic equipment directive in respect of the use of lead in (a) the maintenance, restoration and upgrading of existing pipe organs and (b) the construction and building of new pipe organs; [65164]

(2) whether the EU waste electrical and electronic equipment directive will be reviewed in 2008 in respect of its application to traditional pipe organs. [65165]

Malcolm Wicks: The waste electrical and electronic equipment directive is due to be reviewed by the European Commission in 2008. The Restriction of Hazardous Substances directive draws its scope from the WEEE directive.

The Department of Trade and Industry has sought clarification from the European Commission as to whether pipe organs fall under the scope of the directives. If the Commission concludes that they do, the Department stands ready to work with the industry to build a suitable exemption request.

Robert Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) how many (a) public officials and (b) contractors will be employed on the enforcement of the EU waste electrical and electronic equipment directive in respect of (i) existing and (ii) new-build traditional pipe organs from 1 July 2006; [65166]

(2) what enforcement machinery is (a) in place and (b) in preparation in respect of the EU waste electrical and electronic equipment directive as it applies to (i) existing and (ii) new build traditional pipe organs from 1 July 2006 [65167]

Malcolm Wicks: The UK has not yet transposed the WEEE directive into national law, whilst the UK Restriction of Hazardous Substances Regulations come into force on 1 July 2006 and will be enforced by the National Weights & Measures Laboratory.

Existing pipe organs are not covered by the Restriction of Hazardous Substances directive and the Department of Trade and Industry has sought clarification from the European Commission as to whether new pipe organs fall under the scope of the directives. If the Commission concludes that they do, the Department stands ready to work with the industry to build a suitable exemption request.

Robert Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what research his Department and its agencies are funding into alternative materials to lead in the construction and maintenance of traditional pipe organs; [65168]

(2) if he will commission research into the use of alternative materials to lead in the construction and maintenance of traditional pipe organs and the building of new pipe organs. [65169]

Malcolm Wicks: The Department has no plans to commission research into alternative materials to lead in the construction and maintenance of traditional pipe organs.

David Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to the answer of 30 March 2006, Official Report, column 1139W, to the hon. Member for Stroud (Mr. Drew) on lead organ pipes, what progress has been made in assisting the organ building and repair industry to apply to the European Commission for a total exemption for the manufacture of new pipe organs from the provisions of the restriction of hazardous substances directive. [65397]

Malcolm Wicks: The Department of Trade and Industry has sought clarification from the European Commission as to whether pipe organs fall under the scope of the directive. If the Commission concludes that they do, the Department stands ready to work with the industry to build a suitable exemption request.

Export Credits Guarantee Department

Helen Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the (a) banks and (b) companies which have been involved in Export Credits Guarantee Department supported projects since 2000, stating in each case the project concerned. [64054]

Ian Pearson: This information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. Since 2000, ECGD's Annual Review and Resource Accounts have listed guarantees issued in each financial year.

Financial Advice Initiatives

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what initiatives his Department and its non-departmental bodies support to promote (a) financial education, (b) financial advice, (c) financial inclusion and (d) financial capability; which organisations are involved in delivering each initiative; and how much funding is provided to each by (i) his Department and its non-departmental public bodies, (ii) other Government departments, (iii) the private sector and (iv) the voluntary sector. [66577]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The Department recognises the importance of tackling financial exclusion in the areas mentioned and provides support to the following:

National Debtline

The DTI provides £1m p.a. to this free telephone advice line. This is alongside £500,000 in 2005–06 increasing to £800,000 in 2006–07 from the DCA, and £100,000 per annum from the Scottish Executive. The private sector has pledged £1.7 million p.a. to fund National Debtline.

Business Debtline

The Small Business Service contributes £100,000 per annum to Business Debtline with the private sector contributing £180,000 per annum. Business Debtline is now under the same roof as National Debtline and is benefiting from shared infrastructure and economies of scale. Both services are run by the Money Advice Trust.

Face-to-Face Debt Advice Project

The DTI is running this project, to increase substantially debt advice, with £45 million from the Treasury's Financial Inclusion Fund over the two Financial Years 2006–08. There are 14 projects being delivered by a mixture of Citizens Advice Bureaux (CABx) and other independent advice agencies.

National Consumer Council

Last year the DTI provided approximately £3.9 million funding for the NCC, including the Scottish and Welsh Consumer Councils. The NCC has a particular remit to represent disadvantaged consumers which runs through all their work. In addition, one of their corporate objectives is to make markets work for vulnerable and disadvantaged consumers. Within the current work stream the NCC has three projects relating specifically to financial inclusion—improvements to basic bank accounts; increasing choice and appropriateness in payment methods for essential services; and extending access to affordable credit. The NCC also keeps a watching brief on issues such as financial capability, financial education and financial advice.

Citizens Advice/Citizens Advice Scotland

Last year the DTI provided approximately £26 million but funding this year is still to be settled. This grant in aid is provided by DTI on behalf of the whole of Government (around 15 Departments). These are both independent charities providing HQ support services for the network of locally funded CABx.

Hearing Loss Compensation

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate he has made of the number of cases where payments by his Department to representatives of successful claimants for noise-induced hearing loss compensation have not been (a) notified and (b) paid to the claimant. [65159]

Malcolm Wicks: The Department, as defendant in hearing loss cases, has no information on dealings between claimants and their representatives.

Home Information Packs

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what research the Office of Fair Trading has (a) undertaken and (b) plans to undertake into (i) home information packs and (ii) the electronic provision of property information. [66252]

Mr. Sutcliffe: I have asked the Chief Executive of the Office of Fair Trading, John Fingleton, to reply to the hon. Member.

Late Accounts

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the proposed timetable is for the Department to consult on the civil penalties for companies which file accounts and reports late. [66737]

Mr. Sutcliffe [holding answer 27 April 2006]: Clause 431 of the Company Law Reform Bill (which is currently being considered in another place) provides for the Secretary of State to make regulations determining

(a) the amount of civil penalties for late filing of accounts and reports with the Registrar of Companies, and

(b) the periods by reference to which those penalties are to be determined.

The Department intends to consult on draft regulations under the clause as soon as possible after the Bill receives Royal Assent.

Martin Centre for Architectural and Urban Studies

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what funding the Engineering and Physical Sciences Research Council has provided to the Cambridge University Martin Centre for Architectural and Urban Studies on research into suburban development issues; and what research has been published. [66661]

Barry Gardiner: The Engineering and Physical Sciences Research Council (EPSRC) has provided £1.91 million to the Cambridge Martin Centre for Architectural and Urban Studies (the "Martin Centre") for research broadly in support of 'suburban development'. This comprises a travel grant for £5,000 in 2002 and a scoping study for £154,000 in 2003, which led to a major programme grant for £1.75 million awarded in 2004. This grant, funded as part of EPSRC's "Towards a Sustainable Urban Environment" programme, will support research by a large consortium, led by the Martin Centre, which aims to investigate Sustainability Of Land Use and Transport In Outer Neighbourhoods—SOLUTIONS, by considering how far, and by what means, towns and cities can be planned so that they are socially inclusive, economically efficient and environmentally sustainable.

It is the responsibility of academic researchers to publicise the outcomes of their research through appropriate channels. EPSRC has not yet been provided with publications information on this current project.

Migrant Workers

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will establish a migrant workers helpline for the reporting of (a) poor working conditions and (b) worker intimidation in west Lancashire. [66835]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Legal migrant workers are entitled to the same employment rights as other UK workers. The ACAS Helpline (08457 47 47 47) can provide free, impartial, practical advice to any worker who has concerns about their treatment in the workplace. We have also sought to work with new European member states to provide their workers with bi-lingual leaflets giving guidance aimed at helping workers before they leave home and information on sources of assistance should they have difficulties once in the UK. To date we have prepared leaflets in partnership with Poland and Lithuania.

The Department is currently reviewing the total current provision of Government-funded helplines for workers and employees. We are looking at how well this provision meets customer needs, especially the needs of the most vulnerable, and we will consider options for improvement. The first phase of this review will be completed this summer.

We have also recently launched new web pages at www.direct.gov.uk/employees to provide a central, easy to understand resource for individuals seeking information about their employment rights.

Within the north west, the Transport and General Workers' Union has led the creation of the North West Migrant Workers' Institute that brings together employers, public agencies, voluntary organisations and unions in the north west. The Institute's aims include collating and promoting best practice in the employment of migrant workers, providing a region-wide reference point for support and services for migrant workers and their communities, and identifying specific training needs among migrant workers and upskilling opportunities.

Miners' Compensation

Joan Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry for what reasons there is a six month wait for home medical visits by Atos Origin for miners claiming compensation. [65298]

Malcolm Wicks: Generally, around 90 per cent. of home visits are arranged within six months.

Before a home visit is arranged, the Medical, British Coal and Department of Work and Pensions records are obtained. This is generally completed within three months. However delays may occur where record holders do not respond quickly or where records cannot be traced or obtained. Once the records are obtained or there is evidence that they are no longer in existence, contact is made with the claimant to book a visit. In cases where there are no problems obtaining the records or obtaining a GP certificate it would be expected that an appointment would normally be completed within six months of being requested.

Procedures are in place to monitor performance and to ensure requests progress through the record collection and booking process. Claimants with short life expectancy (less than two years) are given priority and this process is monitored for compliance.

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many claims for noise induced hearing loss have been submitted to his Department; how many have been paid out; and in how many costs are in dispute. [66746]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 27 April 2006]: 38,788 hearing loss claims have been registered of which 29,959 have been settled by payment. It is not possible to state precisely in how many claims costs are disputed though it is in the region of 500.

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the 50 firms of solicitors which have received the most in fees for cases of claims for (a) chronic obstructive pulmonary disease, (b) vibration white finger and (c) noise induced hearing loss. [66747]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 27 April 2006]: The 50 solicitors who have received the most in costs for each of the listed claim types are set out in the following tables:

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry on what date his Department was first made aware of the contents of the agreement of 10 January 2002 between the Union of Democratic Mineworkers, Clare Walker and Beresfords. [66748]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 27 April 2006]: The Department was first made aware of the contents of the agreement referred to above in April 2005.

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry on what date the first noise induced hearing loss claim from (a) the Union of Democratic Mineworkers and (b) Vendside was (i) registered with his Department and (ii) paid out. [66749]

Malcolm Wicks: [holding answer 27 April 2006]: The first hearing loss claim from the Union of Democratic Mineworkers was registered on 29 April 1997 and from Vendside on 4 March 2004. The first compensation paid was on 29 July 1999 and 1 November 2005 respectively.

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry which solicitors have pursued common law claims for (a) vibration white finger and (b) chronic obstructive pulmonary disease in each year since 1999; and how many such claims each pursued in each year. [66750]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 27 April 2006]: The solicitors that have pursued common law claim for the above conditions since 1999 are set out in the following tables:

National Institute for Medical Research

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to the answer of 8 March 2006, Official Report, column 1513W to the hon. Member for Hertsmere (Mr. Clappison) on the National Institute for Medical Research (NIMR), if he will place a copy of Professor Blakemore's letter on moving the NIMR from Mill Hill to Euston in the Library. [65100]

Barry Gardiner: A copy of Professor's Blakemore's reply to the hon. Member for Hertsmere will be placed in the Libraries of the House.

Nuclear Decommissioning

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what his Department's estimate is of the cost of cleaning up the UK's nuclear power plants after decommissioning. [66144]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 27 April 2006]: The Nuclear Decommissioning Authority (NDA) assumed responsibility for the decommissioning and clean up of the UK's civil nuclear legacy on 1 April 2005. The cost of the decommissioning and clean up of the NDA's sites is calculated by means of Life Cycle Baselines—which are long-term plans providing a detailed assessment of the scope, methodology, and time scale of proposed site activities, including the cost of its commercial operations. Based on the 2005–06 Life Cycle Baselines the NDA has estimated the undiscounted cost of delivering its mission at £62.7 billion at current prices. This is the figure given in its strategy. But the NDA has also identified a potential further £7.5 billion of costs that will need to be included in future Life Cycle Baselines. Information on Life Cycle Baselines and the long-term funding of the NDA's mission is available on its website www.nda.gov.uk

Nuclear Energy

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the merits of using pebble bed modular nuclear reactors to generate electricity. [65532]

Malcolm Wicks: The Government have carried out no technical assessment of Pebble Bed Modular Reactor systems. We are aware of the research and development work being carried out in China and South Africa on this technology, and the potential that this technology may be more proliferation resistant, economic and safer than some other types of nuclear reactor.

Nuclear Fuel (Transportation)

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if the Government will undertake a review of the practice of transporting spent nuclear fuel by rail to take account of the increased terrorist threat. [65411]

Malcolm Wicks: The transportation of spent nuclear fuel by rail is carried out in a secure manner and in accordance with stringent security regulations—the Nuclear Industries Security Regulations 2003. These regulations are administered and enforced by the Office for Civil Nuclear Security, who regulate the security of such movements of spent nuclear fuel.

The security of the transportation of nuclear material was thoroughly reviewed following the events of 11 September 2001, and is regularly reviewed in light of the prevailing threat.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the security implications of the rail transportation of nuclear waste through (a) tunnels and (b) inner city areas. [65520]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 26 April 2006]: The transportation of spent nuclear fuel by rail is carried out in a secure manner and in accordance with stringent security regulations—the Nuclear Industries Security Regulations 2003. These regulations are administered and enforced by the Office for Civil Nuclear Security, who regulate the security of such movements of spent nuclear fuel.

The security of the transportation of nuclear material was thoroughly reviewed following the events of September 11 2001, and is regularly reviewed in light of the prevailing threat.

Nuclear Incidents

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the incidents at nuclear licensed installations that met the reporting criteria for each quarter from January 1990 to date; and what the (a) location and (b) nature of each incident was. [65098]

Malcolm Wicks: The Health and Safety Executive (HSE) publishes quarterly statements for incidences at nuclear installations, which meet the ministerial reporting criteria.

Quarterly statements of nuclear incidents at nuclear installations from 1 October 2000 are available on the HSE website at: http://www.hse.gov.uk/nuclear/quarterly-stat/index.htm

37 hard copies of quarterly statements between January 1990 and September 2000 have been placed in the Libraries of the House.

Post Office

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many sub-post offices have closed in East Yorkshire since 1997; and if he will make a statement. [66533]

Barry Gardiner: This is an operational matter for Post Office Ltd. Alan Cook, the managing director has been asked to reply direct to the hon. Member.

Nuclear Research

Mr. Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much has been committed by the Engineering and Physical Sciences Research Council to research into nuclear energy in each year since 1997; and if he will make a statement. [66733]

Barry Gardiner [holding answer 27 April 2006]: Expenditure by the Engineering and Physical Sciences Research Council on research and related training into nuclear energy, including both fusion and nuclear fission, was as follows:

Expenditure per annum (£000)

	Nuclear fission	Fusion[1]
1997–98	42	—
1998–99	81	—
1999–2000	62	—
2000–01	128	—
2001–02	325	—
2002–03	307	—
2003–04	212	15,630
2004–05	112	19,530
2005–06[2]	952	16,990

[1] Responsibility for funding of Fusion research transferred from DTI to EPSRC in April 2003
[2] Estimated expenditure

Mr. Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the total amount spent by BNFL in supporting UK involvement in international research into nuclear power is; and if he will make a statement. [66734]

Barry Gardiner [holding answer 27 April 2006]: In financial year 2005–06 BNFL spent £4.3 million on international research on advanced nuclear systems. This included research associated with the Generation IV programme as well as joint activities involving EU partners, IAEA and OECD. This programme of work was aimed at supporting the critical skills and capabilities required to keep the nuclear option open in the UK as aligned with UK energy policy.

Postal Charges

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the price of a (a) first class and (b) second class stamp has been in each year since 1976. [65017]

Barry Gardiner: I understand from Royal Mail that the price of a (a) first class and (b) second class stamp in each year since 1976 was:

Date	Weight not exceeding lb oz	First class	Second class
7 June 1976	60g	8½p	6½p

Renewable Energy

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what percentage of renewable energy generated in the UK in the last period for which figures are available came from landfill gas; and how many landfill gas sites there are. [67139]

Malcolm Wicks: In 2004, 28 per cent. of the electricity generated in the UK from renewable sources came from 327 landfill gas sites.

Road Fuel Prices

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will set up an inquiry into (a) possible price gouging by oil companies and (b) the reasons for recent price increases of petrol and diesel; and if he will make a statement. [65476]

Malcolm Wicks: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry will not be setting up inquiries into either issue. Pricing issues may be investigated by the Office of Fair Trading (OFT) if they are the result of anti-competitive agreements or behaviour.

The recent increase in the price of petrol and diesel reflects the increased cost of crude oil, caused partly by recent developments in oil producing countries such as Nigeria, Iraq and Iran.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions he has had during each week of 2006 with oil companies about the price of petrol and diesel; and if he will make a statement. [65477]

Malcolm Wicks: The data is not available in the format as requested. It is the Government's policy not to intervene in commercial price setting, as it believes the consumer is best served by the operation of open competition between companies.

The Government do, however, recognise the concerns about the current high price of oil products such as petrol and diesel. This was an issue, which I discussed at length with my ministerial colleagues from OPEC, among others, at the International Energy Forum in Doha last weekend.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will introduce legislation to penalise oil companies who are found to be price gouging of (a) petrol and (b) diesel; and if he will make a statement. [65480]

Malcolm Wicks: The Government do not intend to introduce new legislation.

The Competition Act 1998 prohibits anti-competitive agreements and conduct which amounts to an abuse of a dominant position under chapters I and II respectively. In general, the price a retailer sets for a product or service is a matter for its own commercial judgment. The OFT has an enforcement role under the Competition Act 1998, if it has reasonable grounds to suspect that prices are arrived at by an arrangement contrary to chapter I, or reflect an abuse of a dominant position within a market contrary to chapter II.

Shareholders' Voting Rights

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what measures have been taken by his Department to increase the effectiveness of shareholders' voting rights. [67588]

Alun Michael: The Government are committed to encouraging the exercise of share ownership rights. That is why we have already required all quoted companies to seek shareholder approval for the directors' remuneration report, and continue to support the work of the Shareholder Voting Working Group.

The Company Law Reform Bill builds on this by including provisions to ensure that voting processes are more transparent and that companies can enable indirect investors to enjoy or exercise various governance rights. In addition, the registered shareholder will have the right to appoint more than one proxy, thus enabling indirect investors acting as proxies to exercise all the meeting participation rights of the registered shareholder.

Sunday Trading Act

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the operation of Schedule 1, paragraph 2(4) of the Sunday Trading Act 1994. [66867]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Under the Sunday Trading Act 1994 large shops (over 280 sq m/3,000 sq ft) are required to remain closed on Easter Sunday. We are reviewing this as part of the current review of Sunday shopping.

Technology and Engineering Education

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the terms of reference are of (a) Technology and Engineering in Schools Strategy and (b) Engineering Education Alliance; who the members are; and what assessment he has made of its effectiveness to date. [64716]

Barry Gardiner: The Technology and Engineering in Schools Strategy (TESS) was initiated by Lord Sainsbury in 2005 and is a programme through which the engineering community has agreed to work together to provide better coordinated support for the promotion of engineering and technology in schools.

It is led by the Royal Academy of Engineering and involves the engineering institutions and other bodies active in promoting engineering and technology to schools at a national level. Membership currently comprises: The Royal Academy of Engineering, the Office of Science and Innovation, the G15 of Engineering Institutions, the ETB (and, through ETB, its Business and Industry Panel), SETNET, the BA, The Institute of Physics, The Association of Science Educators, The Learning Grid.

The TESS mission is to give every primary and secondary school in the UK, regardless of geography or local circumstances, equal access to a good number of quality-approved, high impact, coordinated schemes in engineering and technology related education. This will be achieved by the coordination of existing national-scale engineering and technology education schemes that deliver curriculum enrichment and/or teacher CPD. It will cover the promotion of engineering, the provision of information and the delivery of educational enrichment activities in engineering and technology to young people.

The TESS strategy was agreed in late November 2005 and the TESS project was initiated early in 2006. There has been no formal assessment of its achievements to date. The project has included wide consultation with the engineering community and with the science institutions has been followed by the development of an implementation plan to deliver the first phase of TESS by September 2006. This will be a directory of approved schemes in engineering and technology and a methodology for colleagues in science to customise and build upon. The approval process for schemes will be transparent, draw on existing best practice, be based on a set of criteria agreed by the TESS Steering Group, and any national engineering and technology scheme will be free to apply.

The Engineering Education Alliance (EEA) was formed in March 2002 following consultation with the engineering institutions and related organisations to provide a forum for coordinating information on education and skills initiatives related to engineering and technology. As of February 2006 membership of the EEA consisted of the following organisations:

Association of Cost Engineers, British Computer Society, The British Institute of Non-Destructive Testing, Chartered Institution of Building Services Engineers, The Chartered Institution of Water and Environmental Management, Engineering Council (UK), Energy Institute, Engineering Professors' Council, Engineering and Technology Board, Institution of Agricultural Engineers, Institution of Civil Engineers, Institution of Chemical Engineers, The Institute of Cast Metals Engineers, Institution of Engineering Designers, Institution of Engineering and Technology, Institution of Fire Engineers, Institution of Gas Engineers and Managers, The Institute of Healthcare Engineering and Estate Management, Institute of Highway Incorporated Engineers, Institution of Lighting Engineers, Institute of Mathematics and Its Applications, Institute of Marine Engineering, Science and Technology, Institution of Mechanical Engineers, Institute of Measurement and Control, The Institution of Nuclear Engineers, Institute of Acoustics, The Institute of Materials, Minerals and Mining, Institute of Physics, Institute of Physics and Engineering in Medicine, The Institute of Plumbing and Heating Engineering, Institution of Structural Engineers, Institution of Water Officers, Royal Academy of Engineering, Royal Aeronautical Society, The Royal Institution of Naval Architects, Science Engineering Technology Mathematics Network, Specialist Schools and Academies Trust, The Welding Institute.

The aims of the EEA are to:

Provide a regular forum where the engineering institutions and professional affiliates can meet to exchange views and knowledge with the aim of developing common cause in promoting engineering and technology in schools, colleges and universities.

Seek to influence the simplification of the engineering 'message' such that it becomes more effective in schools, FE and HE.

Support and endorse effective activities that communicate a consistent and clear message to young people about engineering.

Help to make engineering and technology initiatives in schools, colleges and universities fit for purpose.

Support and endorse key activities that enhance the perception of engineering and technology among parents, teachers and careers advisors.

Work closely with other bodies that already play a directional, influential and valuable role in the education sector (e.g. DfES and QCA).

Liaise, advise and provide effective support for teachers thus enabling them to improve the engineering, scientific, mathematical, design and technology skills of young people.

Provide opportunities for ad-hoc groups to be established as part of the Alliance, which might focus on specific activities.

Seek to influence and support existing bodies and networks rather than create a 'rival' body.

Provide and develop an EEA publicly accessible website that enables the engineering and technology and education communities to communicate with each other and promulgate their collective activities.

There has been no formal assessment of the EEA's achievements to date. It has completed two projects. The first (March to October 2003) was to research and publish a set of criteria to be used in assessing the many initiatives and externally initiated projects involving the promotion of 'engineering' in schools. These published guidelines were particularly aimed at those within the Science, Design and Technology, Engineering and Mathematics (STEM) community who are considering developing, or assessing for continuation, any STEM activity which seeks to involve schools, teachers or pupils.

The second EEA project completed its first phase in late 2005 and is about simplifying the engineering message and making entry into the profession more user-friendly. EEA members produced recommendations on how to increase the number of well-qualified and motivated entrants to engineering and identified key barriers to entry and how these should be tackled. This was published the EEA report "Entry to the world of engineering".

Thorp Nuclear Reprocessing Plant

Colin Challen: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he expects the full net costs of the closure of the Thorp nuclear reprocessing plant to be recovered through insurance. [65890]

Malcolm Wicks: This is a matter for the Nuclear Decommissioning Authority (NDA) who became the owners of the plant and facilities of BNFL (including Thorp) when it was set up on 1 April 2005.I understand from the NDA that it intends to make an insurance claim to cover the costs of the temporary closure of Thorp due to the incident including repairs, and any income losses resulting from the closure will be the subject of an insurance claim by the NDA. The extent of the claim will be dependant both on regulatory approval for the re-start of the facility and on the subsequent restart date. The claim is currently being compiled and validated by the NDA. This is expected to be completed by the summer in light of which discussions with loss adjusters will then begin.

Departmental Policies

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will set out with statistical evidence relating as closely as possible to West Lancashire constituency the effects in West Lancashire of changes to his Department's policies since 1997. [64238]

Alun Michael: The Department for Trade and Industry has responsibility for driving our ambition of 'prosperity for all' by working to create the best environment for business success in the UK, helping to increase productivity through the promotion of enterprise, innovation and creativity and investing in world-class science and technology. It ensures that a successful economy is underpinned by secure, sustainable and affordable energy and champions British interests globally while promoting economic reform in Europe and free and fair world trade.

In 2002 we launched the Manufacturing Strategy and Advisory Service which has helped over 1,000 companies nationally increase their value added by an average of £105,000. We invest approximately £500 million per year via the Small Business Service and Business Link to assist the start up and development of SMEs. In 2003–04 through the Office of Science and Technology we invested £2.4 billion in UK research and we are investing £187 million (2004 to 2006) through the Higher Education and Innovation Fund to support knowledge transfer. A summary of our achievements can be found at www.dti.gov.uk.

The Government-funded regional development agencies are the key vehicle for driving forward regional economic development. Businesses across the north west have benefited from a range of initiatives in the Regional Economic Strategy, developed by the Northwest Development Agency (NWDA) and regional partners, which aim to develop business cluster and key sector growth potential, assist access to finance, develop business incubators, promote innovation, drive up skills and support regeneration.

115 projects in West Lancashire are benefiting from NWDA funding. In addition, extensive business counselling and advice has been provided to businesses and potential start-ups through the Business Links, the Research and Development grant and the Manufacturing Advisory Service.

DTI provides comprehensive statistical information. The following web address will take you directly to the service: www.dti.gov.uk/statistics.

Westfield Development Centre

Jo Swinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether the Minister for Energy (a) has visited and (b) intends to visit the Westfield Development Centre in Fife. [63279]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 18 April 2006]: I have not visited the Westfield Development Centre.

I was grateful, however, for the Scottish Affairs Committee recommendations on 'Meeting Scotland's Future Energy Needs' published on 29 March and my office will be contacting Westfield Development Centre with a view to organising a meeting with their representatives.

World Trade

Mr. Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has made to the EU Commissioner for External Trade on (a) his decision to impose duties on imports of shoes from China and Vietnam, (b) the current discussions on imports of furniture from Asia and (c) the current talks in the Doha trade round; and if he will make a statement. [64673]

Ian Pearson: The Department of Trade and Industry was actively involved in the European Commission's consideration of provisional anti-dumping measures on footwear with leather uppers from China and Vietnam. Given the likelihood that measures would be implemented, Ministers and officials sought to ensure that the Commission took account of the concerns of the full range of stakeholders, not just those EU producers who had filed the initial complaint. In so doing, the UK successfully agreed for the exclusion of children's footwear and special technology athletic footwear from the measures.

The Government have made no representations on imports of furniture from Asia, nor is it aware of any discussions between the Commission and member states on this issue.

My right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State has met Peter Mandelson, the European Trade Commissioner, on several occasions over the last 12 months, to discuss the current Doha Development Agenda, including ways to secure an ambitious pro-development outcome to which the UK is fully committed.

Wylfa Power Station

Jenny Willott: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate has been made of the (a) cost of and (b) time required to carry out the necessary safety and environmental impact assessments into a possible extension of the life of Wylfa nuclear power station beyond 2010; and if he will make a statement. [64126]

Malcolm Wicks: This is a matter for the Nuclear Decommissioning Authority (NDA) who (when it was set up on 1 April 2005) became the owner of the plant and facilities of BNFL (including the fleet of Magnox nuclear power stations e.g. Wylfa). The NDA is considering the scope for extending the life of Wylfa beyond 2010—which is the planned closure date given in its approved strategy. The NDA has advised me that in light of factors such as the age of the plant, related safety concerns, and the closure of associated fuel processing facilities at Sellafield such an extension is highly unlikely.

PRIME MINISTER

Number Ten Events and Visits Office

Mr. Amess: To ask the Prime Minister how many people have been employed by the Number Ten Events and Visits Office since May 1997, broken down by grade; and if he will make a statement. [64994]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Chichester (Mr. Tyrie) on 23 November 2005, Official Report, column 1965W, and to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Lewes (Norman Baker) on 18 April 2006, Official Report, column 400W.

Visits

Mr. Amess: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list the towns in (a) England and Wales, (b) Scotland and (c) the European Union that he has visited in an official capacity in each month since 1997; what the purpose of each visit was; what the (i) date, (ii) time, (iii) location and (iv) duration was of each meeting; if he will place in the Library the text of any speech made; and if he will make a statement. [64998]

The Prime Minister: Records of my official visits are not categorised in this way.

For visits I have made in the UK between 2001 and 2004 I refer the hon. Member to the answers I gave to the hon. Member for Lewes (Norman Baker) on 7 November 2002, Official Report, columns 441–43W, 26 April 2004, Official Report, columns 829–30W, and 4 March 2005, Official Report, columns 1429–30W. Between January 2005 and March 2006 I have undertaken the following visits within the UK:

16–17 March	York

My visits cover a range of matters including health, education, criminal justice and the economy. I also travel regularly to my constituency. I travel making the most efficient and cost-effective arrangements. My travel arrangements are in accordance with the arrangements for official travel set out in Chapter 10 of the Ministerial Code, and the accompanying guidance document, "Travel by Ministers".

For overseas visits, the Government have since 1999 published an annual list of all visits overseas undertaken by Cabinet Ministers costing £500 or more during each financial year. Copies of these lists are available in the Library of the House. Information on the number of officials accompanying Ministers on overseas visits is included in the list. All Ministers' travel arrangements are in accordance with the arrangements for official travel set out in Chapter 10 of the Ministerial Code, and the accompanying guidance document, "Travel by Ministers". Information for the year 2005–06 will be published as soon as it is ready after the end of the financial year.

Copies of my speeches are made available on the No. 10 website.

CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

Boundary Commission

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs (1) when she expects the Boundary Commission to submit its recommendations on English boundary changes to the Department; and when she plans to lay draft orders before both Houses; [66448]

(2) what she expects the period of time to be between the Boundary Commission submitting its proposals for revised Westminster Parliamentary constituencies for England to her Department and laying draft orders before Parliament. [66249]

Bridget Prentice: The Parliamentary Boundary Commission for England expects to submit its report to the Government by the end of this year. Under the Parliamentary Constituencies Act 1986, the report will then be brought before Parliament "as soon as may be". We cannot be clear about the exact timing of the draft orders until we know the extent of any representations made following the submission of the report to the Government.

Cemetries

Mr. Iain Wright: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what (a) regulatory and (b) statutory quality guidelines local authorities are required to comply with in their management of cemeteries and burial grounds relating to health and safety. [65760]

Ms Harman: Under health and safety legislation, I understand that local authorities, as employers, have a duty to ensure that the risk is properly managed. The need to have regard to health and safety risks has been brought to cemetery managers' attention in our recently published "Guide for Burial Ground Managers".

Death Certificates

Norman Baker: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs in what circumstances a death certificate can be altered after it has been issued. [65539]

John Healey: I have been asked to reply.

The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 2 May 2006:

As Registrar General for England and Wales I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking in what circumstances a death certificate can be altered after it has been issued. (65539)

The term death certificate is widely used to mean either the medical certificate of cause of death issued by a doctor who certified the death or the certified copy of the registration of the death. In either case the only circumstances in which a death certificate can be altered is if it can be shown that it contains incorrect information.

Departmental Publications

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what the (a) research and (b) publication costs were of each of the reports and reviews by her Department in 2006. [67101]

Ms Harman: My Department does not hold this information centrally. To provide an answer would be disproportionate to cost.

Electoral Registration

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many electoral registration officers there are in the West Midlands region. [66499]

Bridget Prentice: There are 34 electoral registration officers in the area comprising the West Midlands region for the purpose of the regional assembly and elections to the European Parliament.

Telephone Advice Lines

Mr. Love: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many telephone advice lines her Department and its non-departmental public bodies support; how many telephone advisers each employs; and how much funding is provided to each by (a) her Department and its non-departmental public bodies, (b) other Government Departments, (c) the private sector and (d) the voluntary sector. [66584]

Ms Harman: We do not hold central records of the number and costs of the advice lines supported by my Department and its non-departmental public bodies. That information could now be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH OFFICE

Belarus

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Belarusian authorities regarding the imprisonment of opposition figures following the presidential elections. [65833]

Mr. Straw: The Minister for Europe, my right hon. Friend the Member for Paisley and Renfrewshire, South (Mr. Alexander), issued a statement on 24 March strongly condemning the arrests and calling for the release of those detained. The text of the statement is available at: http://www.gnn.gov.uk/Content/DetailLasp?ReleaseID=192765&NewsAreaID:=2. EU Heads of Mission in Minsk made a démarche to the Belarusian Ministry of Foreign Affairs in similar terms on 24 March. The presidency of the EU issued a declaration on 25 March condemning the use of violence against demonstrators, expressing serious concern about the arrest of demonstrators and members of the opposition, including Alexander Kazulin, and demanding their immediate release. The text of the declaration is available at: http://www.eu2006.at/en/News/CFSP_Statements/March/belarus.html. The EU's local presidency made a further démarche on 6 April. Senior Foreign and Commonwealth Office officials also raised this matter with the Belarusian Ambassador in London on 7 April. The conclusions of the General Affairs and External Relations Council on 10 April urged the Belarusian authorities not to penalise or discriminate against those exercising their right to freedom of expression and freedom of assembly, including the leaders of the opposition parties, and imposed restrictive measures on those responsible for these actions.

Chad

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has had with the Government of Chad about (a) the administration of oil revenues and (b) corruption. [65649]

Ian Pearson: We have had no specific discussions with the Government of Chad about the use of oil revenues or corruption. But we have made consistently clear our wish to see oil revenues used to benefit Africa's poor and the importance of transparency and African leadership in the fight against corruption.

We welcomed the arrangement between Chad and the World Bank in 1999 to enshrine the principle of using oil revenues to tackle poverty eradication in Chad but regret the recent dispute between the World Bank and Chad, following changes to the law by the Government of Chad to reduce this. We welcome US mediation and the current discussions between the World Bank and the Chadian authorities and hope they reach a positive resolution soon.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the extent of human rights abuses in Chad. [65651]

Ian Pearson: We are concerned about the poor human rights record in Chad, particularly the lack of freedom of expression and good governance. Our main means of influence with the Chadian authorities is through the EU. We, together with other EU member states, have called on them to take substantive steps to improve human rights and governance.

Chad is due to hold presidential elections on 3 May 2006. The UK is working with EU partners to urge the Chadian authorities to ensure a peaceful and credible electoral process in which all parties can participate.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether the Government authorise the transfer of arms to Chad. [65825]

Dr. Howells: All applications from the UK are rigorously assessed on a case-by-case basis against the Consolidated EU and National Export Licensing Criteria, taking full account of the prevailing circumstances at the time of application. This process includes specific criteria whereby we will not issue a licence where there is a clear risk that the proposed export might be used for internal repression, might aggravate existing tensions or conflict in the country of final destination or that the export may be used aggressively against another country. Details of all export licences approved to Chad are available in the Quarterly and Annual Reports on Strategic Export Controls (available on the Foreign and Commonwealth Office website at: http://www.fco.gov.uk/servlet/Front?pagename=OpenMarket/Xcelerate/ShowPage&c=Page&cid=1089131553823), and are subject to detailed retrospective scrutiny by the Quadripartite Committees.

The Government have in the past authorised applications for the export of military-listed goods. Our records show that since 2004, three Open Individual Export Licences have been approved for humanitarian use in Chad.

China

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with the Government of China on (a) reports of the harvesting and sale of organs from executed prisoners and (b) human rights in China. [65741]

Ian Pearson: The Government regularly raise human rights with the Chinese Government, through the formal UK and EU-China human rights dialogues, ministerial meetings and contacts between officials.

The Government are concerned about the practice of prisoners subject to the death penalty in China donating their organs and the trade in these organs. I raised these concerns with the Chinese Government on 7 April. The Chinese Government have acknowledged this practice, but have denied recent media reports of widespread organ harvesting in China. We have received no evidence to substantiate these reports. We believe that the right approach is to seek to overcome the social taboo of organ transplants and encourage donation from the general population. The Government welcome the announcement by the Chinese Ministry of Health of a new regulation to come into effect on 1 July, to ban the sale of organs and introduce medical standards for organ transplants.

Colombia

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the freedom and fairness of the forthcoming presidential election in Colombia. [65654]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: The first round of the Colombian presidential elections will take place at the end of May. It is too early to make an assessment of the election. All of the presidential candidates continue to be given plenty of opportunity to voice their opinions through Colombia's media.

The Colombian parliamentary elections in March 2006, which were accepted by most observers as being free and fair, confirmed that Colombia is a democratic country. However, there are areas in which democratic institutions and processes could be strengthened.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the likely effects of decisions of the Colombian Government (a) to negotiate a demobilisation programme, with rights to immunity from prosecution for human rights abuses, with right-wing paramilitary groups and (b) not to negotiate with left-wing rebels. [65680]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: As was made clear in the EU Council Conclusions on Colombia in October 2005, we and other EU member states consider that the effective and transparent implementation of the Law on Justice and Peace, under which more than 30,000 paramilitaries in Colombia have now demobilised, will have a positive impact on peace-building in Colombia. This implementation needs to ensure that those found guilty of human rights abuses are punished for their crimes.

The Colombian Government is actively involved in talks with the National Liberation Army, a left-wing illegal armed group and the next round of talks began on 25 April. Its recent efforts to begin preliminary talks with the Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia, the countries biggest illegal armed group, have been consistently rebutted by the guerrillas.

Cote D'Ivoire

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with members of the Government of Cote d'Ivoire regarding President Laurent Gbagbo's concerns of possible electoral fraud resulting from the concurrent running of disarmament and voter identification programmes; and if he will make a statement. [66640]

Ian Pearson: There have been no direct contacts between Foreign and Commonwealth Office Ministers and the Government of Cote d'Ivoire about these concerns.

The UK is represented at official level at the African Union-led International Working Group (IWG) which oversees the peace process. At its last meeting on 20 April, the IWG recalled that the main Ivorian leaders had agreed on simultaneous and immediate implementation of the voter identification and disarmament processes. The IWG called on the Government to accelerate simultaneous implementation and stressed that the identification of citizens will allow the establishment of reliable voter lists and contribute to the holding of free, fair, open and transparent elections.

Cyprus

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he last visited Cyprus; and if he will make a statement. [66921]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary last visited Cyprus on 24–25 January. I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary to the hon. Member for Eastbourne (Mr. Waterson) on 7 February 2006, Official Report, columns 733–35.

Darfur

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the extent of al-Qaeda influence and activity in Darfur. [66346]

Ian Pearson: Osama Bin Laden was resident in Sudan until he was expelled in 1996. We have no details of any current al-Qaeda activity or influence in Darfur. On 23 April, Osama bin Laden made a statement including a call for Muslims to resist a Western 'crusade' in Darfur. The Government of Sudan subsequently made a public statement rejecting and criticising bin Laden's comments.

Darfur (UN Access)

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent assessment he has made of the Sudanese Government's co-operation with the United Nations, with particular reference to the UN's access to the Darfur region. [65719]

Mr. Straw: The Sudanese Government's co-operation with the UN is wholly inadequate. On 4 April, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for International Development and my noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, Lord Triesman of Tottenham, wrote to the Sudanese Foreign Minister, Dr Lam Akol, expressing concern about the Government of Sudan's refusal to allow the UN Humanitarian Co-ordinator, Jan Egeland, access to Darfur. They made clear that the Government must facilitate access for and co-operate in full with UN and humanitarian agencies in Darfur.

We are also pressing the Government of Sudan to allow access to Darfur for the UN Department for Peacekeeping Operations planning mission to look at options for a UN force in Darfur, authorised by UN Security Council Resolution 1663.

Democratic Republic of the Congo

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Government of the Democratic Republic of the Congo on the merit of an HIV/AIDS prevention and awareness campaign which specifically refutes the belief that sorcery is a vehicle for transmission of the virus. [65656]

Ian Pearson: The UK has an on-going dialogue with the Congolese Government on HIV, the "child witch" phenomenon and human rights. But we have not made representations specifically linking HIV awareness and sorcery. The UK fully supports the Congolese Government's planned HIV sensitisation programme. This will help dispel the myth about the link between "sorcery" and HIV, and will contribute to longer-term improvement of children's rights. To address the issue of HIV/AIDS in the Democratic Republic of the Congo, the UK has funded behaviour change communications campaigns and the distribution of millions of condoms. We are assisting the Government to implement a national HIV/AIDS strategy, and we are supporting the provision of primary health care and education through UN agencies and non-governmental organisations.

Eritrea

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what assessment his Department has made of the level of religious freedom in Eritrea; and if he will make a statement; [66095]

(2) what discussions he has held with officials from the Eritrean Government on religious persecution; and if he will make a statement. [66096]

Ian Pearson: We remain concerned by reports of State interference in religious affairs and lack of freedom of worship in Eritrea. We monitor closely action taken by the authorities against minority religious groups.

Together with EU partners, we raise these issues with the Eritrean Government whenever possible. My noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, Lord Triesman of Tottenham, wrote to President Isaiah on 6 October 2005 and has raised our concerns with the Eritrean ambassador several times.

EU Finance

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the reasons were for the UK's position on the discharge of the EU's 2004 budget at the Economic and Financial Affairs Council on 14 March; and what discussions he had with his Dutch counterpart on this matter. [66917]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: I have been asked to reply.

I attended the Economic and Financial Affairs Council on 14 March. The UK's position in support of the Council's recommendation on discharge was based on recognition of the progress that has been made in financial management and control and the importance of Council commitment to the November ECOFIN agreement on taking forward the "integrated internal control framework". Treasury officials work closely with their Dutch counterparts and kept me informed of the Dutch position.

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what (a) net and (b) gross contributions to the EU are to be paid by each of the 25 member states of the EU in each of the next seven years following the agreement on 17 December 2005. [66122]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: I have been asked to reply.

I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply given to the hon. Member for South Holland and The Deepings (Mr. Hayes) on 27 February 2006, Official Report, column 332W.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on (a) future financing of the EU and (b) EU budget reform. [66922]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: As I said in my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for North-West Leicestershire (David Taylor) on 25 April 2006, Official Report, columns 497–99, the December European Council agreed a European Union budget for 2007 to 2013. The Government welcome the Inter-Institutional Agreement (ILA) that the Council, the European Commission and Parliament have provisionally reached to give formal effect to the December agreement. The Council now needs formally to approve the IIA, but before then a debate on the agreement will take place on the Floor of the House.

The December European Council also invited the European Commission to undertake a full and wide-ranging review of the EU budget and to report back to the European Council in 2008–09.

Fisheries

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the potential effect on the progress of the proposed UN referendum in Western Sahara of the signing by the EU of a new EU-Morocco Fisheries Partnership Agreement; and if he will make a statement. [66493]

Dr. Howells: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Islington, North (Jeremy Corbyn) on 23 January 2006, Official Report, column 1806–07W.

European Constitution

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what written submission the UK Government (a) have made and (b) intend to make in advance of discussions on a European Constitution at the Council of Ministers meeting on 27 May. [67577]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: The Government are still considering how they intend to contribute to preparations for the meeting.

Avian Influenza

Mr. Vara: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what (a) guidance and (b) support his Department offers on inoculation against the H5N1 virus to British nationals living overseas in countries where there is a major outbreak. [65755]

Dr. Howells: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO), in conjunction with the Department of Health and other Departments, has produced a comprehensive fact-sheet on avian and pandemic flu for both Britons travelling and resident overseas, available at http://www.fco.gov.uk/flu Included in the comprehensive guidance are specific precautions one should take to minimise the risks of contracting avian flu, which are believed to be very low. The FCO regularly updates travel advice pages when a country is verified by the World Health Organisation as having had incidences of avian influenza.

British diplomatic missions overseas cannot provide medicines or medical treatment to British nationals living overseas, but they will be able to advise on the local availability of medicines and provide details of health care providers.

There is currently no vaccine available to inoculate humans against avian influenza.

International Arrest Warrants

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he has received documentary evidence from the Israeli Government on potential changes to UK law on international arrest warrants. [66291]

Dr. Howells: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office has received representations from the Israeli Government on the subject of international arrest warrants. I discussed this with the Israeli Foreign Minister, Tzipi Livni, when she visited London on 2 March.

Internet/Website Provision

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list (a) the websites operated by his Department and (b) the reports placed on the internet in March 2006, indicating in each case whether paper copies were also made available. [65207]

Ian Pearson: The websites operated by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) include the main FCO website, UKvisas website, i-UK.com website and 180 overseas post websites. A complete list of the websites operated by the FCO will be placed in the Library of the House, as the information requested is lengthy. Five reports were published on the FCO main site during March 2006, these were:

1. Autumn Performance Report;
2. Report on Stakeholder Consultation;
3. UN High Level Report;
4. Six monthly report on Hong Kong, July-December 2005;
5. Staff survey 2006 highlight report.

The Autumn Performance Report and the six monthly report on Hong Kong, July to December 2005, were placed in the Library of the House.

Iran

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps are being taken by his Department to support pro-democracy student groups in Iran. [65664]

Dr. Howells: Encouraging greater respect for human rights and political freedoms is a key element of our approach towards Iran. We seek to promote the internationally recognised principles to which many Iranians aspire including freedom of speech and transparent, genuinely democratic and accountable government. We maintain a dialogue with those inside and outside the Iranian Government who are working to support reform and the promotion of the rule of law. We do not generally publicise the details without the consent of our Iranian partners.

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent assessment he has made of the Iranian space programme; and if he will make a statement. [65722]

Mr. Straw: The UK reviews the space programme of other nations on a periodic basis. We note Iran's interest in using earth observation data, and that Russia recently launched a small satellite belonging to Iran for this purpose. Iran does not currently have the capability to launch a satellite into space without assistance.

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment his Department has made of the threat to Baha'is in Iran; and if he will make a statement. [66118]

Dr. Howells: We have serious concerns about the situation of the Baha'i community in Iran. Reports suggest that Baha'is have been subjected to harassment, intimidation and arbitrary arrest and a hostile campaign in the media. Iran's Chambers of Commerce have also reportedly been ordered to create lists of all Baha'i businesses. In December, a Baha'i, Dhaibullah Mahrami, died in custody in unclear circumstances.

The Special Rapporteur on Freedom of Religion or Belief of the United Nations Commission on Human Rights, Asma Jahangir, has recently highlighted her concern at a letter apparently from Iran's Supreme Leader instructing the country's authorities and armed forces to identify Baha'is and monitor their activities. I share these concerns. I can see no justification for the authorities to collect such information, nor for ordering surveillance of Baha'is simply on account of their faith.

Ministers and officials have pressed the Iranian authorities on many occasions to address discrimination suffered by the Baha'i community. At our suggestion, the EU presidency did so on 11 April 2006. On 10 April 2006, EU foreign Ministers underlined their > "continued concerns about the human rights situation in Iran, in particular regarding the situation of Baha'is".

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment his Department has made of the extent of freedom to practise religion in Iran; and if he will make a statement. [66119]

Dr. Howells: We continue to have serious concerns about the situation of religious minorities in Iran. The Iranian constitution recognises the Christian, Jewish and Zoroastrian communities, but not others such as the Baha'is. We receive many reports of discrimination against those wishing to practise these faiths. The position of people who have converted from Islam appears to be especially difficult. We have made clear to the Iranian authorities that we believe that persecution of individuals on the grounds of their religious beliefs is unacceptable. We expect Iran to uphold freedom of religion and belief in accordance with its international obligations under Article 18 of the International Covenant on Civil & Political Rights.

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what his policy is on the provision of assistance to UK citizens in Iran; and if he will make a statement. [66488]

Dr. Howells: Our policy on consular assistance to British nationals in Iran is the same as it is elsewhere in the world. My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary made a statement to the House on 21 March announcing the publication of the consular guide which sets out what we can and cannot do for British Nationals (Official Report, Columns155–168). A copy of the guide has been sent to all hon. Members and is also available in the Library of the House.

Iraq

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when his Department's officials have met Iraqi Ministry of Oil officials since March 2003; and what subjects were discussed. [66770]

Dr. Howells: Officials based in our embassy in Baghdad have had regular contact with Ministry of Oil officials since 2003. Discussions cover a range of subjects relating to rehabilitation and future development of the energy sector in Iraq.

Israel (Nuclear Threat)

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps are being taken to minimise the possible nuclear threat to Israel following recent statements from the President of Iran. [66957]

Dr. Howells: President Ahmadinejad's statements calling Israel a 'fake regime' which 'cannot logically continue to live' are outrageous and wholly unacceptable. They further heighten concerns about Iran's approach in the region, and reinforce international determination that Iran should comply with its non-proliferation obligations.

We remain fully committed to preventing the spread of nuclear weapons. With France and Germany we have been at the forefront of efforts to encourage Iran to take steps that would create confidence that the intentions of its nuclear programme are solely peaceful. The Security Council is now involved, to reinforce the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) and its Board of Governors. We strongly supported the statement on 29 March by the President of the Security Council, calling on Iran to take the steps the IAEA Board has deemed essential. We will now be consulting other Security Council members on what further action the Council should take, following the IAEA Director-General's 28 April report on Iranian compliance.

Moldova

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the ability of opposition politicians in Moldova to operate without (a) intimidation, (b) harassment and (c) threats of legal action; and if he will make a statement. [66492]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: Respect for democracy, freedom of expression and the rule of law are principles which form the foundation for UK and EU co-operation with Moldova. They are also principles to which Moldova is committed through its participation in the Organisation for Security and Co-operation in Europe (OSCE) and other international organisations. Moldova has made some progress towards becoming a functioning democracy, with active opposition parties represented in Parliament. However, the OSCE's Office for Democracy and Institution for Human Rights identified a number of shortcomings in the conduct of the 2005 parliamentary elections, including obstruction of the opposition's campaign. Recent reports have also raised concerns about interference by the Moldovan authorities in the work of opposition political parties. Through the EU troika, we have raised our concerns about these issues, most recently with the Moldovan Foreign Minister at the EU-Moldova Co-operation Council on 6 April. We will continue to monitor Moldova's progress towards meeting its democratic commitments, including through the European Neighbourhood Policy, which offers Moldova the opportunity to achieve its ambition of closer relations with the EU, subject to progress on internal reform.

Nigeria (Homosexuality)

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with the Government of Nigeria on the progress of its bill to criminalise homosexuality. [65682]

Ian Pearson: We are concerned this Bill will cut across many of Nigeria's international human rights obligations by continuing to criminalise the homosexual community in Nigeria. We are also concerned that the Bill will criminalise non-governmental organisations and human rights defenders who may work on behalf of the homosexual community.

Together with our EU partners we plan to raise our concerns with the Nigerian authorities.

Palestine

Richard Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with US representatives on the withdrawal of funding for Palestinian development projects; and if he will make a statement. [65456]

Hilary Benn: The UK Government are in regular contact with the US on development assistance to Palestinians. On 30 March, the Quartet (the US, the EU, the UN and Russia) noted that the new Palestinian Government has not yet complied with the principles of non-violence, recognition of Israel's right to exist and commitment to the peace process.

Without progress against the Quartet's conditions, the UK cannot provide direct support to the Palestinian Cabinet or its Ministries. Projects with Palestinian ministries have been suspended or re-oriented to focus on other partners. The Department for International Development is also working with other major donors including the US to establish the most effective mechanism to meet the basic needs of the Palestinian people without providing funding through the Palestinian Government.

Scrutiny Reserve

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the answers of 17 January 2006, Official Report, column 1290W and 7 March 2006, Official Report, column 1344W, on the scrutiny reserve, what the reason was for the different estimates for the number of scrutiny overrides in 2005. [66155]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: My reply to the hon. Member on 17 January 2006 (Official Report, column 1290W) made it clear that the figure for the number of overrides for the period July-December 2005 was a preliminary estimate. The figure of 36 was based on a preliminary list compiled by officials that had not yet been checked with the lead departments responsible for the legislation in question. That checking process revealed the lower final figure given in the follow-up reply to the hon. Member on 7 March (Official Report, column 1345W). The initial list identified two cases which should have been included in the previous report for January to June and one that had been included in error which had already been covered in the previous report. Other adjustments were needed, for example, to remove items which had in fact received clearance before agreement. The details of the overrides for the period July to December 2005 have now been sent to the European Scrutiny Committee. A copy of that letter has been placed in the Library of the House.

Son Jong Nam

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the North Korean Government for clemency in the case of Son Jong Nam. [66345]

Ian Pearson: The Government learned recently of the reported conviction of and death penalty imposed on Mr. Son Jong Nam. We have asked our ambassador in Pyongyang to make inquiries.

Sudan

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what powers are available to African Union troops to capture those who are believed to be involved in acts of atrocity in Sudan; and how many such people have been (a) captured, (b) brought to trial, (c) convicted and (d) imprisoned in the last 12 months. [66719]

Ian Pearson: The African Union's mandate is to monitor developments and contribute to a secure environment. It does not include powers to arrest suspected perpetrators of atrocities in Sudan.

The Government have consistently made clear that those responsible for the terrible crimes committed in Darfur should be brought to justice. We have pressed the Government of Sudan to apprehend, bring to trial and punish those involved. The UK sponsored UN Security Council Resolution (UNSCR) 1593, referring the situation in Darfur to the International Criminal Court (ICC). The Prosecutor of the ICC began a formal investigation on 6 June 2005. We also co-sponsored UNSCR 1672 of 25 April, which imposed the first targeted sanctions on individuals responsible for human rights violations in Darfur.

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations he has made to members of the African Union to increase their troop levels in Sudan. [66721]

Ian Pearson: There have been no recent representations made by my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary or Foreign and Commonwealth Office Ministers to members of the African Union (AU) to increase their troop levels in Sudan. However, we support the AU's decision in principle to transfer responsibility for the international monitoring mission in Darfur to the UN. The UN force will need to be larger and better equipped than the present AU force, currently totalling some 7,000 troops. Meanwhile we continue to offer the AU support to enhance the effectiveness of its mission.

Turkey

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what discussions he has had with members of the Turkish Government regarding the murder of Ferho and Fatim Akgül in Turkish Kurdistan in March 2006; what assurances he has sought with regard to the investigation into this act; and if he will make a statement; [66642]

(2) what assessment his Department has made of the allegations of the involvement of the Turkish local authorities and the Turkish armed forces in the murder of Ferho and Fatim Akgül in Turkish Kurdistan in March 2006; and if he will make a statement. [66643]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: Ferho and Fatma Akgül were found murdered on 2 March near Mardin in Southeast Turkey. We are aware of a number of allegations about their deaths, including that from Derwich Ferho, Chairman of the Kurdish Institute in Brussels, that Turkish military special forces and village guards were responsible for his parents' killing. The local prosecutor has opened an investigation into the killings. Our embassy in Ankara is closely monitoring the case, but the Government has not discussed this matter with the Turkish Government.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with members of the Turkish Government since January 2006 concerning allegations of violence against the Turkish population; and if he will make a statement. [66644]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: During his visit to Turkey on 25 January, my right hon. Friend, the Foreign Secretary pressed for sustained Turkish momentum on internal reform. Our ambassador in Ankara has since conveyed similar messages to senior Turkish Ministers and officials and has discussed the recent rioting in Diyarbakir and other provinces with the Turkish Government.

The Government condemn the recent violence in South East Turkey and the subsequent terrorist attacks in Istanbul.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps his Department is taking to monitor and evaluate the full adoption and implementation of the Copenhagen criteria in Turkey; what progress has been reported since Janaury 2005; what areas have been highlighted as needing more work; and if he will make a statement. [66646]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: The European Commission monitors a candidate country's fulfilment of the Copenhagen political criteria and produces an annual regular report on candidates' progress. The November 2005 report states that Turkey "continues to sufficiently fulfil the Copenhagen political criteria," but that "implementation of the reforms remains uneven". Areas requiring further attention include torture, freedom of expression and religious freedoms. The Government closely monitors developments and regularly raises related issues with Turkey, and did so most recently at ministerial level during my right hon. Friend, the Foreign Secretary's visit to Turkey on 25 January.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent assessment he has made of the freedom to operate of the legal profession in Turkey. [66944]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: The Turkish judicial system has been strengthened in recent years with the adoption of structural reforms and a new penal code. There have been concerns raised about provisions of the Code of Criminal Procedure which effectively prevents lawyers accused or convicted of terrorism offences from representing others accused of terrorist crimes.

We, along with the European Commission, will continue to monitor the effect of the new legislation, including with regards to defence rights and free operation of the legal profession.

CABINET OFFICE

Legislative and Regulatory Reform Bill

24. Gordon Banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what assessment he has made of the likely effect of his proposed amendments to the Legislative and Regulatory Reform Bill on the burden of administration affecting businesses. [66796]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The Legislative and Regulatory Reform Bill has the potential to make a real impact on reducing burdensome regulation. I am currently looking to focus the order-making power in the Bill on delivering better regulation objectives, to bring to an end speculation about far-fetched constitutional risks. These amendments will make it clear that the Bill provides an effective power to reduce burdens more quickly and easily.

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make a statement on the extent of ministerial powers to be granted by the Legislative and Regulatory Reform Bill. [67305]

Mr. Jim Murphy: I refer the hon. Member to my letter of 12 April 2006 to the Chairman of the Regulatory Reform Committee, my hon. Friend the Member for Ellesmere Port and Neston (Andrew Miller). Copies are available in the Library.

Public Services (Reform)

25. Mr. Bone: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what recent assessment he has made of the progress of the Cabinet Office's work in leading and supporting the delivery and reform of public services. [66797]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The Cabinet Office has an important role in supporting and challenging Departments to more effectively deliver and reform public services.

Correspondence

26. Mr. Allen: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what discussions he has had with Cabinet colleagues on handling correspondence from hon. Members; and if he will make a statement. [66799]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The revised "Guidance for Departments on the handling of Members' and Peers' Correspondence", published on 21 July last year, sets out best practice. Copies of the guidance are available in the Library.

Ministerial Code

27. Richard Ottaway: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster whether the Government plans to amend the Ministerial Code. [66800]

Mr. Jim Murphy: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I provided on 21 March 2006, Official Report, column 202W, to the hon. Member for Hammersmith and Fulham (Mr. Hands).

Council Tax (Official Residences)

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster pursuant to the answer of 29 March 2006, Official Report, column 1031W, on council tax (official residences), whether there has been a change in occupancy in any official residence activating revised guidance for Ministers on their liability for council tax on such residences. [66768]

Mr. Jim Murphy: There has been no such change. I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 16 March 2006, Official Report, column 2394W, by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister, confirming that the right hon. Member for Sheffield, Brightside (Mr. Blunkett) had left his official residence.

Engagements

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster whether he will attend the birthday celebrations for the Duke of Lancaster in May. [66903]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster's Office will be represented by Duchy Officers at Her Majesty's birthday celebrations.

Equal Pay

John Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what assessment he has made of the gender pay gap in the civil service. [65626]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The Cabinet Office undertook an equal pay review for the senior civil service (SCS) in 2002 and equal pay has been re-examined each year since then as part of the Government's evidence to the Senior Salaries Review Body. Under the delegated pay arrangements for staff below the SCS, every Department and agency produced an equal pay action plan in 2003 as part of the Government's commitment to address the gender pay gap. Civil service organisations continue to monitor progress against their action plans and equality-proof their pay systems following implementation of annual pay awards.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Accession State Workers

Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the number of nationals of the new EU member states who were working in a self-employed capacity in the UK on 31 January. [66382]

Mr. McNulty: The Accession Treaty allows nationals of the new member states to establish a business in the UK if they choose on the same terms as UK nationals.

Self-employed migrants from the new EU member states are not required to register under the Worker Registration Scheme and as such there are no reliable estimates of the number of self-employed accession nationals in the UK.

Airport Security

Mr. Burrowes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps the Government are taking to safeguard the UK's borders at airports. [66698]

Mr. McNulty: At major airports, Border Control has staff deployed to meet all services requiring immigration control. At smaller airports, resources are deployed on an intelligence led risk basis to deal with passengers who require leave to enter. The IAN Act 2006 provides additional powers to deal more effectively with people posing a threat to border security, including the capture of data on passengers and fingerprinting of those detained. The Border Management Programme ensures that the three border agencies (HMRC, UKIS and the Police) work more closely together to maximise border security while minimising the impact on legitimate traffic. MATRA groups (Multi Agency Threat and Risk Assessment Group) at airports bring together border agencies, operators and carriers to identify and assess risks to general security and put in place action plans in order to counter any potential threats. e-Borders is a multi agency programme to harness passenger information and use new technology to provide more effective border controls. Project Semaphore, as part of the e-Borders programme, is further strengthening the border through the use of an advance passenger information processing system and the adoption of a proactive intelligence led approach.

Assisted Suicide/Infanticide

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) males and (b) females (i) were found guilty of and (ii) pleaded guilty to complicity in or assisting (A) a suicide and (B) infanticide in Coventry and the West Midlands in the last period for which figures are available. [65939]

Hazel Blears: rom the Court proceedings database held by the Office for Criminal Justice Reform show that there were no convictions for aiding and abetting suicide in Coventry and the West Midlands in 2004. Offences of complicity in or assisting infanticide cannot be separated from the offence of infanticide itself in the data held. However the records show that there were no convictions for infanticide in Coventry and the West Midlands in 2004.

Figures for 2005 will be available in the autumn of 2006.

Asylum/Immigration

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what his Department's policy is on the deportation of failed asylum seekers to the Democratic Republic of Congo; and if he will intercede in the case of Aleen Monka' bie Izai. [64926]

Mr. McNulty: Congolese claimants who have been found by the Home Office and the appeals process not to be in need of international protection and have no legal basis of stay in the UK are expected to return to the Democratic Republic of Congo (DRC).

The Home Office works with the International Organisation for Migration (IOM) to facilitate voluntary returns of failed asylum seekers to any region of DRC. Where an individual does not return voluntarily, removal may be enforced. As with all countries, returns of failed asylum seekers to DRC are considered on an individual case basis.

With reference to the case of Aleen Monka' bie Izai, while it would not be appropriate for me to comment on the case, any representations received will be fully considered.

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what his policy is on granting asylum to refugees from Darfur; and if he will make a statement. [65555]

Mr. McNulty: Asylum applications from all nationalities, including Darfuris from Sudan, are assessed on a case by case basis against the background of current country information.

Current reports from the foremost governmental and non-governmental human rights monitors confirm previously held information that tribal leaders, prominent activists and intellectuals of non-Arab ethnic Darfuri origin are at increasing risk of treatment amounting to persecution outside of the Darfur regions. In these cases the grant of asylum is likely to be appropriate. However, the available country information does not indicate that ordinary non-Arab ethnic Darfuris are likely to be at risk of treatment amounting to persecution outside Darfur. In these cases the grant of asylum is unlikely to be appropriate.

Stephen Hesford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures his Department used to assess the suitability of the set of questions recently formulated by a group of senior Anglican clergy to assess the faith of asylum seekers. [65645]

Andy Burnham: Asylum caseworkers are trained to conduct interviews in a professional manner and to determine asylum claims fairly in accordance with our obligations under the 1951 Convention. However, cases where an individual claims to be at risk of persecution due to a faith conversion can raise sensitive issues where there are doubts about the genuineness of the conversion. The paper submitted by the clergy does not provide a set of questions to test an individual's conversion but will form the basis for further discussion and use in guidance to caseworkers. This will be taken forward in consultation with the clergy concerned and other stakeholders.

Philip Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many applications for asylum have been rejected on the grounds of asylum but have been approved, whether or not on appeal, on human rights grounds in each year since 1997. [65830]

Mr. McNulty: Information on the number of decisions to grant exceptional leave, humanitarian protection or discretionary leave are published quarterly and annually. Copies are available from the Library of the House and on the Home Office Research Development and Statistics Directorate web site at http://homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.html.

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many applications for section 4 support were received by National Asylum Support Service in each month since 1 January 2006; and how many of these applications resulted in a grant of such support. [65982]

Mr. McNulty: Section 4 support statistics are published on a quarterly basis, figures for January, February and March 2006 will be published on 23 May 2006. These will be available on the Home Office Research Development and Statistics website at http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.html.

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many flights have been made to Erbil airport from the UK for the purpose of returning failed asylum seekers to Iraq in each of the last two years; how many such people have been on these flights; and how many of these were voluntary returns. [66517]

Mr. McNulty: Between 16 August 2005 and 27 April 2006 there have been 21 charter flights which have returned 1,019 Iraqis under the VARRP (Voluntary Assisted Return and Integration Programme). Prior to 16 August all returns were made by way of flights from the UK to Jordan, with the returnees continuing their journey overland from Amman to Baghdad.

In the last two years there has been one flight from the UK to Erbil for the purpose of enforcing the removal of failed asylum seekers. This flight was on 20 November 2005 and returned 15 Iraqis.

Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) asylum seekers and (b) migrants are registered with the police. [50667]

Mr. McNulty: Asylum seekers are not required to register their details with the police, although they may be required to report to the police as a condition of their temporary admission.

Bruche Police Training Centre

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent discussions the Department has held on the future use of the Bruche Police Training Centre. [64744]

Hazel Blears: The Bruche site will continue to be used in its capacity as a police training centre up until 26 May this year. Decisions regarding the future of this Centrex site are the responsibility of the Centrex board and Chief Executive. The Home Office remains closely involved in the process of disposing of the site, both through the board and directly with the officials in Centrex. Discussions are not currently focused on the future use of the site as options around future use will depend largely on who takes an interest in purchasing the site once it is placed on the market.

Builders' Tools

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what advice is given by (a) his Department and (b) the police to builders to secure their materials, tools and properties they are working on to avoid crime; and if he will make a statement. [66774]

Hazel Blears: Although the Home Office does not offer specific crime prevention advice to builders, it has, in partnership with the business community and police, produced crime prevention advice tailored for all businesses. Guidance such as "Your business: Keep crime out of it" and "Putting Crime Out Of Business" give practical information to help businesses identify security risks and take measures to reduce crime. They are available on the crime reduction website (http://www.crimereduction.gov.uk/businesscrimeminisite01.htm) and include advice on the safe storage of building materials and security of buildings.

General crime prevention advice is also available from the police on individual force websites and more detailed crime prevention advice can be obtained by visiting local police stations.

Charities

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list those who responded to the consultation on financial thresholds for charities to register with the Charity Commission; and how many of those supported (a) a £10,000 and (b) a £5,000 threshold. [66760]

Paul Goggins: The review "Private Action, Public Benefit" (Prime Minister's Strategy Unit, 2002) proposed a group of measures to change the registration rules for small charities. An analysis of the response to public consultation on that group of measures can be found in "Charities and Not-for-Profits: A Modern Legal Framework" (Home Office, 2003).

The Government undertook—House of Lords], 28 June 2005, Official Report, column 231—to review, with full public consultation, all the financial thresholds for charities a year after Royal Assent of the Charities Bill which is now before Parliament.

Changes to the levels of financial thresholds can be made by statutory instrument.

Child Trafficking

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 30 March 2006, Official Report, column 1160W, on child trafficking, where the figures relating to the numbers of children smuggled into the UK are held. [65986]

Mr. McNulty: The specific information requested is not kept centrally and no reliable statistical information on the potential numbers of children being smuggled to the United Kingdom is available.

Citizen's Arrests

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many citizen's arrests were made in England and Wales in the last two years for which figures are available; and in which areas the (a) highest and (b) lowest number of such arrests were recorded. [65106]

Hazel Blears: The information requested is not available centrally.

Convention on the Rights of the Child

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to review current reservations to the Convention on the Rights of the Child in relation to the detention of under 18-year-olds. [64937]

Mr. McNulty: The United Kingdom has two reservations to the UN Convention on the Rights of the Child, relating to: (i) immigration and nationality, and (ii) children mixing with adults in custodial institutions.

Regarding children mixing with adults: we have made great progress in achieving separation of under and over-18s in custody, for example by placing girls under 17 in non-Prison Service accommodation and by providing new, special units for 17-year-old girls., We will therefore be considering whether there is a continuing need for the Reservation against Article 37*(c)* of the Convention; and this review is due to begin shortly.

Correspondence

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the Parliamentary Business Unit of the Immigration and Nationality Department will respond to the letters of (a) 20 January 2006 and (b) 28 February 2006 from the hon. Member for Edinburgh, West with regard to his constituent Ms Osibanja Reagan, Home Office reference number O182493. [64413]

Mr. McNulty: The Immigration and nationality directorate replied to the hon. Member for Edinburgh, West on 25 April 2006.

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the immigration and nationality directorate will reply to the letter from the right hon. Member for Warley of 18 January 2006 on behalf of Miss Bloomfield of Oldbury. [66063]

Mr. McNulty: The immigration and nationality directorate wrote to the right hon. Member on 25 April 2006.

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the immigration and nationality directorate will reply to the letter from the right hon. Member for Warley of 17 January on behalf of Mr. and Mrs. McLeish of Oldbury. [66065]

Mr. McNulty: The immigration and nationality directorate wrote to the right hon. Member for Warley on 26 April 2006.

Clare Short: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will reply to the letter to the immigration and nationality directorate of 6 February 2006 from the hon. Member for Birmingham, Ladywood, on behalf of Sumithra Wickramage (Home Office Reference W227390/3, Acknowledgement Reference B3928/6). [66152]

Mr. McNulty: The immigration and nationality directorate wrote to the right hon. Member for Birmingham, Ladywood on 26 April 2006.

Clare Short: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will reply to the letter from the right hon. Member for Birmingham, Ladywood, of 30 January 2006 about Markland Gray (Home Office Reference G1052868, Acknowledgement Reference B2826/6). [66153]

Mr. McNulty: The immigration and nationality directorate wrote to the right hon. Member for Birmingham, Ladywood on 26 April 2006.

Departmental Publications

Kate Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which division in his Department was responsible for the commission, design and production of the process flow-charts distributed to hon. Members about the nationality application process, the family indefinite leave to remain exercise, and the work permits UK application process; what the total cost was of the design and production of the flow-charts; to which budget the design and production of the flow-charts were allocated; what total number of man-hours was spent on the design and production of the flow-charts; how many copies of the flow-charts have been produced; and to whom they have been distributed. [65075]

Mr. McNulty: The process flow-charts were commissioned by the Change and Reform Directorate of the immigration and nationality directorate. They were drafted and designed by IND staff; 700 copies of each of the three maps were printed by an outside supplier at a total cost of £702 . This cost was met by the Change and Reform Directorate budget. In total, approximately 16 man-hours were spent on the design and development of the three maps. A copy of each map was distributed to every member of the House on the 6 April 2006.

Kate Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he has considered producing flow-charts that describe the decision process for the (a) nationality application process, (b) family indefinite leave to remain exercise and (c) work permits UK application process. [65076]

Mr. McNulty: The production of these flow-charts has been considered. The three flow charts that describe the nationality application process, the 'Family Indefinite Leave to Remain Exercise and the Work Permits UK' application process have been produced and a copy of each has been distributed to every Member of the House.

DNA Database

Grant Shapps: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 31 January 2006, to Question 49933, how many people who were under the age of 18 years at the time they were arrested and had a DNA sample taken up to and including 1 December 2005 were subsequently not charged or cautioned for any offence. [49028]

Hazel Blears: On one December 2005, there were 24,168 persons on the National DNA Database who were under 18 years of age at the time they were arrested and had a DNA sample taken and who were still under 18 on one December 2005 who were subsequently not charged or cautioned for any offence.

There were around 27,000 persons on the National DNA Database who were under 18 years of age at the time they were arrested and had a DNA sample taken but who had attained the age of 18 by one December 2005 who were subsequently not charged or cautioned for any offence.

These figures were obtained from data extracted from the Police National Computer (PNC) since they are not available from the National DNA Database.

Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to make estimates of the number of (a) juveniles, (b) women and (c) members of ethnic minorities who will be registered on the national DNA database by 1 January 2010; and if he will make a statement. [66383]

Andy Burnham: We currently have no plans to estimate the future composition of the National DNA Database by age, gender or ethnicity. The right hon. Gentleman will be aware from my answer to his earlier question (41099) that forecasts are made of the overall growth rate and total number of people on the Database. Information is currently being collected from police forces on the use made of DNA for crime detection during the financial year April 2005 to March 2006. When the new data are available, the forecast will be reviewed. It is expected this will be in July 2006.

Domestic Violence

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will introduce legislation to define domestic violence; and if he will make a statement. [64880]

Hazel Blears: Legislation is not required as, since 2004, the Government have a commonly agreed definition of domestic violence:

'Any incident of threatening behaviour, violence or abuse (psychological, physical, sexual, financial or emotional) between adults who are or have been intimate partners or family members, regardless of gender or sexuality.'

This replaces the various definitions previously used by Government Departments and agencies. The definition was agreed by members of the Inter-Ministerial Group for Domestic Violence which is chaired by the right hon. Baroness Scotland, the Minister of State for Criminal Justice and Offender Management.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what definition he uses of domestic violence; and what the Government's policy is on the intervention of police officers in domestic incidents. [65182]

Hazel Blears: The common Government definition (agreed in 2004) of domestic violence is:

'Any incident of threatening behaviour, violence or abuse (psychological, physical, sexual, financial or emotional) between adults who are or have been intimate partners or family members', regardless of gender or sexuality.'

This definition mirrors the Association of Chief Police Officers (ACPO) definition, which ACPO have recommended that all police forces use.

The Government support the ACPO 'Guidance on Investigating Domestic Violence' which states that:

'action taken at all stages of the police response should ensure the effective protection of victims and children while allowing the criminal justice system to hold the offender to account. An effective and proactive investigation should be completed in all cases where a domestic violence incident is reported.'

This guidance has been promulgated in England and Wales through the Centrex (Central Police Training and Development Authority) and CPS training for all police officers and Crown Prosecution Service prosecutors. By 2008, all police officers, CPS prosecutors and caseworkers will be trained in domestic violence.

General Election Leaflets

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the remarks of the Minister of State for Immigration, Citizenship and Nationality, of 21 March 2006, Official Report, columns 214–15, if he will list (a) the candidates and (b) the parties responsible for the general election leaflets from which he quoted; which were the candidates' leaflets which he described as verging on the racist; if he will list the newspaper advertisements which he suggested contained misinformation and lies; and if he will correct the incorrect information to which he referred. [61672]

Mr. McNulty: I will write to the hon. Member.

General Pinochet

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the total public expenditure was on the arrest and detention of General Pinochet. [50528]

Hazel Blears: The total cost to public funds of the extradition case of Senator Pinochet was £3,857,108.58. The breakdown of this is as follows:

1. Total costs incurred by the Home Office: £670,588.82, comprising:

Treasury Solicitor's fees £63,150.00*

Disbursements (mainly counsel's fees) £292,385.93*

Costs of the Kingdom of Belgium and Amnesty International £155,081.68

Costs of medical examination on 5 January 2000 £11,751.25

Responding to public correspondence (this covers staff costs where letters were handled in house and Central Office of Information fees where letters were contracted out) £10,941.05

Staff costs (estimated) £165,778.91*

Of these two amounts £28,500.00 was recovered from Senator Pinochet under costs orders made against Senator Pinochet by the High Court.

2. Total costs incurred by the Crown Prosecution Service: £676,691.00, comprising:

Counsel's fees £425,077.00

Staff costs (estimated) £137,055.00

Other costs (interpreters, travel and subsistence and photocopying) £114,559.00

3. Total costs incurred by the legal secretariat to the law officers: £60,000.00, comprising:

Staff costs (estimated) £60,000.00

4. Total costs incurred by the Lord Chancellor's Department: £1,209,775.05:

The Law Lords ordered that Senator Pinochet's costs should be met from central funds for the first two hearings before the House of Lords in the unusual circumstances of the case. The costs paid from central funds were as follows:

for the first hearing in the House of Lords £270,935.89; and for the application to set aside the judgment following the first hearing in the House of Lords £151,361.30.

The costs of those divisional court hearings in which Senator Pinochet was successful or which did not proceed, and the costs of the committal proceedings in Bow Street magistrates court from 27 September to 1 October 1999, were also ordered to be paid from central funds. The costs of these hearings were £787,477.86.

All these costs were ordered to be paid under Section 16 of the Prosecution of Offences Act 1985, and they fall to be paid out of the Lord Chancellor's Department's portion of central funds.

Senator Pinochet received no legal aid funding in any of the proceedings against him.

5. Treasury Solicitor's fees: £100,053.76, comprising:

Amicus Curiae (costs and disbursements including counsel's fees): £71,029.00

Other costs and disbursements: £29,024.76

6. Total security costs: £1,200,000.00:

Responsibility for Senator Pinochet's protection and detention were the responsibility of the Metropolitan Police. For security reasons, it has long been the practice of successive Government's not to provide information about police operations relating to protection.

The costs incurred by Surrey police relating to general policing and public order matters in relation to Senator Pinochet's residence in Wentworth were £1,200,000.00.

All of the above figures include value added tax where appropriate.

Home Detention Curfew Scheme

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners released on the home detention curfew scheme were subsequently recalled to prison before their sentence expiry date for committing violent crimes. [45868]

Fiona Mactaggart: The information requested is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Imitation Weapons

Mr. Bone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the extent of the use of imitation and replica weapons by criminals. [65425]

Hazel Blears: Imitation weapons were used in 30 per cent. of non-air weapon offences in 2006. Detailed figures are published in Quarterly Crime Statistics and Violent Crime Overview 26 January 2006.

The Violent Crime Reduction Bill includes a number of new provisions to tackle the use of imitation firearms. These include a ban on the manufacture or sale of realistic imitation firearms; tougher manufacturing standards to prevent imitation firearms being converted to fire live ammunition and tougher sentences for carrying imitation firearms.

Immigration Act

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people under 18 years are currently detained under Immigration Act powers. [64936]

Mr. McNulty: The number of children detained with their families under Immigration Act powers will change from day to day. However, internal management information shows that, as at 19 April 2006, there were 46 children detained with their families under Immigration Act powers: 42 at Yarl's Wood Immigration Removal Centre and four at Tinsley House Immigration Removal Centre. These figures are not broken down into asylum and non-asylum cases. These individuals were all detained as part of family groups whose detention was considered necessary. The figures provided do not constitute part of the National Statistics and are based on management information. This information has not been quality assured under National Statistics protocol and should be treated as provisional.

Information on the number of persons detained, as at 31 December 2005, broken down by those who are under 18 years of age, are published in the Quarterly Asylum Bulletin, on the Home Office Research Development and Statistics Directorate website at http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.html.

Immigration and Nationality Directorate

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the Immigration and nationality directorate will notify Mrs. Robina Kouses, ref: LR1600016626/1 of her immigration status. [65489]

Mr. McNulty: The immigration and nationality directorate informed Mrs. Kouses of her immigration status on 9 December 2005.

Immigration Detention

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will make it his policy to ensure that no decision to detain for purposes of immigration control is made unless a formal age assessment has been undertaken by social services; [66783]

(2) if he will establish independent age assessment dispute panels comprised of social workers, paediatricians and relevant professionals as part of his immigration detention policy. [66784]

Mr. McNulty: We are currently reviewing ways in which the age assessment process might be improved. No decision has yet been made on whether independent age assessment dispute panels will be established.

A person claiming to be under 18 will not be treated as an adult for detention purposes unless there is credible and clear documentary evidence that they are 18 years of age or over, or a full age assessment by social services is available stating that they are 18 years or over, or their physical appearance/demeanour very strongly indicates that they are significantly older than 18 and no other credible evidence exists to the contrary.

Immigration Detention

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make it his policy to publish monthly statistics on the detention of children for immigration purposes, including (a) overall numbers of children detained, (b) the average length of detention of children, (c) the number of asylum applications involving age dispute issues and (d) the numbers of age disputed asylum applicants who are detained. [66665]

Mr. McNulty: Statistics on numbers of children detained for immigration purposes and their length of detention are published on a quarterly basis in the asylum statistics bulletin. This can be used to calculate an approximate average time in detention. There are no plans to publish these statistics on a monthly basis.

The number of asylum cases involving age dispute issues is published in the annual bulletin, Asylum Statistics United Kingdom, in table 2.4, but the number of them who are detained is not held centrally. There are no plans to publish these statistics on a quarterly or annual basis broken down by months.

The latest available statistics can be found on the Home Office Research Development and Statistics Directorate website at http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.html.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on his policy on the detention of children; and what assessment he has made of the extent to which it conforms to international standards and guidelines. [66667]

Fiona Mactaggart: Young people under 18 may only be sent to custody as a last resort, where the seriousness of the offence or offences committed makes custody unavoidable. Of the roughly 190,000 young people each year who are found to have offended, only about 4 per cent. are sentenced to custody.

The Government are committed to ensuring that non-custodial interventions are used wherever possible. We have taken major steps to bring that about, for example through the introduction and development of the Intensive Supervision and Surveillance Programme.

The Government's policy is in accordance with our international commitments, including the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child. We currently have a Reservation against Article 37*(c)* of the Convention, which relates to the mixing of under- and over-18-year-olds. We will be reviewing the continuing need for that reservation in the near future.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent study he has made of alternatives to the detention of children that are used in other countries for the purpose of immigration control. [66672]

Mr. McNulty: We are currently conducting a review of the now discontinued American Appearance Assisted Program (AAP) in order to establish whether this provides a suitable model for UK purposes.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action his Department is taking (a) to monitor and (b) to reduce transfers between different detention centres where transfers involve children. [66782]

Mr. McNulty: There are no specific arrangements to monitor the number of movements of families with children between immigration removal centres. Transfers are kept to the minimum necessary. A dedicated team deals with the allocation of family accommodation and every effort is made to accommodate families in one location throughout their stay, usually at Yarl's Wood Immigration Removal Centre.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make it his policy that assessment should be carried out to establish whether it would be better for a child to be detained with his or her family, or separated from it, as part of immigration control procedures. [66785]

Mr. McNulty: It has very occasionally been the case that, once a child is detained with his/her parents, it has become clear that there are parenting or child protection issues that require intervention from local social services. These issues are never ignored, and the safety and well-being of the child is always paramount in such cases.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will ensure that legal advice and representation are available to all who are detained for purposes of immigration control. [66786]

Mr. McNulty: Information is available at all immigration removal centres (IRCs) about how detainees can obtain legal advice and representation. Information about local firms of solicitors and legal advisers is kept in the libraries of all centres.

The Legal Services Commission is currently running weekly advice workshops in a number of IRCs. Detainees who do not have legal representation are able to access 30 minutes of free advice at the end of which the client will be taken on or referred onwards.

International Arrest Warrants

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he plans to put before the House his proposals to amend the law to prevent individuals from applying for international arrest warrants; and what discussions he has had on this issue with foreign Governments since 1 February. [66050]

Andy Burnham: I cannot indicate at this stage when proposals may be put before Parliament. The Government are still considering a range of issues relating to the issuing of arrest warrants in international cases, but has not yet concluded what changes, if any, are required to existing legislation. Since 1 February, my Department has had discussions on this issue with representatives of Israel.

Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of reports that the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam have used intimidation, extortion and violence against Sri Lankan Tamils living in the UK. [65749]

Hazel Blears: The LTTE has been a proscribed organisation in the UK since March 2001. As a consequence of being proscribed, fundraising, recruitment and a number of other activities by or on behalf of the LTTE are all offences under the Terrorism Act 2000.

Prosecution for those offences is a matter for the police and the prosecution authorities.

National Criminal Justice Board

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how frequently the National Criminal Justice Board meets; who sets the agenda; if he will place in the Library copies of the minutes of its meetings; and if he will make a statement. [32807]

Fiona Mactaggart: The National Criminal Justice Board (NCJB) meets monthly and its agenda is set by the Minister who chairs the meeting. I will place copies of the board's minutes in the Library.

The National Criminal Justice Board is the key high-level forum in which the services and departments reporting to the Home Secretary, the Lord Chancellor, and the Attorney-General, come together with the judiciary and others to exercise joint leadership over the Criminal Justice System.

The role of the NCJB is to develop the vision for Criminal Justice Reform and oversee its delivery, primarily by the 42 local criminal justice boards. The board's tasks include:

Agreeing outline delivery strategies for shared targets

Ensuring that agency targets and cross-cutting targets are consistent and support each other

Reviewing progress and overseeing the management of performance

Horizon scanning and agreeing areas where future joint work would be useful

A full membership list and a full description of the board's responsibilities contained in the Terms of Reference follow.

National Criminal Justice Board: Terms of Reference

The National Criminal Justice Board is responsible for supporting local boards to deliver the CJS's Public Service Agreement on the justice gap and confidence.

It will do this by:

Removing barriers to joint working, focusing in on particular concrete aspects of the CJS business process

Strategic direction of resources to secure achievement of objectives

Horizon scanning to identify longer term opportunities and threats

Learning and transferring the lessons from local areas and agencies which have successfully innovated and offer lessons for the rest of the system

The National Criminal Justice Board also has specific responsibility for:

Combating inequality and discrimination in the CJS

Communication across the CJS

National Offender Management Service

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what arrangements there are under the National Offender Management Service to ensure joint working for (a) planning, (b) resourcing and (c) implementing the Wales Reducing Reoffending Action Plan; and if he will make a statement. [49055]

Fiona Mactaggart: A Wales Pathfinder Project was commissioned by the Home Office with the agreement of the Welsh Assembly Government to examine ways of delivering a reducing re-offending strategy within the specific Welsh context. The outcome led to the joint Ministerial launch of Joining Together in Wales: an Adult and Young People's Strategy to Reduce Re-offending.

The strategy is based on the strong partnership between the National Offender Management Service and the Welsh Assembly Government and forms the basis of a consultation to implement the strategy.

The outcome of the consultation will help inform the development of a joint action plan that will reflect both the Welsh Assembly Government's responsibilities and those of the National Offender Management Service to reduce re-offending in Wales.

Offences Against the Person Act

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will bring forward proposals that the courts impose a fine or community sentence as the first option for offences under Section (a) 18 and (b) 20 of the Offences Against the Person Act 1861; and if he will make a statement. [64863]

Fiona Mactaggart: The Government have no plans to restrict courts to non-custodial sentencing options for first time offenders for offences under Sections 18 and 20 of the Offences Against the Person Act 1861.

We established a Sentencing Guidelines Council in the Criminal Justice Act 2003. The Council is responsible for issuing guidelines on sentencing for the range of criminal offences. A consultation paper on assaults and other offences against the person was published last year and a draft guideline will be published in due course.

Offences Committed Abroad

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to enable offences which are committed abroad to be subject to further investigation in this country with a view to prosecution. [65788]

Fiona Mactaggart: As a general rule, our courts have jurisdiction to try offences that are committed within this country's territory only. This is because generally speaking the Government believe that trials are best conducted in the jurisdiction in which they occurred not least because there are very real difficulties associated with the obtaining of the evidence necessary to effectively prosecute here offences that are committed in foreign jurisdictions. The Government have no plans to depart from this general rule.

We have exceptionally, however, assumed extra-territorial jurisdiction over some serious crimes such as murder where the factors in favour of the ability to prosecute here outweigh those against. In many cases such jurisdiction is adopted where there is a consensus that action needs to be taken at the international level. Such offending includes terrorism, genocide, war crimes, hijacking, serious corruption, sex tourism and trafficking in human beings. Where extra-territorial jurisdiction is assumed it is often restricted to offences committed by UK nationals abroad.

Overseas Doctors

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether trainee doctors from the Commonwealth will require work permits before they can be interviewed and short listed for medical jobs. [64674]

Mr. McNulty: Work permits are only issued once a non-EEA national has been offered a relevant post and not at the interview or short listing stage. In most cases the work permit will only be issued where there are no suitable resident workers to take the job.

The work permit system applies to all non-EEA nationals coming to the UK for employment, unless they qualify under another category of the Immigration Rules. Commonwealth nationals who are not EEA nationals (who are not nationals of the UK, Cyprus or Malta) will therefore require a work permit unless they are otherwise eligible to work in the UK.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions he held with (a) the British Medical Association, (b) organisations representing immigrant doctors and (c) NHS hospital trusts on the recent changes in immigration rules and their impact on doctors; and what discussions he had with the Secretary of State for Health. [65016]

Mr. McNulty: The permit free training rules were first amended in July 2005, Since then officials have been discussing with COPMED, the BMA Junior Doctors Committee and organisations representing overseas doctors the arrangements for those already in training and to agree what further guidance and clarification is needed to deal with the new arrangements.

The Department has been working closely with NHS Employers to provide guidance to the NHS.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what period of grace will be allowed to senior house officers in training in the NHS before they are asked to leave on the grounds of an expired visa. [65021]

Mr. McNulty: Senior House Officers training in the NHS with leave as a postgraduate doctor or dentist granted prior to the changes will continue on the same conditions as before. Overseas doctors and dentists can use this leave to complete their current training posts and to seek suitable new training posts. Doctors and dentists who want to remain in the UK beyond this time will need to apply for an extension of stay in another category.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether jobless doctors already in the UK will be able to apply for Tier 1 status. [65023]

Mr. McNulty: Those currently in the UK with leave as a postgraduate doctor or dentist will be able to use their existing leave to seek suitable new posts until that leave expires. Doctors and dentists wishing to remain after their leave expires will need to apply for an extension of stay in another category.

In the future, as is currently the case, doctors and dentists will not be granted leave to seek employment. As stated in the Command Paper, A Points-Based System: Making Migration Work for Britain published on 7 March, they will be admitted to the UK as Visitors in order to take the PLAB Test or IQE. If successful in the test, they will be able to switch into the new points based system if they meet the relevant requirements.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he plans to issue full guidelines on work permits, categories and the detailed operation of the new immigration rules. [65027]

Mr. McNulty: Full guidance on work permits can be found on the Working in the UK website at www.workingintheuk.gov.uk.

Full guidance on the new requirements of the Immigration Rules are already available on the IND website at: www.ind.homeoffice.gov.uk.

Details of the implications of the changes for the medical community is available on the NHS Employers website at: www.nhsemployers.org.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether international medical graduates taking a medical job in the UK can switch the basis of their stay if they have (a) postgraduate leave, (b) leave as a visitor and (c) leave as a dependent of another migrant. [65034]

Mr. McNulty: There have been no changes to the switching provisions.

As before, those with leave as a postgraduate doctor or dentist can switch into leave as a work permit holder if they meet the relevant requirements.

Dependants of certain categories of the Immigration Rules are permitted to take employment in the UK, such as the dependents of work permit holders. However there is no provision for those in the UK with leave as a dependent to switch into work permit employment in their own right.

There has never been any provision to allow those present in the UK as visitors to switch into work permit employment.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether doctors with a work permit who change employers as part of their training programme will require a new work permit; and whether the new job is contestable by EU or EEA nationals.[65035]

Mr. McNulty: Under the current work permit arrangements, doctors on a training programme will be required to obtain a work permit for each part of their training.

Following the recently announced changes to the rules on Postgraduate Doctors and Dentists transitional arrangements have been put in place to ensure that those who were already in training in the UK on 7 March can switch into the work permit system without their posts needing to be advertised first.

The Home Office and the Department of Health are continuing to discuss the work permit arrangements for doctors and dentists in training programmes in the UK with the relevant bodies.

Port Security

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the basis was for the allocation of funding for security at the ports of Holyhead and Mostyn in North Wales for (a) 2005–06 and (b) 2007–08. [66028]

Mr. McNulty: All decisions relating to the allocation of funding of security at ports, including Holyhead and Mostyn, are taken in conjunction with the appropriate security authorities, ensuring that all relevant factors are taken into account.

Following consultation and widespread support we have consolidated from 2006–07 a range of financial provisions previously made for Counter Terrorism (CT) policing. This includes provision for Dedicated Security Posts (DSP) previously included in the general grant formula. North Wales will receive £3.7 million in DSP funding next year and will be able to bid for further CT funding from a £64 million pot that will be allocated on advice from the Terrorism and Allied Matters Committee of the Association of Chief Police Officers.

Special Constables

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many special constables there are in England and Wales. [65492]

Hazel Blears: The information requested for police officers is available from the 'Police Service Strength publication as at 31 March 2005'. This report was published on 25 July 2005 and is available in the Library of the House and on:www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/pdfs05/hosb1205.pdf

Police

Patrick Mercer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the planned funding levels are for (a) Derbyshire, (b) Leicestershire, (c) Nottinghamshire, (d) Lincolnshire and (e) Northamptonshire police forces for (i) 2006–07, (ii) 2007–08 and (iii) 2008–09. [63402]

Hazel Blears: Grant funding, where available, is set out in the table. Funding for 2008–09 will be announced in due course as part of the newly introduced multi year funding settlements.

Mr. Jeremy Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police per head of population there are in (a) England and Wales, (b) Avon and Somerset police constabulary, (c) Taunton Deane, West Somerset and Sedgemoor Basic Command Unit and (d) Taunton constituency. [64063]

Hazel Blears: The available information for England and Wales and Avon and Somerset constabulary is provided in the table.

The available data for the number of police officers per head of population in each BCU level in Avon and Somerset are provided in the table. Deployment of police officers in Avon and Somerset to basic command units is an operational matter for the chief constable.

Statistics by constituency are not collected centrally.

Colin Challen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what he estimates the set-up costs of the new Yorkshire and Humberside police force will be; and from what main areas he expects the projected savings to come. [64985]

Hazel Blears: The cost of the proposed reorganisation of North Yorkshire, South Yorkshire, West Yorkshire and Humberside police is currently estimated at £39 million. Long-term savings made possible by the merger are estimated at around £18 million per annum. The precise projected level of these costs and savings is a matter for negotiations currently taking place. We have agreed to meet 100 per cent. of reasonable set up revenue and capital costs, net of reasonable savings.

The main projected savings will come from ongoing reductions in police authorities, command teams from four to one, savings in staff through redeployment and some natural wastage and economies of scale in administrative functions.

Patrick Mercer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether additional funding will be available in police budgets for 2006–07 for the merging of the Derbyshire, Leicestershire, Nottinghamshire, Lincolnshire and Northamptonshire police forces. [65785]

Hazel Blears: We are committed to paying 100 per cent. of reasonable set up revenue and capital costs of restructuring, net of reasonable savings. The precise projected level of these costs and savings is a matter for negotiations currently taking place.

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the governance arrangement of the new Yorkshire-wide police force will be. [65793]

Hazel Blears: An order made under section 32 of the Police Act 1996 amalgamating the Humberside, North Yorkshire, South Yorkshire and West Yorkshire police areas would provide for the establishment of a combined police authority. We have asked the existing police authorities to submit proposals as to the number of members to be appointed to the combined police authority and have indicated that we are ready to provide, for a transitional period, for a slightly larger authority than would be appropriate in the longer term. After the transitional period (which is expected to be for two years) the expectation would be that most police authorities would have no more than 23 members, although a higher number may be appropriate in the case of a new Yorkshire-wide police authority given to need to ensure that all upper tier local authorities in the region have at least one seat on the police authority. From 1 April 2008, when the new force would be established, the combined police authority would have the same duties and responsibilities as existing police authorities with the addition of the new functions provided for in schedule 2 to the Police and Justice Bill.

Patrick Mercer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the additional costs to individual police force budgets of merging the Derbyshire, Leicestershire, Nottinghamshire, Lincolnshire and Northamptonshire police forces. [65809]

Hazel Blears: The estimated cost of the proposed restructuring in order to improve procedure service of the five East Midlands police forces is £77 million. We will pay 100 per cent. of reasonable set up revenue and capital costs, net of reasonable savings. The precise projected level of costs and savings is a matter for negotiations currently taking place.

Long run savings from restructuring are currently estimated at £16 million per annum in the East Midlands.

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the set-up costs of a strategic police force for Wales. [66033]

Hazel Blears: The estimated set-up costs of a strategic police force for Wales is £35 million. We are committed to paying 100 per cent. of reasonable set-up revenue and capital costs, net of reasonable savings. The precise projected level of these costs and savings is a matter for negotiations currently taking place.

Long-term savings made possible by the merger are currently estimated at around £16 million a year.

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what provision will be made for redundant staff in the event of police reorganisation in Wales. [66078]

Hazel Blears: The proposed merger of police forces into new strategic forces addresses an identified weakness in current provision and is intended to strengthen forces' ability to deliver protective services to the public. Decisions about future posts will be for the new strategic forces management teams to determine. The transfer of officers and staff to new strategic forces will be governed by existing regulations and terms and conditions and, with regard to police staff, by the Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment Regulations).

Prisons

Philip Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 15 March 2006, Official Report, column 2303W, on the Criminal Justice Act, how many prisoners have been given exactly 12-month sentences since the Act came into force; and what estimate has been made of the effect of custody plus on prison numbers. [65382]

Fiona Mactaggart: Since the Criminal Justice Act 2003 came into force for offences committed on or after 4 April 2005, 4,245 prisoners were received into prison with custodial sentences of exactly 12 months (the latest data are until the end of February 2006).

Sentencing in individual cases is entirely a matter for the courts. It is consequently difficult to forecast the effect of custody plus on the prison population with precision. We have modelled various assumptions which suggest an impact of between -675 prison places to +1,630 prison places, depending on how much the courts use the new sentence and the breach rate.

The Sentencing Guidelines Council will issue guidance to the courts on the use of custody plus. We are working with them, with sentencers and others to ensure that we are best prepared to absorb the impacts that the new sentence will bring.

These estimates have been made for internal planning purposes and do not constrain the discretion of sentencers in any way. The impacts will be monitored and updated as new data becomes available.

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps have been taken to set up an electronic system for the transfer of prisoners' educational records. [65460]

Fiona Mactaggart: New, interim arrangements have been rolling out in the three OLASS development regions—north east, north west and south west since January this year to enable electronic access to the offenders' individual learning plans. The specification for the national, longer term system is being developed and procured by the Learning and Skills Council in partnership with NOMS.

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many adult prisons have learning support assistants; [65461]

(2) what progress has been made in ensuring that each prison has a special educational needs co-ordinator. [65462]

Fiona Mactaggart: We do not collect information about the availability of learning support assistants in the adult estate and have no plans to introduce special educational needs co-ordinator (SENCo) posts which have been funded for the juvenile estate. This is because, as part of the new Offenders' Learning and Skills Service planned and funded by the LSC, contracted providers will be required to assess individual learners' needs, develop a learning plan, and provide the tailored support which addresses these needs.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners were transferred between prisons in the last period for which figures are available. [65550]

Fiona Mactaggart: There were 97,975 prisoners transferred between prisons in 2005. Figures for transfers in 2006 are not yet available.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects all prisons holding children to comply with Prison Service Order 4950. [65582]

Fiona Mactaggart: All prison establishments are expected to follow the advice and guidance in Prison Service Orders (PSOs), and in particular to comply with their mandatory requirements.

The Youth Justice Board for England and Wales (YJB) commissions and purchases all secure accommodation for sentenced and remanded young people. The terms of PSO 4950 have been agreed with the YJB. Where non-compliance with particular requirements is identified, the YJB works with providers to support them in achieving compliance.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the effect on the levels of mental health care in the community on the number of people serving prison sentences. [65587]

Fiona Mactaggart: Information is not available on the effect on community mental health services of prison population levels.

Although sentencing is a matter for the courts, we know that we continue to imprison too many people with mental health problems.

As part of Five Year Strategy for Protecting the Public and Reducing Re-offending (Cm 6717, 2006), we are conducting a study into the best way to manage offenders with mental health problems, and will work closely with the Department of Health to make sure they can get access to effective treatment, whether in prison, in hospital or in the community. A copy of the strategy is available in the Library as well as on the Home Office's website at http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/documents/five-year-strategy?version=1.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he has taken to ensure that rehabilitative programmes are adapted to meet the specific needs of women prisoners. [65591]

Fiona Mactaggart: A new programme CARE (Choices, Actions, Relationships and Emotions) which addresses personal and circumstantial difficulties has been developed, and is currently being piloted. P-ASRO (Prisoners Addressing Substance Related Offending) has been provisionally accredited for use with women and FOR, a resettlement programme for short-term prisoners was accredited in April 2006.

Additionally, a democratic therapeutic community which offers a group therapy environment where women can explore and change problem behaviours relating to their offending has been established at Send prison. A programme for women with borderline personality disorder and at high risk of self-harm is being piloted. Good practice guidelines for supporting women who report having been abused is available to all staff.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make it his policy to ensure that home leave is ordinarily available for women prisoners. [65594]

Fiona Mactaggart: Release on temporary licence for home leave is available equally to female and male prisoners who meet the eligibility criteria and pass a rigorous risk assessment. Full details of the eligibility criteria are set out in Prison Service Order 6300 Release on Temporary Licence which is available on the HM Prison Service website.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many places for women in open prisons have been provided in each of the last 10 years. [65596]

Fiona Mactaggart: The figures requested for women's open prisons are set out in the following table. There are no plans, at present, to increase capacity within the women's open prison estate.

Average number of places available by year for women's open and semi-open[1] prisons

	Askham Grange	Drake Hall[2]	East Sutton Park	Morton Hall[3]	Total

2003	141	315	94	365	915
2004	150	315	94	391	950
2005	136	315	94	391	936

[1] Semi-open conditions: Prisoners who present a low risk to the public but who require a level of physical perimeter security to deter abscond

[2] Drake Hall was re-designated from open to semi-open in 2002.

[3] The function of Morton Hall was changed from a male to a semi-open women' s prison in 2001

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the appointment of accountable officers with responsibility for women prisoners at each establishment where women are held. [65597]

Fiona Mactaggart: All public sector prisons accommodating women do so exclusively. Each has a governor who is accountable to the Home Secretary through operational line management and the chief executive of the National Offender Management Service (NOMS). Two prisons in the contracted estate hold women. One of them has separate male and female sites, each with a head who is accountable to a director. Directors are accountable to the Home Secretary through their regional offender manager, the national offender manager and NOMS chief executive.

All prisons have an Independent Monitoring Board and are inspected by HM Inspectorate of Prisons. Both bodies are directly accountable to the Home Secretary. There are no plans to create additional or different levels or types of accountability.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many places there have been on prison drug treatment programmes in each of the last 10 years. [65600]

Fiona Mactaggart: The numbers of prisoners who have been on an intensive drug treatment programme are given in the following table. There are no centrally recorded figures prior to 2001–02.

	Entrants
2001–02	4,691
2002–03	4,386
2003–04	4,703
2004–05	7,621
2005–06	10,729

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has for special intensive courses in basic education and drug treatment to be completed by short-term prisoners while in custody. [65601]

Fiona Mactaggart: The Government recognise the value of short and smaller qualifications that allow offenders to progress towards full employability, but maintains that the key focus of offender learning should be on achieving results that lead to employment. The Government's proposed overhaul of the National Qualifications Framework in order to create a new Framework for Achievement by 2010 will increase flexibility and offer better opportunities for offender learners to build up credit towards qualifications in smaller units.

Short term prisoners are able to benefit from a comprehensive range of drug interventions that address the needs of low, moderate and severe drug dependency:

Clinical services (detoxification and/or maintenance prescribing programmes), available in all local/remand prisons;

CARATs (Counselling, Assessment, Referral, Advice and Throughcare services), available to all prisoners who are 18 and over;

The Juveniles Substance Misuse Service, delivered across the Juvenile estate;

Drug Rehabilitation Programmes—of which 40 are the innovative, high-intensity Short Duration Programme aimed primarily at those serving short sentences.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the selection process for the participation of prisoners in offending behaviour programmes. [65604]

Fiona Mactaggart: Prisoners are assessed and their needs identified through various processes, such as induction and sentence planning. Further assessments may be undertaken to ascertain the prisoner's suitability for particular interventions including offending behaviour programmes. Places are then prioritised and allocated accordingly.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will assess the merits of the creation of a specialist not-for-profit agency outside the prison service to co-ordinate investment, marketing and supply for prison industries. [65606]

Fiona Mactaggart: The Prison Service has taken a number of steps to increase the performance of prison industries. These include working with a private sector advisor to prison industries and reorganising resources to create a central business development, sales and contract team. Other options will be assessed once the outcome from these initiatives is clear.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he has taken to ensure that vocational training and works programmes in prisons are matched to basic labour shortages and skills gaps in the external labour market. [65607]

Fiona Mactaggart: The Department for Education and Skills, the Home Office and the Department for Work and Pensions have jointly published a Green Paper: Reducing Re-offending through Skills and Employment (December 2005). This puts the focus on jobs, with employers driving the design and delivery of programmes. One of the key aims of the Green Paper is to explore ways to help more offenders improve their skills and get jobs through better use of prison facilities, with skills training built into other activities such as workshops. The Prison Service will also seek to support more partnerships with commercial organisations to equip workshops with industry standard facilities.

The responsibility for the planning and delivery of skills in prisons is in the process of being transferred to the Learning and Skills Council who will ensure that the education and skills programmes in prisons relates to the needs of the labour market.

The National Offender Management Service is also seeking to improve the employment prospects of offenders by focusing on developing links with employers in sectors that have significant labour shortages. These sectors include utilities, hospitality and catering, the construction industry, sports and fitness and industrial cleaning.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what his projection is of the prison population in England and Wales by (a) 2010 and (b) 2020; and if he will make a statement. [65618]

Fiona Mactaggart: The latest prison population projections are published in the Home Office Statistical Bulletin 10/05 "Updated and Revised Prison Population Projections, 2005–2011, England and Wales".

The projections span a total of seven years. There are currently no projected prison population figures beyond 2011.

Proscribed Terrorist Organisations

Patrick Mercer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what criteria the Government use when placing groups on his Department's list of proscribed terrorist organisations. [66366]

Hazel Blears: The criteria for proscription are set out in section 3 of the Terrorism Act 2000, as amended by section 21 of the Terrorism Act 2006. In reaching his decisions, the Secretary of State also takes into account a number of factors including:

- The nature and scale of an organisation's activities
- The specific threat that it poses to the UK
- The specific threat that it poses to British nationals overseas
- The extent of the organisation's presence in the UK
- The need to support other members of the international community in the global fight against terrorism.

Any decision by the Secretary of State to proscribe an organisation has to be endorsed by both Houses of Parliament.

Recidivism

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will reinstate the public service agreement target to reduce reoffending by 5 per cent. [65619]

Fiona Mactaggart: The Home Office remains committed to its spending review 2002 public service agreement target to reduce re-offending by 5 per cent. by 2006 and the spending review 2004 public service agreement standard to at least maintain it at this level thereafter.

The Home Office strategic plan published in July 2004 also set out our commitment to working towards a 10 per cent. reduction by the end of the decade.

The Home Office will agree its next set of public service agreements as part of the 2007 comprehensive spending review.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of prisoners were reconvicted within two years of leaving prison in the last period for which figures are available. [65620]

Fiona Mactaggart: The most recent information on the recidivism of adult prisoners is published in "Reoffending of adults: results from the 2002 cohort". This is available online at: http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/pdfs05/hosb2505.pdf. In particular, please see Table A.5 of that report.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will make an annual oral statement to Parliament on progress made in implementing the National Action Plan to reduce reoffending; [65621]

(2) what the timetable is for delivery of the National Action Plan for reducing reoffending. [65803]

Fiona Mactaggart: We published the National Action Plan in July 2004. It set out the key actions we would take to reduce reoffending over the next 15 months. In November 2005, the Government published a progress report setting out the considerable progress we had made in delivering the action plan.

This update on progress was published as part of a new document: The National Reducing Re-offending Delivery Plan. A copy of the Delivery Plan was placed in the Library of the House. This plan sets out the key actions the Government will take to reduce re-offending over the next 18 months. Regular reports on progress against delivery will be made available on the Home Office website. We have no plans to make an oral statement.

Remand

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will commission a comprehensive review of the role of remand in the criminal justice system. [65602]

Fiona Mactaggart: Bail and remand is an area of work which is kept under continuous review, with the aim of ensuring that appropriate decisions are made in accordance with the Bail Act 1976, and to improve the processes which underpin the management of bail.

We are working closely with criminal justice agencies and other stakeholders on a wide-ranging programme of work on bail and remand, directed by the National Criminal Justice Board and delivered at local level through the 42 Local Criminal Justice Boards. This programme focuses on supporting the remand decision-making process, through developing risk assessment tools and improving the information available to decision-makers; increasing first-time compliance with bail, for example through the use of telephone and text reminders and the greater use of sureties and securities; improving the management of bail through the use of inter-agency bail agreements; improving the enforcement of warrants when defendant fail to surrender to bail; and promoting the implementation of the Lord Chief Justice's Practice Direction on bail on dealing robustly with non-attendance.

Road Traffic Offences

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) males and (b) females convicted of an offence under section 14 of the Road Traffic Act 1988 have been fined the maximum amount in each of the last 10 years for which figures are available, broken down by age. [64702]

Paul Goggins: Available information from 1995 to 2004 (latest available) is given in the table.

2005 data will be available early in 2007.

Sentencing

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what his definition is of a short-term prison sentence. [65579]

Fiona Mactaggart: A short term prisoner is an offender sentenced to a custodial term of less than 12 months.

Sex Offenders

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what counselling is available to serious sex offenders (a) whilst in prison and (b) when released into the community to deal with a reliance on hardcore pornography. [65787]

Fiona Mactaggart: The main provision for serious sex offenders in prison is accredited offending behaviour programmes. Assessment and treatment would identify and seek to address unhelpful sexual preoccupations including pornography.

Serious sexual offenders will be subject to licence supervision and a multi-agency risk management plan. Licence conditions may include a requirement to participate in a treatment programme and where appropriate receive medical treatment.

Speeding

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many motorists stopped for breaking the speed limit in 2004 in (a) Southend, (b) Essex, (c) Hertfordshire, (d) the Metropolitan police area of London and (e) England and Wales received a (i) warning and (ii) caution. [64752]

Hazel Blears: The annual Home Office publication 'Offences relating to motor vehicles, England and Wales 2004, Supplementary tables', Table 18 gives data by police force area on written warnings (which includes formal cautions) issued by motoring offence groups. Copies of the above publications are available in the Library. The publications can also be accessed on the Home Office Research Development and Statistics (RDS) web site at: www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/index.htm

It is not possible from the data collected centrally to identify Southend within the geographical area covered by the Essex police force.

2005 data will be available early in 2007.

Mrs. Maria Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many speeding offences occurred in Hampshire in each year since 1990. [64811]

Paul Goggins: Available information on speeding offences for the Hampshire police force area from 1990 to 2004 (latest available) is given in the table.

Data for 2005 will be available early in 2007.

Theft Act

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the operation of sections 4, 4A, 4B and 4C of the Theft Act 1968. [65037]

Hazel Blears: In general this part of the Theft Act 1968 appears not to give rise to operational problems. If the hon. Gentleman has any particular concern I would be glad to learn of it.

UK Identity and Passport Service

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what access the UK Identity and Passport Service has to information held by (a) HM Revenue and Customs and (b) the Valuation Office Agency. [66299]

Andy Burnham: The Identity and Passport Service is not routinely provided with information held by HM Revenue and Customs or the Valuation Office Agency. IPS will occasionally obtain information held by HMRC on a case-by-case basis (under the exemption in section 29 of the Data Protection Act 1998) where this is necessary for the prevention or detection of crime or the apprehension or prosecution of offenders.

Violent Crime Reduction Bill

Mr. Bone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the likely effects of the Violent Crime Reduction Bill on (a) historical re-enactment groups and (b) collectors of historical weaponry. [65423]

Hazel Blears: The Bill provides a defence which will allow the sale of realistic imitation firearms for the purpose of specified historical re-enactments. Groups will also be allowed to use any realistic imitation firearms they currently possess and any firearms held on a certificate. De-activated firearms have been excluded from the definition of realistic firearm, as have imitations of firearms designed before 1870. The Bill will not stop collectors from keeping the realistic imitation firearms they already own but they will be unable to sell them in this country or to buy new ones unless it is for the purposes of a museum or gallery.

Yarl's Wood Immigration Removal Centre

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what response he has made to the report and recommendations of the Children's Commissioner on the Yarl's Wood Immigration Removal Centre; and if he will make a statement. [66419]

Mr. McNulty: We responded, in February 2006, to each of the recommendations made by the Children's Commissioner in his report of his visit to Yarl's Wood Immigration Removal Centre. A copy of our response has been placed in the House Libraries.

Work Permits

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many work permits were issued for (a) doctors and (b) nurses and auxiliary nurses from (i) Nigeria, (ii) Ghana and (iii) other African countries in each of the last 10 years. [65742]

Mr. McNulty: The following table displays the number of work permits issued for (a) doctors and (b) nurses and auxiliary nurses from (i) Nigeria, (ii) Ghana and (iii) other African countries each year since 2000. Figures of permits issued prior to 2000 are not available due to a change in Home Office IT systems.

Young Offenders

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what plans he has to develop the work of the Young Offender Programme through an increased number of partnership arrangements with employers; [65571]

(2) if he will assess with private sector companies the prospects for extending the approach taken by the National Grid Transco Foundation in training and resettling young offenders. [65608]

Fiona Mactaggart: The National Offender Management Service (NOMS) is working closely with National Grid to consider the options for extending the programme to other prison establishments as well as to offenders in the community. National Grid is also developing links with businesses outside the utilities sector.

Under the Reducing Re-offending Corporate Alliance, which was launched last November, NOMS is actively encouraging more businesses to engage with offenders, by working with them to improve their employability, by being involved in the design of training programmes, and by offering employment.

There is a strong emphasis in the Reducing Re-offending through Skills and Employment Green Paper, which was published in December 2005, on education and training for young offenders, including improving their access to programmes to ensure that they are ready to undertake work.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to ensure that the expenditure on young offenders is brought up to meet the level of additional expenditure that the Youth Justice Board has made on the juvenile estate. [65800]

Fiona Mactaggart: The Government has invested heavily in improved regimes for all prisoners, concentrating on activities such as education and vocational training, which are of particular value to young adults. To address the specific needs of this group, the Home Office has also established a project to develop a strategy and standards for the management of these offenders in custody and the community. This will include consideration of the financial implications of any proposed changes.

TREASURY

Barker Review

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the Barker Review's inquiry into planning policy. [66692]

John Healey: The Chancellor and the Deputy Prime Minister have invited Kate Barker, a member of the Monetary Policy Committee of the Bank of England, to conduct a review of land use planning in England. An interim report is due to be published in the summer. Further information, including the formal terms of reference is available at www.barkerreviewofplanning.org.uk

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will place in the Library copies of responses to the Barker Review. [66694]

John Healey: The responses to the call for evidence for the Barker Review of Land Use Planning will be available on www.barkerreviewofplanning.org.uk in due course. I have requested that Kate Barker make copies available to the House.

Benefit Eligibility

Michael Gove: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how long a national from another EU member state needs to have been resident in the UK before being eligible to receive child benefit; and what the residency period will be after directive 2004/38/EC comes into force; [66124]

(2) how long a national from another EU member state needs to have been resident in the UK before being eligible to receive (a) working tax credit and (b) child tax credit; and how long the residency periods will be after directive 2004/38/EC comes into force. [66135]

Dawn Primarolo: To claim tax credits or child benefit, irrespective of their nationality any person making a claim must be both present and ordinarily resident in the UK. This means that he or she must be physically present in the UK throughout the period of the award, although a temporary absence of up to eight, or in some cases, 12 weeks may be disregarded.

Since 1 May 2004, a person claiming child tax credit and child benefit must also have a right to reside in the UK under national or EC law. An EU national will generally only have a right to reside if they are working in the UK, or if they have been working in the UK for some time and ceased working. If they are not working in the UK, an EU national will generally only have a right to reside if they have sufficient resources or income to avoid becoming a burden on the social assistance system of the UK.

These rules will not change as a result of the introduction of the directive 2004/38/EC.

Business Investment

Chris Huhne: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the answer of 25 April 2006, Official Report, column 1045W, on business investment, if he will give the page reference of the latest OECD Economic Outlook at which the requested data may be found. [67602]

John Healey: The data are available from the OECD database that supports the Economic Outlook through www.sourceOECD.org. This database is available through the House of Commons' Library. The following web address links to the Economic Outlook database within Source OECD, from where business investment and GDP data, in volume terms, can be downloaded for all OECD economies and the OECD as a whole. Business investment growth rates can also be determined using this data.

http://lysander.sourceoecd.org/vl=4960925/cl=24/nw=1/rpsv/oecd_database.htm

The Economic Outlook was published in late 2005, so 2004 is the latest year for which outturn data is available.

Climate Change

Colin Challen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of when the measures set out in his speech to the UN ambassadors on 20 April will achieve a sustainable concentration of greenhouse gases in the atmosphere. [66416]

John Healey: The global nature of the causes and effects of climate change means that international action is crucial. The measures in the Chancellor of the Exchequer's speech to the UN ambassadors highlight how co-ordinated international action can bring significant emissions reductions. These proposals aim to drive forward effective multilateral action. In particular, the Multilateral Development Banks' Energy Investment Framework, and an extension of the EU Emissions Trading Scheme and the Clean Development Mechanism will have significant impacts in reducing global emissions, encouraging the development of a deeper and more liquid global carbon market. However, details of these proposals have not yet been finalised with international partners and institutions, so an assessment of their impact would be premature. Action is also needed to tackle greenhouse gas emissions from consumers, and the 1 Watt initiative which the Chancellor proposed has significant potential to reduce global emissions and should be accelerated.

Correspondence

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when the Paymaster General will reply to the letter from the right hon. Member for Tonbridge and Malling regarding her tax credits statement made on 22 June 2005. [66363]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 27 April 2006]: I have replied to the right hon. Member.

Sir Gerald Kaufman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he will answer the letter to him dated 14 February from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton with regard to Julie Reid. [67484]

Dawn Primarolo: I have done so.

Council Tax

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the cost was of the one-off payment to pensioners towards their council tax bills in 2005–06; and what the estimated cost is for 2006–07. [66652]

Mr. Timms: The cost of the £200.00 payment to pensioners to help with their council tax bills in 2005–06 was £1,067 million. There are no plans to make a similar payment for 2006–07.

The tables can be viewed at DWP website at http://www.dwp.gov.uk/asd/asd4/expenditure.asp

Demographics

Shona McIsaac: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the population in each electoral ward in the constituency of (a) Cleethorpes, (b) Great Grimsby, (c) Scunthorpe and (d) Brigg and Goole based on (i) the 2001 census, (ii) electoral registers and (iii) patient registers. [67043]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 2 May 2006:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your question regarding the population in each electoral ward in the constituencies of (a) Cleethorpes, (b) Great Grimsby, (c) Scunthorpe and (d) Brigg and Goole based on (i) the 2001 Census, (ii) electoral rolls and (iii) patient registers. (67043)

The table attached provides the information you have requested. The most recent population estimates for wards are for mid-2002. The ward population estimates have been published with the status of "experimental statistics". Therefore the estimates should be treated with some care.

The latest available ward electorate counts are for December 2005. The ward electorate counts are for parliamentary electors, including attainers. Local government electorate counts are not available at ward level.

It should be noted that the number of people eligible to vote is not the same as the resident population aged 18 and over. There are numerous reasons for this. For example not everyone who is usually resident is entitled to vote (foreign citizens from outside of the EU and Commonwealth, prisoners, etc. are not eligible), some people do not register to vote and people who have more than one address may register in more than one place. Further, there is inevitably some double counting of the registered electorate as electoral registration officers vary in how quickly they remove people from the registers after they have moved away from an area or after they have died. These factors have a differential impact from area to area.

The latest available ward patient register counts are for July 2004.

It should be noted that patient register counts differ from estimates of the usually resident population for a number of reasons. Patient registers include people who are in the country for at least three months, whereas population estimates are based on a usual residence definition requiring a stay of 12 months or more. The patient registers exclude individuals who are ineligible to be registered with a GP. People may be on a patient register after having left the country and not deregistered with their GP; similarly people may have moved to another area and not re-registered. Some patients may have more than one NHS number e.g. they may have been issued a temporary number for a short period. Again, these factors have a differential impact from place to place.

Notes:

1. The mid-2002 ward population estimates are consistent with the published mid-2002 local authority estimates (September 2004 revisions) and have been rounded to the nearest hundred
2. Parliamentary electors are those people who are entitled to vote in parliamentary elections at Westminster and who meet the residence qualification. Those include overseas voters but exclude Peers and European citizens

Office for National Statistics

Departmental Initiatives

Lynne Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the departmental initiatives for each year since 2000 which required bids for funding from (a) voluntary organisations and (b) local authorities together with the total resource allocated to each initiative in each year; how many successful bids there were in each year; what proportion this figure represents of the total bids received; and what assessment he has made of the costs of (i) preparing bids for each initiative and (ii) assessing those bids. [66014]

John Healey: During the period in question, the Treasury has not paid any grants directly to voluntary organisations or local authorities.

However, the Treasury oversees the allocation of resources from the Invest to Save Budget (ISB), which was established in 1998. The Treasury transfers resources to the relevant central Government sponsoring Department, who then allocate it directly to the delivery organisations. There have been eight rounds of resource allocation since this time. The first round was restricted to central Government Departments and their agencies; each subsequent round has been open to local authorities and the voluntary sector. In 2004, the ISB was re-branded as the 'ISB: Inclusive Communities Fund', with priority given to community level, voluntary sector-led initiatives. In total, some £97 million has been allocated to voluntary sector-led community projects since 1998. The Budget announced that a 9th resource allocation round would take place next year, with a focus on the third sector's role in building fairer communities and delivering public services. Further information about the ISB is available from www.isb.gov.uk.

Equal Pay

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps are undertaken within his Department to ensure that women are obtaining equal pay to men doing work of equal value. [65863]

John Healey: HM Treasury undertakes annual gender pay reviews. Three reviews have been undertaken and these have shown no significant differences in pay between men and women.

EU Financial Services Action Plan

Michael Gove: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer at what stage of the (a) legislative and

(b) implementation process the measures in the EU Financial Services Action Plan are; and if he will make a statement. [66154]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Of the 42 measures contained in the EU Financial Services Action Plan, 41 have been adopted; only the transfer of seat directive has still to be adopted.

Of these 42 measures, 16 are commission communications or recommendations which do not require transposition into member states' national law and regulations. For a further seven measures the deadline for implementation has not yet been reached. The remaining 19 measures have been implemented, although in the case of the directive on occupational retirement provision there remains a small element of the directive which has yet to be transposed.

Financial Capability

Mr. Love: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what initiatives his Department and its non-departmental bodies support to promote (a) financial education, (b) financial advice, (c) financial inclusion and (d) financial capability; and for each initiative (i) which organisations are involved in delivering it and (ii) how much funding is provided by (A) his Department and its non-departmental public bodies, (B) other Government Departments, (C) the private sector and (D) the voluntary sector. [66576]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Government fully support initiatives to promote the increase of financial education and inclusion. Financial education generally is delivered through the Department for Education and Skills and it is for that Department to decide which organisations should help deliver it. Although we promote financial education as part of a government initiative such as the Child Trust Fund or Saving Gateway, costs are not broken down to show separate funding for financial education. The cost of the Child Trust Fund is forecast at £240 million each for the years 2005–06 to 2007–08 and £15 million for the second pilot launched in spring 2005 for Saving Gateway.

A range of stakeholder savings and investment products was launched in April 2005, in support of this a publicity campaign to raise awareness of the features and benefits of these products ran from September 2005 to March 2006 at a total cost of £4 million.

In promoting financial inclusion the Government have established a framework for delivery, including a Financial Inclusion Fund of £120 million over three years and a Financial Inclusion Taskforce to oversee progress. The taskforce was formally launched in February 2005. Details of the fund are published on the Treasury website at www.hm-treasury.gov.uk.

The National Strategy for Financial Capability was set up in 2004 and is led by the Financial Services Authority in partnership with the Government, the financial services industry and voluntary organisations. The FSA published, in March 2006 a programme on initiatives to promote financial capability. Further information about the strategy can be found on the FSA website at http://www.fsa.gov.uk/financial_capability/. While total costs incurred by all partners are not available, the FSA's contributions were £2.5 million in 2003–04, £4 million in 2004–05, and £8 million in 2005–06. The FSA's business plan for 2006–07 includes provision for up to £10 million. The FSA has not yet set a budget for 2007–08.

The Treasury does not keep records of the funding of these issues by other Government Departments or the private and voluntary sectors which are matters for them to decide.

Mr. Love: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much funding was provided by Government departments and non-departmental public bodies to support initiatives to promote (a) financial education, (b) financial advice, (c) financial inclusion and (d) financial capability in (i) 2003–04, (ii) 2004–05 and (iii) 2005–06; and how much will be provided under current spending plans in (A) 2006–07 and (B) 2007–08. [66620]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Government fully supports the need to improve financial education and inclusion. Although we promote financial education as part of the Child Trust Fund and Saving Gateway initiatives there is no breakdown of the costs of these budgets to show separate funding for financial education. However, the cost of the Child Trust Fund is forecast at £240 million each for the three years 2005–06 to 2006–07 and £15 million was provided to launch the second Saving Gateway pilot in spring 2005. Likewise there is no specific funding for financial advice though £4 million provided to fund a publicity campaign to raise awareness of Stakeholder savings and investment products from September 2005 to March 2006.

The Financial Inclusion Fund launched in April 2005 has a budget of £120 million over three years and will largely support the increase in the provision of free face to face money advice and provide support to third sector lenders providing affordable credit. Details of the breakdown of the fund have been published and can be found on the Treasury website at www.hm-treasury.gov.uk.

The National Strategy for Financial Capability is led by the Financial Services Authority (FSA) in partnership with the Government, the financial services industry and voluntary organisations. The FSA published, in March 2006, a programme of initiatives to promote financial capability http://www.fsa.gov.uk/pubs/other/fincapdelivering.pdf. While total costs incurred by all partners are not available, the FSA's contributions were £2.5 million in 2003–04, £4 million in 2004–05 and £8 million in 2005–06. The FSA's Business Plan for 2006–07 includes provision for up to £10 million. The FSA has not yet set a budget for 2007–08.

Fuel Prices

Mr. Amess: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the average (a) dollar and (b) sterling price was for a barrel of crude oil extracted in (i) the United Kingdom and (ii) each OPEC country in each week since October 2005. [66905]

John Healey: Weekly price information (in US dollars per barrel) for the main benchmarks of each oil producing country is available at the following website: http://tonto.eia.doe.gov/dnav/pet/pet_pri_wco_k_w.htm

Exchange rate data is available at the following website: http://www.bankofengland.co.uk/statistics/index.htm

Mr. Amess: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the average price was of a gallon of unleaded fuel in (a) Essex, (b) Hertfordshire, (c) inner London and (d) outer London in each week since August 2005. [66906]

Malcolm Wicks: I have been asked to reply.

The information requested is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Gershon Review

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what progress has been made with implementing the recommendations of the Gershon review. [67453]

Mr. Des Browne: The Budget 2006 reported provisional annual efficiency gains totalling £6.4 billion by the end of December 2005 and 40,400 gross workforce reductions, including 7,150 reallocations to frontline services. Departments will report on further progress in their forthcoming departmental reports.

Import Duties

Mr. Burrowes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the Government are doing to ensure the effective collection of import duties at UK airports. [66697]

John Healey: All importers, or agents acting on their behalf, are legally obliged to lodge customs declarations when bringing goods into the UK from non-member states of the European Community. The overwhelming majority of import declarations are made by electronic means and HM Revenue and Customs computer system (CHIEF) calculates the amount of duties due. To ensure that the right amount of duties is paid import declarations may be checked at either pre or post-clearance to confirm their accuracy.

Income Tax

Andrew George: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the answer of 19 April 2006, Official Report, column 692W, on income tax, what further estimates he has made of income to the Inland Revenue if the same incomes in the upper rate of income tax has only applied to those earning over £100,000. [66995]

Dawn Primarolo: The following table provides yields from introducing an additional higher tax rate on earnings and savings income above £100,000.

Year: 2006–07

Higher rate of tax (per cent.)[1]	Yield (£ billion)
45	1.9
50	3.8
51	4.2
52	4.6
53	5.0
54	5.3
55	5.7
56	6.1
57	6.5
58	6.9
59	7.3
60	7.6
65	9.6
70	11.5

[1] The new higher tax rate applies to earnings and savings income only. Dividends at the higher rate remain taxed at 32.5 per cent.

The income tax information is based upon the 2003–04 Survey of Personal Incomes (SPI) and projected forward in line with 2006 Budget assumptions.

The figures exclude any estimate of behavioural response, which could be significant given the scale of the changes.

Industrial Injury Claims

John Mann: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received on the practice of banks loaning money for legal expenses in pursuing industrial injury claims. [65160]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: So far as I am aware, the Treasury has not received any representations on this practice.

International Finance Facility

Mr. Drew: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what use he expects to be made of the international finance facility to make progress with the research, development and delivery of new vaccines and new diagnostic methods to fight malaria, tuberculosis and other diseases in the developing world. [66343]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The international finance facility for immunisation (IFFIm) will provide $4 billion over the next 10 years to support efforts of the Global Alliance for Vaccines and Immunisation (GAVI Alliance) to tackle preventable diseases in the 72 poorest countries in the world. France, Italy, Spain, Sweden, Norway, Brazil and the UK have already announced that they will make contributions to the IFFIm, and on 25 April, South Africa announced that they would also contribute to the IFFIm. It is expected that the IFFIm will save a total of 10 million lives from preventable diseases, including five million children before 2015.

Alongside the IFFIm, the UK and G8 partners are currently working on the proposal for advanced market commitments (AMCs). AMCs are a potentially powerful and cost-effective market-based mechanism to accelerate and stimulate the development and availability of priority new vaccines against diseases like pneumococcus, malaria and TB which kill millions in each year in developing countries.

Low-income Households

Stewart Hosie: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many households earning less than £425 per week (a) pay income tax and (b) do not claim working tax credit. [66092]

Dawn Primarolo: Information for part (a) is not available except at disproportionate costs since our income tax data covers individuals, not households.

For part (b), estimates of the number of families, broken down by income used to calculate entitlement, who are entitled to, but not claiming tax credits are given in tables 4 and 11 of the publication "Child Tax Credit and Working Tax Credit Take-up Rates 2003–04" available on the HMRC website at http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/stats/personal-tax-credits/takeup_rates_2003-04—mar06.pdf. Estimates for those earning below the exact income level specified (£425 per week) would be available only at disproportionate cost.

Microgeneration Technologies

Chris Huhne: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much of the funding to develop microgeneration technologies announced in the Budget has been allocated for each financial year; and how much of the funding in each financial year is additional funding to that previously allocated. [66938]

John Healey: The £50 million announced in the Budget for microgeneration is divided equally between financial years 2006–07 and 2007–08.

This £50 million is in addition to the £30 million that had already been announced for the Low Carbon Buildings Programme.

Millennium Development Goals

Colin Challen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of when the Millennium Development Goals will be achieved. [66417]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Millennium Development Goals (MDGs) were agreed at the United Nations Millennium summit in September 2000. The goals range from halving global income poverty and protecting the environment, to human development objectives like improving health and sanitation, achieving universal primary education and tackling discrimination against women. Achievement of the Millennium Development Goals (MDGs) has been placed at the centre of Britain's international development effort. DFID's key aims and objectives, as set out in its public service agreement, are the attainment of the MDGs by 2015.

On income poverty there has been progress but is has been very uneven and on current trends few African countries will reach the MDG by 2015.

On the human development goals the situation is more concerning and South Asia and sub-Saharan Africa are off-track on all of them.

The MDGs and global poverty were at the heart of the UK presidencies of the EU and the G7/8 in 2005. The international community committed to raise an additional $50 billion of aid by 2010, to cancel 100 per cent. of the multilateral debts of the world's poorest countries, and to launch the international finance facility for immunisation. G8 leaders also agreed to achieve universal access to AIDS treatment for all those who need it by 2010, and work on advance market commitments for vaccines against malaria, HIV/AIDS and other priority diseases.

These are the sorts of measures needed to get progress towards the MDGs back on track. The key challenge now is for donors to fully implement their commitments and for developing countries to develop 10-year plans to meet the MDGs.

Mortgage Income Tax Relief

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many households benefited from mortgage income tax relief in (a) 1996–97 and (b) 1997–98. [66451]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The numbers of households benefiting from mortgage interest relief in 1996–97 and 1997–98 are available at http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/stats/mir/table5-2.xls.

Shared Appreciation Mortgages

Mr. Fallon: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent discussions (a) Ministers and (b) officials have had with the Financial Services Authority on shared appreciation mortgages. [67507]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: HM Treasury officials have had one conversation with the Financial Services Authority about shared appreciation mortgages in 2006.

Pay Statistics

Shona McIsaac: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the gross weekly pay of full-time employees in the constituency of (a) Cleethorpes, (b) Great Grimsby, (c) Scunthorpe and (d) Brigg and Goole was in each year since 2000. [67053]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 2 May 2006:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question to ask what the average earnings of full-time employees in a) Cleethorpes, b) Great Grimsby, c) Scunthorpe and d) Brigg and Goole constituencies was in each year since 2000. (67053)

Average earnings are estimated from the Annual Survey of Hours and Earnings (ASHE), and are provided for full time employees on adult rates whose pay for the survey period was not affected by absence. This is the standard definition used for ASHE. The ASHE does not collect data on the self employed and people who do unpaid work.

I attach tables showing Average Gross Weekly Earnings by parliamentary constituency for the years 2000 to 2005 for Full Time Employees on Adult Rates. These statistics are already published on the National Statistics website at: http://www.statistics.gov.uk/StatBase/Product.asp?vlnk=13101.

The ASHE, carried out in April of each year, is the most comprehensive source of earnings information in the United Kingdom. It is a one per cent sample of all employees who are members of pay-as-you-earn (PAYE) schemes.

Guide to quality:

The Coefficient of Variation (CV) indicates the quality of a figure, the smaller the CV value the higher the quality.

The true value is likely to lie within +/- twice the CV e.g. for an average of 200 with a CV of 5 per cent., we would expect the population average to be within the range 180 to 220.

Key

CV < = 5%

* CV > 5% and < = 10%

 CV > 10% and < = 20%

The median replaces the mean as the headline statistic. The weighted mean is the sum of the weighted values divided by the sum of the weights. The median is the value below which 50 per cent. of employees fall. It is preferred over the mean for earnings data as it is influenced less by extreme values and because of the skewed distribution of earnings data.

Pensions

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the cost to his Department in the first full year of the change in personal pension planning outlined in the 2006 Budget. [67545]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: A Regulatory Impact Assessment ("Regulatory Impact Assessment for Simplifying the taxation of pensions—Update") was published on 22 March 2006 setting out the Government's assessment of the impact of the changes to the new simplified regime for pensions taxation introduced in the 2006 Budget. This is available at www.hmrc.gov.uk/ria/ria-pensions-simplification.pdf.

Planning Gain Supplement

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he will introduce the Planning Gain Supplement. [66658]

John Healey: As set out in the consultation document on Planning-Gain Supplement (PGS) published alongside the 2005 Pre-Budget report, PGS would not be introduced prior to 2008.

Further announcements on PGS implementation will be made by the end of the year.

Re-use of Public Sector Information Regulations

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many requests the Office for National Statistics has received for information under the Re-use of Public Sector Information Regulations (PSI) 2005; and how many requests were refused (a) in whole and (b) in part. [66653]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 2 May 2006:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent parliamentary Question concerning the number of requests the Office for National Statistics has received under the Re-Use of Public Sector Information Regulations (PSI) 2005; and how many requests were refused (a) in whole and (b) in part (66653)

Information produced by ONS is protected by Crown copyright and can be re-used under the Click-Use Licence. This is an on-line licence that is administered by the Office of Public Sector Information. Under the Click-Use Licence a range of material across Government Departments can be re-used under one central licence. This avoids re-users having to apply to re-use ONS data specifically. There is no record of any request to re-use ONS data being refused.

Scottish Executive

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the value is of monies being held by his Department on behalf of the Scottish Executive. [66983]

Mr. Des Browne: Details of the End Year Flexibility scheme are set out in the Public Expenditure Outturn White Paper 2005–06, (Cm. 6639). Table 6 of that publication details the End Year Flexibility entitlements for all departments.

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what restrictions are in place on the drawing down by the Scottish Executive of money held on its behalf by his Department; and if he will make a statement. [66984]

Mr. Des Browne: Details of the agreed draw-down of end year flexibility are set out in the relevant supplementary estimates and accompanying ministerial written statements.

Sparsely Populated Areas

Chris Huhne: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the number of households in Scotland and Wales in sparsely populated areas on the same definition as that already used for England; and if he will estimate the proportion in each case of households that (a) are second homes and (b) that have access to a car. [66546]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 2 May 2006:

As National Statistician and Registrar General for England and Wales I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking for an estimate of the number of households in Scotland and Wales in sparsely populated areas on the same definition as that already undertaken for England; and an estimate of the proportion in each case of households that a) are second homes and b) that have access to a car. (66546)

The Office for National Statistics (ONS) is not responsible for the collection of data for Scotland. All enquiries for Scottish 2001 Census data should be directed to the General Register Office for Scotland.

Table A below shows the number household spaces within Wales that were recorded as either a second home or a holiday residence on Census day (29 April 2001). The data have been extracted from table KS16 on the CD accompaniment to the Census 2001 Key Statistics for the rural and urban area classification 2004, which is available on request from 2001 Census Customer Services [census.customerservices@ons.gsi.gov.uk].

Table B below shows the number of households within Wales that had access to a car on Census day (29 April 2001). The data is an amalgamation of data extracted from table KS17 on the CD accompaniment to the Census 2001 Key Statistics for the rural and urban area classification 2004.

Stamp Duty

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what the revenue was from residential stamp duty from the (a) 3 per cent. and (b) 4 per cent. band in each year since its creation; and if he will estimate the revenue for 2006–07; [66450]

(2) how many occupiers of domestic properties paid residential stamp duty on sale at the (a) 3 per cent. and (b) 4 per cent. rate in each year since its creation; and if he will estimate the number of occupiers paying in 2006–07. [66452]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Purchases of property worth more than £250,000 and up to £500,000 have borne stamp duty at 3 per cent., and those in excess of £500,000 4 per cent., since 2000–01. Estimated revenues from residential transactions fallingin those bands are available at http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/stats/stamp_duty/table15_3_october04.xls.

Estimated revenues from stamp duty on residential transactions in 2005–06 will be published in September.

Estimated numbers of transactions subject to these rates are given in the following table:

Thousand

Consideration Rate of stamp duty	£250,001 to £500,000 3 per cent.	Above £500,000 4 per cent.
2000–01	68	13
2001–02	96	17
2002–03	120	23
2003–04	135	26
2004–05	181	30

Forecasts of stamp duty revenues and numbers of residential transactions in those bands are not available.

Statistics Project

Mr. Slaughter: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many times the Office for National Statistics met the local authorities participating in the Improving Migration and Population Statistics project; what the outcome was of those meetings; and when he expects the project to be completed. [67408]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 2 May 2006:

As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question concerning the participation of local authorities in the Improving Migration and Population Statistics (IMPS) project. (67408)

The Office for National Statistics (ONS) is currently working in partnership with four Local Authorities (LAs) to investigate whether there are local data sources that could be used to assist the compilation of the nationally produced population estimates. The four LAs are Barnet, Derby, Hammersmith & Fulham and Welwyn Hatfield. These authorities were selected from four groupings of LAs which each scored highly on different characteristics associated with difficulties in estimating population accurately.

Initial meetings were held with the four selected LAs in December 2005 and January 2006. At these meetings each of the LAs agreed to work with ONS to gain a better understanding of how they use the population estimates, what other local information and data sources they use, what particular issues affect population estimates within their LA and what methods and local data sources they use to overcome these issues.

A further round of meetings is currently under way to review progress and a final round of meetings will be held at the end of the studies in summer 2006. ONS will review the findings to see if any improvements can be applied to the mid-year population estimates processes or quality assurance procedures, either for all LAs or for groups of LAs. ONS will publish the outcome of the studies and evaluate their success, including a review of the criteria and approach for selecting LAs.

ONS has been reporting progress to LAs more generally, and providing them with the opportunity to feed into the IMPS project, primarily through meetings of the Central and Local Government Information Partnership (CLIP).

Tax Credits

Danny Alexander: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps are taken to avoid causing hardship in the recovery of tax credit overpayments. [67257]

Dawn Primarolo: HM Revenue and Customs' approach to handling overpayments, including the procedures in place where recovery might cause hardship, is set out in their Code of Practice 26 "What happens if we have paid you too much tax credit?"

Taxation of Chargeable Gains Act

Norman Baker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will withdraw the concessions under section 225 of the Taxation of Chargeable Gains Act 1992. [65237]

Dawn Primarolo: The whole tax system, including capital gains tax, is kept under review by the Government.

Trader Intra-community Fraud

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the levels of VAT missing trader intra-community fraud for each of the last five years for which data is available; and what steps he is taking to combat such fraud. [66146]

Dawn Primarolo: Estimates of the level of missing trader intra-community (MTIC) VAT fraud for the years 2000–01 to 2004–05 were published at PBR 2005 in Measuring Indirect Tax Losses—2005, a copy of which is available from the House of Commons Library. Estimates for 2005–06 will be published at PBR 2006.

The Government remain determined to tackle MTIC VAT fraud, and the criminals perpetrating it, and a comprehensive strategy involving both operational and legislative measures has been developed. As announced at PBR 2005, this strategy has been strengthened further to counter changes in the fraud.

The operational strategy is designed to identify, disrupt and prevent the fraud and involves targeting the key players involved. It includes:

risk-based controls designed to identify and prevent bogus businesses from registering for VAT;

a fast-track deregistration process for those who enter the VAT system and trade fraudulently; international co-operation, including sharing intelligence, investigating cases and developing strategic approaches; frontier activity, including the use of scanning technology to better identify goods involved in the fraud;

a litigation strategy, including criminal prosecutions, designed to increase the risks for the fraudsters, and civil litigation designed to increase the financial risks for others who choose to be involved with the fraud; and refusing repayment claims where the business has knowledge of VAT fraud in the supply chain.

Three legislative measures have also been introduced in the Finance Bill to further strengthen the tools available to HMRC to tackle the fraud:

As announced on 26 January, the Government have applied to the European Commission for a derogation to introduce a different VAT accounting procedure (known as a reverse charge) for certain goods most commonly subject to MTIC fraud. An enabling provision in the Finance Bill will allow this to be implemented as soon as the approval is granted. This will significantly limit the scope for the fraud to be perpetrated in those goods.

The second measure clarifies that the existing right of HMRC officers to inspect goods for VAT purposes includes the right to record the details of any goods inspected, and evidence of that inspection, by, for example, scanning the barcode.

The third measure will allow HMRC to direct individual businesses to keep specified additional records where there is an identified risk of fraud. HMRC will apply these requirements in a closely targeted manner.

VAT

Mr. Soames: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent assessment he has made of the merits of levying a zero rate of VAT on new build houses and a 17.5 per cent. rate on repairs and conversions. [66902]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 11 July 2005, Official Report, column 700W. We continue to keep the impact of VAT on different types of building work under review.

Welsh Speakers

Dr. Alasdair McDonnell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people in Wales speak Welsh, according to the latest census data. [66138]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the national statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Colin Mowl, dated 2 May 2006:

The National Statistician has been asked to reply to your recent question concerning how many people in Wales speak Welsh according to the latest census data. I am replying in her absence. (66138)

The table below shows that on Census day (29 April 2001) there were 582,368 people living in Wales who reported that they were able to speak Welsh. The figure has been extracted from Table T39 on the CD supplement to the Census 2001 National report for England and Wales, which is available in the House of Commons Library.

Wales–

All people aged three and over	Number
All people	2,805,701
Speaks Welsh	582,368
Does not speak Welsh	2,223,333

Unexpected Payments Worklist

Philip Davies: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people are on the unexpected payments worklist for credits; how many people in HM Revenue and Customs are working through this list; and how many people on this list have been taken to court. [64823]

Dawn Primarolo: As at 20 April 2006 there were around 34,000 items on the worklist but HMRC does not have information regarding the number of claimants involved. Several entries may relate to the same claimant.

There are 10 members of staff working through the list.

HMRC is not aware of any case where a court action has been taken against a claimant who appears on the list.

TRANSPORT

Rail Network (East London)

15. Meg Hillier: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans the Government have for further spending on the rail network in Hackney and East London. [66815]

Derek Twigg: The funding of further rail enhancements across the country will be considered as part of the development of the High Level Output Specification for the railway to be published in summer 2007.

A number of improvements to the rail network in Hackney and East London are already under way. This investment includes the current preparatory rail bridge building work for the East London Line extension to Dalston. The project will provide new stations for Hackney. Further investment is planned for improvements to the North London Line which have been confirmed by the Mayor when he takes control of the line in 2007. These include new, higher capacity, accessible trains replacing the existing fleet and a £25 million station enhancement programme of North London Line stations.

17. Martin Linton: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions he has had with the Treasury about the allocation of funding to complete both phases of the East London Line in time for the London Olympics. [66817]

Derek Twigg: The first phase of the East London Line extension is an Olympic undertaking. This commitment was given to the International Olympic Committee by the Mayor of London, taking into account the Spending Review 2004 financial settlement for TfL. The decision over whether to go ahead with the second phase of the East London Line extension is for the Mayor. Phase 1 of the extension is scheduled to be completed by June 2010, in time for the 2012 Olympics. Phase 2 is not an Olympic commitment and is not planned to be completed by 2012.

Motorways

16. Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will meet the Highways Agency to discuss the installation of signs for Shrewsbury on the M6. [66816]

Dr. Ladyman: The Highways Agency has been negotiating with both Shropshire county council and Shrewsbury and Atcham borough council about signing for Shrewsbury on the M6. Both councils have now agreed in principle to the cost involved and a formal agreement is currently being prepared. This will result in Shrewsbury being signed on theM6.

19. John Penrose: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to increase capacity at junction 21 of the M5. [66819]

Dr. Ladyman: The Highways Agency is working closely with North Somerset council (NSC) and developing a joint scheme to improve the operation of the junction by improvements on the local road approaches, together with upgrading the M5 southbound off-slip road.

Mr. Fallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to change Junction 5 of the M25 further to the proposed road-widening scheme. [67294]

Dr. Ladyman: The M25 Orbit Multi Modal Study recommended that consideration be given to the construction of additional slip roads between the M26 and A21. The Secretary of State accepted this recommendation and the Highways Agency is in the early stages of developing an appropriate scheme.

Railways

18. Mr. Vaizey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the future of rural railway lines. [66818]

Derek Twigg: The Government recognise the importance of local railway lines to the communities that they serve and seeks to support their development, primarily through the implementation of the Community Rail Development Strategy.

Stephen Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the franchises held by train operating companies; when each franchise was granted; what its length is; when each franchise is scheduled for renewal; and if he will list new franchises he is expecting to grant. [64037]

Derek Twigg: The information requested has been placed in the Libraries of the House. Franchise replacement projects are normally initiated two years prior to the franchise end date.

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the (a) supply of and (b) demand for dedicated railway engineers for the next (i) five, (ii) 10, (iii) 15 and (iv) 20 years; what action he is taking to ensure that there are sufficient numbers of competent dedicated railway engineers in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement. [65515]

Derek Twigg [holding answer 25 April 2006]: It is the responsibility of the rail industry to predict and meet future needs for competent dedicated railway engineers. However, it became clear in the years following initial privatisation of the railway that the industry, and in particular Railtrack, was not fulfilling this need. Government have established the new industry framework within which both Network Rail and the Association of Train Operators now have active and successful programmes for recruitment, training and professional development of chartered and graduate engineers and engineering technicians. Of particular note is the apprenticeship scheme set up by Network Rail in partnership with the Royal Navy at HMS Sultan, Gosport, which has places for up to 250 per year.

Stephen Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much the cost of a standard return rail ticket purchased on the day of travel from London to each of the 20 largest cities in the UK has changed in real terms since 1997. [63979]

Derek Twigg: The Office of Rail Regulation compiles an index of fares which can be found at www.rail-reg.co.uk .

Airport Rail Links (Scotland)

20. John Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions he has had with the First Minister of Scotland on the proposed rail links to Glasgow and Edinburgh airports. [66820]

Mr. Darling: I have regular discussions with the First Minister on a range of transport and other topics. The promotion and construction of new railways which start and end in Scotland is a devolved matter.

A1079

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much has been spent on repairs to the A1079 road in each of the last 10 years; and if he will make a statement. [66531]

Dr. Ladyman: The A1079 was detrunked on 1 April 2003. Before this it was maintained by the Highways Agency. However, the agency accounts for maintenance on a management area as opposed to a specific route basis, and figures relating to the spend specifically on the A1079 are not readily available.

Spending on maintenance on the A1079 since 1 April 2003 is a matter for the new highway authority, East Riding of Yorkshire. This information is not held centrally.

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many accidents there have been on the A1079 in each of the last five years; how many resulted in serious injury; and if he will make a statement. [66532]

Dr. Ladyman: The number of personal injury road accidents that occurred on the A1079 from 2000 to 2004 (the latest year for which figures are available) and the resulting serious casualties are given in the table.

	Accidents	Accidents resulting in at least one serious casualty
2001	149	32
2002	183	38
2003	181	25
2004	137	31

Airports

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many near misses were recorded involving flights (a) into and (b) out of each airport in Northern Ireland in each of the last five years, broken down by airline or carrier. [65504]

Derek Twigg: During the five years from 2001 to 2005 inclusive there were seven Airprox incidents over Northern Ireland airspace reported to the UK Airprox Board for assessment. In each case at least one of the aircraft involved was outbound from or inbound to an airport in Northern Ireland. All seven events were reviewed and categorised by the Board as being Category C where no risk of collision existed. At least one commercial air transport aircraft was involved but the Airprox Board does not make public the identity of the airline.

The seven incidents can be broken down as follows:

	Into	Out of
2002	1	1
2003	0	0

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport on what date and for what reasons the cap of 480,000 flights a year at Heathrow was agreed; and under what circumstances it might be removed. [66400]

Derek Twigg: The limit of 480,000 air transport movements a year at Heathrow is among the conditions imposed by the Secretary of State in his decision letter of 20 November 2001 granting planning consent to the development of a fifth terminal. As stated in the decision letter, the Secretary of State accepted the planning Inspector's recommendation for the limit on the basis of a precautionary approach, and in view of the Inspector's concerns about noise, particularly the weighting of the number of aircraft movements relative to the Leq noise index. The limit applies from the date that the core terminal building opens for public use, but BAA have stated their intention to manage traffic levels in the intervening period. The limit could only be changed following consideration of a further planning application which provided grounds for reaching a different view.

Biodiesel

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the future of biodiesel in the UK. [67088]

Dr. Ladyman: I refer the hon. Member to my answer of 24 April 2006, Official Report, columns 832–33W, to the hon. Member for Southend, West (Mr. Amess).

Blue Badge Scheme

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport pursuant to the answer of 13 March 2006, Official Report, column 1883W, on the Blue Badge Scheme, (1) how many people displaying a valid Blue Badge have been prosecuted for parking where there is a ban on loading or unloading in each year since 1997; [64362]

(2) what recent representations he has received on whether to prosecute people displaying a valid Blue Badge for parking where there is a ban on loading or unloading; if he will bring forward legislation to allow people so parked to do so; and if he will make a statement. [64363]

Derek Twigg: Enforcement of the Blue Badge Scheme is a matter for local authorities. There is no legal requirement for local authorities to provide the Department with details of any parking prosecutions. The devolved administrations are responsible for the Scheme in other parts of the UK.

The Department has received representations from some local authorities about the legality of parking by blue badge holders in loading bays. The Department's policy is that under the Blue Badge Scheme, badge holders should not automatically be permitted to park in loading bays during a ban on loading and unloading. To ensure that this is clearly reflected in the regulations the Department proposes to bring forward amendments, where necessary, during the course of the year.

British Transport Police

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many British Transport Police officers there have been in each region in each year since 1997. [65703]

Derek Twigg [holding answer 26 April 2006]: The British Transport Police have provided the following information on officers employed by the BTP in each of its areas since 1997–98.

	Number of police officers

Carbon Dioxide Emissions

Mr. Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what forecasts his Department has made of the carbon dioxide emissions from each of the UK's (a) designated and (b) non-designated airports for each year for which assessments have been made. [66736]

Derek Twigg [holding answer 27 April 2006]: The Department has not produced carbon dioxide forecasts on an airport by airport basis. The Government believes that the best way of ensuring that aviation contributes towards the goal of climate stabilisation is through a well-designed emissions trading regime.

Crossrail

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the status of Crossrail Line 2. [66132]

Derek Twigg: Responsibility for taking forward proposals on the Chelsea-Hackney line now rests with the Mayor of London.

Departmental Leave (Stress)

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many people have been on sick leave suffering from stress in his Department in each of the last three years; and what percentage of the total staff number this represents. [63547]

Derek Twigg: The number of people that have been on sick leave suffering from stress[1] and the percentage of the total staff this represents for each of the last three years is:

[1] Stress absence can also include anxiety, nervous debility, neurosis, emotional upset.

	Total number of staff absent	Percentage of total staff
2003	991	6.4
2004	831	5
2005	631	3.7

It should be noted that the reduction in figures in 2005 has been influenced in part by the incomplete data supplied by DVLA. The 2005 figures for DVLA are for January to June only due to a change in their HR system. DVLA figures for the remainder of 2005 will be available at a later date.

First Great Western

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions he has had with First Great Western on redoubling the track between Kemble and Swindon. [65790]

Derek Twigg: The Department has not had any discussions with First Great Western on this. This would be for Network Rail to take forward and I have therefore asked them to write directly to my hon. Friend.

Grievance Procedures

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many grievance procedures have been initiated in his Department in each of the last three years. [63548]

Derek Twigg: The number of grievance procedures initiated in the Department for Transport in each of the last three years is as follows:

	Number
2003	14
2004	26
2005	50

Highways Agency are not included in the figures as they do not collect this information centrally, but are doing so from 1 April 2006.

There are several reasons for an increase in cases over the three years, including:

staff have a greater awareness of the procedures available to them;

managers are encouraged to be proactive and deal with issues as they occur; more accurate recording of cases.

Infrastructure Projects

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the potential for (a) cost and (b) time savings through reform of planning processes and public inquiries for major infrastructure projects; and if he will make a statement. [63245]

Derek Twigg: The Department has considered, with other relevant Departments, the scope for improving the effectiveness of the planning system in handling proposals for major infrastructure schemes. Rod Eddington, who has been appointed by the Department for Transport and Her Majesty's Treasury to advise on the long-term impact of transport decisions on the UK's productivity, stability and growth, is also now considering this as part of his study. The Department has not sought to estimate specific cost or time savings which might result from changes to the planning system.

Purple Airspace

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the flights other than those used by members of the royal family which were granted Purple airspace in each year since 1997. [66904]

Derek Twigg: The configuration and promulgation of "Purple Airspace" ceased in 2001 in response to the terrorist attacks on 11 September 2005. Royal and selected VIP flights are now contained within the UK's existing controlled airspace structure and, as necessary, within time-limited temporary controlled airspace outside the permanent route structure.

Such flights include those by members of other royal families, other reigning sovereigns, prime ministers, heads of state of commonwealth and foreign countries, and UK Members of Parliament requiring expeditious handling. The above measures are implemented by means of a Notice To Airmen (NOTAM). As NOTAM is also used to implement a number of other air traffic control procedures, and records kept are not subject specific, it is not possible to provide the hon. Member with a definitive number of royal and VIP flights that have flown within existing and temporary controlled airspace.

Road Accidents (Essex)

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many people were (a) killed and (b) injured in road accidents in Essex, excluding Southend and Thurrock, in each year between 1995 and 2004. [66955]

Dr. Ladyman: The number of people killed and injured in each county and unitary authority in Great Britain are published annually in the report "Road Casualties Great Britain".

The numbers of people killed and injured in personal injury road accidents in Essex (excluding the unitary authorities of Southend-on-Sea and Thurrock) each year between 1995 and 2004 (the latest for which figures are available) are given in the following table.

Number of people killed and injured in Essex (excluding UA's): 1995–2004

	Killed	Serious and slightly injured
1995	74	7,298
1996	82	7,206
1997	77	7,322
1998	73	7,187
1999	94	7,259
2000	75	7,533
2001	100	7,180
2002	75	6,716
2003	89	6,600
2004	93	6,515

Royal Travel

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport pursuant to the answer of 18 April 2006, Official Report, columns 59–60W, on royal travel, why environmental impact is not one of the given criteria for determining the mode of travel; and if he will change the criteria to include environmental impacts. [65491]

Derek Twigg: The criteria which were established in 1997 were based on previous guidelines on royal and ministerial travel. However, as part of a current review of the Financial Memorandum governing the grant-in-aid with the Royal Household, the criteria for official royal travel will be re-examined to consider the need for any change.

Transport Improvements (Coventry)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what transport improvements for which his Department is responsible there have been in Coventry, South in the past 12 months; what further improvements are planned; and if he will make a statement. [66822]

Derek Twigg: The following schemes were carried out in the last 12 months:

The Highways Agency have carried out a number of maintenance enhancement works on the A45 and A46 trunk roads including reconstruction of the A45 between Ryton-on-Dunsmore and the Tollbar End junction (£1.2 million); a junction improvement at A45/A445 at Ryton-on-Dunsmore (£4.5 million); and erection of noise barriers on the A46 south of interchange with A45 at Stivichall (£0.27 million).

In March 2005 Network Rail replaced two level crossings; with a road bridge at Tile Hill, and a pedestrian footbridge at Canley.

Under the West Midlands Local Transport Plan settlement for 2005–06, almost £70 million was allocated to the West Midlands metropolitan local authorities (of which £6.56 million was for Coventry) for transport measures (under £5 million) and road maintenance.

In addition, the following schemes are planned:

A £57 million upgrade of A45/A46 Tollbar End roundabout to provide a grade separated interchange is proposed for 2009–10.

The £31 million LTP-funded Coventry Quality Bus Network scheme will substantially improve bus service provision in four key corridors and will enhance access to some of the most disadvantaged communities. Full approval was given in December 2004 and is due to be completed in 2008.

Network Rail are undertaking resignalling and providing twin-tracking in August/September 2006 on the Leamington to Nuneaton line to the south of Coventry Station.

Utility Companies

Alison Seabeck: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he will be in a position to introduce the proposed permit scheme for utility companies laying pipelines and cables in roads. [65826]

Dr. Ladyman: The Department is working to ensure that the regulations are produced as soon as possible.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Addictions

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people are estimated to have (a) a gambling addiction, (b) an alcohol addiction and (c) a drug addiction in (i) Northern Ireland and (ii) each council area in each of the last five years. [66462]

Mr. Woodward: Information on the number of people estimated to have a gambling addiction is not available.

Information regarding alcohol addiction is not available as requested. The Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety (DHSSPS) carried out the first ever census of Drug and Alcohol Treatment Services on 1 March 2005. Using the data collected, we are able to provide the following information on persons in treatment for alcohol misuse. It is important to note that alcohol misuse does not constitute addiction.

Health and Social Services Board	Persons in treatment for alcohol only misuse	Persons in treatment for both drugs and alcohol misuse
Eastern	1,002	340
Northern	706	145
Southern	624	147
Western	476	215
Prisons	42	108
Hospitals	224	5
Northern Ireland	3,074	960

Information regarding drug addiction is not available by district council as requested. The Northern Ireland Addicts Index Database holds information on all those persons registered in concurrence with the Misuse of Drugs (Notification of and Supply to Addicts) (Northern Ireland) Regulations 1973. Using the data held we are able to provide the following information on persons who were registered on the index. The information is provided at both HSS Board and Trust level.

Alzheimer's Disease

Dr. Alasdair McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people with Alzheimer's disease in Northern Ireland were prescribed anticholinisterase drugs in each of the last five years. [66142]

Mr. Woodward: Information is not available on drugs prescribed to people with Alzheimer's disease. However, information is available on the number of acetylcholinesterase inhibitors prescription items dispensed in primary care from 2001 to 2005 (see Table 1 below). Acetylcholinesterase inhibitors are commonly used to treat the dementia of Alzheimer's disease. Information is not available on the actual number of individuals that this relates to.

Anti-bullying Strategy

Dr. Alasdair McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what funds are available for the implementation of the anti-bullying strategy in Northern Ireland; [66103]

(2) how the anti-bullying strategy is to be implemented in schools in Northern Ireland; [66104]

(3) what the Department of Education's anti-bullying strategy is. [66105]

Angela E. Smith: The Department of Education actively promotes and funds anti-bullying initiatives through its anti-bullying programme. The current programme comprises funding for a dedicated bullying advice helpline, operated by ChildLine; a further study into the extent and nature of bullying in schools in Northern Ireland as a follow up to the research published in 2002; and a survey of pastoral care in schools to ensure compliance with the requirements to have measures in place to tackle bullying.

The Department is a member of the local Anti-bullying Forum. The Forum, which draws its members from the statutory and voluntary sectors, was launched in November 2005, with the aim of sharing models of best practice, disseminating information, developing and co-coordinating joint initiatives. This will ensure that schools and organisations working with children and young people are able to have appropriate strategies to prevent and deal with bullying behaviours. The Forum has developed a three-year anti-bullying strategy with the Department of Education funding its administrative structure. The main elements of the Forum's strategic plan includes developing, implementing and promoting of models of good practice, developing parental partnerships, website development and organising annual bullying week.

In 2005–06 the Department of Education has contributed approximately £55,000 to the development of anti-bullying initiatives. In 2006–07 the Department has agreed to fund £66,000 to the local Forum to implement its anti-bullying strategy and providing the terms and conditions of grant are met, the Department has agreed in principle to fund in 2007–08 and 2008–09. Across the education and library boards at least £200,000 per annum is allocated to specific anti-bullying activity. The Department does not have information about the resources that schools devote to anti-bullying initiatives from their own budgets.

Anti-racism Funding

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment he has made of the effects of the funding awarded to each of the 13 organisations in February 2005 to tackle racism. [65329]

Angela E. Smith: In February 2005 £100,000 was made available specifically to assist local communities build positive relationships with minority ethnic people, thereby helping to tackle hate crime in a number of geographical areas. 33 organisations applied and 13 received funding. These projects were subject to continual monitoring to ensure that they fulfilled the aims and objectives set out in the original applications.

This investment, in the Government's view, represents good value for money. It has enabled those organisations to undertake a range of activities and develop programmes to help minority ethnic and migrant groups integrate into society. The programmes also addressed the problem of racism. For example, over 100 people attended workshops across Northern Ireland to share experiences and develop action plans to tackle racism; a CD ROM is being produced to promote the integration of minority ethnic people into the local communities; over 75 people, in the Greater Belfast area, representing five community groups, received anti-racism and diversity training; over 200 young people from local schools in the mid-Ulster area attended a Chinese cultural awareness and martial arts event; 90 people from North and East Belfast attended cultural celebration events; and 75 children from the mid-Down area attended a six week summer camp designed to tackle issues such as conflict resolution.

Biotinidase Deficiency

Dr. Alasdair McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland for what reasons the Newborn Screening programme does not include screening for Biotinidase deficiency. [66616]

Mr. Woodward: The National Screening Committee (NSC) has recommended that Biotinidase Deficiency should not be included as part of Newborn Screening. This advice was based on two Health Technology Assessment reports which reviewed the current research evidence. The NSC has also assessed Biotinidase Deficiency against its assessment criteria for new screening programmes.

Dr. Alasdair McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will estimate the cost of including Biotinidase deficiency screening for new born babies in the Newborn Screening Programme in Northern Ireland. [66617]

Mr. Woodward: The NSC has recommended that Biotinidase Deficiency should not be included in Newborn Screening. Consequently the cost of including Biotinidase Deficiency screening in Northern Ireland has not been considered.

Dr. Alasdair McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what recent estimate he has made of the cost of (a) treating and (b) educating a child with Biotinidase deficiency until (i) 16 and (ii) 18 years old in Northern Ireland. [66618]

Mr. Woodward: Biotinidase deficiency is a rare condition. With approximately 12 cases per year across the United Kingdom, Northern Ireland's proportional share, based on number of births, would be one case every three years. Given the small numbers affected, the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety does not record the specific costs of treating a child with this condition.

Specific medical conditions such as biotinidase deficiency are not recorded by education and library boards (ELBs) as part of the school census process. Only one of the ELBs is aware of children in their area with biotinidase deficiency. Regardless of specific medical conditions and their severity, special educational needs provision is matched to the individual needs of pupils. As this provision may be made in a special school, a special unit of a mainstream class, the associated cost cannot be provided for individual pupils.

Blue Badges

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many Blue Badges for disabled people were issued in Northern Ireland in 2005. [66990]

Mr. Woodward: The chief executive of Roads Service (Dr. Malcolm McKibbin) has been asked to write to the hon. Gentleman in response to this question.

Letter from Dr. Malcolm McKibbin:

You recently asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland a Parliamentary Question about how many Blue Badges for disabled persons were issued in Northern Ireland in 2005. I have been asked to reply as the issue raised falls within my responsibility as Chief Executive of Roads Service.

I can advise that 29,493 Blue Badges were issued to individuals in 2005. In addition 248 badges were issued to 69 organisations that care for people with a disability.

Capita Group

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much business his Department has placed with (a) Capita Group plc and (b) its subsidiaries in each of the last five years; what the total value is of outstanding contracts placed with Capita Group plc and its subsidiaries by his Department; for which current tenders issued by his Department (i) Capita Group plc and (ii) its subsidiaries have been invited to bid; and whether (A) Capita Group plc and (B) its subsidiaries have seconded staff (1) temporarily and (2) on a longer-term basis to (X) his Department and (Y) its agencies. [61069]

Angela E. Smith: There were no contracts awarded by Northern Ireland Departments to Capita plc over the last five financial years.

The number of contracts awarded to subsidiaries of Capita plc is 49. Details of the amounts tendered and on which contracts were awarded in each of the last five years are set out in the table. Information relating to the number of tenders submitted or number of invitations to submit tenders cannot be provided due to the disproportionate cost of doing so.

There have been no occasions where staff from Capita plc or its subsidiaries have been seconded by Northern Ireland Departments or their agencies.

The total value of outstanding contracts is nil.

James Brokenshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many tenders (a) Capita plc and (b) its subsidiaries has submitted to his Department in each of the last three years; and how many tenders were successful. [61448]

Angela E. Smith: I am unable to advise how many tenders Capita plc and its subsidiaries has submitted in each of the last three years as to do so would be at disproportionate cost.

I am, however, able to advise that the following number of tenders were successful in each of the last three years. None was awarded to Capita plc, all were awarded to its subsidiaries. They are as follows:

	Number
2003–04	21
2004–05	8
2005–06	1

James Brokenshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many contracts his Department holds with (a) Capita plc and (b) its subsidiaries which still have a potential duration of five years or more. [61449]

Angela E. Smith: There are no contracts that still have a potential duration of five years or more with either Capita plc or its subsidiaries.

Children's Commissioner

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps are being taken to conduct an open recruitment competition to fill the vacancy for the Children's Commissioner for Northern Ireland. [66394]

Angela E. Smith: We intend to follow a very similar process to the 2003 appointment process for the first Commissioner for Children and Young People for Northern Ireland, which was widely regarded as very successful. We will commence the public appointment process in May and hold interviews in late June.

Dental Services

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment he has made of the change in the condition of children's teeth and general dental care over the past five years in Northern Ireland. [67137]

Mr. Woodward: The information is not available in the form requested. Monitoring of the dental health of children is undertaken as part of the Children's Dental Health Survey which takes place every 10 years. The last survey was undertaken in 2003. The following below outline the change in dental decay levels in five, 12 and 15-year-old children in Northern Ireland over the ten year period 1993 to 2003.

The proportion of Northern Ireland children who have experienced dental decay: The 1993 and 2003 surveys compared

Age group	1993	Percentage 2003[1]

In terms of general dental care, we have introduced several measures in 2005 to improve the dental health of children, specifically a targeted preventive fissure sealant scheme and an evidence-based caries reduction programme.

Departmental Leave (Stress)

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people in each Department and Government Agency in Northern Ireland have been on long-term sick leave in each of the last three years (a) in total and (b) broken down by grade; and how many of these cases related to stress. [63584]

Angela E. Smith: Sick absence statistics for the 11 Departments of the Northern Ireland administration and the Northern Ireland Office are analysed by financial year. Tables detailing the information sought for the period 2002–03 to 2004–05 have been placed in the Library. The analysis of sickness absence in Northern Ireland Departments for 2005–06 is currently being finalised and should be available in the autumn of 2006.

Depression (Drug Prescriptions)

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the change was in the estimated annual numbers of drugs prescribed to people in Northern Ireland suffering from depression between 1995 and 2005. [65867]

Mr. Woodward: The information is not available in exactly the form requested. However we can provide information on anti-depressant prescription items dispensed in the community from 2000 to 2005.

Development Funding for Minority Ethnic Communities

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many groups in Northern Ireland have made successful applications for funding under the development fund for minority ethnic communities announced in February 2005; and what total amount was paid out in Northern Ireland in the last 12 months. [65328]

Angela E. Smith: There were 75 applications for assistance to the development fund for minority ethnic communities, announced in February 2005. 15 organisations were successful in obtaining core funding and four were awarded time-bound project funding. A total amount of £0.6 million was paid to these projects over the last 12 months.

Dogs

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many dangerous dogs have been destroyed in Northern Ireland in each of the last five years. [65352]

Angela E. Smith: The number of dangerous dogs destroyed in Northern Ireland in each of the last five years from 2001 to 2005 (inclusive) is detailed in the following table. Dogs designated as dangerous dogs, under the Dogs (Northern Ireland) Order 1983, as amended by the Dangerous Dogs (Northern Ireland) Order 1991, are pit bull terrier, Japanese tosa, Dogo Argentino and the Fila Braziliero. All of the dogs destroyed in Northern Ireland over the last five years were of the pit bull terrier type.

Fountain Primary School

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to assist Fountain primary school in Londonderry with its transportation costs. [65316]

Angela E. Smith: The Western Education and Library Board changed its transport policy in September 2005 to restrict home to school transport assistance to eligible pupils. As a result it withdrew concessionary transport for pupils travelling to a number of schools including Fountain primary school.

Derry city council is considering the provision of short term funding of around £3,000 towards transport costs to cover the period April-June 2006 and this will be discussed at the Councils Development Committee meeting on 11 May.

I met with the hon. Member for Foyle (Mark Durkan) and a delegation from Fountain primary school on 5 April 2006 where it was accepted that the Western Board could no longer fund the transport costs for pupils at Fountain primary school. I have, however, agreed to liaise with my hon. Friend, the Member for Delyn (Mr. Hanson) Minister of State for Northern Ireland, to discuss the feasibility of a longer-term solution to the transport problem. Officials from DE and DSD will be meeting shortly to take this issue forward as a matter of urgency.

Educational Attainment

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what percentage of (a) Catholics and (b) Protestants left school without any educational qualifications in the last year for which figures are available. [66978]

Angela E. Smith: In 2003–04, 5.7 per cent. of Catholic school leavers and 3.9 per cent. of Protestant school leavers had no formal qualifications.

Community Differentials

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland on what evidence the Government base their view that there is disproportionate poverty and disadvantage among the Catholic community. [66386]

Angela E. Smith: Evidence from the most recent "Households Below Average Income" report for Northern Ireland and the Poverty and Social Exclusion Survey of Northern Ireland both indicate rates of poverty in Catholic households to be higher than for Protestant households. Both publications have been placed in the Libraries of the House.

NHS Employment Statistics

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people were employed (a) full-time and (b) part-time by the NHS in Northern Ireland in January (i) 2001 and (ii) 2006. [66991]

Mr. Woodward: Figures for the number of staff employed within the NI HPSS are not available as at January. The information requested is available as at 31 March for 2001 and 2006 and is presented in the following table.

Staff employed within the NI HPSS by employment status as at 31 March 2001 and 2006

Date	Full-time Headcount	Part-time Headcount	WTE[1]	Total Headcount	WTE[1]
March 2001	29810	18533	11716.81	48343	41526.81
March 2006	35973	22688	14445.97	58661	50418.97

[1] WTE = Whole-time equivalent.

Note:
Figures exclude bank staff and home helps. Bank staff maintain service delivery by covering staffing shortfalls and fluctuating work loads and as a result their input to the service is difficult to measure. Home help staff predominately work as and when required, therefore not all home help staff are recorded on the personnel systems from which the data is taken.

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people were employed in administration positions by the NHS in Northern Ireland in January (a) 2001 and (b) 2006. [66992]

Mr. Woodward: Figures for the number of administration staff employed within the NI HPSS are not available as at January. The information requested is available as at 31 March for 2001 and 2006 and is presented in the following table.

Administration staff employed within the NI HPSS as at 31 March 2001 and 2006

Emergency Services

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the average starting salary was for newly recruited personnel in the (a) police, (b) fire and (c) ambulance services in Northern Ireland on 1 January. [65880]

Mr. Woodward: Student Police Service of Northern Ireland officers start on a salary of £20,397 rising to £22,770 on successful completion of initial training.

Trainee whole-time Northern Ireland Fire and Rescue Service firefighters start on a salary of £19,394 rising to £20,202 on completion of training and £25,850 when competent. Retained firefighters receive a quarterly retaining fee of £362.44 or £483.21 for 12 or 24 hour availability respectively. Initially, they receive £17.72 for two hours training per week and, once trained, receive a £12.61 turnout fee per call.

The Northern Ireland Ambulance Service (NIAS) recruits staff initially to its Patient Care (non-emergency) Service tier starting on a salary of £14,462. In time, staff can progress to the trainee Emergency Medical Technician grade starting at £15,908 and then to the Paramedic grade starting at £19,885.

Informants

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps are taken to protect informants and their families in Northern Ireland. [67071]

Mr. Woodward: It is Government policy never to comment on specific national security and intelligence matters.

Independent Treatment Centres

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many operations were carried out in independent sector treatment centres in Northern Ireland in the last year for which figures are available, broken down by type. [64980]

Mr. Woodward: The information requested is not held centrally and will take some time to collate. I will write to the hon. Member with the relevant information as soon as it becomes available and place a copy in the Library.

Examination Results

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the (a) GCSE, (b) A level and (c) key stage results were for the 100 (i) primary and (ii) secondary schools in Northern Ireland with the (A) highest and (B) lowest percentage of children receiving free school meals in each of the last three years. [65994]

Angela E. Smith: The requested information is as follows:

Fishing

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people are estimated to have visited Northern Ireland during 2005 on fishing holidays. [65875]

Angela E. Smith: Figures for 2005, relating to the number of direct[1] visitors who came to Northern Ireland specifically because of fishing, or who participated in sea, game or coarse fishing during their stay in Northern Ireland are presented as follows. These figures are not mutually exclusive; one visitor could have participated in more than one type of fishing during their stay.

[1] A direct visitor is one who entered NI directly via a NI air or sea port and excludes those who entered NI via ROI and ROI residents.

Visitors (excluding those who entered NI via ROI and ROI residents) who participated in fishing during their stay in Northern Ireland (2005)

	Actual reason for visit	Participated	Total
Sea fishing	400	4,100	4,500
Game fishing	300	2,700	3,000
Coarse fishing	700	2,500	3,200

Note:

Due to small sample sizes the above figures should be treated with caution.

General Practitioners

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the average (a) gross annual salary and (b) weekly working hours were of GPs in Northern Ireland in the last period for which figures are available. [65879]

Mr. Woodward: (a) Following the introduction of the new General Medical Services (GMS) contract with effect from 1 April 2004, the contract for the provision of General Medical Services is between the relevant Health and Social Services Board and a GMS practice rather than individual GPs. Under the contract, each GMS practice receives payment and can generate income through a number of streams, some of which are core and some in which participation is a matter of choice for the practice concerned. It is a matter for each GMS contractor to determine how its practice is organised and how much of the funding it receives goes directly to each GP in the practice by way of salary/profit sharing. Since, as independent contractors, GPs are not required to declare information about their salaries, it is not possible to provide accurate average salary figures for the profession. However, officials estimate that in Northern Ireland, on average, the gross annual income per GP, after practice expenses, is currently in the region of £85,000 to £95,000.

(b) No weekly working hours are stipulated for a GMS contractor (practice) or each GP. However, each GMS contractor is responsible for the provision of General Medical Services to patients within core hours which are defined as,

"the period beginning at 5am and ending at 6:30pm on any day from, and including, Monday to Friday except a public holiday and a local holiday agreed with the Board".

Heart and Lung Transplants

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the average NHS waiting time for a heart and lung transplant was in each of the last five years for which records are available in Northern Ireland. [66041]

Mr. Woodward: Information on the average waiting time for a heart and lung transplant in each of the last five years is shown in the following table.

	Average waiting time for a heart and lung transplant in days
2001–02	—
2002–03	—
2003–04	1,402
2004–05	94

Note:
An average waiting time for 2001–02 and 2002–03 is not available as no patients received a heart and lung transplant during these years.
Source:
Belfast City Hospital Transplant Co-ordinator.

Figures are based on the time waited by patients, normally resident in Northern Ireland, who received a heart and lung transplant during the financial year. The figures do not include patients who have been removed from the waiting list for medical/social reasons or patients who have died while waiting for the transplant operation.

Homelessness

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what change there has been in the number of people (a) presenting themselves and (b) assessed by the Housing Executive as homeless in Northern Ireland in each of the last five years. [67548]

Mr. Hanson: During the last five financial years (1 April to 31 March 2006 each year) the information requested is as follows:

	Presenters	Increase compared to previous year	Acceptances	Increase/ Decrease compared to previous year
2000–01	12,694	1,697	6,457	1,265

2004–05	17,362	212	8,470	-124

Notes:
Figures for 2005–06 are currently being collated and quality assured and will be available for release by the Housing Executive shortly.

Invest Northern Ireland

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many jobs were secured by Invest Northern Ireland, and its predecessors, for each of Northern Ireland's constituencies in each of the last 10 years. [66404]

Angela E. Smith: The information is as follows.

Table 1 shows the number of jobs promoted within each parliamentary constituency area as a result of inward investment projects during the 10 years from 1995–96 to 2004–05.

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether Invest Northern Ireland has conducted an equality impact assessment on its policy for making land available for industrial use. [66405]

Angela E. Smith: Invest NI is currently carrying out an Equality Impact Assessment (EQIA) of its Business Development Solutions (BDS) programmes of assistance. The impact assessment will be sent out for public consultation later in 2006.

Invest NI's policy for "making land available for industrial use" will be analysed as part of this Business Development Solutions EQIA.

IRA

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what discussions his Department has had with former IRA members to help prevent future terrorist attacks. [67059]

Mr. Woodward: The Government remain committed to ending all violence and criminality in Northern Ireland and continues to engage with those who are committed to making the transition to the political path and to non-violence and exclusively peaceful and democratic means.

Irish Speakers

Dr. Alasdair McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people in Northern Ireland speak Irish, according to the latest census data. [66137]

Angela E. Smith: A total of 115,731 people (7.15 per cent. of those aged three and over) indicated through the 2001 Census that they could speak Irish.

Local Government Auditor

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland which Department of the Northern Ireland Administration is responsible for accountability and oversight arrangements in relation to the Northern Ireland Local Government Auditor. [28210]

Angela E. Smith: In Northern Ireland, Local Government Auditors are designated by the Department of the Environment under Article 4 of the Local Government (Northern Ireland) Order 2005. Article 4 provides that the Department may, with the consent of the Comptroller and Auditor General for Northern Ireland, designate persons who are members of the staff of the Northern Ireland Audit Office as local government auditors.

The Northern Ireland Audit Office is statutorily independent of Government.

MI5

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment he has made of the compatibility with the Patten Report of the transfer of lead responsibility on national security in Northern Ireland to MI5; and if he will make a statement. [66535]

Mr. Woodward: The transfer of lead responsibility for national security intelligence work in Northern Ireland is entirely consistent with the Patten Report paragraph 6.15 and Recommendation 20. Paragraph 6.15 says, inter alia:

> 'We recommend that responsibility for policing be devolved to the Northern Ireland Executive as soon as possible, except for matters of national security.'

It is also wholly consistent with the current position in the rest of the United Kingdom and with the comments at paragraph 6.22:

> 'As in the rest of the United Kingdom (including Scotland under the new devolved arrangements there),- the Chief Constable remains fully accountable for the involvement of police in matters involving national security, even though his or her main accountability in such matters is to the Secretary of State rather than to the Policing Board.'

Mortality Statistics

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the five most common causes of death from preventable diseases were among (a) men and (b) women in Northern Ireland in 2005. [67547]

Mr. Woodward: The public health strategy Investing for Health recognised that a large proportion of early death and disease is preventable. However, the questions of which illnesses may be considered preventable, and at what age a death may be regarded as too young, are not straightforward.

Although much work has been done nationally and internationally in recent decades to measure levels of avoidable or premature mortality within populations, there has been a lack of consensus on how these deaths should be defined.

At present work is under way to define preventable causes of death. The Office for National Statistics (ONS) is currently consulting on the development of indicators for use in measuring avoidable and premature mortality.

Motoring Offences

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many motorists in Northern Ireland convicted of speeding offences during 2005 were recorded as having exceeded 100 mph. [65342]

Mr. Hanson: Convictions data sources do not collate information on the actual speed in relation to speeding offences. In 2003, the latest year for which data is available, there were 3,144 convictions for excess speed in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many motorists in Northern Ireland convicted of drink driving offences during 2005 were recorded as having an alcohol content of more than 4 times the legal limit. [65343]

Mr. Hanson: Based on information provided by the Police Service of Northern Ireland relating to drivers breathalysed, in 2005 29 motorists had a reading of exceeding the legal limit by 4 times. One person registered as being 5 times over the legal limit. It should be noted that these figures exclude cases where alcohol levels have been forensically obtained from blood/urine samples.

In 2003, and excluding offences relating to failure to provide a sample, there were 2,283 convictions for drink driving. Convictions datasets do not, however, hold any additional information relating to the alcohol levels involved. Convictions data beyond 2003 are currently not available.

Newborn Screening Programme

Dr. Alasdair McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what medical conditions are screened for in the Newborn Screening programme in Northern Ireland. [66615]

Mr. Woodward: Screening is routinely offered to parents of newborn babies for a range of medical conditions. A physical examination is carried out on all babies with a particular focus on screening for developmental dysplasia of the hip, congenital heart disease, congenital cataract and cryptorchidism (descent of the testes in boys). A sample of the baby's blood taken from a heel prick is screened for phenylketonuria, congenital hypothyroidism, cystic fibrosis, tyrosinaemia and homocystinuria. Their hearing is also tested through the newborn hearing screening programme.

Dr. Alasdair McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what criteria the UK Screening Committee uses when determining for which conditions to screen. [66619]

Mr. Woodward: The NSC assesses proposed new screening programmes against a set of internationally recognised criteria including the epidemiology of the condition, the screening test, any treatment options and the acceptability of the screening programme.

Northern Ireland Parades Commission

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether any breaches of security have occurred in the Northern Ireland Parades Commission since its establishment. [65336]

Mr. Woodward: On one occasion, in response to a request from a local councillor for a faxed list of band names, the commission inadvertently attached details of a list of band organisers, appearing on the same page. The commission then immediately disclosed this fact to the PSNI. The commission considered the circumstances of this administrative error in order to ensure no recurrence, and responded accordingly.

Aside from this incident, the commission is not aware of any breaches of security having occurred since its establishment.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland on how many occasions the Northern Ireland Parades Commission has investigated allegations that personal details of members of the public which it held had been leaked; and how many members of staff in the commission have been (a) interviewed and (b) disciplined as a result of investigations into the leaking of information. [65337]

Mr. Woodward: The commission has never investigated any allegation that personal details of members of the public which it held have been leaked.

On one occasion, in response to a request from a local councillor for a faxed list of band names, the commission inadvertently attached details of a list of band organisers, appearing on the same page. The commission then immediately disclosed this fact to the PSNI. The commission considered the circumstances of this administrative error in order to ensure no recurrence, and responded accordingly.

Northern Ireland Police Fund

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the religious breakdown was of staff in the Northern Ireland police fund in each year since it was created. [65151]

Mr. Woodward: I have been advised by the Northern Ireland police fund that it does not maintain records of the community breakdown of its staff and cannot provide the information requested.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many members of staff in the Northern Ireland police fund have been questioned by the Police Service of Northern Ireland in connection with (a) terrorist related offences and (b) other crimes since it was created. [65152]

Mr. Woodward: Disclosure of details concerning police investigations is an operational matter for the chief constable.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what Mr. Desmond Clayton's role was within the Northern Ireland Police Fund; what vetting procedure he underwent prior to his appointment; and what relevant experience he brought to his post. [65153]

Mr. Woodward: Mr. Clayton was employed by the Northern Ireland Police Fund as its Chief Executive. As an employee of the Fund all matters pertaining to his appointment and terms and conditions of employment are a matter for the Fund.

Office of the First Minister and Deputy First Minister

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people were employed by the Office of First Minister and Deputy First Minister on 1 March (a) 2002 and (b) 2006. [65868]

Angela E. Smith: The information is as follows.

Number of people employed by Office of the First Minister and Deputy First Minister

	Number
31 March 2002[1]	373
1 March 2006	335

[1] Information not available at 1 March 2002

Omagh Bombing

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) if he will take steps to establish a public inquiry into MI5's handling of threat information on a possible bomb attack at Omagh prior to 15 August 1998; [66423]

(2) how many people were (a) killed and (b) injured as a result of the Omagh bomb; [66424]

(3) whether he has made representations to (a) the Home Office and (b) MI5 for the head of MI5 to meet the families of the Omagh bomb victims to discuss the statement by the Chief Constable of the Police Service Northern Ireland that MI5 had threat information on a possible bomb attack at Omagh prior to 15 August 1998; [66425]

(4) if the head of MI5 will meet the families of the Omagh bomb victims to discuss the statement by the Chief Constable of the Police Service Northern Ireland that MI5 had threat information on a possible bomb attack at Omagh prior to 15 August 1998; [66427]

(5) if he will make a statement on the statement of the Chief Constable of the Police Service of Northern Ireland (PSNI) that some threat information gathered by MI5 on a possible bomb attack in Omagh prior to 15 August 1998 was only passed to the PSNI in 2006; [66430]

(6) if he will list the dates on which MI5 passed information to the Police Service of Northern Ireland relating to a possible bomb attack at Omagh prior to 15 August 1998; [66431]

(7) if he will review plans to give MI5 primacy on national security in Northern Ireland following confirmation by the Chief Constable of the Police Service of Northern Ireland (PSNI) that MI5 did not pass on to the PSNI threat information relating to Omagh prior to the 1998 Omagh bombing. [67297]

Mr. Woodward: The Omagh bombing was the single worst atrocity of the Troubles in Northern Ireland: 29 people were killed and 2 unborn twins died and more than 200 people were injured. The lives of countless people were damaged as a result. We remain committed to catching those who perpetrated this hideous act and to bringing them to justice. The Chief Constable made a clear statement to the Policing Board on 1 March 2006 that the Security Service did not withhold intelligence that was relevant or would have progressed the Omagh enquiry. It remains the policy of successive governments to neither confirm nor deny matters relating to intelligence information. The Treasury Solicitor's Department has explained in correspondence with lawyers acting on behalf of the families of Omagh bomb victims why the Security Service is unable to provide them with any information. We do not believe therefore in the case for a public inquiry; nor is there a case to review the decision to transfer the lead role for national security intelligence work in Northern Ireland from the police to the Security Service.

Parking (Hospitals)

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what (a) revenue was raised and (b) overhead costs were incurred in respect of car parking by each of the hospitals that made charges for car parking in 2005. [65315]

Mr. Woodward: The information is not available in the form requested. Where appropriate, the following table shows actual revenue income from parking charges but the overhead costs are estimates. Actual costs are not available.

Hospital	Revenue from parking charges in 2005	Estimate of overhead costs in 2005
Belfast City Hospital	632,000	20,000
Mater Infirmorum Hospital	109,000	35,000
Ulster Hospital	435,000	35,000

In addition to the three hospitals noted, parking at the Royal Group of Hospitals is operated through the private finance initiative. This arrangement does not generate any revenue or incur any overheads for the trust.

Pathways to Work

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people have gone through the Pathways to Work programme in Northern Ireland since its inception; how many of those people are currently in employment; and how much the Department for Employment and Learning has spent on the programme. [65820]

Angela E. Smith: Between 3 October 2005 and 31 March 2006, 1,130 claims to incapacity benefit have been made in Pathways to Work areas. In the same period, 84 people have found work. The Department spent £428,110 for this period. Also, £100,000 was provided to the Department of Health and Social Services and Public Safety for the early development costs of the Condition Management Programme and £130,600 to the Social Security Agency for benefit administration costs. Although Pathways to Work began last October, most of the first cohort of clients is still participating in the programme so it will be some time before the impact of the new service can be properly assessed.

Petrol Stations

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) how many petrol filling stations have closed in Northern Ireland in each of the last 10 years; [32231]

(2) how many petrol filling stations have closed in Northern Ireland in each of the last five years. [65150]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Colin Mowl, dated 2 May 2006:

The National Statistician has been asked to reply to your parliamentary Questions concerning how many petrol filling stations have closed in Northern Ireland in each of the last (a) 5 years and in each of the last 10 years. I am replying in her absence. (65150, 32231)

The exact information requested is not available. VAT deregistrations provide some indication, but HMRC confirm that they do not provide all the information because businesses cancel their registration for a wide variety of reasons. For example, the figures include closures of independent petrol filling stations that are now operated by other businesses and exclude closures of petrol filling stations within businesses that continue to run other sites. The total number of enterprises de-registering for VAT in Northern Ireland classified to the "Retail Sale of Automotive Fuel" in each of the 10 years to 2004 (this is the latest data available) is:

Police (Shooting Incidents)

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many incidents involving shots being fired by police officers in Northern Ireland have been investigated by the Policing Ombudsman; and in how many instances there was a finding of non-justification of the action taken by the officers concerned. [65927]

Mr. Woodward: The Police Ombudsman's Office has advised that in the last five years 49 such incidents were referred to the Ombudsman for investigation. Of these, 21 are currently under investigation.

The Ombudsman has confirmed that the term "non-justification" is not a classification that she would use in the closure of such matters. Of the 28 cases investigated and closed, 12 contained recommendations for action on a number of issues.

Pre-school Education

Mr. Donaldson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he will publish the report on the review of pre-school education provision in Northern Ireland. [67624]

Angela E. Smith: The Department of Education published the outcomes of the Review of Pre-School Education in Northern Ireland on 25 April 2006.

Prisoners (Self-harm)

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many incidents of self-harm among prisoners there have been at (a) Maghaberry and (b) Magilligan prisons in each of the last five years. [67546]

Mr. Woodward: The number of incidents of self-harm among prisoners in Maghaberry and Magilligan prisons in each of the last five years are shown as follows:

April to March	Maghaberry prison	Magilligan prison
2001–02	28	12
2002–03	35	5
2003–04	39	5
2004–05	50	14
2005–06	94	14

Note:
Figures until March 2004 are approximate, as self-harm statistics were only routinely recorded with effect from April 2004.

PSNI

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many firearms have been lost by the Police Service of Northern Ireland in each of the last five years. [65332]

Mr. Woodward: The Chief Constable has provided the following information in regard to the numbers of firearms lost by the Police Service of Northern Ireland in each of the last five years:

	Number
2001	1
2002	0
2003	2
2004	2
2005	2

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the outcome was of the Police Service of Northern Ireland investigation launched in early 2005 into allegations that an officer chanted IRA slogans in a Belfast hotel at a Christmas function. [65335]

Mr. Woodward: In early 2005, an investigating officer was appointed from the PSNI Internal Investigation Branch to investigate these allegations. The investigation concluded with the officer appearing before a misconduct panel in August 2005 to answer an alleged breach of the Police Code of Ethics. A misconduct sanction was imposed.

Public Sector Employees

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the change was in the number of people employed in the public sector in Northern Ireland between 1995 and 2005. [65487]

Angela E. Smith: Estimates from the Quarterly Employment Survey show that between December 1995 and December 2005 the number of employee jobs in the NI public sector increased by 20,590. The latest figure for public sector jobs in NI stands at 218,822.

Pulmonary Hypertension

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people have died from pulmonary hypertension while on the NHS waiting list for a heart and lung transplant in Northern Ireland in each of the last five years for which records are available. [66044]

Mr. Woodward: The information requested is not available.

Recycling

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what progress is being made on recycling waste in Government Departments in Northern Ireland. [65872]

Angela E. Smith: The new Waste Management Strategy for Northern Ireland requires Government Departments to publish Departmental Waste Management Action

Plans by April 2006, which should include commitments to the progressive use of recycled paper and the preparation of detailed waste recycling plans.

Waste Management Action Plans for all 11 NICS Departments have now been prepared, and will be made available as a single document by the Department of the Environment at the end of April 2006. The first round of monitoring of Departments' performance against their plans will take place at the end of the first year.

Residential Nursing Care Beds

Mr. Donaldson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many residential nursing care beds for elderly people there are in the City of Lisburn. [67389]

Mr. Woodward: Information on the number of beds for elderly people in the City of Lisburn is not available, as nursing beds are not designated specifically for the elderly. However, there are currently 522 registered nursing home beds in total within the City of Lisburn.

Schools

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many integrated schools have opened in Northern Ireland in each of the past 20 years. [67069]

Angela E. Smith: All but one of the 56 existing integrated schools have been established over the past 20 years and these schools are as detailed in the following table. Lagan college is the exception, as it opened in 1981.

	Integrated primary school (IPS)	Post-primary integrated college (IC)
1985	Forge IPS, Belfast Hazelwood IPS, Newtownabbey	Hazelwood IC, Newtownabbey

[1] Year of transformation to integrated status or date grant-maintained integrated status acquired.

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many integrated schools there are in Northern Ireland. [67075]

Angela E. Smith: There are currently 56 integrated schools comprising 19 integrated post-primary colleges, and 37 integrated primary schools. There is also one independent primary school and additionally one integrated college and one integrated primary school will be opening in September as independent schools.

Sex Offenders Register

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will bring forward additional powers for monitoring sex offenders whose names appear on the sex offenders register on their release from prison; and if he will make a statement. [66633]

Mr. Hanson: I believe it is important that we continually review and develop how we manage offenders in the community. This is why I intend introducing legislation later this year which will strengthen the current sex offender management arrangements in Northern Ireland by placing these on a statutory footing and extending the arrangements to include the management of non-sexual violent offenders.

The recent consultation on the sentencing framework in Northern Ireland included a wide range of possible sentencing disposals which would provide for: increased public protection through tougher sentences and post-release supervision; a reduction in crime; and improved rehabilitation of offenders in Northern Ireland. Central to that process was consideration of the issue of protection of the public from dangerous violent and sexual offenders through extended sentences underpinned by robust risk assessment and management.

I will carefully examine all the options, taking into account recent developments and experience in the rest of the UK, and will of course ensure we have the most comprehensive and effective framework for protecting the public in Northern Ireland from the risk posed by dangerous offenders.

Smoking

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what actions he has taken to ensure that the smoking ban in public places will be enforced. [67057]

Mr. Woodward: The draft Smoking (Northern Ireland) Order 2006 is currently the subject of a public consultation exercise. This exercise, which ends on 5 May, seeks views on a number of key areas, including enforcement.

Statemented Children

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many children are waiting to be statemented in each education and library board area; and what the longest waiting time was for assessment in each education and library board area in the last five years. [65894]

Angela E. Smith: The following table shows the total number of children at Stage 4 of the Code of Practice. This is where the ELB considers the need for a statutory assessment and if appropriate makes a multi-disciplinary assessment. The table also shows the number of children whose parents have been notified of a proposal to make a statutory assessment, but for whom the assessment process has not yet started. These figures were collated at November 2005.

Education and Library Board	Number of children at Stage 4	Number of children whose parents have been notified of a proposed assessment, but the process has not yet started
Belfast Education and Library Board	220	0
North Eastern Education and Library Board	164	6
South Eastern Education and Library Board	570	60
Southern Education and Library Board	281	25

Teacher Training

Sammy Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many teacher training places were available at (a) Stranmillis College and (b) St. Mary's College in each of the last five years; how many students applied to each college in each year; what the religious background of students at each college was in each year; and how many teacher training students there were at (i) undergraduate and (ii) postgraduate level at each college in each year. [65836]

Angela E. Smith: The information requested is as follows:

Note:
The Department does not hold any information on the number of teachers employed in the Independent sector.

Thomas "Slab" Murphy

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what his assessment is of the current whereabouts of Thomas "Slab" Murphy. [65325]

Mr. Woodward: The NIO does not comment about ongoing police investigations.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Affordable Housing

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make a statement on planning procedures for affordable homes. [65308]

Yvette Cooper: Planning Policy Guidance Note 3: Housing (PPG3) and DETR Circular 6/98 Planning and Affordable Housing set out current policy in relation to planning for affordable housing.

Draft Planning Policy Statement 3 : Housing (PPS3), published for consultation in December 2005, brings together the policies in PPG3 and the Circular. It would require local planning authorities:

To identify the level, size, type and location of affordable housing needed in their areas, having regard to relevant sub-regional housing market assessments and regional and local housing and community strategies.

In the light of this analysis, to formulate policies for their plans, including an overall target for affordable housing provision.

To ensure that individual proposals for housing development in their areas are consistent with those policies and, where appropriate, make a contribution to the achievement of the target.

Our policy intention remains to ensure that affordable housing, where it is needed, is provided on site, in order to contribute towards mixed and inclusive communities.

Michael Gove: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what plans he has to increase the amount of Housing Corporation funding available to private developers to provide affordable housing. [65063]

Yvette Cooper: Persons other than registered social landlords, including private developers, were eligible to bid for funding from the whole of the Housing Corporation's National Affordable Housing Programme for 2006 to 2008 except for the specialist funding stream. The Housing Corporation is now looking at how best to encourage more bids from developers in future competitions that offer good value for money, high quality and meet assessed needs.

Antisocial Behaviour

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many antisocial behaviour cases involving high hedges there were in (a) Greater London, (b) England and (c) Havering in each of the last seven years. [67110]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The information requested is not collected centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. Part 8 of the Anti-social Behaviour Act 2003, which gives local authorities powers to determine complaints about high hedges, extends to England and Wales only. It came into force in Wales on 31 December 2004 and in England on 1 June 2005.

Caravan Parks (Illegal Residence)

Chris Ruane: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assessment he has made of the number of people illegally residing in tourism caravan parks in each local authority area. [65907]

Yvette Cooper: The Department has not made any assessment regarding the numbers of people living on holiday sites.

Code for Sustainable Homes

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister from what date he intends that new developments built on behalf of public sector commissioners will be required to be constructed to the standards contained in the Code for Sustainable Homes. [66684]

Yvette Cooper: In the light of an initial analysis of the consultation returns, the Government announced proposals to strengthen the code on 9 March 2006, as well as undertaking further research into future improvements.

These improvements will be developed over the coming months. As an interim measure all homes with English Partnerships or Housing Corporation funding will meet the new Ecohomes Very Good 2006 standard from 1 April, which is broadly equivalent to the Code Level 3.

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what progress he has made towards publication of the Code for Sustainable Homes. [66711]

Yvette Cooper: Consultation on the proposed Code for Sustainable Homes ended on 6 March 2006. In light of the consultation responses, the Government announced proposals to strengthen the code on 9 March 2006. This announcement also said that these improvements would be developed over the coming months.

My officials are currently working on developing these improvements; they are also carrying out a detailed analysis of the consultation returns including the costs and benefits of suggested changes to the code, in preparation for the production of a final Regulatory Impact Assessment.

Correspondence

Mr. Malins: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister when he will respond in full to the letter from the hon. Member for Woking of 14 March concerning a constituent, Mr. Aroskin. [66950]

Yvette Cooper: I replied to the hon. Member's letter on 28 April.

Departmental Advertising

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how much his Department paid for the full page advertisement feature in Regeneration and Renewal magazine of 17 March. [62258]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister paid £3,131.00 plus VAT for the full page advertorial in Regeneration and Renewal magazine of 17 March.

Ben Chapman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister when he will announce new guidance on the control of outdoor advertising. [66868]

Yvette Cooper: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister intends to go out to consultation on new draft regulations and a circular on the control of outdoor advertisements shortly.

Gypsy and Traveller Sites

Andrew George: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what statutory obligations local authorities are under to provide sites for gypsy and traveller accommodation. [66076]

Yvette Cooper: Local authorities are not under a statutory obligation to provide sites for Gypsy and Traveller accommodation. However, the Housing Act 2004 requires local housing authorities to assess the housing needs of Gypsies And Travellers residing in, or resorting to, their area and prepare strategies to address this need. Circular 01/2006 requires regional planning bodies to specify in regional spatial strategies the number of pitches required in each local planning authority area to address this need, and authorities must allocate land for these pitches in their development plan documents.

Haven Gateway

Mr. Carswell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what meetings his Department has had with lobbyists and public affairs consultants acting on behalf of the Haven Gateway Partnership; and if he will make a statement. [64266]

Yvette Cooper: No meetings have taken place between the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister and lobbyists or public affairs consultants acting on behalf of the Haven Gateway Partnership.

Officials from the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister have held meetings with the Haven Gateway Partnership regarding their proposals for housing growth as part of their plans to build sustainable communities. These meetings included a consultant working for the Regional Development Agency, but we are not aware of any meetings with lobbyist of public affairs consultants. We have recently received a submission from the Haven Gateway Partnership setting out their case to be awarded New Growth Point status and funding. We are considering this submission along with others that have been received.

Departmental Televisions

Jo Swinson: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many television sets are in operation in the Department (a) in total, (b) in Minister's private offices and (c) in each office building in the Department; and how many television licences are held by the Department. [62797]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has the following number of television sets and television licences:

Property	Total number of ODPM owned TV sets in the building	Number of TVs in Minister's private office	Licence held in ODPM's name	Licence held in another's name
26 Whitehall, London	24	8	—	1

Hangar 97 Little Rissington	0	n/a	n/a	—
Marchington, Staffordshire	1	n/a	1	—
ODPM Total	45	14	6	1

ODPM also has three Executive agencies: the QEII Conference Centre, which has six televisions for the use of delegates, the Fire Service College, which provides residential training for the fire and rescue service and has 478 televisions in student bedrooms and common rooms, and the Planning Inspectorate, which has no televisions. Both the QEII Conference Centre and the Fire Service College have TV licences.

These figures do not include display units that are used solely for the dissemination of departmental information to staff or TVs associated with video conferencing facilities.

This answer also does not include the buildings occupied by the Government offices, who carry out functions on behalf of 10 Government Departments.

Fire and Rescue Services

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many (a) deliberate fires and (b) deliberate vehicle fires there were in England in each year since 1996–97. [66441]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The table shows the number of deliberate primary fires attended by the fire and rescue service in England in each year since 1996–97.

Deliberate primary fires by location of fire, England—1996–97 to 2004–05

	Total	Road vehicles	Other locations

Fire and Rescue Service FDR1 returns to ODPM.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what targets he has set for reducing the number of deliberate fires. [66442]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has a public service agreement target to reduce the number of accidental fire related deaths in the home by 20 per cent. by 31 March 2010 and to achieve a 10 per cent. reduction in deliberate fires by 31 March 2010.

Deliberate primary fires have fallen again in the latest year; 69,900 were recorded in the 12 months to 30 June 2005, a fall of 20 per cent. compared with the previous year. This is 26 per cent. below the 2010 PSA target of 94,000.

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many large outbreaks of fire there have been in each of the last eight years in (a) Romford, (b) Havering and (c) Greater London; and if he will make a statement. [67027]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The following tables show the number of primary fires attended by the fire and rescue service in each year from 1997–2004. Data for constituencies and local authorities are held centrally only for 2002 onwards.

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how much has been allocated for fire and rescue services to each London borough in each of the last eight years. [67015]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The fire and rescue service is partially funded by formula grant. Formula grant comprises revenue support grant, redistributed business rates and principal formula police grant. The Greater London Authority receives the funding with respect to both police and non-police services including fire. The non-police amounts are as follows:

	Formula grant
1998–99	209.696
1999–2000	217.821
2000–01	238.040
2001–02	254.838
2002–03	266.870
2003–04	258.022

	Formula grant
2004–05	268.401
2005–06	277.093

It is a matter for the Greater London Authority to decide the distribution of funding among the fire and rescue services in each borough.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the total annual budget for each fire authority in England was in each of the last 10 years for which figures are available; and what the budget deficit was in each case where this occurred. [65667]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The annual budget of a local authority is usually measured by its budget requirement. This must not change between (forecast) budget and (actual) outturn. Also, prior to 1 April 2004, the budget requirement for combined fire authorities in shire areas was zero as fire authority expenditure was financed entirely by payments from county or unitary councils in their area.

To give a more consistent picture across the last 10 years I have tabled the service expenditure of each single purpose fire authority in England for each of the last ten years for which data are available.

Total service expenditure by single purpose fire authorities for each year from 1995–96 to 2004–05

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister on how many occasions during 2005 the fire brigade was called out to deal with incidents in hotels and similar establishments where a fire alarm had been triggered by cigarette smoke and there was no fire; what estimate he has made of the cost; and if he will make a statement. [67561]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The information requested is not held centrally, and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Homelessness

Mr. Jeremy Browne: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many people were homeless in (a) England, (b) the South West and (c) Taunton constituency in each year since 1992. [64068]

Yvette Cooper: Information about local authorities actions under homelessness legislation is collected in respect of households, rather than people, and at local authority rather than constituency level. The constituency of Taunton includes Taunton Deane District Council, West Somerset District Council and Mid Devon District Council.

The number of households accepted by the district councils as eligible for assistance, unintentionally homeless and in priority need for each year since 1996, and the number of households in temporary accommodation arranged by the councils under homelessness legislation as at 31 December in each year is tabled. Information is also collected on the number of people who sleep rough—that is, those who are literally roofless on a single night—and these are also presented in the table. Figures from 1992 are also presented for England and South West.

The duty owed to a household accepted as eligible for assistance, unintentionally homeless and in priority need is to secure suitable accommodation. If a settled home is not immediately available, the authority may secure temporary accommodation until a settled home becomes available. As an alternative to the provision of temporary accommodation some authorities arrange for households to remain in their current accommodation (homeless at home), until a settled solution becomes available.

[1] Households eligible under homelessness legislation, found to be unintentionally homeless and in a priority need category, and consequently owed homelessness duty.

[2] Households in accommodation either pending a decision on their homelessness application or awaiting allocation of a settled home following acceptance. Excludes those households designated as "homeless at home" that have remained in their existing accommodation and have the same rights to suitable alternative accommodation as those in accommodation arranged by the authority.

[3] Number of persons sleeping rough, based on local authority mid-year counts or estimates. Data not collected prior to 1998.

[4] reflects households accepted and housed under homelessness provisions of the 1985 Housing Act; subsequent years includes cases accepted under the 1996 Housing Act.

Housing

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what changes the 2006 Budget makes to the Government's targets for increasing the provision of shared ownership. [66340]

Yvette Cooper: In his 2006 Budget statement on 22 March, the Chancellor of the Exchequer announced the allocation of £970 million in 2006–08 for shared equity schemes to help 35,000 new homeowners get their first step on the home ownership ladder. This will contribute to the Government's previously stated target of helping over 100,000 more households into home ownership from 2005 to 2010.

The intention to establish a Shared Equity Task Force was announced on 22 March also. This is being led by me and John Healey to examine further ways to increase the number of people able to benefit from shared equity programmes and help the growing number of "intermediate" households. The Task Force will report by the end of 2006 to inform decisions on the Comprehensive Spending Review in the summer of 2007.

Ms Diana R. Johnson: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many new homes he expects to be built in Hull for (a) rent and (b) sale in (i) 2006–07 and (ii) each of the following three years. [64003]

Yvette Cooper: Through the Housing Corporation's Affordable Housing Programme over 90 social rented homes and around 20 low cost home ownership properties will be provided in 2006–08 in Kingston upon Hull.

Future delivery of affordable housing after 2007–08 will be dependent upon the outcome of the Comprehensive Spending Review 2007 and any future bidding round held by the Housing Corporation.

Ms Diana R. Johnson: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how much the Government has made available for housing in Hull in each year since 1997. [64004]

Yvette Cooper: The following table shows expenditure through Social Housing Grant and housing capital allocations to the local authority in Kingston upon Hull for 1997–98 to 2004–05.

£ million

	Expenditure through social housing grant	Housing capital allocations
1997–98	2.36	7.1
1998–99	2.70	9.4
1999–2000	2.97	9.9
2000–01	1.77	16.1
2001–02	3.28	22.3
2002–03	2.92	23.6
2003–04	0.40	22.2
2004–05	1.47	23.3

Social Housing Grant is expenditure through the Housing Corporation's Approved Development Programme (ADP) and Local Authority Social Housing Grant (up to 2002–03).

Housing Capital Allocations include Housing Investment Programme/Regional Housing Board investment, Major Repairs Allowance (from 2001–02) and Capital Receipts Initiative (from 1997–98 to 1999–2000 only).

A breakdown of how the local authority capital allocations were used is not available.

Ms Diana R. Johnson: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how much his Department provided to (a) housing associations and (b) the local authority to build houses to (i) rent and (ii) buy in Hull in the latest year for which figures are available. [64005]

Yvette Cooper: In 2004–05, £713,000 was spent on provision of social rented units through the Housing Corporation's Approved Development Programme out of a total spend of £1.47 million in Kingston upon Hull. The balance of the funds was provided for works to RSL stock and voluntary purchase grant.

A breakdown of how the local authority capital allocations were used is not available.

Ms Diana R. Johnson: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many people are on the waiting list for rented social housing in Kingston-upon-Hull; and how many were on the list in each year since 1997. [64006]

Yvette Cooper: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 17 October 2005, Official Report, column 811W to the hon. Member for Yeovil (Mr. Laws) in which the number of people on the housing register in each English local authority was presented for the period 1997–2005.

Not everyone on the waiting list is necessarily in urgent housing need. The waiting list includes those who consider social housing as their preferred or one of a number of housing options, and those who decide to get onto the waiting list ladder before they need or want to move house—particularly where the priority system is heavily based on waiting time.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what estimate his Department has made of housing growth in Coventry over the next 10 years. [62684]

Yvette Cooper: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Denton and Reddish (Andrew Gwynne) on 24 April 2006, Official Report, column 930W.

Andrew Gwynne: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assessment has been made of the potential for displacement of problems associated with housing market failure into areas adjacent to renewal schemes. [67250]

Yvette Cooper: As part of the process of deciding upon funding allocations, each of the pathfinders' proposals is assessed to ensure consistency with the broader regional supply of and demand for housing as set out in regional housing strategies and regional spatial strategies, so as to guard against displacement effects.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many ballots on large scale voluntary transfers of council houses (a) were held in 2005 and (b) have been held in 2006; what the result was of each ballot; and how many houses were involved in each ballot. [64679]

Industrial Development (Public Inquiries)

Mr. Illsley: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister whether local authorities are required to take action to prevent (a) continued construction and (b) the operation of large-scale industrial developments that have been called in by his Department for consideration by public inquiry. [64150]

Yvette Cooper: If development has started without planning permission the local planning authority has a wide range of discretionary enforcement powers to enable them to deal with unauthorised development that is harming amenity in the neighbourhood. It is for the local planning authority to decide in each case which is the most appropriate course of action taking account of local circumstances.

Investments/Property Portfolio

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what obligations local authorities have to maximise the rate of return from their investments and property portfolio. [66338]

Yvette Cooper: Local authorities have no obligation to maximise returns from any form of investment. We have issued guidance on investments, under section 15 of the Local Government Act 2003, to which local authorities are required to have regard. It recommends that authorities give priority to the security and liquidity of their investments. They are free to seek the highest rate of return consistent with those priorities.

Local Authority Business Growth Incentive

Mr. Davey: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how much each local authority gained under the Local Authority Business Growth Incentive in 2005–06; and what proportion of the amount retained by each local authority has been reinvested in supporting further business growth to date. [66121]

Mr. Woolas: The amount of Local Authority Business Growth Incentive (LABGI) grant payments made to each authority can be found on the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's website at: http://www.local.odpm.gov.uk/finance/labgi/endrat.xls.

All monies awarded under the LABGI scheme are unringfenced and we do not hold information on their use. It is for local authorities to decide how their LABGI reward is spent. Some may invest in further business growth while others may choose to invest in better public services for their communities or to keep down council tax pressures.

Local Government Finance Act

Mr. Davey: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister (1) how many businesses have (a) applied for and (b) successfully applied for a reduction in business rates under section 49 of the Local Government Finance Act 1988 in each of the last five years. [66100]

(2) how many businesses have received small business rate relief in each local council area since it was introduced. [66101]

Mr. Woolas: The information requested is not held centrally, and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Ministerial Residence

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister whether a second homes council tax discount was claimed from Westminster city council from May 1997 to December 2005 for his official residence at Admiralty house. [59183]

Jim Fitzpatrick: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Meriden (Mrs. Spelman) by my right hon. Friend, the Deputy Prime Minister on 12 January 2006, Official Report, columns 782W-83W.

Planning

Shona McIsaac: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many appeals there were against planning decisions in (a) North East Lincolnshire and (b) North Lincolnshire in each of the past five years; and how many appeals were (i) allowed and (ii) dismissed in each year. [67056]

Yvette Cooper: The following tables show the number of planning appeals (i) allowed and (ii) dismissed and the total number of appeals decided relating to both authorities in each of the last five years.

(a) North East Lincolnshire

	Decided	(i) Allowed	(ii) Dismissed

Regional Administration

Mr. Syms: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will list the (a) sources of income and (b) percentage of income derived from each source for each of the Government Offices of the Regions in each year since their creation. [64953]

Yvette Cooper: The Government Offices have only been required to identify income in the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister accounts for the past two years and the details are as follows:

(a) The sources of income as recorded by the Government Offices are minor occupiers, outward secondees, jointly funded projects, Technical Assistance funding and accommodation tariffs. There is also a miscellaneous category that picks up costs not specific to any of the above—such as rates rebates and additional OGD funding for specific projects.

(b) The percentage of income are as follows:

Shared Ownership/Key Worker Schemes

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister whether there is a statutory definition of key worker; and what definition his Department uses. [66302]

Yvette Cooper: There is no statutory definition of a key worker. For the purposes of the Key Worker Living (KWL) programme, a key worker is someone employed by the public sector in health, education or community safety delivering an essential public service in a frontline role where there are serious recruitment and retention problems. Within this broad definition sponsor Government Departments and Police and Fire Authorities specify the groups at which help should be targeted based on recruitment and retention issues in critical frontline services.

Supporting People

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister for what reason he has refused funds to local authorities for the Supporting People programme. [65541]

Mr. Woolas: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has not refused funds to any Supporting People local authority.

Telephone Advice Lines

Mr. Love: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many telephone advice lines his Department and its non-departmental public bodies support; how many telephone advisers each employs; and how much funding is provided to each by (a) his Department and its non-departmental public bodies, (b) other Government Departments, (c) the private sector and (d) the voluntary sector. [66591]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The central Office of the Deputy Prime Minister does not support any telephone advice lines. Similar information relating to the Office's regional offices, agencies, non-departmental public bodies or other bodies that the Office sponsors is available only at disproportionate cost.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Attendance Allowance

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what recent estimate he has made of the average period of time between an application for attendance allowance and the application being approved. [63499]

Mrs. McGuire: The administration of attendance allowance is a matter for the chief executive of the disability and carers service, Mr Terry Moran. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Terry Moran:

To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, what recent estimate he has made of the average period of time between an application for attendance allowance and the application being approved.

The Minister for Disabled People, Anne McGuire MP, promised you a substantive reply from the chief executive of the disability and carers service.

The information requested is in the following table:

Average length of time in days to clear attendance allowance normal rules claims for the period April 2005 to February 2006.

Year to date	Cleared year to date	Actual average clearance time (in days)
April 2005 to February 2006	339,334	18.0

Benefits

Mr. Burrowes: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the estimated costs are of carrying out full benefit entitlement checks for pensioners at home. [66699]

Mr. Timms: The information requested is not available. The Department's systems do not currently record separately the costs of this activity.

Capita

James Brokenshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the value of contracts held by his Department with (a) Capita plc and (b) its subsidiaries was in the last three financial years. [61474]

Margaret Hodge [holding answer 29 March 2006]: The Department is currently unable to confirm value of contracts held for 2005–06. This information will not be available until July 2006.

Lonsdale Travel Air and Ferry Contract—unable to provide contract value as it depends upon usage.

The Department has currently invited Capita to submit tenders for two consultancy and professional services contracts through framework agreements.

The Department is unable to provide information about secondees from Capita or its subsidiaries as this information is not held centrally.

Contracts (Voluntary Sector)

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many contracts are let by his Department to voluntary sector organisations; how many of those are let on an annual basis; and how many of those had received finalised contracts for 2006–07 by 31 March. [63208]

Margaret Hodge: Information is available in the format requested on contracts let after September 2005. Since then Jobcentre Plus has let 15 contracts to voluntary and community sector organisations. This does not include companies limited by guarantee. Of these 15 contracts, none are let on an annual basis. Further tenders are currently being considered for the new deal provision. None of these will be let on an annual basis.

The Pension Service currently only has one contract with a voluntary sector organisation. It is not an annual contract but a one-off ad hoc agreement.

The DWP Financial Inclusion Team let a number of contracts (around 41) in 2005–06 to voluntary and community sector organisations to assist customers with the opening of suitable accounts into which to have their benefits or pensions paid. None of these contracts are let on an annual basis.

Correspondence

Sir Michael Spicer: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when the Minister for Pensions will reply to the letter from the hon. Member for West Worcestershire of 7 March 2006. [67319]

Mr. Plaskitt: I replied to the hon. Member on 27 March 2006.

Council Tax

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will re-introduce council tax rebates for pensioners. [66500]

Mr. Timms: The £200 payment to help with council tax bills was for 2005–06 only. We have no plans to make a payment for 2006–07. However, council tax benefit is available to pensioners on a low income. When pension credit was introduced in October 2003, we committed almost £½ billion a year to increasing the amounts on which housing benefit and council tax benefit are based: this meant that around two million pensioner households became either entitled to council tax benefit for the first time or qualified for more help.

Departmental Leave (Stress)

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many staff have been on sick leave suffering from stress in the Department in each of the last three years; and what percentage of the total staff number this represents. [63527]

Mrs. McGuire: The Department for Work and Pensions records sickness absence related to a range of mental health conditions under the category "Anxiety, Depression and Other Mental Health Issues". This classification includes stress-related absences but also other mental health problems such as, for example, schizophrenia and depression.

The following table contains information about the number of employees who were absent in the years 2003 to 2005 due to anxiety, depression and other mental health issues:

	Number of staff absent in year	Percentage absent
2003	13,906	9.4
2004	14,313	10.1
2005	10,478	7.8

For the years 2003 and 2004, it is possible to extract data on the number of employees who were absent due to illness attributed to stress. Data for 2005 was not recorded in a way that enables this information to be retrieved.

The following table contains information about the number of employees who were absent for reasons specifically attributed to stress:

	Number of staff	Percentage absent
2003	7,239	4.9
2004	7,545	5.3

Employment Schemes (Surrey)

Anne Milton: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people have participated in (a) new deal for 25 plus, (b) Project Work, (c) Jobsearch Provision and (d) Employment Zones employment schemes in (i) Surrey, (ii) Guildford and (iii) Waverley in each year since 1997. [66165]

Margaret Hodge: Information on the numbers of people who have participated in new deal 25 plus in Surrey, Guildford, and Waverley in each year since 1997 is in the table.

DWP Information Directorate

Project Work was a pilot which ran in 31 areas from February 1997 and was developed by the previous administration. It has not operated since 1998–99 and starts data are not available.

Jobsearch Provision is normally used to describe the services offered by Programme Centres. These provide individually tailored job search help, including CV preparation, interview skills, telephone techniques, and help with application forms. Information on starts to Programme Centres is not available at the level requested.

Employment Zones are not operating in Surrey.

In-work Credit

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what his latest estimate is of the impact on employment of the in-work credit; how many people are receiving the credit; what the cost of the credit was in the last year for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [64013]

Margaret Hodge: The in-work credit pilots are running in 22 Jobcentre Plus districts.

Eligible participants are paid £40 a week over and above their total income when they start work for 16 hours or more a week. The payment is tax-free and is paid for a maximum of 52 weeks. It is payable on top of any other in-work benefits which eligible parents may be entitled to, for example working tax credit and housing benefit. The in-work credit is primarily paid to lone parents but in April 2005, it was extended to other eligible parents in four London Jobcentre Plus districts.

A thorough evaluation is being undertaken to assess the impact of the pilot on eligible parents, including movements off benefit and into work. We expect to publish a quantitative report using the first 12 months of programme data at the end of the year. In addition, qualitative evaluation will explore the impact of the pilots on the attitudes, motivations and actions of participants, and will also examine the effectiveness of delivery. We expect to publish this report in spring 2007.

In November 2005, the latest date for which information is available, more than 11,000 eligible parents were in receipt of the in-work credit. Spend on the in-work credit between April 2004 and October 2005 was approximately £13 million.

New Deal

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what training programmes are available as part of the new deal for those (a) under and (b) over 25 years. [66149]

Margaret Hodge: The new deal aims to help people into sustainable work as quickly as possible, and, where appropriate, personal advisers can refer people to relevant training if this will increase the likelihood of an individual gaining employment.

The mandatory new deal programmes new deal for young people (NDYP) and new deal 25 plus (ND25 plus) contain a formal training element. People aged 18 to 24 who have been claiming jobseeker's allowance (JSA) for six months can access training, including basic skills training, through the NDYP full time education and training option. This can lead to a recognised qualification up to S/NVQ Level 2 or equivalent.

People aged 25 and over who have been claiming JSA for 18 out of the last 21 months can undertake training through the ND25 plus education and training opportunities. This can lead to a recognised qualification up to S/NVQ Level 3 or equivalent. Participants can also access basic employability training to address basic skills needs, and work-focused training if they lack the specific work related skills needed by local employers. Training in the mandatory new deal programmes is delivered across employment sectors for varying lengths of time, and is tailored to the needs of individuals and local employers. In exceptional circumstances one-off or specialist provision approved by Jobcentre Plus may be available where resources allow.

The voluntary new deal programmes do not contain a formal training element. However, people on new deal for lone parents (NDLP) and new deal for partners (NDP) can take up the training opportunities that are available through NDYP and ND25 plus. They can also access training available through the Learning and Skills Council, or through other local agreements. They can also be referred to other training such as basic skills or English for Speakers of Other Languages and, as with the mandatory new deals, one-off or specialist provision approved by Jobcentre Plus may be available where resources allow.

Mr. Hurd: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what proportion of those entering new deal in 2003 were (a) still claiming job seeker's allowance and (b) still on the new deal at the end of December 2005. [54978]

Margaret Hodge: People joining the new deal will not necessarily be claiming jobseeker's allowance (JSA). Some, particularly those joining the voluntary new deals, could be claiming income support or other benefits.

Of those who entered the new deal in 2003, who were claiming JSA, only 2 per cent. were still on the same JSA claim at the end of November 2005, the latest date for which benefit information is available. An additional 26 per cent. of those who started new deal in 2003, who were claiming JSA, ceased to claim JSA but were recorded as starting a new claim before November 2005.

6 per cent. of those who started the new deal in 2003, including those on a range or different benefits, were still on new deal at the end of August 2005, the latest date for which information is available.

It is the case in a dynamic labour market that some people will move into and out of employment after leaving new deal. However, new deal helps people stay in work longer than those in the general labour market and people on the programme have still added to their skills and experience, making it easier for them to find a job in the future.

Notes:

Data is inclusive of new deal for young people, new deal 25 plus, new deal for lone parents, new deal 50+, new deal for partners and new deal for disabled people, and is available up to August 2005.

Pathways to Work

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what proportion of the £360 million over two years allocated to the roll out of Pathways to Work is intended to cover (a) the cost of condition management programmes, (b) the £40 per week back to work credit, (c) staff training and (d) in-work support. [67259]

Margaret Hodge: The information is not available. We are still working on plans for the national roll-out of Pathways to Work and will announce these in due course.

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people have been subject under the Pathways to Work pilots to a mandatory work-focused interview; and in how many cases such an interview has been waived in the case of those with (a) certain infectious and parasitic diseases, (b) neoplasms, (c) diseases of the blood and blood forming organs and certain diseases involving the immune mechanism, (d) endocrine, nutritional and metabolic diseases, (e) mental and behavioural disorders, (f) diseases of the nervous system, (g) diseases of the eye and adnexa, (h) diseases of the ear and mastoid process, (i) diseases of the circulatory system, (j) diseases of the respiratory system, (k) factors influencing health status and contact with health services, (l) diseases of the digestive system, (m) diseases of the skin and subcutaneous system, (n) diseases of the musculoskeletal system and connective tissue, (o) diseases of the genitourinary system, (p) pregnancy, childbirth and the puerperium, (q) certain conditions originating in the perinatal period, (r) congenital malformations, deformations and chromosomal abnormalities, (s) symptoms, signs and abnormal clinical and laboratory findings, not elsewhere classified and (t) injury, poisoning and certain other consequences of external causes. [64496]

Margaret Hodge: There have been a total of 148,290 Pathways to Work starts by new customers who are subject to a mandatory initial work-focused interview. 5,750 of these have been waived. The available information, by medical condition, of those who have had their initial work-focused interview waived is in the table.

	Number of initial mandatory work-focused interviews waived

[1] The data on medical condition for Pathways to Work participants is incomplete. It is drawn from incapacity benefit data that appears in the National Benefits Database, and this database lags behind other Pathways Evaluation Database sources by some three to four months.

Notes:

1. The statistics are taken from the Pathways to Work Evaluation Database.
2. Data is to the end of October 2005.
3. Figures have been rounded to the nearest 10.

Pension Protection Fund

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate he has made of the amount that would be needed to be raised by the Pension Protection Fund levy if it was set without regard to affordability, and at a level which was expected to remain constant, as a proportion of deficit, in future years. [65496]

Mr. Timms: No such estimate has been made.

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions pursuant to the answer of 21 March 2006, Official Report, column 235W, on pensions, what (a) interest rates and (b) mortality assumptions were used in arriving at the estimates for the amount of the increase in the Pension Protection Fund levy between 2003 and 2005 attributable to these two sources. [65500]

Mr. Timms: In their 2003 and 2005 levy estimates GAD adjusted a set of Minimum Funding Requirement valuations. The factors GAD used in making those adjustments reflected buy-out costs used by insurers. Interest rates and mortality assumptions are implicit in those costs and cannot be separated out.

In the PPF's £575 million estimate no unique interest rate assumption was used. The PPF set the levy by reference to a significant number of scenarios each of which was based on a range of factors including interest rates.

The mortality assumptions the PPF used were based on standard actuarial tables published by the Continuous Mortality Investigation Bureau, specifically the PA92 tables with the medium cohort mortality improvement rates.

Post Office Card Account

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many Post Office card account holders there are in each constituency in Wales. [67396]

Mr. Plaskitt: Information showing the number of DWP benefit and pension payment accounts paid by direct payment into a Post Office card account for each parliamentary constituency has been placed in the Library.

Teleclaiming

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what guidance he has issued to his staff on making reasonable adjustments to the teleclaiming system for people with disabilities. [66069]

Margaret Hodge [holding answer 26 April 2006]: As part of the new Jobcentre Plus process, we encourage all new claims to be made over the telephone. We do however recognise that this is not suitable for some of our customers and alternative arrangements are in place, including:

arranging a face-to-face interview at the customers local Jobcentre Plus office, or if more appropriate, a home visit; arranging for a third party/nominated advocate to represent them on the telephone;

the completion of a clerical claim form;

the use of our Textphone/Minicom service which is available for customers who are deaf or hard of hearing.

This advice and guidance has been communicated to Jobcentre Plus staff and is part of their learning and development.

HEALTH

Adverse Drug Reactions

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many suspected unexpected serious adverse reactions have been reported to the Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency, and its predecessor organisations, in each year since 1997. [66006]

Jane Kennedy: Clinical trials are designed to evaluate the safety and efficacy of new drugs and new indications for approved drugs. The Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency (MHRA) receives applications for over 1,000 new trials each year involving a planned number of new trial participants of approximately 90,000 to 95,000. Serious unexpected suspected adverse reactions (SUSARs) occur during clinical trials and are reported to the MHRA.

The number of SUSARs received between 1997 and 2005 is shown in the table.

	Number of reports
1997	250
1998	564
1999	431
2000	439
2001	606
2002	452
2003	336
2004	335
2005	359

In 2005, it would appear that the total number of SUSARs received involved an estimate of less than 0.4 per cent. of the total planned number of patients participating in clinical trials for that year. These occurred with a wide range of drugs being investigated in a wide range of medical conditions, many of which were serious, such as cancers, etc.

Blood Products

Jenny Willott: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what imported blood products were licensed by the Medical Healthcare products Regulatory Authority between 1976 and 1990; on what date they were licensed; and if she will make a statement. [65510]

Jane Kennedy: A range of blood products which were manufactured outside of the United Kingdom, including human albumin, immunoglobulins, plasminogen, factor VIII and factor IX were authorised by the Department and its subsequent Next Steps Agency, the Medicines Control Agency, during the period 1976 to 1990. This information was derived from the current database held by the Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency (MHRA). The names of the products, the product licence number and date of authorisation are shown as follows:

Blood products that were licensed in the United Kingdom during 1976–90 and imported were manufactured in Austria or the United States of America. The following is a list currently held in the MHRA database.

Data submitted in support of the applications were considered satisfactory with regard to quality, safety and efficacy requirements.

Bowel Cancer Screening

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate she has made of the change in bowel cancer screening capacity in England since 1 April. [66896]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The national bowel cancer screening programme will be rolled out nationally over the next three years. We started the roll-out as promised in April. Capacity will be built up progressively over the next three years. It is too soon to estimate what changes in capacity have already occurred.

British Fluoridation Association

Susan Kramer: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much funding her Department has given to the British Fluoridation Association in the last five years for which data is available. [65066]

Caroline Flint: Funding provided by the Department to the British Fluoridation Society in the last five years is shown in the following table.

	Funding (£)
2001–02	82,000
2002–03	84,050
2003–04	85,000
2004–05	87,000
2005–06	90,000

Cancer

Ms Diana R. Johnson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients normally resident in Hull North have been treated for cancer in the past 12 months. [65464]

Mr. Byrne: The information requested is shown in the table.

Count of finished consultant episodes and patients for selected primary care trusts (PCTs) of residence where the primary diagnosis is cancer in national health service hospitals, England 2004–05

PCT of residence	Finished consultant episodes	Patient counts
Eastern Hull	3,151	1,600
West Hull	4,204	1,829

Notes:
Finished consultant episode (FCE)

A FCE is defined as a period of admitted patient care under one consultant within one health care provider. Please note that the figures do not represent the number of patients, as a person may have more than one episode of care within the year.

Patient counts

Patient counts are based on the unique patient identifier called the hospital episode statistics identifier (HESID). This identifier is derived based on patient's date of birth, postcode, sex, local patient identifier and NHS number, using an agreed algorithm. Where data is incomplete, HESID might erroneously link episodes or fail to recognise episodes for the same patient. Care is therefore needed, especially where duplicate records persist in the data. The patient count cannot be summed across a table where patients may have episodes in more than one cell.

Diagnosis (primary diagnosis)

The primary diagnosis is the first of up to 14 (seven prior to 2002–03) diagnosis fields in the HES data set and provides the main reason why the patient was in hospital.

PCT and strategic health authority (SHA) data quality

PCT and SHA data was added to historic data-years in the HES database using 2002–03 boundaries, as a one-off exercise in 2004. The quality of the data on PCT of treatment and SHA of treatment is poor in 1996–97, 1997–98 and 1998–99, with over a third of all finished episodes having missing values in these years. Data quality of PCT of general practice (GP) practice and SHA of GP practice in 1997–98 and 1998–99 is also poor, with a high proportion missing values where practices changed or ceased to exist. There is less change in completeness of the residence-based fields over time, where the majority of unknown values are due to missing postcodes on birth episodes. Users of time series analysis including these years need to be aware of these issues in their interpretation of the data.

Ungrossed data

Figures have not been adjusted for shortfalls in data that is the data is ungrossed.

Capita Group

James Brokenshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many contracts her Department holds with (a) Capita plc and (b) its subsidiaries which still have a potential duration of five years or more. [61467]

Mr. Byrne: There are currently no contracts with Capita plc and its subsidiaries which have a potential duration of five years or more.

Carers (Respite)

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which (a) bodies and (b) budgets will bear the cost of respite support to be provided for carers as set out in paragraph 5.55 of the 'Our Health, Our Care, Our Say' Health White Paper. [65996]

Mr. Byrne: We are currently exploring options to develop additional support to carers, including the provision of short-term, home-based respite support in crisis or emergency situations.

Carers already have the right to an assessment of their own needs and local authorities have responsibilities to meet those needs, including the provision of breaks from caring if necessary.

Clinical Trials

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidelines she has issued on the conduct of clinical trials in England and Wales. [65175]

Jane Kennedy: All clinical trials that are conducted in England and Wales are regulated by the Medicines for Human Use (Clinical Trials) Regulations 2004 which implemented the Clinical Trials Directive (2001/20/EC) into United Kingdom law. This directive came into force in the UK on 1 May 2004. At the time the legislation came into force, the Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency (MHRA) issued comprenensive guidance and advice on the new regulatory framework to all stakeholders including those involved in the conduct of clinical trials. The Department also issued specific guidance about sponsorship responsibilities in publicly funded trials under the new regulatory framework. The Department's research governance framework for health and social care which is the core standard for health care draws attention to the law regulating clinical trials and to the principles of good clinical practice. In addition, the European Commission has issued detailed guidance on the requirements under the directive.

Community Hospitals

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions on community hospitals she has had with primary care trusts since the publication of the White Paper, "Our Health, Our Care, Our Say". [55967]

Mr. Byrne: The Department has not sent any communications, with specific reference to community hospitals, directly to primary care trusts (PCTs) since the publication of the recent Health White Paper "Our Health, Our Care, Our Say: a new direction for community service" in January 2006.

The Department has received local correspondence, Parliamentary Questions, Treat Official cases and Private Office cases relating to community hospitals. At times, in order to respond to these items of correspondence, the Department requests briefing from the relevant strategic health authority (SHA). SHAs may contact PCTs to gather the required information.

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many community hospitals closed in each year between 1979 and 1997. [64222]

Mr. Byrne: The information requested is not available centrally.

Correspondence

Sir Michael Spicer: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she will reply to the letter from the hon. Member for West Worcestershire of 15 March. [67128]

Mr. Byrne: The letter was replied to on 26 April 2006.

Dental Services

Stephen Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate she has made of the legal costs to the Department of dental contracts which are in dispute. [66892]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The appeal functions of the Secretary of State in relation to the General Dental Services and Personal Dental Services Transitional Provisions Order 2005, the national health service (General Dental Services Contracts) Regulations 2005 and the national health service (Personal Dental Services Agreements) Regulations 2005 have been delegated to the NHS Litigation Authority. The formal applications for dispute resolution presently received will be undertaken within the authority's current resources.

Stephen Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether dentists working as vocational trainees will be paid for their work in 2005–06. [67220]

Ms Rosie Winterton: From the introduction of the vocational training scheme in 2002 to date, dental vocational trainees have been paid a training allowance/salary. In 2005–06, the allowance was £27,372 per annum.

Departmental Websites

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list (a) the websites operated by her Department and (b) the reports placed on the internet in March 2006, indicating in each case whether paper copies were also made available. [65206]

Department reports are published on the main corporate website, www.dh.gov.uk.

The Department does not keep a list of individual reports added to its website. The information shown in the table was put together using the site search functionality. It identifies items described as 'reports' added to the site during March 2006. For completeness, other publications added to the site during the same period are also listed. We have indicated where alternative versions including paper copies of the report or publication were also made available.

There were 11 reports and 34 other publications in total. These figures exclude press releases, bulletins, circulars and letters, directions, committee minutes, leaflets, full and partial regulatory impact assessments.

Disabled Parents

Annette Brooke: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many direct payments were taken up by disabled and sick adults for use in purchasing social care services that support them in their parenting role in the latest year for which figures are available; [67243]

(2) what steps her Department has taken to encourage local authorities to promote direct payments to disabled parents; [67244]

(3) what assessment her Department has made of the effectiveness of the direct payment system for disabled parents to purchase appropriate support for their family and parenting responsibilities. [67245]

Mr. Byrne: Figures for the number of direct payments taken up to support disabled and sick adults in their parenting role are not held centrally.

Local authorities have a duty to make a direct payment to everyone, including sick and disabled parents, who has been assessed as needing social care services and who are able to manage them, even if they need assistance to do so. Councils should fully consider the particular support needs sick and disabled parents may have with their parenting role as part of the assessment process.

The Department has not carried out an assessment regarding the effectiveness of the direct payments system for disabled parents. However, we have commissioned the personal social services research unit (PSSRU) at the London School of Economics to evaluate the implementation of direct payments. PSSRU will report on their findings later in 2006.

District Community Midwives

Mr. Devine: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what pay banding district community midwives have been awarded under Agenda for Change in (a) Newcastle, (b) Blackpool, (c) Leeds, (d) Lambeth, (e) Southampton, (f) Bristol and (g) Swansea. [64775]

Mr. Byrne: The information requested relating to national health services organisations in Newcastle, Blackpool, Leeds, Lambeth, Southampton and Bristol is not collected centrally. Information for the NHS in Swansea is a matter for the Welsh Assembly.

Employment Costs (Nurses/Doctors)

Mrs. Villiers: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much it costs on average to employ a (a) nurse and (b) doctor for each of the first 10 years of service from qualification. [54512]

Mr. Byrne: Information on the costs of employing staff by length of service from qualification is not held centrally.

Food

David Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average daily expenditure per patient is on food by NHS trusts for which data is available. [65104]

Jane Kennedy [holding answer 26 April 2006]: The average daily cost of feeding one patient in 2004–05 was £6.07 for all national health service trusts.

Gender Reassignment Operations

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 27 February 2006, Official Report, column 446W, on gender reassignment operations, what is meant by combined operations for (a) male to female and (b) female to male gender reassignment operations. [57184]

Mr. Byrne: The office for population censuses and surveys 4.2 codes X15.1 and X15.2, combined operations are intended to cover cases where the patient has one or more operation at the same time. As part of gender reassignment surgery these may include reconstruction of the genitals, the removal of female breasts, the shaping of a male contoured chest, and the shaping of a female contoured chest. There is no precise definition as to what combined operations may consist of.

Gene Therapy Clinical Trials

Chris Huhne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to fund the MDEX consortium gene therapy clinical trials. [66613]

Jane Kennedy: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given on 30 January 2006, Official Report, column 167W.

General Practitioners

Ms Diana R. Johnson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average take-home pay was for general practitioners in (a) England and (b) Kingston-upon-Hull, North in each of the last 10 years; and if she will make a statement. [65434]

Mr. Byrne: Information on the average take-home pay for general practitioners in England and Kingston-Upon-Hull is not collected centrally. However, figures based on information for Great Britain only are available.

Ms Diana R. Johnson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many single-handed general practitioner practices there are in (a) Kingston-upon-Hull and (b) East Yorkshire. [65435]

Mr. Byrne: The information requested is shown in the table.

General practitioner practices[1] for North and East Yorkshire and Northern Lincolnshire strategic health authority, as at 30 September 2005

Number (headcount)

			All practices	Single handed

Chris Huhne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the annual (a) mean and (b) median net income of general practitioners has been in each year since 1997. [64851]

Mr. Byrne: The mean net income of general practitioners, 1996–97 to 2003–04, Great Britain is set out in the following table:

	Intended average net income (£)
1996–97	44,483
1997–98	46,031
1998–99	48,037
1999–2000	52,606
2000–01	54,219
2001–02	56,510
2002–03	61,618
2003–04(Forecast figure)	67,040

Note:
Median net income figures are not held centrally.

Gershon Review

Mr. Soames: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what extra resources in 2006–07 are being released to her Department arising from efficiency gains generated by the Gershon process. [58162]

Mr. Byrne: From the start of the Gershon programme in March 2004 up to December 2005, the Department had realised savings of £2,205 million. We currently expect that savings for the final quarter of 2005–06 and the following two years will continue at a rate that will ensure as a minimum that the Department remains on track to realise our £6,500 million target by March 2008.

These savings are all released into front line service provision providing additional service and better quality care.

Health and Social Care Information Centre

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for Health by what process Dr. Foster was selected as the private partner for the new venture with the Health and Social Care Information Centre; and what steps were taken to ensure this process met the Department's procurement guidelines. [54682]

Mr. Byrne: An independent review of the health informatics market concluded that Dr. Foster was the most suitable private sector partner to work with the NHS Health and Social Care Information Centre. A formal due diligence exercise confirmed that although Dr. Foster was relatively new to the market place, it had a robust position. Opinion canvassed among a number of stakeholders confirmed Dr. Foster's strong brand and market position.

Legal opinion supported the approach that the joint venture was not a procurement and there was no legal requirement for a competitive exercise provided that value for money could be demonstrated. The business case has been approved by Secretary of State for Health.

Health Trainers

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average salary of a health trainer is expected to be; and how many hours on average a health trainer is expected to work per week. [65949]

Caroline Flint: It has been estimated that a health trainer would earn in the region of £14,000 working full-time. However, it is up to individual primary care trusts to make decisions about where they allocate resources and how many health trainers they will need to meet the needs of their local population.

Health Treatment Centres

Paul Holmes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list each (a) NHS treatment centre, (b) independent sector treatment centre and (c) joint-venture treatment centre led by (i) the NHS and (ii) a private provider; which private provider is involved in each centre; and what the cost to the NHS was of establishing each centre. [61713]

Mr. Byrne: Details for each scheme and the centrally held capital costs of establishing each national health service treatment centre have been placed in the Library. There is one joint venture, the BUPA Redwood Treatment Centre at Redhill. Information on the cost of establishing independent sector treatment centres is not held centrally, as the costs of establishing such centres are borne by the providers themselves.

Public Information

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether she plans to make the obligation on primary care trusts to provide up-to-date, authoritative information to the public as described in paragraph 3.25, page 61, of her White Paper, "Our Health, Our Care, Our Say", Cm 6737, a statutory requirement; whether she plans to provide additional resources to primary care trusts to enable them to meet this commitment; and if she will make a statement. [49521]

Mr. Byrne: Our aim is that patients should be able to exercise choice in deciding the general practice with which to register. We expect primary care trusts (PCTs) to support patients in this by providing transparent and comparable information on all practices within their areas and intend to place a duty on them to do so. PCTs will be expected to fund any consequential costs from within their allocations.

Heart and Lung Transplant

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what the average cost is of a heart and lung transplant within the NHS; [65843]

(2) what the average NHS waiting time for a heart and lung transplant was in England in each of the last five years for which records are available. [66042]

Mr. Byrne: The average costs of cardiothoracic transplants are approximately £75,000 for heart transplant, £80,000 for lung and £85,000 for combined heart and lung. This includes the care from admission for transplant to discharge from hospital. It does not include the costs of further follow-up care and drug treatment.

The most recent data available (1999 to 2003) estimates the median waiting time for cardiothoracic transplants as follows: 137 days for heart transplants and 394 days for lung. There were too few patients on the combined heart and lung transplant waiting list during this period for a robust estimate to be made. The median is the accepted way of reporting waiting times for transplantation.

Home Oxygen Service

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what representations she has received from pharmacists regarding the possibility of her Department reimbursing pharmacists for costs incurred of delivering oxygen to the homes of patients with prescriptions dated after 31 January; and what plans she has to reimburse pharmacists for these costs; [66629]

(2) in how many primary care trusts pharmacists are being paid to deliver oxygen to the homes of patients with prescriptions dated after 31 January. [66631]

Jane Kennedy [holding answer 27 April 2006]: The Department has received a number of representations on this specific issue. However, payments to pharmacy contractors for the delivery of cylinder oxygen to patients prescribed home oxygen therapy are a matter for discussion between local primary care trusts and pharmacy contractors. Where pharmacy contracts continue to provide this service against a prescription, they will receive payment under current national health service arrangements.

Information on the number of pharmacy contractors providing a cylinder service is not held centrally.

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she plans the changeover from pharmacists providing the home oxygen service to arrangements introduced by her Department in February to be complete. [66630]

Jane Kennedy [holding answer 27 April 2006]: The national health service is updating plans for completing the transfer to new arrangements for the home oxygen service later this year. These plans include continuing delivery of a cylinder service by pharmacists until patients transfer to new suppliers. Patients come forward for further oxygen supplies at different times, depending on their individual needs but we expect new suppliers to have contacted most patients to confirm a start date for delivery of their oxygen supplies by the summer. However, a small number of patients, with infrequent use of oxygen therapy, may not come forward until later in the year at which point they will transfer to the new supplier. The changeover will be complete once all patients receiving oxygen therapy have transferred to new suppliers.

Hospital Patients (Telephone Calls)

Mr. Jeremy Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she will announce the (a) membership and (b) terms of reference of the review group into the price of telephone calls to hospital patients. [64257]

Mr. Byrne: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given on 6 April 2006.

Mr. Jeremy Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps she is taking to ensure that patients and their families are informed of the charges for the use of hospital telephones. [64259]

Mr. Byrne: The bedside television and telephone systems are run by three major private providers and offer additional services for the patient. Patients and relatives who wish to use the services are made aware of the charges at the time they sign up to use the system and by literature posted around the hospital. Incoming callers to the bedside telephone are advised at the onset of the telephone call of the call charge to be levied by two of the providers operating the service.

Hospital payphones and televisions in day rooms are available for patients who do not wish to use the service.

Hosptial Tariffs

Dr. Pugh: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what comparative market forces factor is allowed within the tariff for each hospital in England. [64330]

Mr. Byrne: The market forces factor adjustment for individual national health service trusts and foundation trusts has been published alongside the national tariff for 2006–07 and can be downloaded from the Department's website. A copy has been placed in the Library.

Independent Sector Treatment

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 20 January 2006, Official Report, column 1670W, to the right hon. Member for Holborn and St. Pancras (Frank Dobson), on independent sector treatment, for what reasons the percentage cost per procedure above the NHS equivalent cost for 2004–05 provided in the answer differs from the figure provided in table 1.3.2 of her Department's written evidence to the Health Committee of 1 December 2005, HC 736-iii; and whether either of these figures includes the capital costs of the independent sector treatment centre programme. [60415]

Mr. Byrne: The reply on 20 January 2006, Official Report, column 1670W, was the average percentage cost above the national health service equivalent cost of all independent sector treatment centres (ISTCs) in the first wave of the procurements. Across the full period of the wave one ISTC contracts, the average cost above the equivalent NHS cost is 11.2 per cent.

The figures provided in the Department's written evidence in table 1.3.2 covered only those schemes that were operational, that is treating patients, during 2004–05: the facility at Daventry, the mobile cataract units, BUPA Redwood (this is a joint venture between the independent sector and the NHS) and the general supplementary contract for the provision of additional capacity using the incumbent independent sector. For those schemes only, the percentage cost was 6.2 per cent. below the equivalent NHS costs in 2004–05.

All comparisons made between provider price and NHS equivalent cost take account of the capital costs of the programme.

McKinsey's

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much has been spent by (a) her Department and (b) strategic health authorities on (i) management consultants and (ii) contracts with McKinsey's in (A) 2002, (B) 2003, (C) 2004 and (D) so far in 2005. [37419]

Mr. Byrne: The total cost external consultancy procured by the Department, where in-house resources were not available, is shown in table 1 following.

Table 1

	Amount (£000)
2002–03	7,266
2003–04	10,031
2004–05	12,800
2005–06(To date)	[1]4,658

[1] The 2005–06 spending is lower because we have reviewed the data for this period and rectified miscoding of the category codes so that it represents the true expenditure on external consultants up to the 31 January 2006.

The Department does not collect information that would allow for an analysis of the type of consultant engaged.

The fees paid to McKinsey's in the last four financial years (to date) are shown in table 2 following.

Table 2

	Amount (£000)
2003–04	0
2004–05	240
2005–06 (To date)	1,275

Information relating to the strategic health authority's expenditure on management consultants and with McKinsey's in particular is not held centrally.

Mental Health Services

Mr. Fallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the funding made available in 2006–07 for mental health services covering the Sevenoaks constituency is, broken down by main cost area. [67508]

Caroline Flint: The requested information is not collected centrally. It is for primary care trusts in conjunction with strategic health authorities to decide on local delivery and planning of services.

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the towns in (a) England and Wales, (b) Scotland and (c) the European Union that she has visited in an official capacity in each month since 1997; what the purpose was in each case; what the (i) date, (ii) time, (iii) location and (iv) duration was of each meeting; if she will place in the Library the text of any speech made; and if she will make a statement. [65002]

Mr. Byrne: The information requested could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. Published speeches by my right hon. Friend are available on the Department's website at: www.dh.gov.uk/NewsHome/Speeches/fs/en.

NHS Audiologists

Ms Diana R. Johnson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many NHS audiologists there are in Kingston upon Hull; and if she will make a statement. [65467]

Mr. Byrne: The information requested is shown in the table.

National health service hospital and community health services: qualified audiology staff in the North and East Yorkshire and East Lincolnshire strategic health authority (SHA) area as at 30 September 2005

NHS Hospital Food

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average (a) daily, (b) monthly and (c) annual expenditure on patient food was for NHS hospitals serving West Lancashire residents in the last year for which figures are available. [64230]

Mr. Byrne: Data on monthly expenditure on patient food is not collected centrally and details of annual expenditure on patient food service are only collected on a voluntary basis for national health service benchmarking purposes. However, data is collected on the average daily cost of feeding one patient and this information is shown in the following table.

The daily cost of feeding one patient, is derived from the central estates return information collection, and is the average of the average daily expenditure on patient food per patient reported by trusts. These amounts include the gross cost of provisions and salary and non-salary costs involved in its preparation and serving.

Organisation	Average daily cost of feeding one patient (£)
Lancashire Care National Health Service Trust	6.83
Mersey Care NHS Trust	6.00
Southport and Ormskirk Hospital NHS Trust	7.49
West Lancashire Primary Care Trust (PCT)	No data

Notes:
The above data is based on that provided by NHS organisations to the Department and has not been amended centrally. The completeness and accuracy of this data is the responsibility of the provider organisations.

Nuffield Speech and Language Unit

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of the funding of placements of children at the Nuffield speech and language unit in each of the last five years was from (a) local education authorities and (b) primary care trusts. [65296]

Jane Kennedy: The information requested is not collected centrally.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what discussions she has had with the Royal Free Hampstead NHS Trust about the future of the Nuffield speech and language unit; [65290]

(2) what assessment she has made of (a) the work undertaken and (b) the results achieved by the Nuffield speech and language unit. [65294]

Jane Kennedy: No discussions have been held between Ministers and the Royal Free Hampstead national health service trust about the future of the Nuffield speech and language unit. It is for the local NHS to make assessments on the work undertaken and results achieved in services provided for the local community, as this is where knowledge and expertise lie. However, my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Community Care (Liam Byrne) held a discussion with the hon. Member during a debate on this matter held on 25 April.

Obesity

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what advice her Department gives to GPs about the use of the register of obese patients they are required to establish under the provisions of the new General Medical Services Contract; whether the advice includes promoting awareness of slimming on referral and participation in programmes operated by commercial slimming organisations; and if she will make a statement. [63595]

Mr. Byrne: The new quality and outcomes framework for 2006–07 includes an indicator which rewards practices for maintaining an obesity register. The recording of body mass index for the register will take place in the practice as part of routine care. It is part of normal routine clinical practice for general practitioners to provide advice to patients who are identified as obese.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make it her policy when placing material in the Library of the House in response to a parliamentary question to supply a copy of the material to the hon. Member who tabled the question; and if she will make a statement. [64207]

Mr. Byrne: It has been our practice to send a copy to the hon. Member asking the question.

Primary Care Trusts

John Hemming: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much money had been committed by each primary care trust to purchasing private services at the end of December 2005; and how much has been budgeted by each primary care trust for such activity for the financial year 2005–06. [60822]

Mr. Byrne: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Principal Civil Service Pension Scheme

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what her Department's employer contribution rates to the Principal Civil Service Pension Scheme are; what assumed rate of return underlies those contribution rates; and what the contribution rate would be if the assumed rate of return was in line with current redemption yield on index-linked gilts. [61998]

Mr. Byrne: As the hon. Gentleman is aware the Principal Civil Service Pension Scheme is overseen by the Cabinet Office. It is therefore appropriate, in this instance, that the Cabinet Office respond to him directly. He should have received a reply from them in response to his questions.

Public Involvement (Health)

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she expects (a) to publish (i) the recommendations of the expert panel on the future of patient and public involvement in health and (ii) the evidence submitted to the expert panel and (b) to announce her Department's decision on the future structures for patient and public involvement in health. [66895]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The expert panel which is considering patient and public involvement in health, reported to Ministers in the Department at the end of April 2006. Ministers are considering the recommendations and will announce the Department's decision on the future structures for patient and public involvement shortly. The panel's report and the evidence submitted to the panel will be published at the same time as this announcement.

Pulmonary Hypertension

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people have died from pulmonary hypertension while on the NHS waiting list for a heart and lung transplant in England in each of the last five years for which records are available. [66045]

Mr. Byrne: The number of people who died each year waiting for a suitable organ to come available for transplant as treatment for pulmonary hypertension is shown in the following table:

Donor organ awaited	2001	2002	2004	2004	2005	Total
Heart and lung	5	3	3	4	3	18
Lung only	1	1	—	1	2	5
Total	6	4	3	5	5	23

Royal Free Hampstead NHS Trust

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the total expenditure of the Royal Free Hampstead NHS Trust was in each year between (a) 2001–02 and (b) 2005–06. [65288]

Jane Kennedy: The table shows data from 2001–02 to 2004–05, which is the latest year for which information is available.

Figures given are the total operating expenses of the Royal Free Hampstead NHS Trust for each of the relevant years. Figures for 2005–06 cannot be supplied; they will be available in the autumn.

Total operating expenses of the Royal Free Hampstead NHS Trust

£000

	Amount
2001–02	238,223
2002–03	265,071
2003–04	296,023
2004–05	342,330

Salt Intake

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what analysis her Department conducted of the food industry's objections to the Food Standards Agency's proposed target salt levels as set out in their consultation document of August 2005. [65769]

Caroline Flint: As part of its normal consultation process, the Food Standards Agency (FSA) compiled and reviewed the comments of all respondents to the salt targets consultation, a summary of which is published on the FSA's website at www.salt.gov.uk/index.shtml.

The FSA analysed industry objections to targets for specific food categories in light of a wide range of information including:

technical, food safety and quality limitations;

advice from independent food technologists;

the levels of salt reductions already made in specific foods, and those necessary to enable consumers to meet dietary intake targets.

Comments and evidence gathered from all aspects of the FSA's stakeholder consultations were used to inform the FSA's decisions on final targets.

Section 64 Funding

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what her Department's policy is on funding under section 64 of the Health Services and Public Health Act 1968 for 2006 to 2008; [66894]

(2) whether successful candidates for section 64 funding have been selected for 2006 to 2008. [66898]

Mr. Byrne: Decisions on applications for awards in 2006–07 are currently under consideration and organisations will be informed as soon as this process is complete. During 2006–07 a review of department of health funding for the third sector will take place and an announcement on funding for 2007–08, which will include information on section 64 General Scheme of Grants will soon be made.

Sexual Health

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what level of expenditure will be committed to support the (a) improvements to sexual health services announced by the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Public Health on 20 July, (b) bowel cancer screening programme announced by the Minister of State for Health Services on 2 August and (c) announcement of extra support for research into incurable diseases announced by the Minister of State for Quality and Patient Safety on 2 December; how much expenditure there has been on each; and whether the expenditure is financed from the Centrally Funded Initiatives and Services and Special Allocations budget of her Department in each case. [39345]

Mr. Byrne: On 20 July 2005, my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Health (Caroline Flint) announced an additional £15 million capital funding to make improvements to genitourinary medicine services. The funding was allocated to strategic health authorities last September.

The Government have stated their commitment to a national bowel cancer screening programme, for which funding has been agreed. On 30 January 2006, the new Health White Paper, "Our Health, our care, our say: a new direction for community services", reaffirmed that the programme will be rolled out from April 2006.

The statement made by the Minister of State, Department of Health, my right hon. Friend the Member for Liverpool, Wavertree (Jane Kennedy) on 2 December 2005 was part of the overall United Kingdom Government response to the UK stem cell initiative report. This included a number of commitments over the next decade from the Government Departments and the research councils. The Department fully intends to meet a commitment to provide an additional £100 million for national health service research and development compared with 2003–04 levels and the eligible service support costs of clinical stem cell research within the NHS.

Ms Diana R. Johnson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the provision of sexual health services in Kingston-upon-Hull North. [65438]

Caroline Flint: It is for strategic health authorities and primary care trusts to determine how services are provided within their area.

I am advised that sexual health services in Hull operate using a hub and spoke model, with Conifer House in the city centre as the main centre and clinics held across the city and the East Riding. The services sees approximately 3,000 patients per month.

Data for 2004 for sexually transmitted infections, including HIV, contraception and abortion are available from the following websites:

Southport and Ormskirk Hospital Trust

Dr. Pugh: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the major capital investment projects at Southport and Ormskirk Hospital Trust approved by the Department of Health since 1997. [64915]

Mr. Byrne: There have been a number of major capital schemes at the Southport and Ormskirk Hospital National Health Service Trust since 1997. However, as none of these schemes fell beyond the relevant delegated limits, approval was granted by the relevant local NHS organisation rather than by the Department.

Stillbirths

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what (a) financial assistance and (b) support is available for mothers who deliver a stillborn baby. [65412]

Mr. Byrne: Mothers who deliver a stillborn baby after the start of the 25th week of pregnancy are entitled to receive statutory maternity pay. In certain circumstances, financial help is available from the Social Fund to cover funeral costs. To receive such a funeral payment, parents must meet certain eligibility criteria.

It is for individual national health service trusts to ensure there are appropriate support services for mothers who deliver a stillborn baby locally. Such support is likely to include an appointment with the consultant to discuss what is known about the reason for the baby's death, and bereavement counselling. The hospital may also offer to arrange the burial or cremation free of charge.

Stoma Appliances

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 27 March 2006, Official Report, column 807W, to the hon. Member for Tewkesbury (Mr. Robertson) on stoma appliances, on what date her Department expects to (a) publish a summary of responses and (b) respond to the consultation on the provision of stoma appliances and other services. [65946]

Jane Kennedy: It is anticipated that a summary of responses to the consultation will be published shortly.

The Department will be having further discussions regarding incontinence and stoma appliances in order to identify how best to achieve transparency between item price and service costs. The Department will also explore with industry how to ensure that those contractors that provide valued services are fairly remunerated for the services they provide.

We will be arranging a series of meetings with patient groups, the national health service and providers in order to accomplish this.

In relation to reagents and dressings it is planned to consult again with the market. This consultation will cover a sub-set of dressings and a sub-set of reagents in part IX of the Drug Tariff.

Trust Spending (Gloucestershire)

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much each health trust operating within Gloucestershire spent in each year since 1997 in (a) cash and (b) real terms. [66361]

Caroline Flint [holding answer 27 April 2006]: Operating expenses of national health service trusts in Gloucestershire, both in cash terms and in real terms at 2004–05 prices are shown in the table.

TGN1412

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions she has held with the North West London Hospitals NHS Trust on the recovery of the costs of care from (a) Parexel and (b) TeGenero for the treatment of those patients who suffered an adverse reaction to the treatment TGN1412. [65999]

Jane Kennedy: No discussions have been held between Ministers and the North West London Hospitals national health services Trust on the recovery of the costs of care from Parexel and Tegenero for the treatment of those patients who suffered an adverse reaction to the treatment TGN1412.

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether purchasing of vaccines recommended for use by the NHS is carried out (a) centrally and (b) by individual primary care trusts. [65697]

Caroline Flint [holding answer 25 April 2006]: Vaccines which are purchased centrally and by individual primary care trusts are shown in the following table.

Vaccine	Purchased
Anthrax vaccine	Centrally
Bacillus Calmette-Guerin (BCG) vaccine	Centrally
Diphtheria vaccines (combined with either Tetanus, Pertussis, Polio or Hib)	Centrally
Measles, Mumps and Rubella vaccine	Centrally
Meningococcal vaccine	Centrally
Smallpox vaccine	Centrally
Tick-borne encephalitis vaccine	Direct from supplier
Typhoid	Direct from supplier
Varicella Zoster vaccine (Chickenpox)	Direct from supplier
Yellow fever vaccine	Direct from supplier
Cholera vaccine	Direct from supplier
Haemophilus influenzae type B (Hib) vaccine	Direct from supplier

Vaccine	Purchased
Hepatitis A vaccine	Direct from supplier
Hepatitis B vaccine	Direct from supplier
Pneumococcal vaccine	Direct from supplier
Influenza vaccine	Direct from supplier, centrally bought contingency stock
Rabies vaccine	Direct from supplier for travel, centrally bought for occupational use

York Hospital

Hugh Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many finished consultant episodes there were (a) in total and (b) in each specialty at York hospital in each year since 1996–97. [64325]

Mr. Byrne: The information requested is shown in the table.

Notes:

Finished consultant episode (FCE)

A FCE is defined as a period of admitted patient care under one consultant within one health care provider. The figures do not represent the number of patients, as a person may have more than one episode of care within the year.

Ungrossed data

Figures have not been adjusted for shortfalls in data, that is the data is ungrossed.

Low numbers

Due to reasons of confidentiality, figures between 1 and 5 have been suppressed and replaced with "*" (an asterisk).

Disabled Children

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps he is taking to help provide education for disabled children in developing countries; and if he will make a statement. [67703]

Mr. Thomas: All children, including those with disabilities or living in difficult circumstances, should have the opportunity to fulfil their right to access and complete a good quality education.

Tackling exclusion, including exclusion based on disability within the education system, is part of our work with partner governments. Copies of DFID's policy paper entitled 'Reducing poverty by tackling social exclusion' which sets out our broad based approach to tackling social exclusion across all sectors, have already been deposited in the Libraries of the House. This strategy highlights specific issues of discrimination which explain a large part of the disadvantages faced by children with a disability.

DFID provides its funding for poverty reduction in support of partner governments' own plans for poverty reduction. In fulfilling our financial commitments to partner governments, including the significant commitment announced on 10 April that DFID will spend some £8.5 billion in support of education in developing countries over the next 10 years, the UK Government have taken a significant step forward in improving the opportunity for inclusive education to become a realistic goal for partner governments. We encourage partner governments to ensure that as wide a range as possible of stakeholders participate in the consultations on national poverty reduction strategies, including groups representing disabled people. Issues of social exclusion and targeted interventions for excluded groups will be addressed in the discussions our Country Offices will have with governments on developing 10-year plans for education.

DFID's social exclusion strategy also emphasises the importance of the role of civil society in tackling all forms of social exclusion and the importance of DFID's partnerships with organisations involved in advocating for the rights of disadvantaged groups.

Extractive Industries Transparency Initiative

Mark Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development which developing countries with oil, gas or mining industries have not signed up to the Extractive Industries Transparency Initiative; and what steps the Government are taking to encourage them to do so. [66837]

Mr. Thomas: The International Monetary Fund (IMF) Guide on Resource Revenue Transparency defines 45 developing countries (and eight developed countries) as rich in hydrocarbons or mineral resources. Of these, 19 countries have committed to implement the Extractive Industries Transparency Initiative (EITI). The Government are presently in discussion with a further ten countries who have not yet begun implementation.

The Government believe that improved transparency over revenue management will bring a number of benefits to any resource rich country—in terms of improved governance, greater economic and political stability and an improved investment climate. The EITI International Advisory Group, which is supported by a Secretariat housed in the Department for International Development, is currently considering other incentives to encourage participation in EITI, and how these might be strengthened.

Ministerial Cars (Fuel Costs)

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what the fuel costs were for ministerial cars used by his Department in each of the last five years. [67125]

Mr. Thomas: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Minister of State for Transport on 27 April 2006, Official Report, column 1226W.

Pharmaceutical Industry

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what recent discussions he has had with pharmaceutical companies on the pricing of cancer drugs in the developing world. [66824]

Mr. Thomas: DFID has engaged extensively with the pharmaceutical industry as part of our work to increase access to medicines in developing countries. In January 2005, we published a set of recommendations for the industry, that specifically looked at pricing policies, investment in research and development for diseases affecting developing countries, and ways of working in developing countries. These recommendations built on existing good practice in the industry. Many companies have made significant progress in making their medicines more available and affordable in developing countries.

To date, our discussions have focused on major communicable diseases such as HIV, malaria and TB, and on neglected tropical diseases, such as sleeping sickness. However, discussions with the industry have also emphasised the degree to which treatments for non-communicable diseases such as cancers really should also be the subject of differential pricing offers given the significant public health needs in developing countries. There are in fact higher rates of cervical cancer deaths in Ghana than in the UK.

This is an area we will continue to work on with the industry.

Sakhalin II Development

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what his policy is on the funding for Shell's proposed Sakhalin II development and the requirements of the European Bank for Reconstruction and Development's Environmental policy; and if he will make a statement. [67239]

Mr. Thomas: The UK Government have been following this project very closely through their role as a shareholder and Board member of the European Bank for Reconstruction and Development (EBRD). The UK Export Credits Guarantee Department (ECGD) is also considering the request from Sakhalin Energy Investment Company (SEIC) to provide export credit guarantees.

The Government are fully aware of the social, environmental, commercial and energy security issues associated with this project. The EBRD, the ECGD and other members of the lender group are also treating these issues very seriously. The lender group's involvement in this project so far has improved its social and environmental standards.

In December 2005, EBRD Management agreed that all documentation required to commence a public consultation process was "fit for purpose". A 120 day public consultation period ended on 28 April. EBRD Management is now considering all written responses received and additional representations from public consultation meetings.

Should EBRD Management recommend to its Board that the project should receive EBRD funding, then at that point the UK Government will decide whether to support an EBRD loan. The Government will also consider all the representations it has received and carefully assess all aspects of the project before reaching a final decision.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

Corporate Hospitality

David Simpson: To ask the Solicitor-General on how many occasions he has accepted corporate hospitality in the last 12 months. [67517]

The Solicitor-General: Paragraph 5.28 of the Ministerial Code sets out the rules on the registration of hospitality.

Vixen Tor Climbing Incident

John Mann: To ask the Solicitor-General when he expects the Crown Prosecution Service to report on the Vixen Tor climbing incident. [67928]

The Solicitor-General: CPS Devon and Cornwall discontinued this case on 25 November 2005, at Plymouth magistrates court. CPS Devon and Cornwall wrote to the complainants on 30 November 2005, explaining the decision. As a consequence of further correspondence, a further letter of explanation was sent on 28 April 2006.

WALES

Electoral Reform

11. Angela Watkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received on electoral reform in Wales. [66192]

Nick Ainger: My right hon. Friend and I receive many representations on electoral reform in Wales. The Electoral Administration Bill, currently being considered in another place, includes a wide range of measures aimed at improving the registration process, while also reducing the risk of electoral fraud and ensuring that elections are made more accessible to voters.

Police Force Restructuring

12. Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on police force restructuring in Wales. [66193]

Mr. Hain: In line with HMIC's assessment, my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary and I believe that an all-Wales strategic force is the most effective way of delivering a safe and secure Wales, protected against threats such as terrorism, serious and organised crime and drug trafficking.

Press Freedom

13. Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the steps he is taking to ensure the freedom of the press in Wales. [66194]

Nick Ainger: Wales Office Ministers actively maintain contact with all sections of the media in Wales. We would obviously listen carefully to any concerns over press freedom that might be raised.

Engagements

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list his visits to Wales together with the purpose of each such visit since 1 January. [67598]

Mr. Hain: On a weekly basis I meet with the first Minister and hold other ad hoc meetings in Cardiff. In addition to regular appointments and surgeries in my constituency, I have made the following visits:

2006

	Visit
19–20 January	N Wales visit—Address CBI Reception Corus living solutions, Ipsen Biopharm Ltd, Rhyl Cycling Club
26 January	Holocaust Memorial Day in Cardiff
12 February	Rugby, Wales v. Scotland, Cardiff
10 February	Picture Financial, EADS, International Rectifier—Newport
16–17 February	N Wales visit—Kimberly Clark, Flintshire County Council, RedWeb St. Asaph, Daily Post
24 February	Workplace Health Connect launch in Newport
1 March	St. Athan—visit 1st Battalion Welsh Guards/and opening of Senedd
2 March	Respect Action Plan—Launch Dispersal Zone—visit to school in Swansea
18 March	Rugby, Wales v. France, Cardiff
23 March	Solace Wales Conference Cardiff

Olympic Delivery Authority

Hywel Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what discussions he has had with (a) the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport and (b) the Welsh Assembly Government on the appointment of members of the Olympic Delivery Authority. [67912]

Mr. Hain: The Olympic Delivery Authority has a specific task, to deliver the Olympic Park, in Stratford, and associated infrastructure developments, in time for the 2012 Games.

Appointments were made in accordance with the Office of the Commissioner for Public Appointments' Code of Practice.

The Nations and Regions Group has representatives from each nation and English region, and is charged with ensuring that the whole of the UK benefits from the 2012 Olympic and Paralympic Games. The Olympic Delivery Authority will be working closely with the Nations and Regions Group.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Agriculture (Sustainability/Climate Change)

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions she has had with (a) the horticultural industry and (b) farmers on the environmental effects of their work. [65371]

Mr. Morley: The Department has had discussions with both the horticultural and farming industries on this subject.

The horticulture sector is making efforts on a number of fronts to reduce carbon emissions. Under the new Climate Change Agreement, growers will be entitled to an 80 per cent. discount on the levy provided they meet prescribed energy saving targets. Under the new Energy Scheme, it is possible for businesses to claim capital allowances on items such as thermal screens and insulation, variable speed pumps, certain heating equipment (including combined heat and power plant) and lighting. In addition, both Defra and the Horticultural Development Council carry out research into energy efficiency issues and the Carbon Trust (funded by Defra) provides advice and organises free energy services to assist in the identification of energy saving steps that can be implemented in nurseries.

The Government are very much aware of the link between farming and the environment. The Strategy for Sustainable Farming and Food (SFFS) was launched in England in 2002 and sets out the basis for a new relationship in which Government works in partnership with the farming industry in England to make farmers more market, and less subsidy focused, while managing their businesses in more environmentally and socially responsible ways.

Achievements under SFFS include: CAP reform which, by breaking the link between subsidy and production, means there is no incentive to overproduce; the cross compliance element of the Single Payment Scheme where subsidies are linked to the delivery of environmental and animal welfare standards; the launch of Environmental Stewardship to which all farmers are eligible to apply to earn payments for undertaking environmental management of their land; and the launch of the Rural Developments Service Farm Advice Unit which oversees delivery of technical and environmental advice to farmers.

In addition, the Department is working closely with the agricultural industry to reduce it's contribution to climate change. The Department has set up the Agricultural Change and Environment Observatory to monitor, and where possible anticipate, changes in agriculture and at farm level, and to asses consequent implications for the environment. A Stakeholder Advisory Group has been set up with the aim of advising priorities for the work of the programme, providing feedback on emerging results and their implications, identifying new and emerging areas on which the Observatory could usefully focus their work and to provide a channel of communication with a wider stakeholder community. Further information can be found on Defra's website at: http://www.defra.gov.uk/farm/observatory/background.htm

A vital element of Defra's policy on agriculture and climate change is to raise awareness within the industry of the issues and possible actions to be taken. The Rural Climate Change Forum has been established to provide a high level forum for dialogue with Government, and authoritative advice and leadership to rural stakeholders.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the contribution made by (a) farmers and (b) horticulturalists in reducing UK carbon emissions. [65372]

Mr. Morley: The agriculture and forestry sector contributes 7 per cent. of UK greenhouse gas emissions. The major focus is on non-CO_2 gases, with, in 2004, this sector accounting for 46 per cent. of methane and 66 per cent. of nitrous oxide emissions, but only 1 per cent. of the carbon dioxide. Annual total emissions fell by 22 per cent. between 1990 and 2004, with methane emissions reducing by 13 per cent., and nitrous oxide emissions by 17 per cent.

The new UK Climate Change Programme, published March 2006, has assessed the role of the agriculture and forestry sector in addressing climate change and seeks to raise awareness of the issues across the sector and develop measures for the sector to allow it to play a full part in tackling climate change. Substantial savings are expected, assuming the proposed measures are implemented to their full potential.

The horticulture sector is also making efforts on a number of fronts to reduce carbon emissions. Under the new Climate Change Agreement, growers will be entitled to an 80 per cent. discount on the levy provided they meet prescribed energy saving targets.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps are being taken by her Department to work with farmers to reduce the impact of climate change on British agriculture. [65747]

Mr. Morley: On 7 February 2005 Defra held a seminar to help raise awareness in the stakeholder community, and identify potential practical adaptation strategies within UK agriculture to tackle the impacts of climate change. The outcomes from this event were fed into the first ever Joint Informal Council on Environment and Agriculture, held in September 2005 under the UK presidency of the EU. The joint meeting focused on the significant challenges and opportunities that climate change presents to European agriculture.

A vital element of Defra policy on agriculture and climate change is to raise awareness within the industry of the issues and possible actions to be taken. The Rural Climate Change Forum has been established to provide a high level forum for dialogue with Government, and authoritative advice and leadership to rural stakeholders.

The new UK Climate Change Programme, published on 28 March 2006 signals a step change in the recognition we are giving to the agriculture sector in addressing climate change. The new programme has assessed the role of the agriculture and forestry sector in addressing climate change and seeks to raise awareness of the issues across the sector and develop measures to allow it to play a full part in tackling climate change.

The UK National Adaptation Policy Framework is currently being developed. It will help to provide a more strategic approach to adaptation, identifying key risks and opportunities common across a number of policy areas and to coordinate approaches where possible. The first phase of the framework will be structured on a sectoral basis, and these sectors will include Agriculture, Horticulture and Forestry as well as water resources, biodiversity and nature conservation. As the framework develops it will also reflect cross-cutting issues.

We are also committed to continuing to develop a robust evidence base in order to be able to support policy development and inform land managers of the best technologies and information available to help them adapt to climate change.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps are being taken by her Department to ensure the sustainability of British agriculture. [65748]

Jim Knight: British farming is valued for the contribution it makes to the economy and to the environment, through producing our food, safeguarding and enhancing our landscapes, and increasingly to contribute to tackling the problems of a changing world—such as meeting our energy needs. Through the strategy for sustainable farming and food, the Government have put in place a comprehensive and long-term plan to deliver a profitable and sustainable future for farming in this country.

Key to successful delivery of the strategy is the partnership between Government and industry, based on a commitment to shared goals. Through this partnership much has already been achieved, including: the delivery of CAP reform which, by breaking the link between subsidy and production, will help bring farmers closer to their markets; the cross compliance element of the single payment scheme through which subsidies are linked to the delivery of environmental and animal welfare standards; the launch of environmental stewardship, for which all farmers are eligible to apply to earn payments for undertaking environmental management of their land; and launch of "Partners for Success" a regulation and charging strategy for the farming sector, through which Government will continue to work with industry to regulate better and smarter.

An independent delivery group chaired by Sir Don Curry will continue to oversee and drive forward delivery of the strategy over the next three years.

Ammonium Nitrate Fertiliser

Patrick Mercer: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what records are held by the Government on the commercial sale of ammonium nitrate fertiliser. [65279]

Mr. Morley: The Government do not hold records on the commercial sale of ammonium nitrate fertiliser. I understand that records of commercial sales are kept by Industry (the Agricultural Industries Confederation).

Patrick Mercer: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether the Government plans to introduce restrictions on (a) the commercial sale of and (b) the levels of nitrate in ammonium nitrate fertiliser. [65280]

Mr. Morley: The Government have no immediate plans to restrict either the commercial sale of, nor the levels of nitrate in, ammonium nitrate (AN) fertiliser.

I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend, the then Minister for Rural Affairs of 25 May 2004, Official Report, column 1493W, which outlined the measures taken at the time to control the supply of AN fertilisers. Subsequent to that response, the Government invited the Agricultural Industries Confederation (AIC) to develop a voluntary fertiliser assurance scheme, to ensure robust safety, security and traceability of all inorganic agricultural and horticultural fertilisers throughout the supply chain up to the farm gate. The resulting Fertiliser Industry Assurance Scheme, (FIAS), was launched on 9 January 2006. Details of the Scheme can be found on the AIC website at www.agindustries.org.uk.

The voluntary and statutory measures governing the manufacture and supply of AN fertilisers are kept under continuous review and further measures will be taken if necessary.

Beef Exports

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what Government support has been given to the farming industry to assist the resumption of beef exports. [65059]

Jim Knight: Ministers and officials are working closely with industry representatives to ensure that the appropriate mechanisms are in place to ensure that beef exports can resume as soon as possible.

On 3 May, my noble Friend Lord Bach, the Minister for Sustainable Farming and Food, is hosting a further high level meeting with the those involved in the beef supply chain to consider the issues of interest to the beef sector, including the resumption of exports. On 4 May, he will be visiting the major Italian food fair (CIBUS) to help promote our beef exports.

The Government are also providing financial assistance for exports as part of the £5.5 million funding for a Beef Market Restoration Programme announced last October.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions she has had with the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry on the threat to biodiversity if biofuels are produced as a single crop. [66625]

Biofuels

Mr. Morley: The Department is in regular contact with the Department of Trade and Industry to discuss a whole range of issues related to bio-energy, including the impacts on biodiversity. Most transport biofuel feedstocks will be grown in rotation as part of a mix of several crops on the farm. Production from a mix of feedstocks and replacing crops for food would have a neutral effect on biodiversity. Any replacement of spring sown break crops with winter oilseed rape would have a negative effect on crop diversity and farmland birds. If arable crops replaced natural-regeneration set-aside, this would reduce habitat diversity. In the longer term, as technology improves, straw and wood could be used for bioethanol production without significantly affecting biodiversity.

Research suggests that, in comparison with arable crops, energy crops such as short rotation coppice grown for heat and power generation can encourage biodiversity, particularly for birds and insects.

Correspondence

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when the Minister for Rural Affairs, Landscape and Biodiversity will respond to the letter from the hon. Member for North Essex dated 17 November 2005 concerning the Chappel Memorial Green Trust; and if she will make a statement. [64886]

Jim Knight: I apologise for the delay in replying to the hon. Member's letter. A response was issued on 25 April 2006.

Departmental Websites

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will list (a) the websites operated by her Department and (b) the reports placed on the internet in March 2006, indicating in each case whether paper copies were also made available. [65212]

Jim Knight: DEFRA directly operates a number of websites, including the main DEFRA website (http://www.defra.gov.uk/) and the Government's sustainable development website (http://www.sustainable-development.gov.uk/). A number of other websites are operated by or on behalf of the Department, its agencies and non-departmental public bodies, but detailed information is not held centrally for these, and an accurate, comprehensive list could not be obtained without incurring disproportionate cost.

Several thousand pages of documents on the DEFRA website were updated or published during March 2006. As such it would be difficult to identify those which might be regarded as "reports". Specific information about the availability of paper copies of these documents is not readily available.

DEFRA ensures that reports are, where appropriate, made available as printed copies as well as online. If a report is published only via the website (and not in printed form), this is based on an assessment of factors such as the audience for the document (general or specialist), the nature of the material and its anticipated lifetime, whether speed of distribution electronically is particularly important, and cost-efficiency issues.

Disabled People

Tom Levitt: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on her Department's progress in fulfilling its statutory obligation as a public body to promote the rights of disabled people. [65817]

Jim Knight: I am replying in my new role as Minister responsible for Diversity and Equality in DEFRA.

Disability Equality Duty

The Disability Discrimination Act 2005 placed new duties on public authorities to promote equality for disabled people, the Disability Equality Duty.

The legislation requires DEFRA to publish a departmental disability equality scheme outlining how it will meet the duty. In order to reflect the creation of the single equality body the Commission for Equality and Human Rights and also reduce the burden to the business DEFRA has decided to do this as a joint equality scheme (JES) that will fully address both race and disability issues. The JES can be adapted to include other legislation as it comes on line, for instance gender and age.

DEFRA's diversity and equality unit (DEU) wrote to all business units earlier this year seeking information on the impact of the equalities legislation on their areas of work and the actions they would take to address this. The information provided has been used to develop a draft JES, including a departmental action plan covering a three-year period from 2006–09. At the end of the three year period, DEU will have responsibility for reviewing the scheme. As a result of the review the DEU will launch a revised scheme, which will run for a further three years.

In addition, the Secretary of State will report annually on progress for the JES covering core DEFRA and all its Executive Agencies and NDPBs. It will also set out actions for the future.

Other Issues That Promote Equality For Disabled People

DEFRA has a staff network for employees with disabilities that provides advice for policy makers on disability issues. The Department is a member of the Inter-Departmental Disability Group sharing best practice between Government Departments and is also a member of the Employers' Forum for Disability.

DEFA has good relations with its Executive Agencies and NDPBs and is working with them on promoting the service delivery aspects of disability such as access to the countryside and how disabled people are consulted about new rural and environmental initiatives.

EU INSPIRE Directive

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will place in the Library a copy of (a) the Regulatory Impact Assessment and (b) the supplementary explanatory memorandum on the implementation of the EU INSPIRE directive. [66272]

Mr. Morley: Copies of the Regulatory Impact Assessment and the supplementary explanatory memorandum on the implementation of the EU INSPIRE directive were sent to the International Affairs Section of the House of Commons Library in 2005 via a Cabinet Office circulation list for explanatory memoranda. Copies of both documents are available in the Library.

In addition, the Regulatory Impact Assessment will soon be available on the Intra-governmental Group on Geographic Information website <http://www.iggi.gov.uk>.

Farm Numbers

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many farm holdings there were in the UK in each of the last 20 years. [65060]

Jim Knight: The number of agricultural and horticultural holdings in England recorded for the years 1986 to 2005 are shown below. Figures for the other UK countries fall under the jurisdiction of the devolved authorities.

	Number of agricultural and horticultural holdings
1986	154,735
1987	155,785
1988	156,647
1989	157,393
1990	150,652
1991	150,966

	Number of agricultural and horticultural holdings
1992	151,718
1993	153,422
1994	153,426
1995	146,112
1996	145,637
1997	144,777
1998	145,093
1999	147,220
2000	167,855
2001	177,934
2002	187,871
2003	190,687
2004	192,824
2005	195,908

Notes:
(a) Figures prior to 2000 are for main holdings only, from 2000 onwards main and minor holdings are included. A holding is defined as minor if it meets all of the following conditions:
1. the total area is less than 6 hectares
2. the labour requirement is estimated to be less than 100 standard person-days
3. there is no regular full-time farmer or worker
4. the glasshouse area is less than 100 square metres
5. the occupier does not farm another holding

(b) There has been an increase in the number of holdings in later years. This reflects changes in registration requirements with many smaller holdings now appearing on the system.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many farms there are in (a) Coventry and (b) the West Midlands Region. [65942]

Jim Knight [holding answer 27 April 2006]: The number of agricultural and horticultural holdings in Coventry and West Midlands Region are shown as follows.

	Number
Coventry	89
West Midlands Region	25,851

Note:
Not all holdings were actively farming at the time of the survey. 66 economically active agricultural and horticultural Holdings were registered in Coventry, 18,314 were registered in West Midlands Region.

Farm Tenants

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what opportunities exist for farm tenants to diversify as a result of recent changes to landlord/tenant legislation; and what plans the Government has to respond to further changes proposed by the Tenancy Reform Industry Group. [65536]

Jim Knight: A Regulatory Reform Order to amend the Agricultural Holdings Act 1986 and the Agricultural Tenancies Act 1995 was laid before Parliament on 30 March 2006. The order is currently going through the parliamentary scrutiny process, but, if adopted, the amendments should make it easier for tenant farmers to diversify. In particular, the amendments would enable potential successors to a tenancy to carry out diversified activities on a holding with the consent of the landlord, without jeopardising the right to succession to the tenancy. The amendments should also facilitate tenant diversification by encouraging landlords to agree to improvements to the holding and by making it easier to restructure holdings held under a 1986 Act tenancy.

In addition to the proposed, Defra in conjunction with the Tenancy Reform Industry Group, has published a Code of Good Practice for agri-environment and diversification projects within agricultural tenancies. This sets out a framework to help tenants and landlords come to agreement on proposals for diversification or participation in an agri-environment scheme. Where tenants and landlords are unable to agree in accordance with the Code of Good Practice, Defra has provided funding for an adjudication scheme, free at the point of use, to enable the proposal to be considered by an independent adjudicator. The adjudication scheme is administered by the Royal Institute of Chartered Surveyors. The Code of Good Practice is available on the Defra website at http://www.defra.gov.uk/farm/tenancy/trig/trig-cogp.pdf

The Tenancy Reform Industry Group put forward its recommendations to Government in June 2003 and has not since put forward any further proposals for change. The Government responded to the Group's recommendations in December 2003. The Government keeps in close contact with the Tenancy Reform Industry Group on landlord/tenant issues and will continue to do so.

Forestry

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what considerations formed the basis of the decision to extend the Programme for the Endorsement of Forest Certification scheme probation period. [65243]

Mr. Morley: The Government currently accepts certificates from the Programme for the Endorsement of Forest Certification (PEFC) scheme as a means of assuring central departments that their demand for timber from legal and sustainable sources is being met. That acceptance is provisional on recent changes made to the PEFC scheme being implemented by the national schemes endorsed by PEFC.

An initial examination of some of the national schemes showed that the various national decision making processes were not identical. Subsequent information supplied by the schemes indicated that the processes adopted may nevertheless result in compliance with the PEFC Council requirements but the situation was not clear-cut and called for further consideration.

The Central Point of Expertise on Timber (CPET) will soon undertake a review of all the forest certification schemes assessed by CPET in 2004. The Government have decided that this review will, in addition to examining published scheme requirements, consider evidence of failure to adopt scheme system requirements. The Government would prefer to take a decision on PEFC's probationary status in the light of any new evidence that this review may unearth.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs who was involved in the decision to extend the Programme for the Endorsement of Forest Certification scheme probation period. [65248]

Mr. Morley: Ministers took the decision taking account of a range of views, including external stakeholders.

Johnson McNeil

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether Johnson McNeil is employed by her Department or one of its agencies. [R] [65101]

Jim Knight: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 18 April 2006, Official Report, column 24W.

Market Towns Initiative

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will list the market towns which have participated in the market towns initiative; between which dates each participated; and which towns have applied for funding but have been unsuccessful. [65951]

Jim Knight [holding answer 26 April 2006]: The national Market Towns Initiative (MTI) was launched in FY 2000–01 and provided £32 million to Regional Development Agencies (RDAs), and £5 million to the Countryside Agency (CA) to support community-led market town regeneration in the regions. The initiative was therefore not established as a national funding programme, but as a means of enabling regional partnerships to target towns in their region according to regionally agreed selection criteria. The aim was to provide support to 100 towns but, by the time the national initiative ended in FY 2003–04, over 230 towns had benefited.

The final list of towns that were chosen to participate in the national MTI is available on the Countryside Agency website http://www.countryside.gov.uk/Images/list_tcm2-15794.pdf

Participation dates and details of towns that were unsuccessful is held in archive files in the regions and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Following the end of the national MTI, responsibility for market towns was devolved to the regional and local level, with the Regional Development Agencies (RDAs) primarily providing support for market towns through their mainstream activities.

Meat Hygiene Service

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the (a) possible effects on the terms and conditions of and (b) cost impacts on veterinary surgeons of each of the options for proposed changes to veterinary supervision arrangements within the Meat Hygiene Service. [66081]

Caroline Flint: I have been asked to reply.

The options for proposed changes to veterinary supervision arrangements within the meat hygiene service are set out in the 12-week public consultation launched on 11 April 2006.

Effects on terms and conditions of veterinary surgeons and costs of the preferred options for change are being explored as part of the consultation process. A regulatory impact assessment will be completed in light of comments received during the consultation and from more detailed engagement with those stakeholders that are directly affected by the proposed changes, such as veterinary contractors.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she commission an independent assessment of the likely impact of each of the options for proposed changes to veterinary supervision arrangements within the Meat Hygiene Service. [66082]

Caroline Flint: I have been asked to reply.

No. The options for proposed changes to veterinary supervision arrangements within the meat hygiene service (MHS) are set out in the 12-week public consultation launched on 11 April 2006.

Development of the proposals has been informed by Professor Wall's independent inquiry into the failure of the MHS in 2004 to ensure all relevant at risk 24 to 30 month bovines had been tested for bovine spongiform encephalopathy (BSE) and recommendations to minimise the risk of failure recurring (with three recommendations in particular directed towards improving the veterinary structure). The proposals have also been informed by two subsequent reports commissioned by the Food Standards Agency and the MHS from DNV Consulting and the independent advisory group's requirements relating to the over 30 month rule change.

The various reports are publicly available and comments are invited on the proposed changes as part of the consultation process. A regulatory impact assessment will be completed in light of comments received during the consultation and from more detailed engagement with those stakeholders that are directly affected by the proposed changes, such as veterinary contractors.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the TUPE implications are of each of the options for proposed changes for veterinary supervision arrangements within the Meat Hygiene Service. [66083]

Caroline Flint: I have been asked to reply.

The options for proposed changes to veterinary supervision arrangements within the meat hygiene service (MHS) are set out in the 12-week public consultation launched on 11 April 2006.

These acknowledge that there are possible TUPE employment rights issues arising from the preferred option (and from other options considered by the MHS in its review), but these are similar to those currently being managed through the existing Official Veterinarian contract arrangements, and with the use of other contract or Agency staff more generally. These issues will be explored further during the consultation process.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make it her policy when placing material in the Library in response to a parliamentary question to supply a copy of the material to the hon. Member who tabled the question; and if she will make a statement. [64216]

Jim Knight: Government best practice is that departments should supply a copy of material placed in the Library in response to a Parliamentary question to the hon. Member who tabled it.

Single Farm Payments

Adam Afriyie: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many farmers (a) in England and (b) in Windsor constituency will receive late payments for 2005 from the Rural Payments Agency. [64799]

Jim Knight [holding answer 24 April 2006]: The payment window for all 2005 single payment scheme claims runs from 1 December 2005to 30 June 2006. Claims from farmers in the Windsor constituency cannot be separately identified.

The Rural Payments Agency aims to make a full or partial payment to all eligible customers by the end of this payment window. As in previous years, with predecessor schemes, there will be a small number of difficult cases which cannot be resolved and paid within this time frame.

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will take steps to issue written guarantees that payments will be forthcoming to farmers awaiting single farm payments and facing possession proceedings. [65821]

Jim Knight [holding answer 25 April 2006]: Applicants under the 2005 Single Payment Scheme (SPS) have already been sent a statement giving the gross value of their SPS entitlements. The acting Chief Executive of the RPA will also write shortly to applicants confirming the intention to make full or substantial partial payments in respect of all eligible applications by the end of June.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many single farm payments in (a) Stroud constituency and (b) Gloucestershire have (i) been cancelled, (ii) yet to be cancelled and (iii) been invalidated. [65823]

Jim Knight [holding answer 25 April 2006]: The Single Payment Scheme is not operated by region therefore it is not possible to answer questions relating to specific geographical areas on payments made, cancelled, waiting to be cancelled or invalidated.

Adam Afriyie: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she expects the problems with the computerised mapping system for single farm payments to be fully resolved. [64800]

Jim Knight [holding answer 24 April 2006]: The process of digitising land and amending existing digitised records is an ongoing process. Responsibility for this process rests with the Rural Payments Agency (RPA). Around 98 per cent. of mapping requests required to support 2005 Single Payment Scheme (SPS) claims are now complete. RPA expects further mapping work to be received in to support 2006 SPS claims, together with applications for Environmental Stewardship.

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) when David Diamond, a beef farmer of Portford Lane, South Brent, holding number 10/296/0205, will receive his Single Payment Scheme payment; [65012]

(2) if she will take steps to arrange an emergency payment to Mr. David Diamond, a beef farmer of Portford Lane, South Brent, following delay in payment under the Single Farm Payment Scheme payment; and if she will make a statement. [65022]

Jim Knight [holding answer 24 April 2006]: For all Single Payment Scheme applicants, the payment window runs from 1 December 2005 to 30 June 2006. The Rural Payments Agency (RPA) intends to make a full or partial payment to all eligible customers by the end of this window.

Mr. David Diamond's claim is currently being processed, and will be paid in due course. However, if Mr. Diamond is suffering financial hardship he or his representatives can approach the Rural Stress Information Network, with whom RPA is liaising over genuine hardship cases.

Tallow

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much tallow was burned as a fuel in the UK in each of the last five years; and what assessment she has made of the potential effect on the animal by-product regulation on tallow burning. [65551]

Mr. Morley: Information on the quantity of tallow burned as waste by incineration and co-incineration is not available. The EU Animal By-products Regulation 1774/2002(EC) which came into effect in 2003 requires tallow when burnt to be disposed of as waste by incineration or co-incineration in accordance with the Waste Incineration Directive 2000/76/EC.

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what assessment she has made of the potential effect of a ban on tallow burning on fossil fuel emissions targets; [65552]

(2) what assessment she has made of the potential of a ban on the sale of tallow on the cost-effectiveness of the disposal of offal in rendering plants. [65553]

Mr. Morley: There is no ban on the sale or burning of tallow, so no assessments of this kind have been made.

Installations may burn tallow provided they comply with regulatory requirements. If, as is usually the case, the tallow is waste within the definition given in the EU Waste Framework Directive, the regulatory requirements include one for a permit issued under the Pollution Prevention and Control Regulations 2000 incorporating the requirements of the EU Waste Incineration Directive.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the enforcement of the ban on burning tallow. [66627]

Mr. Morley: Installations may burn tallow provided they comply with regulatory requirements. If, as is usually the case, the tallow is waste within the definition given in the EU Waste Framework Directive, the regulatory requirements include one for a permit issued under the Pollution Prevention and Control Regulations 2000 incorporating the requirements of the EU Waste Incineration Directive.

The enforcement of these regulations is a matter for the Environment Agency and the local authorities.

Water Shortages

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether the Government has implemented the Labour Party's 1996 proposals on water policy. [66241]

Mr. Morley: A number of actions fell to the Government following the Water Summit of May 1997 which was convened to carry forward manifesto commitments. The legislative changes necessary to implement those actions have been made.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the penalties are for a domestic householder breaking a hosepipe ban. [66244]

Mr. Morley: Breach of a hosepipe ban is an offence under section 76 of the Water Industry Act 1991. The maximum penalty on conviction in a magistrates court is a fine not exceeding level 3 on the standard scale.

DEFENCE

Armed Forces Bases (Charges)

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what charges are levied at British bases in Germany for (a) accommodation, (b) heating and (c) lighting on (i) British troops, (ii) civil servants and (iii) schoolteachers; and if he will make a statement. [66664]

Mr. Touhig: Accommodation charges for service personnel are recommended annually by the independent Armed Forces Pay Review Body (AFPRB), and a copy of their 2006 report has been placed in the Library of the House. Where levied, charges vary depending on the type and grade of accommodation occupied and, for service families accommodation (SFA) whether it is furnished, part furnished or unfurnished. Single living accommodation (SLA) charges include a rental element plus heating and lighting; whereas SFA charges include a rental element, but occupants are responsible for heating and lighting payments. In Germany, SFA fuel charges are protected by MOD's fuel and light scheme which aims to ensure that occupants of SFA are no better or worse off financially than they could reasonably expect in the UK.

UK civil servants, including schoolteachers, on normal tours of duty in Germany, are provided with accommodation without charge as part of their overseas terms and conditions of service. Heating and lighting are also provided without charge up to a specified annual consumption limit. Any usage over and above this limit is charged for at actual rates.

The exception to this is UK civil servants, including schoolteachers, specially recruited for overseas service on or after 1 September 2001. The 2001 review of overseas terms and conditions of service withdrew the provision of free accommodation and utilities for these staff five years after taking up their appointment. The first staff affected by this rule will arise on or after 1 September 2006. The charges for accommodation and utilities will be broadly the same as those that are applied to service personnel, and details of these charges are to be published shortly.

Defence Coalition Support Account

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what representations his Department has received from the US regarding the establishment of a Defence Coalition Support Account. [54442]

John Reid: In its 2006 Quadrennial Defence Review the US Department of Defence stated that it would seek to establish a Defence Coalition Support Account. Although there were discussions with MOD officials on the QDR there were no specific representations on a Defence Coalition Support Account.

Drug Testing

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many people in each of the armed forces have tested positive for controlled substances in each of the past five years, broken down by rank; [66997]

(2) how many people in each of the armed forces have gone on the Early Intervention Programme (Drugs) in each year since it began; and how many have subsequently been retained in the armed forces, broken down by rank; [66998]

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many people in each of the armed forces have failed a drugs test following successful completion of the Early Intervention Programme (Drugs), broken down by rank. [66999]

Mr. Touhig [holding answer 2 May 2006]: The information required is contained in the following tables.

Royal Navy

Compulsory drug testing	2001	2002	2003	2004	2005
Officers/cadets positive	0	1	1	0	1

One RAF airwoman attended the EIP(D) in 2004. The individual has been retained.

Equal Pay

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps are undertaken within his Department to ensure that women are obtaining equal pay to men doing work of equal value. [65846]

Mr. Touhig: In line with all Departments and agencies, the Ministry of Defence conducted an equal pay audit in 2003. We were satisfied that there was no direct discrimination within our civilian pay systems. We do however have very long pay scales which can distort average salaries. We have monitored the situation annually throughout the MOD's four-year pay deal from 2002 to 2005 and we intend to shorten the pay scales as part of this year's pay deal.

Pay rates for service personnel are recommended by the independent Armed Forces Pay Review Body (AFPRB). In making their recommendations, the AFPRB is kept informed of the impact of current employment legislation on service personnel through the evidence it receives.

Hospitals (Military Personnel)

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many hospital wards in the UK are reserved for military personnel only. [67000]

Mr. Touhig: There are no hospital wards in the UK that are reserved for military personnel only.

Military Medals

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what military medals have been issued by the Government since 8 May 1945 for which eligibility may still be claimed; and (a) on what date and (b) for what they were issued. [67502]

Mr. Touhig: There have been 51 campaign related military medals issued by the British Government since 8 May 1945 that can still be claimed. A detailed list is shown in the following tables.

Accumulated Campaign Service Medal	14 August 1969	Ongoing

War Pensions

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many war pensions have been successfully claimed in each of the last five years; and how many of these were awarded for (a) physical injury and (b) mental health conditions. [55609]

Mr. Touhig [holding answer 2 March 2006]: It is not possible to provide the data broken down by physical injury and mental health conditions as there are too many individual cases, some with multiple conditions, to practically assign them to the above categories.

However, we can provide the number of cases where an ongoing war pension was awarded in each of the past five years for the 12 month period 1 October to the following 30 September for each of the last five years.

	New pensions awarded
2000–01	2,585
2001–02	2,440
2002–03	1,965
2003–04	1,800
2004–05	1,670

HOUSE OF COMMONS COMMISSION

Children's Services

Mr. Kemp: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission (1) what (a) nursery and crèche places and (b) other facilities are provided for the children of employees of the House of Commons; [67277]

(2) what recent representations the Commission has received on the provision of nursery and crèche places on the House of Commons estate. [67295]

Nick Harvey: The House provides child care vouchers in respect of children of staff of the House and Members' staff up to the age of 12. In addition a subsidised summer play scheme has run for several years where staff of the House and Members' staff can reserve places for their children during the school holiday period. The Commission decided in 2003 that a voucher scheme was preferable to an on-site nursery or crèche facilities because of its greater flexibility and the fact that most parents prefer young children to be cared for at or near home.

The Commission has had no recent representations other than a question asked on 24 January 2006, Official Report, columns 1303–04, by the hon. Member for Cardiff, North (Julie Morgan).

Parking Spaces

Jim Dowd: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission how many parking spaces on the House of Commons estate are reserved for specific individuals; which individuals are concerned; where the spaces are; and why each such space is provided. [67031]

Nick Harvey: There are 15 parking spaces reserved for specific individuals on the Parliamentary Estate.

In Speaker's Court the following seven individuals each have a reserved space allocated to them to enable them to fulfil their duties: the Prime Minister, the Deputy Prime Minister, the Speaker of the House, the Leader of the House, the Leader of the Opposition, the Leader of the Liberal Democrats, and the Government Chief Whip.

There are a further eight spaces reserved for residents of the estate; Mr. Speaker has three such spaces reserved in Speaker's Court, the Clerk of the House, the Serjeant at Arms and the Speaker's Secretary each have a reserved space allocated to them by Richmond Terrace and the Head Office Keeper and Senior Office Keeper each have a reserved space allocated to them within Commissioners Yard, Norman Shaw buildings.

TRANSPORT

A1079

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what average number of vehicles used the A1079 road each day in the latest period for which figures are available; how many vehicles the A1079 was originally designed to carry; and if he will make a statement. [66530]

Dr. Ladyman: The latest available figures relate to 2004, when the estimated average number of vehicles using the A1079 road each day was 15,300. The A1079 is managed by the local highways authority and the Department does not hold information about the number of vehicles it was designed to carry.

A6

Andrew Gwynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to make a decision on the A6 Bypass South East Manchester multi-modal study road scheme in Stockport. [67248]

Dr. Ladyman: We are currently considering the scheme appraisal for the SEMMMS New Relief Road. We are also considering advice from the North West region on the priority it attaches to the conventional funding element of this and other schemes in the North West. We plan to make an announcement in due course.

Andrew Gwynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the potential for displacement of traffic onto the M60 Motorway between junction 25 and the M60/A57 interchange as a result of the proposed A6 Bypass road scheme. [67252]

Dr. Ladyman: An outline assessment has been undertaken into the potential impacts of the A6 Hazel Grove Bypass and other South East Manchester multi modal study road schemes on the M60 and the M60/M67/A57 Denton interchange. The Greater Manchester local authorities are in the process of updating their transport model which will allow a more detailed appraisal of these and other impacts to be assessed.

Airport Security

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps his Department is taking to ensure that those involved with terrorist groups do not obtain security clearance enabling them to work at airports. [67672]

Derek Twigg: The Department has in place a regulation that requires that persons who wish to be employed to undertake security duties at UK airports must obtain security clearance, to counter-terrorist check (CTC) level. CTC clearance covers a check of police and Security Service records, a check of the person's identity, and employment/education references for the past five years. Non-security staff wishing to be employed airside at a UK airport are required to undergo all of these checks except that of Security Service records.

Car Tax Forms

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport under what circumstances a sub-post office is allowed to hold the V14 reclaim of car tax form. [67762]

Dr. Ladyman: In order to hold V14 forms, Post Office branches must also be authorised to sell motor vehicle licences (MVLs) to the customers on behalf of DVLA.

Over 4500 Post Office branches provide the MVL services and each of these is authorised to hold the V14 form.

Driving Standards Agency

Mr. Crausby: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many complaints the Driving Standards Agency has received from participants in the motorcycle theory tests. [66966]

Dr. Ladyman: In 2005–06 the Driving Standards Agency (DSA) recorded 2,310 complaints relating to the theory test. The recorded data cannot be broken down by driving licence category.

Fire Precautions (Sub-surface Railway Stations) Regulations

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what recent discussions his Department has had with the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister regarding the Fire Precautions (Sub-surface Railway Stations) Regulations 1989. [66352]

Derek Twigg: Officials in the Department have been kept fully informed of the progress being made by the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister to reform general fire safety legislation.

Flights (Domestic/International)

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many (a) domestic and (b) international flights originated from the UK in each of the last five years. [67037]

Derek Twigg: Information on domestic and international flights originating from the UK for the last five years is published in Table 2.2a of the Department's annual publication, Transport Statistics Great Britain 2005 edition, which is also available on the Department for Transport website.

Government Car Service

Stephen Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Lewes (Norman Baker) of 13 March 2006, Official

Report, column 1886W, on the Government Car Service, what make and model of car has been made available to each Government Minister; how many hours a day a chauffeur is available to them; what the monthly cost is of this provision; and how much is accounted for by (a) running costs of the vehicle, (b) costs of the chauffeur and (c) all other costs. [63981]

Dr. Ladyman [pursuant to the reply, 19 April 2006, Official Report, c. 701–2W]: The total contracted cost of providing ministerial transport in 2005–06 was £5,783,200. All other figures given in my reply are correct.

Highways Construction Works

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of (a) the prevailing inflation rate for highways construction works and (b) the causes of the level of such inflation. [66269]

Dr. Ladyman: The Highways Agency use the ROADCON and ROCOS indices published by the DTI for assessing the impact of historic inflation on highway works. As these indices are published in arrears, the Highways Agency has commissioned further work to provide an assessment of current inflation and a forward look.

Inflation in highway construction is driven both by demand and the costs of basic resources for carrying out the works.

Intelligent Speed Adaptation

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what research his Department has funded on intelligent speed adaptation technology on roads. [66270]

Dr. Ladyman: A research project into external vehicle speed control (the technology now more commonly known as intelligent speed adaptation or ISA) was carried out on behalf of the Department for Transport, local government and the regions between 1997 and 2000. The results are available on the Department for Transport website and copies of the executive summary have been placed in the Library.

A further project into the longer term effects of intelligent seed adaptation on driver behaviour began in 2001 and is expected to end in December 2006. The reports will be available when the project has been completed.

An additional project entitled "Intelligent Speed Adaptation Research (National and International)" supports the main ISA project and allows for the provision of expert technical advice on ISA, on an ad hoc basis, as the need arises.

The Department also took part in "SpeedAlert"—a European project which looked at issues surrounding the implementation of speed advice systems. The consortium's final report has been completed and copies placed in the Library.

Level Crossings

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what action he is taking (a) to remove panel gapping on railway level crossings and (b) to improve level crossing safety generally; and if he will make a statement. [65704]

Derek Twigg [holding answer 26 April 2006]: Panel gapping removal at railway crossings is an operational matter for Network Rail.

Network Rail and the Office of Rail Regulation (ORR), the safety regulator for the railway, are both actively engaged in work to make level crossings safer and reduce risk. The ORR has a policy for reducing the risks which focuses on:

Ensuring that the railway industry is itself doing everything that is reasonably practical to ensure that all those who use level crossings are not exposed to unacceptable risks to their health and safety.

Working with Government Departments, other agencies and stakeholders to maintain and where possible improve the standards of safety for level crossing users.

Seeking the closure or upgrade of level crossings where this is reasonably practicable and not supporting the construction of new level crossings other than in exceptional circumstances.

Martin Centre for Architectural and Urban Studies

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what funding his Department and its agencies have provided to the Cambridge University Martin Centre for Architectural and Urban Studies on research into the Sustainability of Land Use and Transport in Outer Neighbourhoods; and what submissions it has received so far from the research body. [66651]

Dr. Ladyman: The Department has no record of having provided any funding to this organisation, or of having received any submissions from it.

Media Monitoring and Training

Stephen Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much agencies of his Department spent on (a) media monitoring, (b) media training and (c) marketing in each year since 1997; and how much his Department spent on (i) marketing in each year since 2002–03 and (ii) (A) media monitoring and (B) media training in 2005–06. [63662]

Derek Twigg: The requested figures are set out as follows. However, records of costs from 1997–98 until 2001–02 are not readily available due to departmental and Agency re-organisations. Figures for 2005–06 are provisional outturn figures subject to audit.

DfT Agencies

	2002–03	2003–04	2004–05	2005–06
Media monitoring	151	148	200	174
Media training	31	53	97	16
Marketing	11,096	16,807	14,496	13,740

DfT Central

			£000 (rounded)
	2002–03	2003–04	2004–05	2005–06
Media monitoring	210	206	205	306
Media training	2	2	9	0
Marketing	17,600	16,400	16,200	20,400

Marketing costs include campaign advertising and wider publicity.

In each year reported, over 80 per cent. of DfT central's expenditure marketing expenditure was on the 'THINK! road safety' campaign.

Motorway Signage

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport pursuant to his answer of 1 March 2006, Official Report, column 730W, on motorway signage, what steps his Department is taking to ensure that information provided on variable message signs is current and accurate after functions are transferred to regional control centres. [66980]

Dr. Ladyman: The Highways Agency is responsible for about 2200 Variable Message Signs (VMS) on England's motorway and trunk road network.

About 350 'information' VMS are located at key decision points (i.e. before major junctions). They are used to inform drivers about major incidents and advise diversion routes. These VMS are operated by the National Traffic Control Centre (NTCC) in Birmingham. The NTCC gathers information on conditions on the network from its control centre in Birmingham. This is a 24/7/365 operation.

About 1850 'safety' VMS are located mostly on motorways to manage traffic locally in the event of incidents and emergencies, and to provide warnings of slow moving or stationary traffic in order to protect queuing traffic. Operation of these signs is currently transferring from the police to the Highways Agency's Regional Control Centres (RCCs).

There are seven RCCs which monitor conditions on the motorway and trunk road network within their regions of England and allocate resources such as Traffic Officers to manage incidents. They set messages on VMS for safety reasons, to inform drivers and to assist with incident management. Incidents (and VMS settings) are monitored from control rooms and messages displayed on VMS are reviewed and removed as necessary. Currently only one RCC, the West Midlands RCC, is working at full capacity and it has an established system for monitoring consistency and timeliness of sign setting to support the Agency's goal of demonstrably improving the accuracy of VMS. The system involves checking timeliness of response both when incidents are identified and when cleared. Results are used to identify and implement improvements.

Noise Limits (Airports)

John Penrose: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate he has made of the maximum (a) safe and (b) desirable limits on peak aircraft noise (Lmax dBA) for airports; and what the existing equivalent continuous noise level (Leq) limits are. [66968]

Derek Twigg: The Department for Transport has not made any general estimate of safe or desirable limits on peak aircraft noise for all airports.

The departure noise limits at Heathrow, Gatwick and Stansted, set by the Secretary of State, are 94 dBA Lmax between 0700 and 2300; 89 dBA between 2300 and 2330, and 0600 and 0700; and 87 dBA in the night quota period, 2330–0600. The noise limits relate to a fixed reference distance 6.5 km from start-of-roll. The full reasons for applying these limits are set out in the document 'Noise limits for aircraft departing from Heathrow, Gatwick and Stansted airports: decision of December 2000' which is available in the House Library.

At other airports noise management is the responsibility of the airport operator. All civil aircraft operating in the UK must comply with relevant international noise certification requirements.

The Department for Transport has not set limits on equivalent continuous noise level (Leq). However, based on research, the Government use various levels of Leq as indicators of disturbance or of potential annoyance, or as criteria for mitigation measures, including advice for land use planning purposes. For example, the Government use 57 dBA Leq as the level of daytime noise marking the approximate onset of significant community annoyance.

Daytime noise contour criteria for mitigation schemes were set out in the 'Future of Air Transport' White Paper. In particular, we expect operators of larger airports (those with over 50,000 air transport movements per year) to offer relocation assistance to households subject to daytime noise of more than 69 dBA Leq and to offer acoustic insulation to non-domestic noise-sensitive buildings, such as schools and hospitals, exposed to daytime noise levels of 63 dBA Leq or more.

John Penrose: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether (a) measurements of and (b) limits on peak aircraft noise (Lmax dBA) are in place for airports other than Heathrow, Gatwick and Stansted. [66969]

Derek Twigg: The Department for Transport does not collect comprehensive information about noise control measures at airports other than Heathrow, Gatwick and Stansted. However, existing practice at a number of larger airports is set out as follows:

Manchester airport sets departure noise limits of 92 dBA Lmax in the day and 85 dBA Lmax at night (2300–0659).

Birmingham international airport sets departure noise limits of 92 dBA Lmax in the day and 87 dBA Lmax at night (2330–0600).

London Luton airport sets departure noise limits of 94 dBA in the day and 87 dBA at night (2330–0600 Monday to Saturday, 2330- 0700 Sunday).

These noise limits apply at the noise monitors and departing aircraft are monitored against the relevant limit. Airports also have noise and track-keeping systems, which are required to assess breaches of departure noise limits, in place.

John Penrose: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether he plans (a) to introduce new and (b) to change existing (i) measurements of and (ii) limits on peak aircraft noise (Lmax DBA) for airports. [67042]

Derek Twigg: The Government sets departure noise limits at Heathrow, Gatwick and Stansted airports which are designated for the purposes of section 78 of the Civil Aviation Act 1982. We will consider exercising similar powers at other airports if there is evidence that a major noise problem is not being dealt with adequately through local controls; otherwise, such limits are the responsibility of the airport operator.

The present noise limits at Heathrow, Gatwick and Stansted have applied since early 2001 and have been subject to further review. The results were published in the Civil Aviation Authority's Environmental Research and Consultancy Department (ERCD) Report 0207, "Departure Noise Limits and Monitoring Arrangements at Heathrow, Gatwick and Stansted Airports", in April 2003. The main findings were summarised in our April 2003 consultation paper on night flying restrictions, together with a broad indication of how we would take them into account. This has been taken forward in the Stage One and Stage Two consultation papers on night flying restrictions published in July 2004 and June 2005 respectively.

In the Stage Two consultation, we proposed possible changes to the departure noise limit applying in the night shoulder periods (11 pm to 11.30 pm and 6 am to 7 am). We also proposed that two additional noise monitors should be sited at Heathrow. We will announce our conclusions in due course. Copies of all the consultation papers and of ERCD 0207 were placed in the House Library.

Crossrail

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether a cost analysis has been carried out for the use of the Old Oak Common Depot and the Ilford Depot as part of the Crossrail project. [67080]

Derek Twigg: Such cost analyses form part of the further study being undertaken regarding the depot strategy for Crossrail. The results will be made available before petitioners objecting to the proposed depot at Romford are due to be heard by the Select Committee.

Oyster Cards

Mr. Khan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to give train operating companies who are not at the end of a franchise incentives to incorporate pre-pay Oyster cards. [64469]

Derek Twigg: The South Western franchise will require the successful bidder to accept Oyster, including pre-pay, in Zones 1–6 and to retail and enable an ITSO (Integrated Transport Smartcard Organisation) based smartcard throughout the franchise. We have made it clear that we will adopt this approach with each of the London train operating companies upon franchise renewal. This decision on technology has given a firm foundation from which train operators and suppliers can move forward.

We do not believe that it should be necessary to wait for a full round of franchise renewals before Oyster pre-pay is generally accepted by Train Operator Companies in London. We believe that this clear policy will allow train operators to adopt Oyster pre-pay sooner rather than later and have asked the industry for their further proposals.

Press Offices

Stephen Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much has been spent by (a) his Department and (b) its agencies on press offices in each year since 1997. [63982]

Derek Twigg: Records of costs from 1997–98 until 2001–02 are not readily available due to departmental and Agency re-organisations and the information could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Figures for 2005–06 are provisional outturn figures subject to audit.

(a) The cost of DfT Central's press office (including pay and non-pay costs) for the years 2002–03 to 2005–06 is in the following table.

£ million

	2002–03	2003–04	2004–05	2005–06
DfT(C) Pay	0.85	0.70	0.70	0.77
DfT(C) Non-pay	0.81	0.80	0.83	0.76

(b) Press office activities in most agencies are not carried out by staff or units solely dedicated to this purpose. Full records of costs are therefore not readily available for press office functions alone. However, agency press office function pay costs have been estimated for the years 2002–03 to 2005–06 in the following table.

DfT agencies (£ millions)

2002–03	0.49
2003–04	0.54
2004–05	0.62
2005–06	0.70

Road Construction

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he will make announcements on (a) the regional funding allocations and (b) new major schemes. [68100]

Dr. Ladyman: The Government are now considering the advice provided by the regions and will set out in due course how it will be utilised and developed upon in the comprehensive Spending Review. Decisions on new major schemes will be made as soon as possible within the context of the Government's overall response.

Road Pricing

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the costs have been of testing pay-as-you-go road pricing schemes. [67090]

Dr. Ladyman: The Department's DIRECTS (Demonstration of Interoperable Road-user End-to-end Charging and Telematics System) Project, which has just completed its 1-year trial in Leeds, has a current project value of £22.9 million. Within the project, three out of seven different On-Board Unit designs contained example pay-as-you-go solutions. The costs of this component of testing cannot be separated out from the total.

Seatbelts

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what consultations his Department undertook between (a) 1976 and 1979 and (b) 1980 and 1986 on seatbelt wearing; if he will place in the Library the results of such consultations; and if he will make a statement. [66866]

Dr. Ladyman: Information is not readily available on consultations during these periods.

Severn River Crossings plc.

Jessica Morden: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what progress has been made in discussions with Severn River Crossings plc. on allowing credit card payments for Severn crossing tolls. [66887]

Dr. Ladyman: Discussions are continuing with Severn River Crossings plc. and financial institutions about the legislative, technical, operational and financial issues involved.

Utility Companies

Alison Seabeck: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what research his Department has undertaken into the scope for use of trenchless technology to reduce delays caused by utilities digging up roads. [65827]

Dr. Ladyman: The Department undertook some preliminary research into the use of trenchless technology in 2002, but no particular conclusions were reached and work has been halted.

Alison Seabeck: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what research his Department has undertaken to identify best practice among utility companies in the use of trenchless technology. [65828]

Dr. Ladyman: The Department for Transport did some preliminary work in 2002 to identify best practice on the use of trenchless technology, but no further work has been done.

Vandalism (Railways)

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many incidents of vandalism there have been in each year since 1997 on (a) trains, (b) stations, (c) railway tracks and (d) railway depots, broken down by police authority area. [62630]

Derek Twigg: This information requested has been placed in the Libraries of the House.

Wellingborough-London

Mr. Bone: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will bring forward plans to increase capacity on the Wellingborough to London railway line. [67033]

Derek Twigg: The Midland Main Line & East Midlands Route Utilisation Strategy (RUS) was published March 2004. Taking into account the proposed housing growth in the area, the Strategy's recommendations include running additional peak trains between London St. Pancras to Kettering as a better way of serving the North Northamptonshire to London market. The Department is developing the specification for the East Midlands franchise which will take account of the RUS's recommendations. A public consultation on the specification will be held this summer.

MINISTER FOR WOMEN

Traditionally Male Careers

Jim Sheridan: To ask the Minister for Women and Equality what discussions she has had with business organisations on encouraging school girls to consider careers in sectors which have until recently been seen as traditionally male. [68059]

Meg Munn: I have regular meetings with business organisations and use these opportunities to encourage them to work with their members to ensure that they do what they can to encourage girls to consider careers in non-traditional sectors.

The recent Women and Work Commission report, "Shaping a Fairer Future", identified the necessity of ensuring that girls and boys are not influenced by stereotypical ideas about occupations when considering their subject and career options. They recommend action to ensure that teacher training emphasises the need to challenge gender stereotypes, guidance to pre-school teachers about how to avoid gender stereotypes, and better careers guidance and work experience programmes which would enable girls to get a true picture of the rewards and challenges associated with different careers.

The Commission will reconvene in early 2007 to consider the Government's response to their report.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Academies

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much her Department has spent to date to promote academies; and how many people are employed (a) in her Department and (b) as consultants for that purpose. [64687]

Jacqui Smith: The information requested in this question relating to costs of promotion is not held in a form that could be retrieved except at disproportionate cost—the term 'promotion' could be interpreted to mean any activity in relation to the Academies programme and the scope of the question covers the six years the programme has been operating.

Within the Academies Group in the DfES there are as at today's date 81 staff and 19 consultants, these staff carry out a range of functions including policy, delivery, communications and educational support.

Bookstart

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what is the cost of Bookstart since the programme began; and how many books have been purchased so far under the scheme; [66742]

(2) how many books have been (a) delivered to and (b) collected by parents under the Bookstart scheme; and how many are awaiting collection. [66741]

Maria Eagle [holding answer 27 April 2006]: The cost of Bookstart since the programme began in 1992 is £20.72 million, of which £12.91 million is Government funding.

Since 1999, the Bookstart programme has purchased 13.1 million books and given more than 11.6 million books to parents. The difference in these two figures represents a rolling level of stock across the UK. We cannot further break down these figures. Pre-1999 figures are not available.

Each local authority conducts an end of year stocktake to estimate how much stock remains to be carried over to the next year. At the end of 2005–06, the estimated carry over figure was 130,000 or approximately 600 books per scheme.

British Edutrust Foundation

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what (a) meetings and (b) correspondence Ministers have had with the British Edutrust Foundation. [65277]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 24 April 2006]: Ministers have had no meetings or correspondence with the British Edutrust Foundation. Lord Adonis has met with Lord Bhatia, who is the recently appointed chair of the foundation, on a number of occasions as listed as follows:

Friday 28 October 2005 at an academies event in Bradford with leaders of Bradford Council.

Friday 11 November at Windsor Castle where Lord Adonis gave the key note speech at the British Muslim conference.

Three meetings at the Department on Wednesday 23 November 2005, Thursday 15 December 2005 and Tuesday 24 January 2006

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills when the decision was taken that Rhodesway school in Bradford would become an academy sponsored by the British Edutrust Foundation. [65278]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 24 April 2006]: Ministerial clearance was given on 16 March for the release of funding for the feasibility phase to enable the British Edutrust Foundation to develop plans to establish a new academy to meet the local learning needs in Rhodesway in Bradford.

Child Protection

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills on what date she replied to the letter from Norfolk county council of 12 December 2005 regarding Paul Reeve. [47277]

Ruth Kelly: My Department received correspondence from Norfolk county council dated 21 December 2005 and acknowledged receipt, as requested, on 22 December 2005. My officials responded in full to Norfolk county council on 7 February 2006.

Departmental Advertising Costs

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much (a) her Department and (b) its agencies spent on advertising for job vacancies in each of the last five years. [65967]

Maria Eagle [holding answer 25 April 2006]: The information requested is not collected centrally in the format requested and can only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

When the business needs of the Department require an external recruitment campaign each case is considered separately. External recruitment agencies, drawn from the Cabinet Office Central Framework Agreement, support delivery of all campaigns based on a set of agreed criteria.

Education Maintenance Allowance

Stephen Hesford: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many children in Wirral, West have received the education maintenance allowance. [62353]

Maria Eagle: This is a matter for the Learning and Skills Council, who operate Education Maintenance Allowances for the DfES and hold the information about take-up of the scheme. Mark Haysom, the council's chief executive has written to the hon. Gentleman with the information requested and a copy of his reply will be placed in the Library.

Letter from Mark Haysom, dated 25 April 2006:

I am writing in response to your parliamentary question that asked "how many children in Wirral West have received Education Maintenance Allowance?"

Information on the number of young people who have applied, enrolled and received EMA is available at local education authority (LEA) level, but not at constituency level. By the end of February 2006, 3,294 young people in the Wirral LEA area had received one or more EMA payments in the academic year 2005/06.

I hope this information is helpful and addresses your question.

First Level 3

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many 19 to 25 year olds are studying for a first level 3 in (a) each region and (b) England. [66758]

Bill Rammell [holding answer 27 April 2006]: The following table shows the number of 19–25 year olds who were studying for a full NVQ level 3 or equivalent qualification[1] in Further Education and work based learning in the academic year 2004/05, by region.

[1] Does not include Access to HE qualifications or wholly privately funded study aims.

We estimate that of the 147 thousand 19–25 year olds in England who were studying for a full level 3 in 2004/05, 70,000 were studying for a first full level 3 qualification. We do not have estimates for 'firstness' at a regional level.

Further/Higher Education

Mr. Jeremy Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what percentage of secondary school pupils went on to further or higher education in (a) Taunton constituency and (b) England in each year since 1997. [64347]

Bill Rammell: Figures on participation in further education by young people are not available for parliamentary constituencies, but are available for local authorities—including Somerset, 2004 is the latest available year. The figures are shown in the following table.

Percentage of 16 year olds in full-time education

	Somerset	England
1997	72	70
1998	73	70
1999	73	72
2000	73	71
2001	72	71
2002	75	72
2003	76	72
2004	75	73

The latest available figures on participation in higher education by constituency were published by the Higher Education Funding Council for England in January 2005 in "Young Participation in England", which is available from their website at: http://www.hefce.ac.uk/pubs/hefce/2005/05_03/ This report shows participation rates for young people who enter higher education aged 18 or 19, disaggregated by constituency, for the years 1997 to 2000. The figures for Taunton, and the comparable figure for England, are shown in the following table. HEFCE have not produced participation figures beyond 2000.

Young participation rate (YPR (A)) in higher education

	1997	1998	1999	2000
Year cohort aged 18 in Taunton	1,230	1,290	1,270	1,190

The Department uses the Higher Education Initial Participation Rate (HEIPR) to assess progress on increasing first-time participation of English students aged 18–30 in higher education towards 50 per cent.: the latest provisional figure for 2004/05 is 42 per cent. The HEIPR is not calculated at constituency level.

Headteachers (Age)

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the average age is of a head teacher in England. [66740]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 27 April 2006]: Provisional estimates show that in March 2003, the latest information available, the average age of full-time head teachers in maintained schools in England was 49.8 years.

Learning and Skills Council

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the funding for the Learning and Skills Council for adult learning was in (a) 2004–05, (b) 2005–06 and (c) 2006–07; and what factors she took into account when allocating funds. [51570]

Bill Rammell: The total overall spend on all adult programmes for 2004–05 was reported in the Learning and Skills Council's (LSC) Annual Report and Accounts as £2,999 million. Our planned funding for the LSC's major programmes only for adults for 2005–06 is £2,942 million and for 2006–07 is £2,946 million. Estimated spend on smaller programmes and experience of the previous two years suggests final funding for adults will be in the order of £3.2 billion each year. On 1 October 2005 the Government set out their priorities for post-16 education and training. This established our priorities for the learning and skills sector and the impact on funding in 2006–07 and 2007–08. While overall spend on adult learning will remain broadly constant the pattern of that learning will change. To meet our national priorities, we need to shift the pattern so that we provide a greater number of longer and more expensive courses for adults, to equip them with the range of skills they need for employability and further progression to higher levels of training. We have consistently said that public funding alone cannot and should not pay for all the training necessary in a competitive economy. To support this shift, there has to be a new balance of responsibilities between Government, employers and learners so we do not accept that withdrawal of LSC funding means that courses automatically have to close. Where provision is valued by learners, where it is high quality, and where learners and employers are prepared to pay more, we expect colleges to consider providing courses on a full-cost recovery basis.

The Department's guidance to the LSC on the deployment of its funding allocations is outlined in the Secretary of State's annual grant letter to the LSC Chairman and for 2006 to 2008 in Priorities for Success the document that sets out our funding strategy for the next two years. This document is available on the LSC's website.

List 99

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many people (a) are on List 99 and (b) have been added to the List in each of the last five years; and if she will make a statement. [44414]

Ruth Kelly: There were 4,045 people on list 99 when I made my first statement about arrangements for vetting those working with children on 19 January 2006. List 99 is continuously updated and the Department does not collect this data on an annual basis. The number added to the list in each of the last 5 years is as follows:

	Number added to List 99
2001	169
2002	135
2003	219
2004	321
2005	525

Newly Qualified Teachers

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the average starting salary was for newly qualified teachers in (a) primary and (b) secondary schools in Essex in each of the last 10 years for which figures are available. [64986]

Jacqui Smith: The information requested is not available below Government office region level.

The following table provides the average salary of newly qualified teachers in maintained nursery and primary and secondary schools in the East of England, 1995 to 2004, the latest information available.

Official Visits

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will list the towns in (a) England and Wales, (b) Scotland and (c) the European Union that she has visited in an official capacity in each month since 1997; what the purpose was in each case; what the (i) date, (ii) time, (iii) location and (iv) duration was of each meeting; if she will place in the Library the text of any speech made; and if she will make a statement. [65003]

Maria Eagle: The information requested is not held centrally and could be provided only by incurring disproportionate cost.

All ministerial visits are conducted in accordance with the 'Ministerial Code and Travel by Ministers'. The Government publish on an annual basis, lists of overseas travel by Cabinet Ministers costing over £500 which will include visits to the European Union. Lists covering 1997 to 2005 are available in the Libraries of the House. Information for 2005–06 is currently being compiled and will be published when it is ready.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will make it her policy when placing material in the Library in response to a parliamentary question to supply a copy of the material to the hon. Member who tabled the question; and if she will make a statement. [64202]

Maria Eagle: Government best practice is that departments should supply a copy of material placed in the Library in response to a parliamentary question to the hon. Member who tabled it.

School Visits

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many schools (a) Ministers and (b) officials in her Department have visited in each month since 1997; for what purposes in each case; if she will list the (i) date, (ii) time, (iii) location and (iv) duration of each meeting; and if she will make a statement. [64987]

Maria Eagle: The information requested is not held centrally and could be provided only by incurring disproportionate cost.

Special Needs (Funding)

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will set out the funding for (a) special schools and (b) children with special needs for each of the past five years and the forecast allocations for each of the next five years. [65937]

Maria Eagle [holding answer 27 April 2006]: Planned expenditure by local authorities in England on the provision of education for children with special educational needs and the funding available for delegation to special schools after provision has been made for retained items is included in the attached table. Forecast future allocations for special schools or for children with special educational needs are not available.

The Education (Budget Statements) (England) Regulations: Budgeted net expenditure on the provision of education for children with special educational[1,2] needs since 2001–02; as reported by local authorities[3] as at 24 April 2006.

	Budgeted net expenditure on the provision of education for children with special educational needs[1,2]	Cash terms[3] (£) Of which: Individual schools budget (ISB) for special schools[4]
2001–02	2,908,380,000	939,548,000
2002–03	3,038,661,000	1,006,662,000
2003–04	3,466,180,000	1,086,666,000
2004–05	3,774,757,000	1,159,564,000
2005–06	4,120,549,000	1,243,204,000

[1] Includes planned expenditure on the provision for pupils with statements and the provision for non-statemented pupils with SEN, support for inclusion, inter authority recoupment, fees for pupils at independent special schools and abroad, educational psychology service, local authority functions in relation to child protection, therapies and other health related services, parent partnership, guidance and information, the monitoring of SEN provision and inclusion administration, assessment and co-ordination. Also included is the funding delegated to nursery, primary and secondary schools identified as "notional SEN" and the individual schools budget (ISB) for special schools.

[2] Funding delegated to LA maintained nursery, primary and secondary schools are only indicative of the amount that might be spent by schools on SEN.

[3] Figures are rounded to the nearest £1,000.

[4] Within the schools budget, the amount available for delegation to special schools after provision has been made for retained items is known as the Individual Schools Budget (ISB). Consequently the ISB for special schools does not include any expenditure on special schools which is planned to be retained centrally by the local authority. The ISB for special schools will also include some general education costs for pupils with SEN in addition to those costs specifically for SEN.

Student Loans

Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many and what proportion of outstanding student loans are in accounts where debt recovery is inactive (a) in total and (b) where no repayments have been made over the last three years; and what the total value of such loans is in each case. [63517]

Bill Rammell: Debt recovery is not inactive on any accounts; the Student Loans Company (SLC) take appropriate action to collect repayments on all accounts.

There are 234,600 UK borrowers with a loan balance of £754 million with publicly-owned mortgage-style loans past the statutory repayment due date (SRDD)[1] who had made no repayments in the last three years (as at 31 March 2005). They represent 36 per cent. of borrowers who had loans past SRDD during the three-year period.

93 per cent. of those who made no repayments were not required to repay for the whole three-year period, because their gross annual income was below the relevant earning threshold. The remainder were subject to the SLC arrears recovery process. This includes several attempts to contact the borrower by letter and telephone, and where necessary passing the case to SLC's internal specialist tracing or arrears collection agents.

Ultimately the borrower may be contacted by an external debt collection agency and/or face legal action.

Data is not yet available on income-contingent loans. Borrowers are not required to make repayments if they are earning less than £15,000 and when due these repayments are generally collected automatically through the tax system.

[1] Borrowers are not required to repay before they reach the SRDD, which is the April following graduation or otherwise leaving their course.

University Academic Staff

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the average annual earnings were of full-time members of the academic staff of universities in (a) West Lancashire and (b) Lancashire in the last year for which figures are available. [64290]

Bill Rammell: The latest information, and the corresponding figures for all higher education institutions in England, is given in the following table.

Average salary[1] of full-time HE academic staff with teaching responsibilities higher education institutions 2004/05

			Average salary (£)
	West Lancashire[2]	Lancashire[3]	England
Professors	45,800	56,100	59,100
Senior Lecturers and Researchers	38,300	31,500	41,500
Lecturers	31,800	30,600	33,000

[1] Average salary is derived from the gross basic salary per annum, in pounds sterling as stated in the contract at the reference date of HESA's staff count (July 31) or at the end date of the contract if earlier. It does not include any regular payments for additional duties, responsibility allowances or honoraria, regardless of their source. Figures have been rounded to the nearest 100.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Home Working

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many people in her

Department have been enabled to work from home in each of the last three years; and if she will make a statement. [67982]

Mr. Lammy: My Department has extended the option to work flexibly to all staff and aims to support them in balancing their work and home responsibilities. The Department is keen to see flexibility in working patterns being made available as widely as possible to enable staff to match their own needs with the requirements of the job.

My Department only holds records of homeworkers who require IT equipment. There is no record of the amount of people who work from home on an ad hoc basis or those not requiring equipment. Following are the figures for the last three years

2003–04	3
2004–05	8

Olympic Delivery Authority

Hywel Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what discussions she has had with (a) the Secretary of State for Wales and (b) the Welsh Assembly Government on the appointment of members of the Olympic Delivery Authority; and what steps were taken to ensure representation on the authority from all parts of the UK. [67913]

Tessa Jowell: No specific discussions took place with (a) the Secretary of State for Wales or (b) the Welsh Assembly Government on the appointment of members of the Olympic Delivery Authority. In keeping with the provisions in the London Olympic Games and Paralympic Games Act 2006 the appointments were made by the Secretary of State after consultation with the Mayor of London.

The role specification sought people from a variety of backgrounds with a combination of skills and experience. It did not seek individuals with specific representative functions in relation to constituent countries of the UK . The roles were advertised in the national press and the posts attracted over 450 applications from across the UK. All appointments were made on the basis of merit following a fair and open competition.

Hywel Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the process was for recruitment and selection of the members of the Olympic Delivery Authority; and (a) when and (b) in what publications the positions were advertised. [67914]

Tessa Jowell: The recruitment process took full account of the Nolan principles, and the Commissioner for Public Appointments' Code of Practice. It involved a number of formal steps, including the preparation of a role specification against which candidates would be considered, advertising in the national press and on the DCMS and Cabinet Office websites, and interview of selected candidates by a panel comprising Jack Lemley (chair of the ODA), a DCMS director, a representative from the Greater London Authority, and an OCPA approved independent assessor. Candidates were considered against the published criteria, and the selection panel made recommendations to the Secretary of State on whom to appoint. The Secretary of State, after consultation with the Mayor, has appointed 12 members who collectively most closely meet the needs of the board at this time.

The positions were advertised in The Sunday Times on 11 December and in The Times Public Agenda on 13 December. The vacancies were also advertised on the Cabinet Office and DCMS websites.

Hywel Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the (a) job description and (b) person specification was for members of the Olympic Delivery Authority. [67915]

Tessa Jowell: The full role specification for members of the Olympic Delivery Authority (ODA) was published on the DCMS website until the closing date of 6 January 2006. I have arranged for copies to be deposited in the House Libraries.

The role specification provided details of the role and skills required of ODA members. It explained that the role of the board was to work in partnership with the chief executive, David Higgins, and his staff, helping to set the overall direction, policy and plans of the authority, in accordance with the Olympic plans and its statutory duties, and to provide advice and support to the executive team in accordance with best governance practice and guidance. All board members were required to demonstrate commitment to public service values and the principles of public life (particularly integrity and probity), be respected by or have credibility with their peers, have significant experience of leadership, management and governance at board levels within the public, not for profit or private sector, and possess an understanding of the public policy context and the role of Government. In addition it was agreed that board members should have skills or experience in one or more of a number of other areas including construction and programme management, transport, regeneration, local government, community issues, finance, media and communications, disability issues, legal issues and human resources.

Hywel Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what responsibilities the Olympic Delivery Authority has for (a) Olympic preparations, (b) venues and (c) events outside London and the South East of England. [67916]

Tessa Jowell: Under section 4(1) of the London Olympic Games and Paralympic Games Act 2006, the Olympic Delivery Authority (ODA) may take any action that it thinks necessary or expedient for the purpose of:

(a) Preparing for the London Olympics

(b) Making arrangements in preparation for or in connection with the use or management, before during or after the London Olympics, of premises and other facilities acquired, constructed or adapted in preparation for the London Olympics, or

(c) Ensuring that adequate arrangements are made for the provision, management and control of facilities for transport in connection with the London Olympics.

Under the Act the ODA can carry out these functions anywhere in the UK.

The staging of Olympic events is the responsibility of the London Organising Committee of the Olympic Games Ltd. (LOCOG).

Windsor Castle

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many individuals were employed at Windsor Castle in 2005–06. [67064]

Mr. Lammy: The Department for Culture, Media and Sport provides grant in aid funding for the maintenance of the occupied royal palaces in England. The grant in aid employed 40 staff at Windsor Castle in 2005–06. There are other staff who are employed by other funding sources, for which the Department is not responsible, and on which it therefore has no information.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Pension Supplement

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when a supplement to the basic pension for reaching the age of 80 years was first paid; and what its value would be if it had been increased in line with the retail price index. [67926]

Mr. Timms: The 25p a week addition to the State pension for recipients aged 80 or over was introduced in September 1971. It would now be worth £2.23 a week had it been uprated in line with the retail price index.

Since winter 2003–04 eligible households with a person aged 80 or over are entitled to an additional annual winter fuel payment of £100.

Benefits

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) how long a national from another EU member state needs to have been resident in the UK before being eligible to receive (a) housing benefit and (b) income support; and how long the residency periods will be after Directive 2004/38/EC comes into force; [66123]

(2) what effect Directive 2004/38/EC will have on the requirements that EU nationals need to meet in order to be considered habitually resident in the UK; and if he will make a statement; [66136]

(3) pursuant to the answer of 18 January 2006, Official Report, column 1371W, on the Free Movement of Persons Directive, when the Government will issue regulations to ensure that Directive 2004/38/EC will not result in any significant additional costs for the UK social security system; and what these regulations will do. [66156]

Mr. Plaskitt: Current housing benefit and income support regulations require that a person must have a right to reside and be habitually resident in the United Kingdom, The Channel Islands, the Isle of Man or the Republic of Ireland (generally known as the Common Travel Area). If a person does not have a right to reside then they are not habitually resident and are not entitled to those benefits. A person who has a right to reside must also show that they are habitually resident in the Common Travel Area unless they fall into an exemption category such as EU workers. There is no set time limit for being habitually resident and each case is considered on its own merits and the claimant's individual circumstances.

From 30 April 2006 persons who claim an income-related benefit including income support, income-based jobseeker's allowance, state pension credit, housing benefit and council tax benefit will still be required to have a right to reside as well as being habitually resident in the Common Travel Area.

The Social Security (Persons from Abroad) Regulations 2006 which come into force on that date will amend the 'right to reside' aspect of the test. This is to ensure economically inactive EU nationals who only have a right to reside under Directive 2004/38/EC for the first three months of their stay in the Common Travel Area, will not be entitled to those benefits. EU work seekers will have a right to reside and once they are habitually resident will be entitled to claim income-based jobseeker's allowance, housing benefit and council tax benefit but they will not be able to claim income support or state pension credit. EU workers will have a right to reside and will continue to be exempt from the habitual residence test.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the cost of council tax benefit was in (a) England and (b) Wales in each year since 1997–98; and what the estimated costs are for (i) 2005–06 and (ii) 2006–07. [66247]

Mr. Plaskitt: The information is in the tables.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the take-up rate of council tax benefit was amongst pensioners in (a) 1996–97 and (b) the latest year for which figures are available. [66248]

Mr. Plaskitt: The latest available information is in "Income Related Benefits Estimates of Take Up in 2003–04", a copy of which is in the Library.

Joan Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) if he will amend housing benefit policy so as to make it possible for a non-dependent sibling of a landlord to claim housing benefit in circumstances where there is a genuine tenancy and rental income is required; and if he will make a statement; [65321]

(2) if he will take steps to make it possible for housing benefit to be paid to those living in a home with relatives in certain circumstances. [65527]

Mr. Plaskitt: There are no plans to amend the provisions for people who live with close relatives. Where a person lives with their landlord who is a close relative, such as a brother and sister, they are treated as not liable to make rental payments because there is usually no intention to create a legally enforceable liability in such circumstances. The tenant is typically making a contribution towards the general costs of the household of which they form a part without a genuine rental liability.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what improvements he is making in the administration of housing benefit. [67338]

Mr. Plaskitt: In 2002, we put in place a comprehensive strategy for reform of housing benefit, with the first priority being to improve administration across the board. We have already made significant progress with the average time taken by local authorities to process new claims having improved by over two weeks.

We have introduced a number of simplification measures to reduce complexity in the housing benefit rules, and provided investment, to help authorities make improvements in the administration of housing benefit. We are also piloting the new local housing allowance in 18 local authorities and the green paper, "A New Deal For Welfare: Empowering People to Work", sets out our intention to extend the scheme across the private rented sector.

Child Support Agency

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what response his Department makes to an individual's claim that levels of household debt is a reason for lack of co-operation with the Child Support Agency. [65786]

Mr. Plaskitt: There are provisions which may allow the Agency to take account of debts which were incurred during a relationship when making a maintenance assessment. However, levels of household debt are not a reason for lack of co-operation with the Child Support Agency. The Government are of the view that parents' prime financial responsibility is to maintain their children.

Fraud investigation

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much fraud investigators recovered for his Department in each of the last five years. [57635]

Mr. Plaskitt [holding answer 10 March 2006]: It is not possible to separate the total amount of overpaid benefit recovered into overpayments due to fraud and those due to other reasons.

Income Support

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what reports he has received on the restoration of the full rate of income support to young people under 25 years; and if he will make a statement. [65984]

Mr. Plaskitt: Since income support was introduced in 1988, a single person aged 18 to 24 has been paid at a lower rate than single people aged 25 and over. It would be a new initiative and not a restoration to pay single customers aged 18 to 24 at the same rate as single customers aged 25 and over.

I am not aware of any reports that have been produced that give consideration to payment of the full rate of income support to single young people under the age of 25.

Jobseeker's Allowance

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many jobseeker's allowance applications have taken (a) more than 12 days, (b) more than 18 days, (c) more than 24 days and (d) more than 48 days to process in the last month for which information is available; and if he will make a statement. [63681]

Margaret Hodge: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the chief executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lesley Strathie:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question asking how many Jobseeker's Allowance applicants have taken (a) more than 12 days, (b) more than 18 days, (c) more than 24 days and (d) more than 48 days to process in the last month for which information is available; and if he will make a statement. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

The information you have asked for is not available. Jobcentre Plus measures the time taken to process a claim for Jobseeker's Allowance as the Actual Average Clearance Time. This is measured against a Key Management Indicator which is agreed at the beginning of each year. For 2005/06, this was set at 12 working days. Latest figures show that for the year to February 2006 claims were processed in an average of 14.3 working days.

Jobcentre Plus is transforming the service it provides by making it available via the telephone, via the Internet and through the personal service offered to people in Jobcentre Plus offices. With change on this scale there can be difficulties at the beginning and, as a consequence, average clearance times have increased. This is clearly causing unacceptable delays for customers and we have taken action to address the delays.

On 30 January we launched a National Action Plan designed to reduce clearance times. The plan requires that:

all delivery units work through a Health Check and address the areas where they are under-performing;

senior managers regularly review and address poor performance; and delivery units performing below the required level develop a recovery plan to improve performance.

Senior Operational Managers were required to provide a formal assurance at the end of February that all elements of the plan are being complied with, although it has been acknowledged that concentration on backlogs of work may initially cause average clearance times to rise. The Chief Operating Officer is monitoring performance very closely.

In order to focus management attention on this issue, the Actual Average Clearance Times measure, which will remain at 12 days for Jobseeker's Allowance claims, has been added to the suite of Jobcentre Plus Targets for 2006/07.

I hope this is helpful.

Occupational Pensions

Sandra Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when he plans to publish his response to the Parliamentary Commissioner's report on the security of final salary occupational pensions. [68055]

Mr. Timms: In the oral statement made by my right hon. Friend Secretary of State on 16 March he undertook to publish a full response to the Ombudsman's report, including an explanation of the Government's estimate of the cost of implementing the Ombudsman's proposals.

We expect to publish that response shortly.

Pension Credit

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the cost of administering the pension credit was in each of the last seven financial years; and what estimate he has made of the administration costs in 2006–07. [66151]

Mr. Timms: Information is available only for the year to March 2005. I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 22 March 2006, Official Report, column 411W.

The Department does not estimate its future administration costs on the basis of individual benefits and allowances.

Pensioner Poverty

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many pensioners were living in poverty in (a) 1997 and (b) according to the most recent data available. [67336]

Mr. Timms: The seventh annual 'Opportunity for all' report (Cm 6673) sets out the Government's strategy for tackling poverty and social exclusion and reports progress against a range of indicators.'

The following tables show the number and percentage of people over State pension age living in households in relative and absolute low income. These show that based on income measured after housing costs the number of pensioners in relative low income has fallen by one million between 1996–97 and 2004–05—there was a fall of half a million between 2002–03 and 2004–05, the years when pension credit came into effect.

Relative low income, i.e. based on contemporary income thresholds

	After housing costs		Before housing costs
	Number (million)	Percentage	Number (million)	Percentage
1996–97	2.8	28	2.2	22
2004–05	1.8	17	2.0	19

Absolute low income, i.e. based on 1996–97 income thresholds held constant in real terms

	After housing costs		Before housing costs
	Number (million)	Percentage	Number (million)	Percentage
1996–97	2.8	28	2.2	22
2004–05	0.7	7	1.0	10

1. Figures are for Great Britain;
2. Results from Households Below Average Incomes publication.
3. Figures show the number and proportion of pensioners in households below 60 per cent. of median net income (after direct taxes including council tax).

Post Office Card Account

Jo Swinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people in Scotland use a Post Office card account to receive their pension, broken down by (a) local authority and (b) constituency. [62812]

Mr. Plaskitt: The following tables show the number of state pension payment accounts being paid into a Post Office card account in Scotland broken down by (a) local authority and (b) constituency.

Notes:

Figures are based on information available at 18 February 2006 and are rounded to the nearest 100.

Figures refer to accounts live and in payment on the specified date.

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what plans he has to encourage financial institutions to enable those using the Post Office card account to transfer to bank accounts with the facility to allow cash withdrawals at post office branches. [67303]

Mr. Plaskitt: There are already some 25 bank and building society accounts which can be used at post offices, and we hope there could be more in the future. I would encourage the remaining big banks to respond positively to the overtures from Post Office Ltd to make their current accounts accessible at post office branches.

Post Office Ltd. itself has already introduced one new savings account, and is developing other savings and banking products which are likely to be more attractive to many of its customers than the current Post Office card account.

We want people to continue to access their cash at the post office by using a bank account there or new post office products. We are working with Post Office Ltd to develop a joint strategy to move customers from the Post Office card account and with the best interests of our joint customers in mind.

Mr. Dunne: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether employees of the Pensions Service are telephoning pensioners to persuade them to cease using their Post Office card accounts. [65882]

Mr. Plaskitt: No, employees of the Pension Service are not telephoning pensioners to dissuade them from using their Post Office card accounts.

Spending Review (Efficiency Targets)

Mrs. Villiers: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what baseline figures he is using for assessing progress on his Department's targets to (a) modernise transactional processes, (b) make savings in procurement processes and (c) modernise and streamline back office functions of finance and human resources shared service functions; what progress has been made towards these targets to date; and what the total efficiency savings achieved to date are for these targets. [52929]

Mr. Plaskitt: The target for financial savings from the Department in the Spending Review 2004 was not linked directly to particular functional groups but rather illustrated categories of activity that would be planned to contribute to the total from changes planned in the Department. Based on our current planning assumptions, we expect that just under one half of our financial savings will come from improvements in transactional processing, around one quarter will come from the direct payment of benefits to customers, over one quarter of savings will come from improvements in central services and around one tenth from improved value for money in procurement. These assumptions are subject to change as plans develop to ensure that we maintain and improve customer services and achieve our PSA and efficiency targets.

Total efficiency savings made by DWP in 2004–05 are estimated at some £300 million.

These early savings are an encouraging indication of DWPs ability to meet the efficiency target set for the department in the 2004 Spending Review (being £962 million of annual efficiency savings by 2007–08 against our spending in 2003–04).

Sure Start

Ed Balls: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many women have received a Sure Start maternity grant in (a) England and (b) the Wakefield district in each of the last two years; and what plans he has to extend provision. [65884]

Mr. Plaskitt: The information requested is in the table.

Number of Sure Start maternity grant awards

	Great Britain	Wakefield Jobcentre Plus District
2004–05	235,920	1,510
2005–06	237,510	1,600

Social Fund Policy, Budget and Management Information System.

We have no plans to widen eligibility beyond the current qualifying benefits.

Following the Court of Appeal judgment in the "Francis case" however, we are looking to change the legislation to allow payments to people who have been awarded residence orders in certain specified circumstances.

For any claims made prior to the legislative change, decision makers and appeal tribunals may consider whether the circumstances around any case are the same as in the Court of Appeal case.

Sure Start to Later Life

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when he expects the pilots for A Sure Start to Later Life to be under way. [67955]

Mr. Timms: We announced in "Opportunity Age" our intention to pilot a LinkAge Plus service, providing a fully integrated service for older people. The Social Exclusion Unit Report 'A Sure Start to Later Life' also proposed a new approach to delivering services to and for older people, building on the principles of the Sure Start model for children and families, LinkAge Plus will deliver this service.

This programme will test ways of delivering fully integrated services for older people—from employment, health and benefits to leisure and learning. This will involve working with older people to identify effective models that meet their needs and aspirations and involving them in the design.

The programme plans to run up to eight pilots in England and a number of local authorities are currently helping us to develop the 'LinkAge Plus' concept further and advise on how it can be delivered practically on the ground.

Final announcements on the programme will be made shortly, including details of final pilot selection. We anticipate that the first pilot will start in July this year.

Turner Commission

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment he has made of the Turner Commission recommendation for mandatory employer pension contributions. [67337]

Mr. Timms: We have been examining all the recommendations made by the Pensions Commission in detail, including this one. In looking at this option we are considering carefully the relationship between an employer's pension contributions and levels of scheme membership and of course are taking account of possible impacts on business and on the labour market. The Pensions White Paper is due to be published in the next couple of months, and it will set out our proposals for pension reform in full.

Workstep Programme

Mrs. Maria Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many places are available through the Workstep programme; how many people were referred to the programme in the last 12 months; and if he will make a statement on future plans for the programme. [63359]

Mrs. McGuire: The Workstep (including Remploy) programme provides around 30,000 places. In the year ending December 2005, 9,841 individuals were referred to the programme.

The Welfare Reform Green Paper "A new deal for welfare: Empowering people to work" announced the review of specialist employment programmes for disabled people, including Workstep, and the intention to consult on our proposals later in the year.

Separately on 16 March, the Government announced a review of Remploy Ltd in the context of the Government's strategy for supporting greater numbers of disabled people into employment.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Company Law Reform Bill

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he has had discussions with the Corporate Responsibility Coalition on the Company Law Reform Bill; and if he will make a statement. [67591]

Alun Michael [holding answer 2 May 2006]: I have met the Corporate Responsibility Coalition to discuss the Company Law Reform Bill on two occasions since the publication of the Company Law Reform White Paper in March 2005. DTI officials have also had a number of discussions with the Corporate Responsibility Coalition as part of the ongoing consultation with interested parties on the Company Law Reform Bill.

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what progress has been made on replacing Part 31 of the Company Law Reform Bill. [67595]

Alun Michael [holding answer 2 May 2006]: My noble Friend the Minister for Science and Innovation set out the Government's intentions for replacing Part 31 of the Company Law Reform Bill in another place on 30 March 2006. He announced that, the Government will take specific powers in clearly defined areas, in particular capital maintenance, company charges and reporting and accounting provisions.

Import Revenues

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what revenue was raised from imports into the UK in (a) 2004 and (b) 2005 of (i) rice—combined nomenclature code 1006, (ii) bananas—combined nomenclature code 0803, (iii) citrus fruit—combined nomenclature code 0805 and (iv) olive oil—combined nomenclature code 1509. [66408]

Dawn Primarolo: I have been asked to reply.

The customs duty declared in respect of imports into the UK of these commodities was as follows:

Rice (1006)
2004	10,894,782.71
2005	8,601,615.21
Bananas (0803)
2004	17,177,058.03
2005	19,017,454.50
Citrus fruit (0805)
2004	7,988,416.48
2005	7,338,083.55
Olive oil (1509)
2004	82,304.11
2005	104,175.98

In addition VAT of £4,302.77 was paid on olive oil importations in 2004 and £24,958.84 in 2005.

This information does not take into account any adjustments to the data provided on declarations after importation.

National Minimum Wage

Mr. David Hamilton: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much his Department spent on advertising in the press and radio on the question of the national minimum wage in (a) 2005 and (b) 2004. [67910]

Alun Michael: DTI spent the following on National Minimum Wage (NMW) press advertising via the Central Office of Information:

	£ (excl VAT)
2005	357,300
2004	352,996

In addition DTI spent £20,000 in both 2004 and 2005 (excl VAT) via Citizens Advice Northern Ireland on NMW press advertising in Northern Ireland.

There was no NMW radio advertising carried out in either year.

Post Office Card Account

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the revenue for post offices from (a) Post Office card account transactions and (b) bank account transactions. [67304]

Barry Gardiner: Revenue received by Post Office Ltd. for managing Post Office card account and bank account transactions are the subject of commercially confidential contracts with DWP and individual banks.

Public Procurement Procedures

Tim Farron: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to his Answer of 1 February 2006, Official Report, columns 547–8W, on European public procurement law, what changes the two new European Commission public procurement directives made to public procurement procedures in the UK; and what estimate his Department has made of the financial effects on small and medium-sized enterprises of these changes. [66949]

Alun Michael [holding answer 2 May 2006]: The new procurement directives, simplify, clarify and modernise public procurement procedures. These were implemented in the United Kingdom on 31 January 2006. There are new provisions on framework agreements, competitive dialogue for complex procurements, central purchasing bodies and electronic procurement methods such as e-auctions and dynamic purchasing systems.

The directives allow contracts to be reserved for supported factories and businesses, and provide greater clarity on the extent to which social and environmental issues can be incorporated into procurements. There is also a requirement for the mandatory exclusion of companies that have been convicted of offences related to fraud and corruption. The rules applying to purchases by utilities now incorporate an exclusion mechanism where a sector is subject to normal competition.

Concerning the effects on small and medium-sized enterprises (SMEs), the new directives, and the regulations that implement them, apply rules directly to purchasers rather than to suppliers. There are, therefore, no compliance costs to business from these new rules. The new procurement methods that the rules provide for, including electronic systems, together with the simpler and clearer rules generally, reduce the burdens of the procurement process and should encourage suppliers, including SMEs, to participate in public procurement opportunities either directly or as sub contractor.

ELECTORAL COMMISSION COMMITTEE

Electoral Registration (Advertising)

Chris Ruane: To ask the hon. Member for Gosport, representing the Speaker's Committee on the Electoral Commission whether he has measured the effects of the Electoral Commission's advertising campaign to raise electoral registration levels. [64715]

Bridget Prentice: I have been asked to reply, as my hon. Friend tabled this question to my Department, and its transfer to the Speaker's Committee was notified as a result of an administrative error.

My Department has not measured the effects of the Electoral Commission's advertising campaigns. However, the Electoral Commission does undertake evaluation of its campaigns.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Alcohol-free Zones

Anne Snelgrove: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the effect on antisocial behaviour of alcohol-free zones in towns. [66464]

Hazel Blears: Designated public place orders (DPPO) are an opportunity for alcohol free zones to be adopted according to local authority assessment of alcohol related crime and disorder on public highways or in parks. The use of a DPPO tends to be part of a wider local strategy to tackle antisocial behaviour and drink related disorder. Therefore, to evaluate the effectiveness of DPPOs on their own would not be practical.

Anti-Semitic Incidents

Mr. Leech: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many anti-Semitic incidents were reported in Greater Manchester in 2005. [54705]

Paul Goggins: This information is not collected centrally. However, we understand from the Anti-Semitic Incidents Report 2005 by the Community Security Trust that '. . . Of the 455 incidents reported in the UK to the Community Security Trust in 2005, 132 (29 per cent.) were in Greater Manchester.'

Business Crime Partnerships

Mr. Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to add to the offences covered by business crime partnerships. [66610]

Hazel Blears: We take crimes against business very seriously, and are determined to tackle these crimes which can cause so much damage to the economic and social fabric of our communities.

Although business crime partnerships are voluntary groups and therefore independent of Government, we recognise the very real part they have to play in preventing and reducing crime.

The Home Office has supported the work of the British Retail Consortium in developing in developing business crime reduction partnerships, and has provided over £900,000 of funding for them to set up and run the Action Against Business Crime (AABC) Group. This Group provides central co-ordination and support for a national network of business crime reduction partnerships in town centres, shopping centres and industrial estates across England and Wales in their work to prevent business crime.

Child Protection

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will ensure that detained children within families about whom there are child protection concerns are not removed from the UK until those concerns have been satisfactorily resolved. [66791]

Fiona Mactaggart: We take the issue of child protection very seriously and we make every effort not to place children at risk. Where there are child protection concerns within a family whom we intend to remove, we would not remove a child with the potentially abusive family member(s). Instead will liaise with the authorities in the receiving country to see if other appropriate care arrangements can be made and to ensure that the appropriate Social Services are aware of any concerns in a particular case.

All operational and case working staff involved in the family removal process have been advised that if an officer suspects at any time that a child is or has been the victim of abuse, the police must be alerted immediately. In such cases where a police investigation is ongoing, removal may be stayed pending the outcome of the criminal proceedings.

Crime (Peterborough)

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what assistance is being given to Cambridgeshire Constabulary to tackle incidents of youth crime and antisocial behaviour in Peterborough constituency; and if he will make a statement; [66335]

(2) what progress is being made with the Government's Respect Agenda in the Peterborough constituency; and if he will make a statement. [67444]

Hazel Blears: Peterborough is one of 50 Action Areas in the country where the local authority, police and other agencies have agreed to provide a high level response to tackling antisocial behaviour.

Peterborough Youth Offending Service works closely with Cambridgeshire Constabulary on a range of strategies and partnerships to reduce crime and antisocial behaviour by young people. These include the Prolific and Priority Offender (PPO) Strategy, joint work to reduce vehicle crime and criminal damage by young people, Safer School Partnerships (police in schools), and the monitoring of high risk young people on community sentences. In addition, Peterborough Youth Offending Service is working with the police on a Knife Amnesty and Weapons Awareness Week (w/c 20 May) in support of the National Knife Amnesty.

The Police have made effective use of dispersal powers to tackle youth crime and have used these most recently in the Gladstone Street area of the town. Police will use these powers to move people on from this area when they are behaving in an antisocial way. In all cases of youth disorder the young person will be referred to an antisocial behaviour support worker, which will ensure that young people are provided with both support and enforcement to tackle and change bad behaviour.

The Respect Action Plan is central to the Government's drive to go broader, deeper and further on antisocial behaviour by tackling its root causes; preventing it occurring in the first place for example by ensuring better parenting provision, while not letting up on stopping antisocial behaviour that blights many communities. The Respect Task Force is currently working with all Action Areas on ensuring they understand their new enhanced responsibilities in delivering the Respect Action Plan. Key partners from Peterborough will be invited to attend the forthcoming Respect Academies to hear more about how the Action Plan can best be implemented.

Criminal Justice and Court Services Act

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department why section 53 of the Criminal Justice and Court Services Act 2000 (a) has not been implemented and (b) has been superseded by schedule 8 to the Criminal Justice Act 2003. [67121]

Fiona Mactaggart: Section 53 of the Criminal Justice and Courts Services Act 2000 introduced new provisions for dealing with the breach of various community orders. It was repealed under the Criminal Justice Act 2003, which introduced a new sentencing framework including a single community order for adults, to replace all previous individual community sentences, and a new suspended sentence order. This meant that the section 53 regime was no longer appropriate. However, elements of it are incorporated in the enforcement provisions for these new sentences, including statutory warnings for failures to comply with the requirements of the sentence and the presumption of imprisonment for breach of a suspended sentence order.

Data Protection

Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish the guidelines ensuring co-operation between the UK Information Commissioner and the European Data Protection Supervisor on information obtained from (a) EURODAC and (b) the Schengen Information System. [63823]

Ms Harman: I have been asked to reply.

At present, guidelines ensuring co-operation do not exist. The UK Information Commissioner, together with his counterparts in other EU member states, is currently working with the European Data Protection Supervisor to make checks on the processing of personal data in the Eurodac system.

The European Data Protection Supervisor does not have a formal role in data protection supervision in the Schengen Information System. The relevant supervisory arrangements for the central system are set out in the Schengen convention and are carried out by a Joint Supervisory Authority.

Disabled People

Tom Levitt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress his Department has made in promoting the rights of disabled people under its statutory duty to do so as a public body. [65818]

Paul Goggins: The Home Office is currently developing its Disability Equality Scheme in accordance with responsibilities conferred by the Disability Discrimination Act 2005. The scheme is being developed by a team consisting of diversity policy leads across the core Home Office group as well as members of the Disability Rights Commission and the Home Office Disability Support Network. Collectively they will see how work on Disability Equality Schemes can be embedded into Home Office business priorities. The Home Office has published a series of Disability Awareness Guides to promote the use of reasonable adjustments and the needs of disabled people in the workplace.

Domestic Violence

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the range of activities covered by the Best Value Performance Indicator that local authorities need to undertake successfully to address domestic violence. [51349]

Hazel Blears: To highlight the need for sustained local authority action, and demonstrating that domestic violence is not an issue for the criminal justice system alone, in 2005 a revised Best Value Performance Indicator for domestic violence was published. This indicator is owned by the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister.

BV 225 aims to assess the overall provision and effectiveness of local authority services designed to help victims of domestic violence and prevent further domestic violence.

The indicator covers metropolitan authorities, London boroughs, unitary authorities, district councils, council of the Isles of Scilly and the common council of the City of London. The indicator is measured as a percentage score of the number of questions to which a local authority can answer 'yes':

1. Has the local authority produced a directory of local services that can help victims of domestic violence?

2. Is there within the local authority area a minimum of one refuge place per 10,000 population?

3. Does the local authority employ directly or fund a voluntary sector-based domestic violence co-ordinator? (For district councils of fewer than 35,000 households, the responsibility for co-ordinating domestic violence can be designated within the job description of an existing senior officer. For district councils that contribute to a county-wide co-ordinator, see the BVPI definition).

4. Has the local authority produced and adopted a multi-agency strategy to tackle domestic violence developed in partnership with other agencies?

5. Does the local authority support and facilitate a local multi-agency domestic violence forum that meets at least four times a year?

6. Has the local authority developed an information-sharing protocol and had it agreed between key statutory partners?

7. Has the local authority developed, launched and promoted a 'sanctuary' type scheme to enable victims and their children to remain in their own home, where they choose to do so and where safety can be guaranteed? (For smaller district authorities, of fewer than 35,000 households this can be arranged in partnership with neighbouring authorities).

8. Has there been a reduction in the percentage of cases accepted as homeless due to domestic violence that had previously been re-housed in the last two years by that local authority as a result of domestic violence?

9. Does the council's tenancy agreement have a specific clause stating that perpetration of domestic violence by a tenant can be considered grounds for eviction? (For local authorities that have transferred their housing stock, the clause should be contained in the LSVT organisations' tenancy agreement).

10. Has the local authority funded and developed a domestic violence education pack in consultation with the wider domestic violence forum?

11. Has the local authority carried out a programme of multi-agency training in the last 12 months covering front-line and managerial staff in at least two of the following groups: housing staff, social services staff providing services in the local authority area; education staff; health staff; and front-line police officers.

Drugs Liaison Officers

Mr. Blizzard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many overseas drugs liaison officers are employed in each country in Latin America; and what the cost was in 2004–05; [58893]

(2) what quantity of cocaine seizures were attributable to the work of overseas drugs liaison officers in Latin America in each of the last three years for which figures are available; and what the street value was in each year. [58897]

Dawn Primarolo: I have been asked to reply.

I cannot give details of the numbers and cost of drugs liaison officers deployed overseas as to do so would prejudice international relations, jeopardise current operations and put the officers and their families at risk.

Cocaine seizures attributable to the work of drugs liaison officers based in South and Central America and the Caribbean are estimated to be 95 tonnes in 2003–04 and 46 tonnes in 2004–05, with a potential street value in the United Kingdom of £5.2 billion and £2.3 billion respectively. Figures for seizures in other years and confined to posts in states included in the definition of Latin America would be available only at disproportionate cost.

Female Murders

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many women were killed by a current or former male partner in each of the last 10 years for which figures are available. [64989]

Hazel Blears: The latest available information on homicide is published in Home Office Statistical Bulletin number 02–06, 'Violent Crime Overview, Homicide and Gun Crime 2004/2005'. Table 2.05 provides data on victims killed by their partner/ex-partner by victim gender.

The specific information data can be extracted from the Homicide Index and are given in the following table.

Homicides currently recorded In England and Wales where principal suspect is male partner or ex-partner of female victim, 1995 to 2004–05

	Number of victims
1995	93
1996	94
1997	98
1997–98	99
1998–99	76
1999–2000	88
2000–01	99
2001–02	115
2002–03	105
2003–04	93
2004–05	101

Note:
As at 28 November 2005; figures are revised as cases are dealt with by the police and by the courts, or as further information becomes available.

Firearms

Mr. Bone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many converted firearms have been used in criminal acts where a shot has been fired in the last five years. [65424]

Hazel Blears: Statistics for crimes involving certain converted weapons have only been collected separately since April 2004. There were six offences where 'converted air pistols' or 'converted imitation handguns' were fired.

In these offences a converted weapon was specified as a weapon type. It is likely that some other offences involved converted weapons being fired, but the weapon type would have been specified differently, handgun for example.

Gun Crime

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many gun crimes have been committed in the past 5 years using .22 calibre sports pistols. [67143]

Hazel Blears: Crimes involving this type of handgun cannot be identified from data collected centrally.

Handgun Legislation (Olympics)

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what advice has been given by the police to his Department in relation to a possible relaxation to the handgun legislation for Olympic target shooters. [67140]

Hazel Blears: We liaise closely with the police in relation to the arrangements needed to allow pistol shooting disciplines to take place at major international events held or to be held in this country including the Olympic games. No specific advice has been given by the police as regards a possible relaxation to the handgun legislation for Olympic target shooters.

Home Detention Curfews

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department within what time period the Parole Board is required to reconsider its decision to refuse a Home Detention Curfew (a) when the Prison Ombudsman has asked a prison for an urgent review of the decision; and (b) what action can be taken when the Board does not meet the deadline. [65708]

Fiona Mactaggart: The Parole Board has no involvement in Home Detention Curfew (HDC) decisions. The decision rests in the vast majority of cases with the relevant prison taking into account the views of other relevant agencies. If the Ombudsman makes a recommendation to review an HDC decision I would expect the review to take place as quickly as possible; taking into account the need to re-assess the risk posed by the individual prisoner, and the need to protect the public.

Homeless People (Arrests)

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many homeless people have been arrested in each of the last eight years. [67107]

Fiona Mactaggart: The information requested is not available centrally.

Immigration Detention (Children)

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will introduce a statutory time limit for the detention of children. [66787]

Fiona Mactaggart: Regulations made by the Home Secretary under section 22 of the Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 set custody time limits that restrict the period during which a defendant (including a defendant under 18) who is remanded in custody awaiting trial may be held in custody.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will ensure that welfare assessments for children who are detained are carried out after (a) seven and (b) 21 days; [66788]

(2) if he will ensure that welfare assessments of detained children are undertaken by independent welfare panels. [66789]

Fiona Mactaggart: The Youth Justice Board's National Standards for Youth Justice Services, issued in 2004, specify how welfare assessments are to be carried out., An initial medical assessment of the young person is undertaken on arrival. This is conducted by a qualified nurse or doctor and looks at vulnerability (i.e. risk of self-harm or suicide), as well as any mental health needs and any substance abuse issues.

The National Standards stipulate that a full assessment of the detained young person will be carried out within 10 working days. The full assessment covers the health, social, educational, vocational and any other needs of the young person. After assessment, each young person is to be given a comprehensive induction to the establishment and be allocated a key worker, case worker or case manager.

The National Standards are currently being updated by the Youth Justice Board.

International Arrest Warrants

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he has received documentary evidence from the Israeli Government on potential changes to UK law on international arrest warrants. [66292]

Fiona Mactaggart: The Home Office has received written representations from the Israeli Government on the issue of arrest warrants in international cases.

Mobile Telephones

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what assessment his Department has made of the level of mobile telephone theft in each year since 2001; [66297]

(2) how many people have been successfully prosecuted for the false reporting of mobile telephone theft in the last 12 months for which figures are available; [66298]

(3) how many successful prosecutions there have been in relation to the re-programming of mobile telephones in the last 12 months for which figures are available. [66296]

Hazel Blears: Assessing the true level of mobile phone theft and the false reporting of such theft is not straightforward. This is because these are not distinct offence categories. Rather they are subsumed under broader headings such as 'theft' or 'wasting police time'. As a consequence, specific figures for mobile phone theft and successful prosecutions for false reporting are not held centrally.

In 2001 the Government invested in, and published, a major study of mobile phone theft (Harrington and Mayhew, 2001). Drawing on the British crime survey and youth surveys, the study estimated 710,000 mobile phones were stolen in 2000–01.

The British crime survey (BCS) routinely collects information which assesses the rate of theft among adult mobile phone users. According to the latest published figures, based on the 2002–03 BCS 6.9 per cent. of adult mobile phone users had experienced a theft in the previous 12 months. Younger people, those from a black and minority ethnic background, and those living in areas of high deprivation were significantly more likely to have their mobile phones stolen.

Parole Boards

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what complaints his Department has received from (a) individuals and (b) groups regarding the decisions of parole boards in each of the last five years. [45864]

Fiona Mactaggart: The information requested is not held centrally and could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

Party Wall Act

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people have been prosecuted under the Party Wall Act 1996 in each year since 1997. [66834]

Fiona Mactaggart: Data from the Court Proceedings Database held by the Office for Criminal Justice Reform shows that since 1997, one person was prosecuted in 1999, and one person was prosecuted in 2004 under the Party Wall Act 1996. Statistics for 2005 will be available in the autumn of 2006.

Police

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received on police community support officers. [66850]

Hazel Blears: We do not track and compile all correspondence on this subject. A number of bodies replied last summer to our public consultation on proposals to establish a standard set of powers. Our response was published on the Home Office website on 18 January at:

www.homeoffice.gov.uk/documents/cons-cso-powers-310805

Correspondence both then and over the autumn with the Association of Chief Police Officers and the Association of Police Authorities concerned funding for community support officers. More recently, this has been raised again in the light of the Budget Statement by the Chancellor of the Exchequer.

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many full-time police officers there were as at 1 April 2006 in the (a) Northern, (b) Central and (c) Southern Division Basic Command Units of the Cambridgeshire Constabulary; and if he will make a statement. [67442]

Hazel Blears: The latest available information is as at 31 March 2005. Part-time figures for BCUs are not collected centrally. As at 31 March 2005, there were 1,392 full-time police officers and 40 part-time police officers in Cambridgeshire Constabulary.

Pornography

Mrs. James: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent discussions he has had with the National Federation of Retail Newsagents on the selling of pornographic magazines and newspapers and ways of avoiding the (a) sale and (b) availability of such material to children. [56005]

Paul Goggins: My officials, together with officials from the Department for Culture, Media and Sport and the Department of Trade and Industry met representatives of the National Federation of Retail Newsagents and representatives of magazine and newspaper trade organisations on 8 March to discuss the sale, display and placement of publications featuring sexual material and to emphasise the need to safeguard the interests of children.

As a result of these discussions, the NFRN have agreed to highlight the importance of this issue by putting out further advice to newsagents which includes guidance about the sale and display of 'top shelf' adult material as well as advice about the appropriate placement and display of other publications containing some sexual material.

Prison Education

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent estimate he has made of the number of hours of education undertaken by each prisoner in Young Offender Institutions per week. [65615]

Fiona Mactaggart: Provisional data for 2005–06 show the average number of hours of education (not including Physical Education) undertaken by prisoners held in young offender institutions to be 7.6 hours per prisoner per week. The equivalent data for the small number of female young offenders are not available.

Prisons

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much funding was made available for staff education and development in prisons in (a) 2003–04, (b) 2004–05 and (c) 2005–06; how much is planned for 2006–07; and if he will make a statement. [65581]

Fiona Mactaggart: In 2003–04 the identifiable staff training and development costs were £24.3 million, in 2004–05, £23.5 million and in 2005–06 £37.4 million. The latter figure includes £11.2 million for training in the new Phoenix accounting scheme. A significant amount of local training is carried out at individual prison establishments and could be identified only at disproportionate cost.

The total forecast training activity costs for 2006–07 are not yet available, as the detailed budget figures have not yet been finalised.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will initiate comprehensive ethnic and religious monitoring across the prison estate. [65589]

Fiona Mactaggart: The Public Sector Prison Service routinely collects data on the ethnicity and religion of prisoners. It also collects data on the ethnicity, but not the religion, of staff.

In accordance with the Race Relations (Amendment) Act 2000, ethnic monitoring data is used to monitor the impact of a range of policies and practices on prisoners, and of a range of employment functions on staff.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many women are in prison for non-violent offences; and how many were sentenced for each type of such offence. [65598]

Fiona Mactaggart: Information on the current female population serving sentences in prisons in England and Wales by offence type is contained in Table 2 of the February 2006 population in custody monthly tables available on the Home Office website. Out of 3,460 serving a custodial sentence, 2,494 were for non-violent offence types. These comprise all offence types except those categorised as violence against the person and robbery.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of prisoners in England and Wales are serving sentences of fewer than 12 months. [65796]

Fiona Mactaggart: Information on the population serving sentences of less than 12 months in prisons in England and Wales is contained in Table 1 of the February 2006 population in custody monthly tables. The proportion of prisoners among the sentenced population serving sentences of less than 12 months was 13 per cent. A copy of this publication is available at the following web-site: http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/omcs.html.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) complaints, (b) investigations and (c) disciplinary actions were dealt with by governors at each London prison relating to (i) prison support staff, (ii) prison officers and (iii) prison governors in each of the last five years for which figures are available; what the average length of investigation was, broken down by grade; what proportion resulted in disciplinary action being taken, broken down by grade; and what disciplinary actions were taken, broken down by grade. [66547]

Fiona Mactaggart: The level of detail required by the hon. Member could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the statistical correlation between participation in education in custody and rates of reoffending upon release. [66548]

Fiona Mactaggart: The Research, Development and Statistics unit in the National Offender Management Service is conducting a reconviction analysis based on information collected in three resettlement surveys undertaken in 2001, 2003 and 2004. In these surveys prisoners nearing discharge were asked about their basic skills, education, training, employment, accommodation and drug use before prison, as well as on interventions they had received in prison and their family ties. The surveys were representative of prisoners nearing release in England and Wales. Reconviction details for the offenders in the surveys have been obtained from Police National Computer data. There are nearly 5,000 cases in the final dataset.

The main objective of the analysis is to increase understanding of links between resettlement factors (including education in custody) and reconviction, and to support future work on the effectiveness of measures to reduce re-offending.

A report on the reconviction analysis will be published.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many investigations have been conducted into governors at each London prison in each of the last five years; what allegations have caused the investigations to be launched; what proportion of investigations concluded have recommended disciplinary action; what disciplinary action was taken in each case; and if he will make a statement. [66552]

Fiona Mactaggart: The information is as follows

Disciplinary investigations in London prisons between 2002 and 2006 to date

Belmarsh

2002: One investigation into alleged assault.

2004: Two investigations into allegations of racism, and racism and bullying. None of the investigations recommended disciplinary action.

Brixton

2004: One investigation into illegal planting of listening device. Disciplinary action recommended but charge dismissed at hearing.

Feltham

2005: One investigation into ABH. The case was referred to the police and the governor grade resigned following criminal conviction.

Holloway

2006: Ongoing investigation into racial harassment. It would not be appropriate to comment further.

Latchmere House

Nil.

Pentonville

2002: One investigation into discrimination. The complaint was withdrawn and no action taken.

2003: One investigation into harassment, advice and guidance was recommended and given.

2005: One investigation into poor performance of duties, advice and guidance was recommended and given.

2006: One investigation ongoing into being unfit for duty.

Wandsworth

2004: One investigation into poor performance of duties, advice and guidance recommended and given. One investigation into inappropriate behaviour, no action recommended.

2005: One investigation into inappropriate behaviour, no action was recommended. One investigation into poor performance of duties, advice and guidance was recommended and given. One investigation into harassment, advice and guidance was recommended and given.

Wormwood Scrubs

Nil.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish the report of the Schito inquiry into the allocation of places at HM Prison Wandsworth. [66553]

Fiona Mactaggart: This was a disciplinary investigation and the information obtained was for the specific purpose of informing internal disciplinary processes. It will not be published.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish the report of the recent performance testing exercise at HM Prison Wandsworth. [66554]

Fiona Mactaggart: The service level review carried out for the performance test of Wandsworth prison is an internal management tool produced for the London Area Manager. The Regional Offender Manager for London now independently monitors the service level agreement. There are no plans to publish the report.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) director of personnel, (b) director of finance, (c) doctor, (d) pharmacist, (e) pharmacy technician, (f) training manager and (g) chaplain posts in the Prison Service have been advertised in each of the last 12 months; in which (i) publications and (ii) professional journals the posts were advertised; how many applications were received for each post; and what proportion of (A) applicants, (B) those interviewed and (C) those appointed were from each ethnic group. [66555]

Fiona Mactaggart: Responsibility for recruitment into the public sector Prison Service is devolved to local areas and detailed records are not maintained centrally. Ethnicity information is collated for diversity monitoring and is included in the table. Information on total posts advertised or where they were advertised is not available but total numbers recruited have been provided. The outstanding information is not collated centrally could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

HM Prison Service in England and Wales—recruitment in the last 12 months

Post	Staff recruited	Average number of applicants per post	Proportion of applicants recorded as black and minority ethnic (BME) (percentage)	Proportion of applicants offered an interview recorded as BME (percentage)	Proportion of successful applicants recorded as BME (percentage)

Chaplain	31	4.7	54	46	39

[1] Not a recognised grade and therefore not recorded in this way.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what action he is taking to avoid duplication of management roles by way of the operation of prison clusters; [66557]

(2) what proportion of staff were appointed to their preferred role as part of the Prison Service's Sheppey Improvement Team project; [66558]

(3) what the cost of the work of the Prison Service's Sheppey Improvement Team was; and what defined output improvements were delivered. [66559]

Fiona Mactaggart: The Prison Service will consider clustering prison establishments, where doing so will achieve more effective and efficient performance within that group of establishments. A review of management roles and responsibilities is key to avoiding duplication, and is a significant aspect of the clustering process and essential to realising benefits.

Of the 796 staff who were asked to express a preference:

75 per cent. got their preference;

12 per cent. did not respond;

13 per cent. were placed into posts.

The cost of the Sheppey Improvement Team was £296,741. This is the cost of the central team and does not include the cost of the contributions from other groups in the Prison Service.

The proposals approved by the evaluation team demonstrate value for money, more constructive activities and improved resettlement opportunities for prisoners. The process will deliver improvements in several measurable indicators including key performance targets and compliance with standards.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what the operational reasons were in each case for governors at HM Prison Wandsworth to travel to (a) Japan, (b) Australia and (c) Antigua to escort repatriated prisoners back to the United Kingdom in the last 12 months; [66563]

(2) what estimate he has made of the cost of (a) prison officers and (b) governor grades travelling to (i) Japan, (ii) Australia and (iii) Antigua to escort repatriated prisoners back to the United Kingdom in the last 12 months. [66564]

Fiona Mactaggart: No operational managers (governor grades) have escorted repatriated prisoners to any country in the last 12 months. The costs, excluding air fares, of the prison officers undertaking escorts of repatriated prisoners to the countries in question is as follows: Japan—0, Antigua—£20,202, Australia—£8,466.63. These figures include salary costs.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the implementation of the Prison Service Violence Reduction Strategy. [66568]

Fiona Mactaggart: The national Violence Reduction Strategy was launched in May 2004. The national strategy requires each establishment to have in place a local Violence Reduction Strategy appropriate to needs. A whole prison approach is encouraged, with the aim of reducing violence and fear of violence. A focus on personal safety, supporting victims, and repairing the physical and emotional harm caused by violence or abuse, links closely with the suicide prevention strategy.

Prisons are audited against Prison Service Standard 53, Violence Reduction, which identifies strengths and areas for improvement at each establishment. This evidence suggests that many establishments have implemented thorough local strategies, which were formulated with the close involvement of focus groups of staff and prisoners. A revised violence reduction strategy is planned for 2007 to reflect expected learning from the forthcoming report of the inquiry into the death of Zahid Mubarek and from a recent research study, which was undertaken to identify good practice in implementing the violence reduction strategy in the first year. There has also been an operational review of violence reduction, many of the recommendations from which have already been adopted in prisons.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will extend the Goods Again project at HM Prison Onley to other establishments. [66569]

Fiona Mactaggart: The Goods Again project, which involves a partnership between the community sector, Onley prison and the local authority to provide an electrical goods re-use service, is still in its infancy. As the scheme progresses and develops, consideration will be given to whether it is possible and appropriate to expand its use to other prisons and areas.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for what reason juveniles are being detained at HM Prison Woodhill; what facilities are designated for juveniles being detained there; what plans he has to move juvenile detainees from HM Prison Woodhill; and when he plans to complete those moves. [66571]

Fiona Mactaggart: Three juveniles are detained at Woodhill because of the security risk they present. The Youth Justice Board, is currently satisfied with the arrangements in place.

The juveniles are in a self-contained wing in single rooms. They are permitted their own clothing, association, they attend education and gymnasium and have access to work, a radio, CDs and a games console. Subject to behaviour, a television is provided. They are able to have regular social visits, and access to the telephone.

An alternative suitable location which offers an appropriate level of security is being sought.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on implementation of anti-bullying procedures at HM Prison Woodhill. [66572]

Fiona Mactaggart: A Violence Reduction Strategy is in place at Woodhill which incorporates an anti-bullying management process. A Safer Custody Coordinator has been appointed. Staff are encouraged to complete Security Information Reports to enable analysis of bullying at Woodhill and thereby help to direct resources and interventions to address bullying.

Bullying is known to be more prevalent among young offenders at Woodhill. Action taken to reduce bullying among this group includes:

An anti-bullying course has been developed specifically for young offenders at the prison to raise awareness of bullying issues, and to encourage young offenders to address their behaviour. To date, 106 young offenders have attended the course;

Development of an anti-bullying video with Stantonbury Campus aimed at highlighting bullying in prisons to encourage prisoners to change their behaviour;

Staff training to raise awareness of bullying issues and to enable staff to deliver the anti-bullying course to prisoners;

Team building morning held to develop relationships between prisoners on the young offender unit;

Young offenders have their own dedicated gym session to address the problem of bullying in the showers.

The work with young offenders will be extended to the adult population.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action he is taking to improve the relationship between staff and inmates at HM Prison Leeds. [66575]

Fiona Mactaggart: Measures to improve staff prisoner relationships have been agreed as part of an establishment performance improvement plan and work is being undertaken by the head of prisoner services and the decency team to ensure that staff engage appropriately with prisoners. Work is also ongoing to develop request and complaints processes to ensure that both staff and prisoners have confidence in the system.

The prison service director of operations and area manager have agreed to a reduction of 104 in the operational capacity (from 1,254 down to 1,150). Despite this significant reduction the same resources have been maintained to facilitate staff in improving staff prisoner relationships at Leeds.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent assessment he has made of the use of the special cell at HM Prison Leeds. [66592]

Fiona Mactaggart: Following HM Chief Inspector of Prison's inspection, the special cell is only used where full relocation is necessary for violent and/or refractory prisoners. Each usage is authorised by a governor and a quality assurance checklist has been implemented. Guidance ensures that all paperwork explains why the special accommodation has been used and that this is never to be used solely for preventing self- harm. Regular contact with the prisoner takes place, at no more than 15-minute intervals, with staff/prisoner interactions recorded in the unit log sheet.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action he is taking to improve the physical working conditions for staff at prisons. [66593]

Fiona Mactaggart: Prison management have an obligation to ensure that all staff work in a safe and clean environment. As part of the strategic development of the prison estate, the National Offender Management Service will improve, where possible, those facilities used by staff as well as by prisoners.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what the cost will be of the Prison Service's listen to improve scheme; [66594]

(2) what budget is available for the development of local people plans at (a) each prison and (b) Prison Service headquarters; and what mechanisms are in place to ensure (i) efficiency, (ii) effectiveness and (iii) value for money; [66595]

(3) how participants in the Prison Service's People Strategy will be selected; [66596]

(4) if he will make a statement on the launch of the Prison Service's People Strategy. [66597]

Fiona Mactaggart: The public sector Prison Service launched its People Strategy in January 2006. The People Strategy will be delivered locally through Local People Plans developed from Listen to Improve groups. These are staff consultation and involvement groups to gather staff views on what should be addressed in the Local People Plan, with staff volunteering to take part. The direct costs of facilitating the Listen to Improve groups were £140,500 in 2005–06 and are forecast to be £222,000 in 2006–07. A breakdown of full costs, by prison establishment, could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. Implementation of the People Strategy is overseen by a programme board and subject to regular review by the Prison Service's Change Management Board.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the job evaluation scheme for the Prison Service in the eastern region. [66598]

Fiona Mactaggart: The Prison Service is currently developing a new job evaluation system (JES) to cover the majority of its directly employed staff. As part of this process, a pilot exercise has been run in the service's eastern region, which involved interviewing a representative sample of about 100 postholders. The results of these interviews are currently being analysed and will inform the future development of the JES. The work on JES is an essential building block in the service's strategy for pay and workforce reform.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the Prison Service's deaths in custody initiative. [66600]

Fiona Mactaggart: I refer the hon. Member to the answers I gave on 15 March 2006, Official Report, column 2313–14W and on 29 March 2006, Official Report, column 1038–39W.

Mr. Burrowes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 20 April 2006, Official Report, column 256, on access to drugs in prison, what steps are being taken to combat access to illegal drugs in prisons. [66687]

Fiona Mactaggart: A comprehensive range of measures is in place to reduce the supply of drugs into prisons. It includes:

passive and active drug dogs;

closed circuit television systems and fixed and low-level furniture in social visits area; closed visits and visit bans on visitors suspected of smuggling drugs;

sharing of intelligence with police about drug routes into prisons;

the use of the Supply Reduction Good Practice Guide;

mandatory drug testing;

local searching strategies; and deployment of mobile phone detectors and analysis of recovered phones for intelligence purposes.

Since 1996–97 the level of prison drug misuse as measured by the random mandatory drug testing programme has fallen by more than 50 per cent.

Racially Motivated Crime (Statistics)

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the scale was of the inaccuracies in the racially motivated crime statistics that caused them to be withdrawn; what the cause of the error was; and when corrected statistics will be published. [66725]

Hazel Blears: The publication of 'Statistics on Race and the Criminal Justice System' published on Thursday 30 March 2006 was withdrawn following the identification of apparent errors for four police forces areas (Hertfordshire, North Yorkshire, Dorset and Nottinghamshire) in Table 3.1 covering racially-motivated offences reported to the police.

These errors were caused by amendments from Hertfordshire, North Yorkshire and Dorset which had been notified to the Home Office having not being included in the final published document. No error had been notified for Nottinghamshire.

Officials are now checking all the figures included in this publication with the police and other agencies before the publication will be reissued.

Respect Task Force

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) full-time and (b) part-time employees work in his Department's Respect Task Force. [66309]

Hazel Blears: There are 28 full-time employees and three part-time employees currently working in the Respect Task Force.

Segregation Units (Prisons)

James Duddridge: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the progress of the review of segregation units in prisons. [66994]

Fiona Mactaggart: The Prison Service is currently undertaking a review of the segregation performance standard and the segregation policies set out in Prison Service Order 1700. It is anticipated that the review will be completed in March 2007.

Sex Offender Vetting

Joan Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether the proposals to develop a new vetting and barring scheme will include provisions to bar those on the sex offenders register from holding office (a) as a local councillor and (b) on a police authority; and if he will make a statement. [44251]

Ruth Kelly: I have been asked to reply as my Department has responsibility for the new vetting and barring scheme, under which people will be barred where they present a risk of harm either to children and/or vulnerable adults, including due to inclusion on the sex offenders register. Depending on the risk they present, people will be barred from working closely with either children and/or vulnerable adults which would include caring for, training or supervising children or vulnerable adults, working in establishments that children or vulnerable adults use (such as schools and care homes) or holding positions of authority in relation to children or vulnerable adults (such as local councillors with responsibilities in relation to children's or adults' services).

My Department does not have responsibility for the vetting procedures for local councillors or for employment with the police authorities, this lies with the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister and the Home Office respectively.

Sheppey Offender Management Pilot

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the Sheppey Offender Management Pilot. [66556]

Fiona Mactaggart: The three prisons on the Isle of Sheppey have been conducting a small scale pilot of the National Offender Management Model since 7 November 2005. 183 prisoners were involved in the pilot between seven November 2005 and 31 March 2006. The aim of the pilot is to put into practice the national offender management model, part of which deals specifically with the identified necessary interventions required for the individual offenders. The results of the pilot are currently being evaluated. The sentence plan which outlines the interventions is owned by the community based offender manager and delivered by the custody based offender supervisor.

Swinfen Hall

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of inmates at HM YOI Swinfen Hall had access to first night procedures in each year since 1997. [66574]

Fiona Mactaggart: The information is not available in the form requested. In general, all prisoners received into Swinfen Hall are provided with access to first night procedures, and have been since 1997, though the nature of these arrangements has changed and been developed over this period.

UN Convention on the Rights of the Child

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will withdraw the UK's Reservation to the UN Convention on the Rights of the Child. [66666]

Fiona Mactaggart: The UK retains two reservations from the UN Convention on the Rights of the Child. The first of these relates to mixing of children and adults and states:

> "Where at any time there is a lack of suitable accommodation or adequate facilities for a particular individual in any institution in which young offenders are detained, or where the mixing of adults and children is deemed to be mutually beneficial, the United Kingdom reserves the right not to apply article 37*(c)* in so far as those provisions require children who are detained to be accommodated separately from adults."

The second reservation refers to Immigration and Nationality and states:

> "UK reserves the right to apply such legislation, in so far as it relates to the entry into, stay in and departure from the UK of those who do not have the right under the law of the UK to enter and remain in the UK, and to the acquisition and possession of citizenship."

UK law honours the spirit of the Convention in relation to the standards of care and treatment available to children in the UK, including asylum-seeking children. We believe it is necessary to retain this reservation because it preserves the integrity of our immigration laws. The UK has entered other, similar reservations in respect of other human rights instruments. We are satisfied that asylum-seeking children in the UK receive adequate care, protection and support.

Regarding children mixing with adults: we have made great progress in achieving separation of under and over-18s in custody, for example by placing girls under 17 in non-prison service accommodation and by providing new, special units for 17 year old girls. We will therefore be considering whether there is a continuing need for the Reservation against Article 37*(c)* of the Convention; and this review is due to begin shortly.

CABINET OFFICE

Departmental Websites

Norman Baker: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will list (a) the websites operated by his Department, including the Cabinet Office and (b) the reports placed on the internet in March 2006, indicating in each case whether paper copies were also made available. [65216]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The websites operated by the Department are shown in the table.

"Equalities Review—Interim Report"—A paper version was made available, including a large print version.

Except where indicated, paper copies were not made available. But the reports were published on the internet in print-friendly PDF format and, in most cases, the relevant section of the Cabinet Office will provide paper copies on request.

Equal Pay

John Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what steps are being taken by the Government to close the gender pay gap in the Civil Service. [65627]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The Government recognise that it is good employer practice to ensure that pay and conditions of service are fair and free from any form of gender bias. It demonstrated its commitment to addressing the gender pay gap by requiring every department and agency to undertake an equal pay review and prepare an action plan in 2003.

Cabinet Office encourages departments to monitor progress against their action plans and review their pay systems following implementation of annual pay awards. Departments should also carry out full equality proofing of their reward policies every three years. Where there is evidence of pay inequalities, departments are expected to address the inequalities in an appropriate manner.

The Cabinet Office also undertook an equal pay review for the Senior Civil Service (SCS) in 2002 which has been re-examined each year since then as part of the Government's evidence to the Senior Salaries Review Body.

The Government are committed to ensuring that pay systems in the public sector are fair and non discriminatory, reflecting the contribution of the individual.

Ministerial Travel

Norman Baker: To ask the Minister without Portfolio what mileage was undertaken in February by the car allocated to the Minister Without Portfolio. [65221]

Mr. McCartney: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 29 March 2006, Official Report, column 1032W.

Office of Public Service Reform

Norman Baker: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will list the changes in Government policy that resulted from recommendations of the Office of Public Service Reform. [65225]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The Office of Public Service Reform (OPSR) initiated a wide range of public service improvement work, relating in particular to customer focus, much of which is now being used in Departments. More specifically OPSR was responsible for:

Developing public service reform strategy (the Prime Minister's "Four Principles of Reform" and "People at the Heart of Public Services")

Identifying the main generic factors that determine peoples' satisfaction with public services (eg, delivery, timeliness, information, professionalism, and staff attitude)

Developing a range of service delivery performance improvement methodologies for departments (eg, delivery landscape reviews, end-to-end delivery chain reviews, agency review)

Developing Charter Mark as a cutting edge of customer service practice

Developing Government policy on inspection of public services.

Promoting the development of more systematic pay and work force strategies and stronger leadership to reinforce user focus.

Parliamentary Accountability

Norman Baker: To ask the Minister without Portfolio if he will set out the steps he takes to ensure parliamentary accountability for his actions. [65269]

Mr. McCartney: In accordance with the requirements of the Ministerial Code, it is for Ministers in charge of Departments to answer questions on the work of their Departments. In line with the practices of previous administrations, I do not have a slot on the rota for oral questions as I am not in charge of a Department.

Written questions which are relevant to my ministerial responsibilities are for me to answer in the normal way.

Parliamentary Questions

Norman Baker: To ask the Minister without Portfolio for what reasons written parliamentary questions tabled to him by the hon. Member for Lewes on 22 March were answered by the Parliamentary Secretary in the Cabinet Office. [65252]

Mr. McCartney: This was due to an administrative error.

I have written to the hon. Member today to apologise for the error and the Official Reporter will be asked to correct the Official Report.

Norman Baker: To ask the Minister without Portfolio if he will make a statement on his practices in respect of written parliamentary questions tabled to him for answer. [65253]

Mr. McCartney: I respond to written parliamentary questions in accordance with the requirements of the Ministerial Code.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Arson

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the total number of arson attacks was for the 100 (a) primary and (b) secondary schools in Northern Ireland with the (i) highest and (ii) lowest percentage of children receiving free school meals in each of the past 10 years. [66091]

Angela E. Smith: The information on the number of arson attacks in schools refer to those with the highest and lowest percentages of pupils with free school meal entitlement. This was used instead of pupils receiving free school meals, as entitlement is a better measure of need. The information on the number of arson attacks in the past 10 years is not available. The Education and Library Boards have provided the following information for maintained and controlled schools for the years 2002–03 to 2005–06.

Percentage

	2002–03		2003–04		2004–05		2005–06
	High	Low	High	Low	High	Low	High	Low
Primary	3	0	1	0	1	1	3	0
Post Prim	4	2	5	5	2	0	4	1

The information for voluntary grammar and grant maintained integrated schools in the form requested is not readily available and is being requested. I will write to you with the information as soon as possible.

Average Annual Industrial Wages

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the ratio was of average annual industrial wage levels to average terrace house prices in Northern Ireland between 1995 and 2005. [65710]

Mr. Hanson: There is no official estimate available for the average sale price of terrace properties in Northern Ireland during this period. Published figures on the sale price of new terrace properties (including town houses) are provided in Table 1.

The average gross annual earnings[1] in Northern Ireland for all employees (i.e. full and part-time) working in the manufacturing sector according to the Annual Survey of Hours and Earnings (ASHE) are provided in Table 2.

Table 1

	Average sale price of new terrace properties (£000)

1999	15.6
2000	16.6
2001	17.5
2002	18.3
2003	18.8
2004[2]	19.7
2005[2]	19.7

[1] Please note that the above information relates to employees on adult rates who have been in the same job for more than a year.

[2] Implementation of Office for National Statistics (ONS) recommendations to improve the quality of the survey have resulted in a discontinuity with earlier data from 2004 (see the ONS Review of Distribution of Earnings Statistics report at http://www.statistics.gov.uk).

[3] ASHE statistics prior to 1997 are currently not available (n/a).

Notes:

Housing

1. Estimates of the average sale price of existing terrace properties (2002–05) are being produced, but are not currently available.

2. The figures shown on average sale price of new terrace properties are taken from NI Housing Statistics, but this taken in isolation does not represent the housing market for terrace properties. In particular, new terrace houses are more expensive than new semi-detached houses, whereas the same is not believed to be true for existing properties.

3. In the granting of mortgages, lenders take account of the entire income of the purchaser(s), including the income of partners, which may be earned in the non-industrial sector.

Earnings

1. The Annual Survey of Hours and Earnings (ASHE) is a UK wide survey that provides a wide range of information on hourly, weekly and annual earnings by gender, work patterns, industry and occupation inter alia. The Office for National Statistics (ONS) carry out ASHE in Great Britain and it is carried out by the Department of Enterprise, Trade and Investment (DETI) in Northern Ireland.

2. ASHE is a sample survey and uses the Inland Revenue's PA YE system as the main sampling frame. To improve coverage and hence make the survey more representative, supplementary information was collected since 2004 on businesses not registered for VAT and for people who changed or started new jobs between the sample selection and the survey reference period. The improvements have caused a discontinuity with earlier available data (1997–2003) when no supplementary data was collected. The data on earnings is obtained not from the employees, but from their employers under the authority of the Statistics of Trade and Employment (Northern Ireland) Order 1988. Information collected is treated as strictly confidential and is used only for statistical purposes.

3. A recent National Statistics review of earnings statistics recommended that median values (the figure below which 50 per cent. of values fall) are used in preference to mean values (the sum divided by the number of values) when reporting earnings. The mean and the median measure different things and can both be appropriate measures depending on what the user is trying to measure. The mean measures the average amount earned by individuals but in a skew distribution such as earnings this measure is susceptible to small numbers of very high earners, whereas the median measures the amount earned by the individual in the middle of a ranked distribution. However, in this instance the mean values have been used to ensure equivalence with the average used to report on house prices in the response.

Curriculum and Assessment

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland pursuant to the answer of 13 March 2006, Official Report, column 2033W, on curriculum and assessment when he expects to be in a position to write to the hon. Lady for North Down with the Council for Curriculum, Examinations and Assessment's advice. [68091]

Angela E. Smith: Since the hon. Lady's previous question, the Council for Curriculum, Examinations and Assessment has continued to work on a detailed response to the points raised by Dr. Morrison. This material is now available and will be sent to the hon. Lady and placed in the Library of the House.

Domestic Rates

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he expects the Department of Finance and Personnel in Northern Ireland to complete the valuation of domestic properties in connection with the rating of those properties. [66987]

Angela E. Smith: The valuation phase of domestic revaluation will be completed by the end of May 2006 and publication of the draft schedule of values will take place on a phased basis over a seven-week period commencing the end of June 2006.

Draft Belfast Metropolitan Area Plan

Mr. Donaldson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the expected timescale is for a public inquiry into the draft Belfast metropolitan area plan. [67623]

Angela E. Smith: The Department of the Environment has recently written to the Planning Appeals Commission formally requesting a public inquiry into the draft Belfast metropolitan area plan (BMAP), published in November 2004, and Amendment No. 1 to the draft plan, published in February 2006. The PAC's formal acceptance of the request and their response as to when the inquiry might begin are currently awaited. The arrangements and timetable for the inquiry will thereafter become the responsibility of the PAC.

Drug Addicts

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many registered drug addicts there are in each (a) ward, (b) county and (c) constituency in Northern Ireland; what percentage of the total this represents in each case; and if he will make a statement. [67932]

Mr. Woodward: The Northern Ireland Addicts Index Database holds information on all those persons registered in concurrence with the Misuse of Drugs (Notification of and Supply to Addicts) (Northern Ireland) Regulations 1973. It is based on a specific list of drugs, not necessarily all those which are used by addicts, and is dependent on GPs and other doctors filling in and submitting the required form. It does not represent the full total of those currently in treatment for problem drug use in Northern Ireland. The latest figures from the Database shows that in 2004/2005 there were 239 'registered drug addicts'. Their distribution by Health and Social Services Board is provided in the following table:

Registered addicts by Health and Social Services Board 2005

	Number	Percentage
Northern	102	43
Eastern	97	41
Western	20	8
Southern	15	6
Total	[1]239	100

[1] This figure includes 5 individuals for whom Health and Social Services Board could not be established.

Note:

The data collected for the database does not facilitate description of those on the register by council ward or Parliamentary constituency.

The Government take the problem use of illicit drugs very seriously and will continue to ensure appropriate and accessible treatment and support is available across Northern Ireland. We will also continue to promote activities aimed at reducing illicit drug use. Further details of action planned to address this issue will be found in the New Strategic Direction for Alcohol and Drugs 2006–2011 to be launched on May 8.

Economic Growth

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the rate of economic growth has been in Northern Ireland for each of the last 10 years. [67074]

Angela E. Smith: Economic growth rates for the UK regions are derived from the regional gross value added statistics released by the Office of National Statistics. The ten most recent growth rates for Northern Ireland are illustrated in the following table. It should, however, be noted that these are on a nominal basis, as reliable regional price deflators are unavailable to convert them into real terms.

The rate of economic growth in Northern Ireland for 1994–2004

	GVA at current basic prices (£ million)	Growth rate (Percentage)
1994	13431	—
1995	14352	6.86
1996	15413	7.39
1997	16283	5.64
1998	17274	6.09
1999	18077	4.65
2000	18918	4.65
2001	19817	4.75
2002	20825	5.09
2003	21952	5.41
2004	23058	5.04

Emergency Drills

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland on what dates since October 2001, local authorities and emergency services have carried out nuclear emergency drills in co-operation with UK agencies; and where these drills were carried out. [22763]

Angela E. Smith: Government Departments in Northern Ireland have not held any nuclear emergency drills involving local authorities and emergency services since October 2001.

Employment Statistics

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what change there has been in the number of people employed full-time on farms in Northern Ireland over the past 10 years. [67549]

Angela E. Smith: The number of full-time farmers in Northern Ireland has fallen from 23,400 in 1995 to 18,200 in 2005, a decline of 5,200.

The number of other full-time workers on farms in Northern Ireland has fallen from 3,600 in 1995 to 2,600 in 2005, a decline of 1,000.

Farming (Fraudulent Claims)

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people have been successfully prosecuted under the (a) Animals (Records) Order (Northern Ireland) 1997, (b) Sheep Annual Premium Regulations (Northern Ireland) 1992 and (c) Integrated Administration and Control Systems Regulations 1993 in each of the last five years; and what the total cost was of fraudulent claims made in each case in each year. [65368]

Angela E. Smith: The information is as follows:

Animals (Records) Order and Sheep Annual Premium Convictions

Year of conviction	Scheme year	Number of convictions	Cost of fraud (£)
2001–02	2001	2	4,448.00
2002–03	2002	3	6,556.00
2003–04	2003	9	33,672.00
2004–05	2004	8	51,674.00

2004–05	2003	3	3,732.00
2005–06	2004	2	8,301.00
Total		5	12,033.00

Note:
No IACS convictions prior to 2004–05

Female Council Candidates

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many female candidates there are in the Northern Ireland council elections. [67072]

Mr. Hanson: According to the Electoral Office for Northern Ireland's records, 201 candidates at the 2005 district council elections were female. This was out of a total of 918 candidates and represents just under 22 per cent. of the total. There are no local council elections taking place in Northern Ireland this year.

Government Taskforce on Needs

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland which areas are being targeted by the Government taskforce established to assess the needs of those areas; and which civil and elected representatives have been consulted by the taskforce in each of these areas. [64357]

Mr. Hanson: The Taskforce to Address the Needs of Protestant Working Class Communities did not target any specific areas but rather Protestant communities across Northern Ireland as a whole. The Taskforce Report was published on 4 April 2006 and is available at www.dsdni.gov.uk.

The Taskforce met with representatives of:

the Church of Ireland and the Presbyterian and Methodist churches;

Evangelical Contribution on Northern Ireland;

the Orange Order;

Protestant/Unionist/Loyalist Network;

Rural Community Network;

Diversity Challenges;

Northern Ireland Housing Executive;

North Belfast Community Action Unit;

PSNI;

Community Relations Council;

Institute of Directors;

Confederation of British Industry; and political parties.

A number of individual community activists also met the Taskforce.

As Minister with responsibility for Social Development I undertook a series of consultations on the Taskforce Report and have completed fifty meetings with civic and elected representatives of the Protestant community as part of this process.

Greyhound Racing

Dr. Alasdair McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what legislation applies to the use of greyhounds in greyhound racing in Northern Ireland. [66102]

Angela E. Smith: Under the Welfare of Animals Act (Northern Ireland) 1972 all animals are protected from unnecessary cruelty or suffering, though there are no specific provisions on the welfare of racing greyhounds.

Housing

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the average housing price in Northern Ireland has been in each of the last 10 years. [67061]

Angela E. Smith: The Valuation and Lands Agency maintains a database of house sales, which covers the period from mid-2002 to present. Prior to mid-2002 this data was not recorded in a way that permits statistical analysis, except at disproportionate cost.

The average house price in Northern Ireland for each year in which data is available is as follows:

2002 (2nd half)	97,067
2003	105,558
2004	110,760
2005	116,914

Housing Benefits

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many households in Northern Ireland he estimates will be entitled to housing benefit in 2006–07. [68102]

Mr. Hanson: It is estimated that there will be a total of 183,500 households entitled to housing benefit in 2006–07.

Inflation

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the rate of inflation was in Northern Ireland in each of the last 10 years. [67063]

Angela E. Smith: Statistics have not yet been developed to enable the production of reliable regional inflation rates within the UK. However, research by the Office of National Statistics indicated that the cost of living in Northern Ireland, during 2004, was approximately three to five per cent. below the UK average.

InterTradeIreland

Sammy Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what recent assessment he has made of the (a) quality and (b) performance of InterTradeIreland. [64617]

Angela E. Smith: InterTradeIreland's business plan is subject to scrutiny by the two Sponsor Departments (North and South) on an annual basis; and its annual accounts are examined separately and certified by the Comptroller and Auditor General for Northern Ireland and the Irish Comptroller and Auditor General.

The Body's activities are also subject to regular monitoring by the two Sponsor Departments, who are satisfied with the overall quality and performance since its inception.

Invest Northern Ireland

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much land held by Invest Northern Ireland is available for industrial use in each of Northern Ireland's constituencies. [66403]

Angela E. Smith: The amount of land held by Invest Northern Ireland which is available for industrial use in each of Northern Ireland's constituencies is as follows. These figures do not include 1,885 acres (763 ha) of land held by Invest NI that is currently in industrial use.

Parliamentary constituency	Land available for industrial use
	Acres	Hectares
Belfast East	0.0	0.0
Belfast North	2.9	1.2
Belfast South	0.0	0.0
Belfast West	22.3	9.0

Legal Advice

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps have been taken to ensure a panel of barristers is available to the Northern Ireland Administration to provide legal advice. [66508]

Angela E. Smith: Three panels of junior counsel and one of senior counsel were appointed by the Attorney General in April 2004 after consultation with the Secretary of State to support the work of Senior and Junior Crown Counsel in providing advice to and representation for both the Northern Ireland departments and the Whitehall departments operating in Northern Ireland. The appointments were made following an open competition and selection by a board comprising representatives of the devolved and Westminster administrations, with two independent members.

Measuring Public Opinion

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland which organisations or companies have been employed by his Department on measuring public opinion in each of the last three years; and how much has been spent in each case. [44742]

Mr. Hanson: The following organisations and companies have been employed on measuring public opinion during the last three years; the Northern Ireland Statistics & Research Agency; Queen's University Belfast; University of Central Lancashire & University of Manchester; Independent Research Solutions; Gallup Europe; Anderson Spratt Group; A V Browne; and Millward Brown.

The total amount paid in each of the last three years to these organisations and companies for projects in which public opinion was measured is provided in the following table.

It is not possible to distinguish between the amount spent on measuring public opinion and other activities within the same project.

To disclose the amount paid to individual private sector companies would be prejudicial to commercial interests.

Planning

Dr. McCrea: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) how many planning refusal notices have been issued in each district council area in Northern Ireland in each of the last five years; [25778]

(2) how many planning approval decisions have been issued in each of the last five years in each district council area in Northern Ireland. [25779]

Angela E. Smith: Details of how many applications were refused or approved since 2000 are set out in the following tables.

Mr. Donaldson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many valid planning applications have been received by the divisional planning office in (a) Downpatrick and (b) Craigavon in each of the last five years. [67620]

Angela E. Smith: The total number of valid planning applications received in the Craigavon and Downpatrick divisional planning offices between 2001 and 2005 are as follows:

	Craigavon	Downpatrick
2001	5,084	4,204
2002	5,578	4,721
2003	6,714	4,796
2004	7,289	5,942
2005	6,455	4,811

Mr. Donaldson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many planning approvals have been received by the Divisional Planning Office in (a) Downpatrick and (b) Craigavon in each of the last five years. [67621]

Angela E. Smith: The total number of planning approvals issued by the Craigavon and Downpatrick Divisional Planning Offices between 2001 and 2005 are as follows:

Number

	Craigavon	Downpatrick
2001	4303	3223
2002	4486	3822
2003	4538	3706
2004	4100	4256
2005	4563	3696

Mr. Donaldson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the average length of time taken to process a planning application from application to approval is in the (a) Downpatrick and (b) Craigavon Divisional Planning Office. [67622]

Angela E. Smith: In 2005 the average time taken to process a planning application to approval was 36.39 weeks in the Downpatrick Divisional Planning Office (DPO) and 26.84 weeks in the Craigavon DPO.

Police

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland pursuant to the answer of 18 April 2006, Official Report, column 499W on police, how many people were in each category of applicants. [67133]

Mr. Woodward: I am advised that the number of people in each category of applicants for the last two PSNI trainee constable competitions were as follows:

Competition	Number of Protestant applications	Number of Catholic applications	Number non-determined
9	3876	2068	162
10	4572	2851	268

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many Police Service of Northern Ireland students have been (a) disciplined and (b) expelled while undergoing their training in each of the last 10 years; and what percentage this is of the total intake in each year. [65333]

Mr. Woodward: It is not possible to provide this information prior to November 2001, as records before this date show no distinction between officers undergoing initial training (now termed 'student' officers) and those who have completed initial training ('probationer constables'). To this end, the figures prior to November 2001 cannot be provided.

The figures for November 2001 onwards are as follows:

	Number of students	Number of verbal warnings	Number of written warnings	Number of suspensions	Number of dismissals	Percentage of intake
2001–02	276	3	0	1	1	2
2002–03	540	19	14	0	2	6.5

2005–06	440	17	15	5	2	9

Road Tax

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people have been caught by road tax detection devices in each of the last five years, broken down by police region. [28845]

Angela E. Smith: On the road detection of vehicle excise duty evasion by Driver and Vehicle Licensing's (DVLNI) Automated Number Plate Readers (ANPRs) was introduced in 2001. Separate recording of ANPR detections disaggregated from those detected by Police or traffic wardens only started in 2002. The figures are:

	Number
2002–03	5,501
2003–04	6,024
2004–05	12,543

These figures are not recorded by police region.

Road Traffic Accidents

Mr. Donaldson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many (a) deaths and (b) serious injuries have been caused by road traffic accidents in Northern Ireland in each of the last five years. [67619]

Mr. Woodward: The information requested by the hon. Member is available on the Police Service of Northern Ireland website at www.psni.police.uk.

Shared Future Document

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when action plans will be produced by Departments to implement the recommendations of the Shared Future document. [66402]

Angela E. Smith: The first triennial action plan of A Shared Future was launched by my noble friend the Minister of State for Northern Ireland (Lord Rooker) on 27 April.

I have arranged for copies of the action plan to be placed in the Libraries of the House.

Sinn Fein/IRA Stormont Spy Ring

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people were assisted to move house as a result of the discovery of the Sinn Fein/IRA Stormont spy ring; and how many people had additional security measures fitted to their homes. [65323]

Mr. Woodward: The numbers of people assisted to move house and provided with home security measures as a result of the compromise of information in 2002 are as follows:

Protection scheme	Number admitted
Scheme for the special purchase of evacuated dwellings	499
Key persons protection scheme	669
Prison service assisted home removal scheme	453
Prison service protection scheme	960

Statemented Children

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what (a) number and (b) percentage of children with special educational needs have been (i) statemented and (ii) not statemented in the 100 (A) primary and (B) secondary schools in Northern Ireland with the (1) highest and (2) lowest percentage of children receiving free school meals in each of the last three years. [66085]

Angela E. Smith: The requested information is as follows:

Pupils with special educational needs who have been (a) statemented and (b) not statemented, in the 100 primary and post primary schools with the highest percentage of free school meals entitlement.

	Primary schools				Post primary schools
	SEN children with a statement		SEN children at Stages 1–4 (non statemented)		SEN children with a statement		SEN children at Stages 1–4 (non statemented)

Note:
Figures relate to post primary pupils and pupils in year 1 to year 7 classes in primary schools.

Taxis

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the reasons are for the time taken to introduce legislation on taxi regulation in Northern Ireland; and when he expects this legislation to be introduced. [66963]

Angela E. Smith: The necessary legislation to enable the Department of Environment to implement changes on taxi regulation is substantially drafted. We plan to start consulting on the draft legislation later this month.

Television Licences

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many (a) men and (b) women were successfully prosecuted during 2005 for not having a television licence in Northern Ireland. [65876]

Mr. Hanson: A total of 6,711 television licence cases were laid for Northern Ireland in 2005. A gender breakdown is not available.

Tourism

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what promotional activities are planned by the Northern Ireland Tourist Board to market Northern Ireland in Scotland during 2006. [65878]

Angela E. Smith: Tourism Ireland is responsible for marketing Northern Ireland as a preferred holiday destination in Great Britain and overseas. Tourism Ireland works closely with the Northern Ireland Tourist Board to fulfil this remit.

During 2006, Tourism Ireland's Glasgow office is undertaking the following marketing activities:

Five e-marketing communications to a total of 53,000 consumers:

TV advertising in January, March, May, June, July and August:

57 Scottish cinemas showing Northern Ireland advertisements during the run of "Narnia, the Lion, the Witch and the Wardrobe":

Four direct mail campaigns directed at 66,000 residents:

National (Great Britain) print advertisements in Scottish editions of newspapers— reaching the target audience of two million of sightseers and culture seekers plus additional five insertions in 'Scotland on Sunday':

Four consumer exhibitions in Glasgow, Edinburgh and Coatbridge from January to June:

Five Scottish tour operators attending the Northern Ireland Tourist Board Workshop in May:

Four Scottish coach operators and group organisers attending the Northern Ireland educational visit in September:

Five presentations to Scottish Travel Trade, media and business tourism agencies.

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much the Northern Ireland Tourist Board spent on promoting Northern Ireland as a tourist destination in the Republic of Ireland in each of the last five years. [66941]

Angela E. Smith: The Northern Ireland Tourist Board has an office in Dublin which includes a tourist information centre (TIC) and also a marketing team.

The annual spend in the RoI office during the period 2001–02 to 2005–06 varied by year and is detailed in the following table. The total spend figures include the running costs of the premises in Dublin.

Some of the promotion and advertising figures which may be of specific interest are itemised as follows.

	2001–02	2002–03	2003–04	2004–05	2005–06

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH OFFICE

China/Vietnam

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether the Government supports the procedures used by the European Commission to determine whether to impose anti-dumping duties on shoes from China and Vietnam. [66130]

Ian Pearson: The Government are content that the European Commission is carrying out its investigation into dumping of shoes with leather uppers from China and Vietnam, including its decision to impose provisional anti-dumping measures, in accordance with the procedures set down in Council Regulation (EC) 384/96 of 22 December 1995 (as amended) on protection against dumped imports from countries not members of the European Community. Nonetheless, the UK has questioned and continues to monitor a number of aspects of the investigation including, in particular, product coverage, the choice of analogue country for two non-market economies, decisions on market economy treatment of Chinese companies and the Community Interest assessment.

Gibraltar

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much was given to the Government of Gibraltar for national security in each of the last five years. [67065]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: The United Kingdom retains overall responsibility for the national security of Gibraltar. Overall Government expenditure on the two main forces responsible for this role in Gibraltar, namely, the Gibraltar Squadron and the Royal Gibraltar Regiment, over the past five years has been as follows:

	Gibraltar Squadron	Royal Gibraltar Regiment
2001–02	910,000	4,384,000
2002–03	1,101,000	4,733,000
2003–04	1,117,000	4,798,000
2004–05	1,245,000	5,116,000
2005–06	1,328,000	5,638,000

The totals are £5,701,000 and £24,669,000 respectively over the five year period.

Home Working

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many people in his Department have been enabled to work from home in each of the last three years; and if he will make a statement. [67976]

Mr. Straw: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) does not keep central records of the number of home workers. However, approximately 170 people are currently equipped with full remote laptop access to the FCO computer system.

India (Defence Exports)

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what changes have been made to the rules governing the export of (a) defence equipment and (b) certain dual-use-goods by the UK to India in the last three years; and if he will make a statement. [66239]

Mr. Straw: As for all destinations, export licence applications covering defence equipment to India are rigorously assessed on a case-by-case basis against the consolidated EU and national export licensing criteria, as announced by the then Foreign and Commonwealth Office Minister of State (right hon. Peter Hain) in a written reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Crawley (Laura Moffatt), on 26 October 2000, Official Report, columns 199–203W, taking account of the circumstances prevailing at the time and other relevant announced Government policies.

In August 2005, the Government revised the position adopted in 2002 on our policy regarding the export of nuclear related items to India. The restrictions now in force are less stringent than those in force in 2002 and conform to the UK's current international obligations and non-proliferation commitments.

In line with our Nuclear Suppliers Group (NSG) commitments, we will continue to refuse applications in respect of all NSG Trigger List items, and applications in respect of all items on the NSG Dual-Use List, when they are destined for unsafeguarded nuclear fuel cycle or nuclear explosive activities, or when there is an unacceptable risk of diversion to such activities.

We will now, however, consider on a case-by-case basis licence applications for items on the NSG Dual-Use List destined for other activities. (Our March 2002 policy was to refuse all such exports to nuclear or nuclear-related end-users in India, regardless of the stated end-use of the item).

We will also consider all applications to export other items assessed as licensable, including those assessed as licensable under the weapons of mass destruction end-use control, on a case-by-case basis, taking into account the risk of use in, or diversion to, unsafeguarded nuclear fuel cycle or nuclear explosive activities, or acts of nuclear terrorism; the risk of possible onward transfer of these items to other states for proliferation purposes, including the recipient state's export control performance; and the potential utility of the items concerned for, and contribution that they would make to, such activities.

We will continue to consider applications for exports which will contribute to the physical protection or security of civil or military nuclear facilities or assets in India. Licences may be issued in exceptional cases, consistent with our obligations and commitments.

We will encourage contacts between UK nuclear scientists, academics and those working in or with the UK nuclear industry with their Indian counterparts, except where we consider that such contacts might be of assistance to the weapons-related aspects of its nuclear programme. Where such contacts involve the transfer of technology, which require export licences, we will continue to consider applications for such licences in accordance with the provisions of UK export control legislation, on a case-by-case basis.

International Arms Trade Treaty

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with the Prime Minister regarding the International Arms Trade treaty; and if he will make a statement. [67837]

Dr. Howells: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary and my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister have regular discussions on a wide range of foreign policy issues including the International Arms Trade treaty. The commitment to work to secure such a treaty was a pledge in the Labour party's 2005 general election manifesto.

Mr. Cranby: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he has taken to promote the Arms Trade Treaty (a) among other Governments and (b) at the United Nations. [68074]

Dr. Howells: The Government are committed to pursuing a treaty on the international trade in all conventional arms. We believe that such a treaty needs to include a wide range of signatories, including the world's major arms exporters. We are engaging with other countries at various levels, including through ministerial contacts, specific events, direct expert-level talks and using our network of overseas posts. Most recently a dedicated cross-Whitehall team visited Beijing (14 March) and Moscow (20 February) to discuss the initiative with their Chinese and Russian counterparts. I also made a speech on 23 March making the case for a treaty while on a visit to the United Nations in Geneva. Speaking to the assembled diplomatic community, my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary also spoke about the UK's commitment to the arms trade treaty in a speech at Mansion House on 26 April. A further global lobbying exercise is also currently under way involving all of our overseas posts. This work will continue with the aim of building the consensus needed for the start of a formal process at the UN later this year.

International Tax and Investment Centre

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when his Department's officials have met International Tax and Investment Centre representatives since March 2003; and what subjects were discussed. [66765]

Ian Pearson: As far as I am aware, in the period in question, officials have discussed with International Tax and Investment Centre representatives the business environment in Azerbaijan and prospects for the future of the Iraqi oil sector.

Iraq

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will place a copy of the (a) fiscal and regulatory frameworks for the oil industry in Iraq and (b) UK paper prepared for the Iraqi Ministry of Oil on this subject in the Library; what policy the Government have on funding the Iraqi oil industry; and if he will make a statement. [66766]

Dr. Howells: The Iraqi constitution, approved in a referendum on 15 October 2005, provides the basis of Iraqi law on the regulation of the oil industry in Iraq. Detailed fiscal and regulatory frameworks do not exist at present. An English translation of the constitution will be placed in the Library of the House. The practical implementation of the provisions of the constitution will be effected through further legislation, which we expect the incoming Government to take forward.

The UK has not prepared papers for the Iraqi Ministry of Oil on fiscal and regulatory frameworks for the Iraqi oil industry.

Providing a framework for securing the substantial investment needed in the Iraqi oil industry will be a key challenge for the incoming Government. There are several options open to the Iraqis and we encourage them to work with experienced development partners to assess the benefits of each option, and to ensure that Iraq's resources benefit its citizens.

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports relating to Iraq the Government has received from the International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC) in its capacity as custodian of the Geneva Convention; whether the reports indicate breaches of the Convention by forces in Iraq; what (a) the UK's and (b) the Allied Command in Iraq's response has been; if he will place relevant correspondence between the ICRC and the Government in the Library; why the Government decided not to disclose such reports as a matter of course; if he will ensure in future that the Government exercises the option available to it to disclose such reports in full; and if he will make a statement. [67541]

Dr. Howells: The International Committee for the Red Cross (ICRC) has unfettered access to British security detention facilities in southern Iraq and reports its findings to us, and we respond, on a confidential basis.

It is customary international practice for reports from the ICRC on security detention to remain confidential between the ICRC and the detaining power. We believe it is important to maintain that policy of confidentially so as to, inter alia, encourage the free and frank exchange of views about detention in all locations where ICRC carry out their valuable work.

Israel

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the occasions when (a) he and (b) Ministers in his Department have condemned (i) suicide and (ii) other terrorist attacks in Israel; and if he will make a statement. [67934]

Dr. Howells: My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister, my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary and I have publicly condemned terrorist attacks in Israel. My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary recently did so following the bombing in Tel Aviv on 17 April.

Israel has suffered greatly in the face of terrorism. The tragic impact of suicide bombings is all too clear. Israel is entitled to take steps to ensure its security and safeguard itself against terrorism. But it must act in accordance with international law. We continue to urge the Palestinian Authority to take steps to control Palestinian terrorist groups and to improve security for both Israelis and Palestinians.

Recent statements on the Middle East Peace Process can be found on the Middle East Peace Process pages of the FCO website at: http://www.fco.gov.uk/servlet/Front?pagename=OpenMarket/Xcelerate/ShowPage&c=Page&cid=1007029394617.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions (a) he and (b) Ministers in his Department have had with Arab states about suicide bombings in Israel; what response he has received; and if he will make a statement. [67935]

Dr. Howells: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary and I have raised this issue in our discussions with Arab states. Most recently my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary discussed the suicide bombing in Tel Aviv on 17 April in a meeting with the Saudi Foreign Minister, Prince Saud al Faisal, during his visit to Saudi Arabia on 18 April.

My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary and I will continue to work with Arab states and the parties towards a comprehensive, just and lasting peace based on a two state solution with Israeli and Palestinian states living side by side in peace and security.

Richard Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he has received regarding the acquisition of land by Israel for further illegal settlement building close to Rachel's Tomb in Bethlehem; and what representations he is making on the subject. [68056]

Dr. Howells: In February 2006, the United Nations Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs reported that the Israel Defence Force (IDF) requisitioned 702.6 dunums (70.3 hectares) of Palestinian land throughout the west bank in February 2006. We understand land was requisitioned by the IDF in Bethlehem for "military requirements", including new observation towers and the expansion of military bases and road construction. "Land levelling also occurred for the expansion of existing and the establishment of new IDF infrastructure as well as around Israeli settlements".

We remain concerned about the current route of the barrier around Bethlehem. Israel has a right to protect its citizens from terrorist attack, but the routing of the barrier on occupied territory is contrary to international law. We have made clear our concerns on the routing of the barrier beyond the Green Line to the Israeli Government at all levels and will continue to do so. On 23 March, our defence attaché in Tel Aviv raised the crossing points at Bethlehem with the Israeli authorities.

Israeli-Palestinian Conflict

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what phase of the performance-based Roadmap to a permanent two-state solution to the Israeli-Palestinian conflict had been attained before the January 2006 Palestinian legislative elections; and if he will make a statement. [65724]

Mr. Straw: Progress has been made on some aspects of the Roadmap by both parties, but neither the Israelis or the Palestinians have implemented their Roadmap commitments in full. In January 2006, full implementation of Phase I had yet to be achieved.

Both sides need to take steps to implement their Roadmap commitments. We will continue to work with both Palestinian President Mahmoud Abbas and the Israeli Government to achieve this.

Kurds

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent steps he has taken to facilitate a peaceful solution to the Kurdish question; and if he will make a statement. [67175]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: The Government welcomed the statement by the Turkish Prime Minister in August 2005 that Turkey needed "to address the Kurdish issue under a banner of increasing democratisation". Our ambassador in Ankara has continued to convey to senior Turkish Ministers and officials, including in recent weeks, the need to follow up the statement with social and economic reforms in South-east Turkey. We also continue to press the Turkish authorities to ensure the full enjoyment of the cultural rights of all Turkish citizens.

Mauritania

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on what elements the €81,000 contribution to a UN High Commissioner for Refugees project in Mauritania to improve Mauritanian capacity to manage migration will be spent; and how much will be spent on each element. [67845]

Dr. Howells: The United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees' project aims to improve Mauritania's capacity to manage migration by strengthening the implementation of Mauritanian law on the residence of foreigners on Mauritanian territory, enhancing refugees' protection under law and promoting enjoyment of their rights.

The UK has offered to co-fund the project with the European Commission and would provide €81,000 towards the total. We would not seek to earmark our contribution. The Commission is still considering whether to approve funding for the project.

Ministerial Cars (Fuel Costs)

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the fuel costs were for ministerial cars used by his Department in each of the last five years. [67122]

Mr. Straw: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Minister of State for Transport (Dr. Ladyman) on 27 April 2006, Official Report, columns 1226–27W.

Nepal

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent assessment he has made of the security situation in Nepal. [64633]

Dr. Howells: The security situation in Nepal has improved since the King announced, on 24 April 2006, that he was handing power back to the political parties and that he would reinstate Parliament. The parties responded by calling off their strikes and the Maoists have lifted their blockades and called a three month unilateral ceasefire.

The reinstated Parliament convened on 28 April 2006. The new Prime Minister, G P Koirala, was sworn in to office on 30 April and the Parliament agreed on a proposal to hold a constituent assembly and to reciprocate the Maoist ceasefire. There were no reports of violence or unrest surrounding these events. Since then, supplies of food and fuel are returning to near normal levels, shops and roads have opened and transport is moving.

Currently there is no reason to suppose that the security situation will deteriorate significantly or that the public mood will lead to further unrest. However, the political situation continues to move quickly and remains uncertain, and the security situation in Nepal could still change rapidly.

We assess that there is no direct threat to British interests. We have been monitoring the situation closely, with oversight from the Cabinet Office. We will continue to do so, including with our international partners.

Palestine

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the proposed arms sales by the Russian military to Hamas; and if he will make a statement. [56110]

Mr. Straw: We understand that Russia has frozen the proposed arms sales.

Dr. Blackman-Woods: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the Government's policy on relations with the newly elected Palestinian Authority. [67160]

Dr. Howells: We recognise Hamas's democratic mandate as a result of free and fair elections. But democracy means more than winning elections. With this mandate comes responsibilities. We want to take the peace process forward with the Palestinian Authority and Israel but we can only do so if everyone is committed to democracy and a two-state solution, not violence. As I told the House, on 25 April 2006, Official Report, columns 491–94:

> 'We will continue to do all that we can to impress on Hamas—the newly elected Government of the Palestinian people—that it should recognise the right of the state of Israel to exist, that it should renounce violence, and that it should stick to previous agreements that form the basis of the road map which we consider to be the best and indeed, at the moment, the only way forward'.

We will continue to work with Palestinian President Mahmoud Abbas to take the peace process forward.

Small Arms/Light Weapons

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on his position at the UN Review Conference on Small Arms and Light Weapons in New York in June; whether he has discussed this matter with his US counterpart; what his understanding is of the position the US may take at the conference; whether he has proposals to put to his US counterpart to try to influence that country's position; and if he will make a statement. [66764]

Dr. Howells: The UK is working with many other countries, including the US, to ensure that the Review Conference helps to strengthen the UN Programme of Action on Small Arms and Light Weapons (SALW) and to facilitate its implementation. In particular the UK is working with others to promote global guidelines for national controls on SALW transfers to be agreed at the Review Conference. The UK has had productive dialogue with the US on SALW issues ahead of the Review Conference, including between my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary and his US counterpart as well as at official level.

Syria

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he next plans to hold meetings with the Syrian authorities. [68092]

Dr. Howells: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has no plans to hold meetings with the Syrian authorities.

Terrorism (Definition)

Mr. Soames: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the Government's definition of terrorism is; what assessment he has made of the merits of agreeing a globally-accepted definition of terrorism; and if he will make a statement. [67162]

Dr. Howells: The definition of terrorism in UK law is contained in section 1 of the Terrorism Act 2000, as amended by section 33 of the Terrorism Act 2006. In November 2005, my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary asked the noble and learned Lord, Lord Carlile of Berriew, to undertake a review of the definition. Lord Carlile is intending to report later this year.

The Government see great advantage in an internationally agreed definition of terrorism and have been working to achieve one through the conclusion of a UN Comprehensive Convention on International Terrorism. Regrettably, the UN membership has yet to reach final agreement on the convention, but the UK will continue to press for progress.

Terrorist Organisations

Mr. David Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations his Department has made to the EU on the continuing proscription of the People's Mojahedin Organisation of Iran in the last 12 months. [68058]

Dr. Howells: The Mojahedin-e Khalq (MEK, or People's Mojahedin Organisation of Iran) appears on the EU's list of persons, groups and entities which are subject to restrictive measures with a view to combating terrorism under Council Regulation 2580/2001-EC. The Court of First Instance of the European Communities is currently considering a challenge by the MEK to their inclusion on that list. The UK has contributed to those proceedings, but since judgment in the case is awaited it would be inappropriate to comment further at this stage.

The MEK is proscribed in the UK under the Terrorism Act 2000.

UK/India Prisoner Transfer

Mr. Crausby: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many transfer application requests have been submitted relating to the UK/India Prisoner Transfer Agreement; and how many such requests have been approved. [66964]

Dr. Howells: To date, three British nationals in prison in India have submitted requests to transfer to the UK under the UK/India Agreement on the Transfer of Sentenced Persons. One Indian national in prison in the UK has submitted a request to transfer to India. No requests have yet been approved. The authorities in the UK and India are still considering all four requests.

Mr. Crausby: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress is being made with the UK/India Prisoner Transfer Agreement. [66965]

Dr. Howells: The UK/India Agreement on the Transfer of Sentenced Persons was signed by my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary and Indian Home Minister Shivraj Patil on 18 February 2005 and came into force on 21 November 2005. We are working closely with the Indian Ministry of Home Affairs to process the first requests for transfer.

UN Population Fund

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on which occasions (a) the UK has voted against and the US has voted for and (b) the UK has voted for and the US has voted against the adoption of measures by the United Nations Population Fund since 1997. [66877]

Mr. Thomas: I have been asked to reply.

There has not been any voting in the United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA) Executive Boards since 1997.

US-India Nuclear Deal

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received from his Pakistani counterparts regarding the US-India nuclear deal; and if he will make a statement. [66237]

Mr. Straw: I have not received any representations from my Pakistani counterparts regarding the US-India Civil Nuclear Co-operation Initiative. My officials discussed the Initiative, among other issues, with their Pakistani counterparts during the inaugural UK-Pakistan Strategic Dialogue in October 2005.

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether the Government are reviewing their policy towards India's possession of nuclear weapons following the recently concluded US-India nuclear deal; and if he will make a statement. [66537]

Mr. Straw: The Government's policy on India's possession of nuclear weapons has not changed. We do not and will not support India's nuclear weapons programme. We remain committed to the objective of universalisation of the nuclear non-proliferation treaty, which India can join only as a non-nuclear weapons state. But we recognise that this is a long-term objective. We warmly welcomed the announcement of the US-India Civil Nuclear Co-operation Initiative in July 2005 as we believe that the deal can make a significant contribution to energy security, development, economic and environmental objectives for India and the international community, as well as bringing advantages for non-proliferation.

CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

Assault (Civil Action)

Vera Baird: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what steps she plans to take to permit civil action in cases of assault to be commenced beyond the limitation period in circumstances where the assaulter has been enriched after that date. [64891]

Ms Harman: The Law Commission recommended changes to the law relating to limitation periods, in its 2001 report on Limitation of Actions (Law Com. 270).

Under the Law Commission's proposed regime, there would be a primary limitation period of three years from the date that the claimant knows the relevant facts. These are (a) the facts which give rise to the cause of action; (b) the identity of the defendant; and (c) that the injury was significant. An injury would be considered significant if a reasonable person would think that it was worth making a claim, assuming the defendant does not dispute liability and is able to satisfy a judgment. The impecuniosity of the defendant may therefore prevent time running. In addition, in personal injury cases, the court would have a discretion to disapply the limitation period if it would be equitable to do so. There would be no time limit on the exercise of this discretion.

The Government have announced their acceptance in principle of the Law Commission's recommendations, subject to further consideration of certain aspects of the report, 16 Jul 2002, Official Report, column 272W. This work is now well advanced and we hope to be able to conclude it shortly. We will then seek a legislative opportunity to reform the law.

Census Information

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs pursuant to the evidence of her Department's permanent secretary on 28 February 2006 to the Constitutional Affairs Committee, what assessment she has made of the potential administrative impact on her Department of releasing information collected in the 1911 census. [64789]

Ms Harman: In order to make the 1911 census returns accessible to as many people as possible and to prevent its reading rooms being overwhelmed by demand, The National Archives intends to make them available on the internet for the first working day of 2012. Digitisation of the records will take approximately five years. In this context TNA has considered the administrative impact of making returns available in response to specific requests before the online service is launched.

In line with Treasury policy, TNA intends to use a commercial supplier to digitise the records. Allowing the public to access records during this process would cause repeated disruptions to the scanning process, and make it highly unlikely that any reputable commercial organisation would wish to embark on this large scale programme.

As is the case for any paper records nearly 100 years old, the 1911 returns are in fragile condition. Repeated handling by staff and members of the public would cause rapid deterioration in their condition. In some cases the original record could become unreadable and the unique information in the lost forever.

TNA estimates that a significant number of staff might have to be diverted from other work to deal with requests for census records. This would severely impact on its ability to provide a service to its many other customers.

Coroner Service

Norman Baker: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs if she will list the occasions since 1976 when a sudden or violent death involving a single victim has not had a coroner's inquest return a verdict. [65239]

Ms Harman: This information is not held centrally and to obtain would incur disproportionate costs.

Council Tax Valuations

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs pursuant to the answer of 16 February 2006, Official Report, columns 2192–93W, on council tax valuations, what plans there are to give the Valuation Office Agency continuing access to property data. [66662]

Bridget Prentice: Currently, Land Registry has no plans to give Valuation Office Agency access to property data.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs pursuant to her answer of 16 February 2006, Official Report, columns 2192–93W, on council tax valuations, what Government (a) agencies and (b) Departments will have access to data held in the Land Registry's property database on the commencement of e-conveyancing. [66663]

Bridget Prentice: Land Registry currently provides property price information to public and private sector customers on a commercial basis and this service will continue when electronic conveyancing is introduced in England and Wales. I cannot specify which Government agencies and Departments will request this type of data after the introduction of electronic conveyancing as this will depend on their individual requirements.

Court Services (South-west)

Mr. Harper: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs (1) if she will make a statement on the financial position of court services in the south-west; [64736]

(2) what savings are being sought from court services in the south-west region; and if she will make a statement. [64738]

Ms Harman: Currently only indicative budgets have been given to the Regions showing a required saving of 5.1 per cent.

Crown Counsel (Northern Ireland)

Mark Durkan: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many senior Crown counsel were subsequently appointed judges in Northern Ireland in the last 30 years. [66507]

Bridget Prentice: In the last 30 years seven senior Crown counsel were subsequently appointed as judges in Northern Ireland.

Death Certificates

Norman Baker: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what rules apply to the timescale for issuing death certificates in relation to (a) the date of death, (b) the holding of a coroner's inquest and (c) the release and disposal of the body. [65192]

Ms Harman: Death certification and inquest proceedings are governed by the relevant primary and secondary legislation, including the Birth and Deaths Registration Act 1953 and the Coroners Act 1988. No mention is made within the legislation of specific timescales in respect of the date of death, the holding of a coroner's inquest or the release and disposal of the body.

Departmental Websites

Norman Baker: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs if she will list (a) the websites operated by her Department and (b) the reports placed on the internet in March 2006, indicating in each case whether paper copies were also made available. [65214]

Ms Harman: (a) The websites that come under my Department's responsibility are detailed in the following table.

(b) In March 2006 the following reports were published on my Department's main website http://www.dca.gov.uk/majrepfr.htm:

Effects of advertising in respect of compensation claims for personal injuries (http://www.dca.gov.uk/majrepfr.htm);

Research into the operation of Rule 9.5 of Family Proceedings Rules 1991 (http://www.dca.gov.uk/majrepfr.htm);

Estimating the size and nature of the civil legal advice sector in England and Wales (http://www.dca.gov.uk/research/2006/04_2006.htm).

The following consultations were published on my Department's website http://www.dca.gov.uk/consult/confr.htm:

Draft inquiry procedure (UK inquiries) rules;

Mental Capacity Act Code of Practice.

The following responses to consultations were published on my Department's website http://www.dca.gov.uk/consult/2005.htm:

Barnet County Court and specialist family centre pilot;
Imprints on election material.

Dr. David Kelly

Norman Baker: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what assessment she has made of the compliance by the Oxfordshire Coroner with section 17A(6) of the Coroners Act 1988, in the case of the death of Dr. David Kelly; and if she will make a statement. [65235]

Ms Harman: Any review of a decision made by the coroner is a matter for the courts alone.

Norman Baker: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs pursuant to the answer of 21 July 2005, Official Report, column 1935W. to the hon. Member for Beaconsfield (Mr. Grieve) on Dr. David Kelly, whether the decision not to reopen the inquest means that it is now officially closed. [65458]

Ms Harman: Yes, the inquest into the death of Dr. David Kelly is now closed.

Norman Baker: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs for what reasons the death certificate issued on 18th August 2003 in respect of Dr. David Kelly included the reasons for death before the Hutton Inquiry had reported. [65546]

Ms Harman: Section 17A(2) of the Coroners Act 1988 requires that where a coroner has adjourned an inquest in the event of a public inquiry, he shall send to the registrar of deaths a certificate stating, so far as they are ascertained at that date, the particulars required to be registered under the Births and Deaths Registration Act 1953.

Norman Baker: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs who took the decision to issue the death certificate for Dr. David Kelly; and on what date that decision was taken. [65547]

Ms Harman: The Oxfordshire coroner sent the necessary particulars to the registrar of deaths required by section 17A(2) of the Coroners Act 1988 on 18 August 2003.

Electoral System

Chris Ruane: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many local authorities have a (a) plain English campaign and (b) Charter Mark Certificate for their electoral registration forms. [65904]

Bridget Prentice: We are aware that a number of electoral registration officers make alterations to the prescribed annual canvass form so that it meets with plain English principles, although information on how many authorities have done so is not held centrally.

My Department is currently reviewing the prescribed form with the intention of providing in regulations a new form, based on local authority best practice, which will be both clearer and simpler to read and complete.

Although a local authority could not gain Charter Mark accreditation for its registration form alone, a good registration form might be indicative of good customer service throughout the authority, which as a whole could lead to a Charter Mark being awarded.

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what steps the Government is taking to increase voter turnout in elections among young people. [67104]

Bridget Prentice: The Government have embarked on a number of initiatives to promote participation in democracy. They do not directly promote voter turnout in elections; that is the role of political parties, the candidates and the Electoral Commission. Examples of what the Government are doing to promote participation include:

- The 1824 Collective campaign, which promoted awareness of voter registration among London's urban youth.
- Funding seven local authorities to explore new methods of voting, working with youth organisations, further and higher education institutions to encourage young people to register to vote and participate in elections.
- Piloting early and mobile voting in the local Government elections in May 2006.

The Government have made available £2.5 million to support the new power to encourage participation included in the Electoral Administration Bill. It is intended that this money will enable Returning Officers and Electoral Registration Officers in England and Wales to undertake promotional activity, such as posters, leaflet and outreach work in order to encourage registration and/or participation in elections.

House of Lords Reform

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what recent discussions the Government have had regarding House of Lords reform. [67094]

Bridget Prentice: The Secretary of State for Constitutional Affairs, Lord Falconer, has held preliminary discussions with the other parties about a process to see whether a consensus can be found on the way forward on Lords reform.

Hutton Inquiry

Norman Baker: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs if she will list individuals who refused permission for statements they had given to Thames Valley Police to be passed to Lord Hutton for his investigations into the circumstances surrounding the death of Dr. David Kelly. [65191]

Ms Harman: Such information is not held as part of the inquiry's records.

Norman Baker: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs at what time and on what day the nature of the inquiry into the death of Dr. David Kelly was changed from a judicial inquiry to an inquiry by a judge; and for what reasons. [65194]

Ms Harman: There was at no time any change of status of Lord Hutton's inquiry between its establishment and the publication of the report.

Norman Baker: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs if she will list the individuals who were asked to appear before the Hutton Inquiry into the death of Dr. David Kelly, but who did not do so. [65195]

Ms Harman: None.

Norman Baker: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs if she will list the (a) title and (b) date of each inquiry concluded by Lord Hutton prior to his appointment to lead an inquiry into the circumstances surrounding the death of Dr. David Kelly. [65232]

Ms Harman: The Public Administration Select Committee included a comprehensive list of major inquiries in its first report of the 2004/05 Session (HC 51 I and II), "Government by Inquiry" (Annex A "Inquiries into Matters of Public Concern: 1900–2004"). The table indicates that Lord Hutton has chaired one public inquiry, the investigation into the circumstances surrounding the death of Dr. David Kelly.

Norman Baker: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs for what reasons the Hutton Inquiry was not established under the Tribunals of Inquiry (Evidence) Act 1921. [65238]

Ms Harman: Lord Hutton did not need the formal powers of the 1921 Act in order to carry out a full and comprehensive inquiry.

Inquests

Norman Baker: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs whether it is a requirement for an inquest to be held in the event of the death of a serving member of (a) MI5 and (b) MI6. [65538]

Ms Harman: The relevant criteria for holding an inquest are set out in section 8 of the Coroners Act 1988 and apply equally whatever the deceased person's employment may have been.

Norman Baker: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many inquests in Oxfordshire have yet to be opened; how many relate to soldiers who have served in Iraq; and what the date is of the earliest death for which an inquest has not yet been held. [65171]

Ms Harman: I understand from the Oxfordshire coroner that as of 20 April 2006 no inquests remain unopened in relation to soldiers who died in Iraq. Otherwise the number of unopened inquests relating to all other kinds of deaths will be rarely in excess of 3 cases at one time. The earliest deaths in Iraq for which inquests have been opened but not concluded took place on 29 March 2003 when a helicopter crashed killing eight servicemen. Otherwise the coroner believes the earliest death to be that of a prisoner at HMP Bullingdon in 2000.

Judicial Inquiries

Norman Baker: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs whether the responsibility for selecting a judge to lead a judicial inquiry has passed from the Lord Chancellor to the Lord Chief Justice. [65220]

Ms Harman: Under the Inquiries Act neither the Lord Chancellor nor the Lord Chief Justice have responsibility for appointing a chairman to an inquiry, even where that chairman is to be a judge. That is the responsibility of the Minister (or Ministers) who are setting up the inquiry.

The Inquiries Act reflects past practice in that it contains an obligation for the Minister to consult the Lord Chief Justice (or appropriate judicial colleague) before the appointment of any serving judge. This carries with it a requirement to take account of any issues that are raised during consultation. The detail of this process is contained in Section 10 of the Inquiries Act; which is set out as follows:

Section 10 of the Inquiries Act 2005: Appointment of judge as panel member

Description of judge	Person to be consulted
Lord of Appeal in Ordinary	The senior Lord of Appeal in Ordinary
Judge of the Supreme Court of England and Wales, or Circuit judge	The Lord Chief Justice of England and Wales
Judge of the Court of Session, sheriff principal or sheriff	The Lord President of the Court of Session
Judge of the Supreme Court of Northern Ireland, or county court judge in Northern Ireland	The Lord Chief Justice of Northern Ireland

Notes:
1. If the Minister proposes to appoint as a member of an inquiry panel a particular person who is a judge of a description specified in the first column of the table, he must first consult the person specified in the second column.
2. In this section "sheriff principal" and "sheriff" have the same meaning as in the Sheriff Courts (Scotland) Act 1971 (c. 58).

Judicial Reform

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what funding will be provided for the five-year plan for judicial reform. [67084]

Ms Harman: The Department's strategy 2004–09, as amplified by "Doing Law Differently", sets out the Department's commitment to constitutional and judicial reform. The funding allocated to Judicial Group within DCA, which includes the running costs for the new bodies set up under the Constitutional Reform Act 2005 for 2006–07, is around £25 million. The allocation of funding for 2007–08 has not been finalised and funding for subsequent years is subject to the Comprehensive Spending Review 2007.

Justices of the Peace Act

Mr. Amess: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs if she will make a statement on the operation of Section 60 of the Justices of the Peace Act 1997. [65028]

Ms Harman: The payment of fines and fees, under section 60 of the Justice of the Peace Act (JPA)1997, was a matter for the Justice's Chief Executive of the magistrates courts committee up until March 2005. The Justice's Chief Executive role ceased on 1 April 2005 when magistrates courts committees were abolished and responsibility for magistrates courts along with the payment of fines and fees passed to Her Majesty's Courts Service.

Land Disputes

Mark Williams: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many title deed cases have been referred to the adjudicator at HM Land Registry under section 73 of the Land Registration Act 2002 in each year since 2002. [63959]

Ms Harman: The referral of cases to the Adjudicator to HM Land Registry began after the Land Registry Act 2002 and associated rules came into force 13 October 2003. Cases referred because of a dispute relating to title deeds may include disputes claims based in adverse possession of land against the holder of the documentary title; or disputed claims to ownership of land where the title deeds have been lost or destroyed.

Number of cases referred to the Adjudicator since October 2003

	Total
October 2003–March 2004	137
2004–05	1,523
2005–06	1,649

The figures include disputes that do not necessarily relate to title deeds, such as disputed restriction and notice applications. Land Registry does not currently categorise the disputes that are referred to the Adjudicator as 'title deed' and 'non title deed' cases.

Mark Williams: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many complaints concerning title deeds have been investigated by HM Land Registry in each of the last 10 years; and how many of these complaints have been upheld. [63961]

Bridget Prentice: Land Registry records the total number of complaints received annually and these are normally categorised according to the nature of the complaint. Complaints that concern title deeds might include, for example, complaints that title deeds have been lost while in the custody of Land Registry, or that the provisions of a particular title deed have been reflected incorrectly in the register of title. However, complaints concerning title deeds are not recorded as a distinct category. The following figures reflect the total number of complaints received and—so far as they have been recorded as such—the number of complaints considered to be unjustified or misdirected. These figures therefore reflect complaints of all categories, including those that do not concern title deeds such as, for example, complaints about the way in which a particular application has been handled, aspects of the legislation governing land registration or specific Land Registry policies and procedures.

Land Registry Fees

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what fee structure the Land Registry uses for those looking to buy or sell a residential property. [66250]

Bridget Prentice: Land Registry's fee structure is set out in statutory Fee Orders, the current orders being the Land Registration Fee Order 2004 (SI 2004 No. 595) and the Land Registration Fee (Amendment) Order 2004 (SI 2004 No. 1833).

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what charges the Land Registry will levy for the provision of information for home information packs. [66654]

Bridget Prentice: No special charging arrangements will be made by Land Registry for the provision of information for home information packs. As with other statutory services provided by Land Registry, the fees for official copies of the register and other relevant documents will be those contained in the Land Registration Fee Order which is current at the time.

Legal Aid

Mrs. James: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs if she will make a statement on access to legal aid for people who claim state benefits. [65078]

Ms Harman: Those in receipt of income support, income based jobseeker's allowance, or guarantee state pension credit, automatically qualify financially for legal aid. Income received from other state benefits is assessed as part of the financial means test for civil legal aid.

Lords of Appeal

Norman Baker: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs which Lords of Appeal in Ordinary who were serving on 18 July 2003 had expertise in media law. [65231]

Ms Harman: The term "media law" is not precise and media law includes a number of areas of law, for example, contract law, tort, insurance law, human rights and freedom of expression (article 10 of the ECHR), and other areas. The Government believes that all Lords of Appeal in Ordinary serving on 18 July 2003 had, whether as counsel or judges or both, exposure to these areas of law.

Magistrates Courts

Vera Baird: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs if she will make a statement on the sum spent in 2005 on trials and hearings in magistrates courts that did not go ahead. [64847]

Ms Harman: The National Audit Office (NAO) report estimated that ineffective trials and hearings cost the criminal justice system £173 million and, of this figure, the courts was responsible for £21 million. The defence was responsible for £96 million, the police for £24 million, the Crown Prosecution Service for £24 million and the police and the CPS together for a further £8 million. The NAO found examples of good practice and the recommendations will help improve performance. We are working with the police and the CPS to improve performance in the magistrates courts. The proportion of ineffective trials has declined from 31 per cent. in 2002 to 21 per cent. in September 2005.

Vera Baird: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what steps she plans to take to ensure the implementation of the recommendations made by the National Audit Office on reducing waste and delay caused by ineffective hearings and trials in magistrates courts. [64849]

Ms Harman: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Huntingdon (Mr. Djanogly) on 27 February 2006, Official Report, column 112W.

Ministerial Cars (Fuel Cars)

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what the fuel costs were for ministerial cars used by her Department in each of the last five years. [67018]

Bridget Prentice: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Minister of State for Transport (Dr. Ladyman) on 27 April 2006, Official Report, column 1227W.

National Archives Website

Sir Gerald Kaufman: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs if she will take steps to ensure that the National Archives History National Curriculum website makes it clear for teachers and pupils that Schedule 5 of the Freedom of Information Act 2000 abolished the Lord Chancellor's Instrument No. 12 of 1966 and the 100-year Census closure rule as of 1 January 2005. [65186]

Ms Harman: The relevant section of the Learning Curve website run by The National Archives has now been amended to make it clear that Government policy is the basis for the 100-year closure period that applies to decennial census returns.

Sentencing

Mr. Amess: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what training judges receive on consistency in sentencing; what steps she (a) has taken and (b) plans to take to encourage consistency in sentencing; and if she will make a statement. [64397]

Ms Harman: Following the recent constitutional reforms, the responsibility for judicial training lies with the Lord Chief Justice as head of the judiciary, rather than with Ministers. This responsibility is exercised through the Judicial Studies Board (JSB), an independent body chaired by Lord Justice Keene.

The JSB provides sentencing exercises for the Crown court judiciary at a variety of training events, including continuation seminars that are attended every three years and annual circuit events. All magistrates have been issued with an Adult Court Bench Book, published by the Judicial Studies Board. This bench book includes a structured decision-making guide for use when making sentencing decisions and also includes a copy of the Magistrates' Court Sentencing Guidelines.

Judges are responsible for sentencing in individual cases and are governed by the statutory framework laid down by Parliament. Judges will also consider any relevant case law, Court of Appeal decisions and guidelines issued by the Sentencing Guidelines Council, which was introduced by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 partly with the aim of increasing consistency in sentencing.

Tribunals Service

Dr. Cable: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what steps are being taken to raise public awareness of the Tribunals Service. [65713]

Bridget Prentice: In addition to the public launch events attended by stakeholders held on 3 April at five major cities across Great Britain, the following steps are being taken to raise awareness of the new Tribunals Service:

individual tribunals are continuing to work with their existing stakeholders and user groups to promote awareness of the new Service; prominently displayed links to the Tribunals Service website www.tribunals.gov.uk have been and are being established for example from the 'Direct Gov', Department for Constitutional Affairs and HMCS websites www.direct.gov.uk, www.dca.gov.uk and www.hmcourts-service.gov.uk) respectively; and public Tribunals Service signage has been displayed on some buildings and will continue to be as local hearing centres become increasingly shared by the tribunals.

PRIME MINISTER

Children's Services

Mr. Kemp: To ask the Prime Minister how many nursery and crèche places are provided for people working in his Office and employees of other Departments working in Downing street; what charges are made for the provision of such services; and what other facilities are provided for children of such employees. [67373]

The Prime Minister: For these purposes my office forms part of the Cabinet Office. I have therefore asked my hon. Friend, the Parliamentary Secretary for the Cabinet Office (Mr. Murphy) to reply. A copy of the reply will be placed in the Library of the House.

Civil Servants

Derek Conway: To ask the Prime Minister what advice has been issued to Ministers on the presence of civil servants at Labour party events during elections. [67798]

The Prime Minister: Guidance to civil servants on their conduct during both the general election and local elections is available in the Libraries of the House.

Corporate Hospitality

David Simpson: To ask the Prime Minister on how many occasions he has accepted corporate hospitality in the last 12 months. [67532]

The Prime Minister: Paragraph 5.28 of the Ministerial Code sets out the rules on the registration of hospitality.

Departmental Estate

Norman Baker: To ask the Prime Minister pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Bridgwater (Mr. Liddell-Grainger), of 16 March 2006, Official Report, column 2393W, on the departmental estate, how much of the sum was spent on (a) the 10 Downing street flat, (b) 10 Downing street other than the flat, (c) the 11 Downing street flat, (d) 11 Downing street other than the flat and (e) 12 Downing street, apportioning common works proportionately where applicable. [65365]

The Prime Minister: The figures are not held in the format requested. I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 10 March 2006, Official Report, columns 1836–37W, and to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Bridgwater (Mr. Liddell-Grainger) on 16 March 2006, Official Report, column 2393W.

Departmental Websites

Norman Baker: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list (a) the websites operated by 10 Downing street and (b) the reports placed on the internet in March 2006, indicating in each case whether paper copies were also made available. [65217]

The Prime Minister: My Office operates the 10 Downing street website "www.pm.gov.uk". Reports and other publications are regularly placed on the site. Paper copies are made available as and when necessary.

E-communication

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Prime Minister what guidance he has issued to Ministers who may wish (a) to podcast and (b) to blog. [67559]

The Prime Minister: Ministers who may wish to podcast or blog should take account of the requirements of the Ministerial Code.

Home Secretary

Nick Herbert: To ask the Prime Minister if he will place in the Library (a) a copy of the letter from the Home Secretary offering his resignation and (b) his response. [67855]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the press briefing given by my Official Spokesman on 2 May, a copy of which is available on the No. 10 website.

Honours (Prevention of Abuses) Act

Mr. Amess: To ask the Prime Minister (1) when he last met (a) the Lord Chancellor, (b) the Secretary of State for the Home Department and (c) the Attorney-General to discuss the operation of the Honours (Prevention of Abuses) Act 1925; and if he will make a statement; [66177]

(2) what discussions he has had with (a) the First Minister of Scotland and (b) the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland about the operation of the Honours (Prevention of Abuses) Act 1925 in those countries; and if he will make a statement; [66179]

(3) whether he has discussed the Honours (Prevention of Abuses) Act 1925 with (a) junior and (b) Cabinet Ministers; and if he will make a statement. [67938]

The Prime Minister: I have regular meetings and discussions with ministerial colleagues and others on a wide range of subjects. Information relating to internal meetings, discussion and advice is not disclosed as to do so could harm the frankness and candour of internal discussion.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Prime Minister how many (a) males and (b) females have been (i) prosecuted and (ii) convicted of an offence under the Honours (Prevention of Abuses) Act 1925 in each year since 1976. [66178]

The Prime Minister: The information requested is not held centrally.

Hutton Report

Norman Baker: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list the four countries referred to in paragraph 165 of the Hutton Report of 28 January 2004. [65535]

The Prime Minister: No. The Government co-operated fully with the Hutton Inquiry.

Ministerial Code

Mr. Evans: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list the information he has declared to the Cabinet Secretary under the ministerial code. [66981]

The Prime Minister: My interests are set out in the Register of Members' Interests.

Official Residences

Justine Greening: To ask the Prime Minister when (a) 10 and (b) 11 Downing street were last decorated externally; what plans he has to re-decorate externally (i) 10 and (ii) 11 Downing street in the next 12 months; and if he will make a statement. [68109]

The Prime Minister: The last major external redecoration works took place as part of the large scale rebuilding works that took place between 1960 and 1963. Minor external redecoration last took place in the mid 1990s. There are no plans to carry out any external redecoration in the coming 12 months.

David Simpson: To ask the Prime Minister how much has been spent on (a) furnishings, (b) repairs and (c) decorating for (i) 10 Downing street and (ii) Chequers in each of the last five years. [67531]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 27 March 2006, Official Report, column 702W, by my hon. Friend, the Parliamentary Secretary for the Cabinet Office (Mr. Murphy) to the hon. Member for Lewes (Norman Baker).

Chequers was established under the Chequers Estate Acts 1917 and 1958 and is administered by independent trustees who receive an annual grant from public funds towards its maintenance and to cover staff employed at Chequers in accordance with the Acts.

Organogram

Norman Baker: To ask the Prime Minister when he plans to issue an updated version of the 28 April 2004 organogram of the No. 10 organisation. [65268]

The Prime Minister: I have nothing further to add to the answer I gave the hon. Member on 18 April 2006, Official Report, column 400W.

Overseas Trips (Journalists)

Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Prime Minister (1) whether journalists accompanying him on overseas trips are required to pay for their own air tickets; [67852]

(2) which journalists have accompanied him on each official overseas visit since 2001. [67853]

The Prime Minister: All the main news organisations are invited to accompany me on official overseas visits as and when appropriate. Journalists meet the costs of their airfare.

Parliamentary Questions

Norman Baker: To ask the Prime Minister what training in (a) freedom of information requirements, (b) the ministerial code and (c) the February 2005 Cabinet Office guidance to departments is required to be undertaken by (i) officials and (ii) special advisers involved in drafting answers for him to written parliamentary questions; and what review process is in place to establish whether they are adhering to (A) legislative requirements and (B) internal guidance. [65374]

The Prime Minister: In accordance with the ministerial code, Ministers are accountable for the decisions and actions of their Departments, including answers to parliamentary questions.

A range of training and guidance is available to those involved in drafting answers to parliamentary questions.

Raymond McCord Junior

Dr. Alasdair McDonnell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will meet Raymond McCord Senior to discuss allegations of collusion in the murder of his son Raymond McCord Junior and related cases. [66114]

The Prime Minister: I understand that this case is currently being investigated by the Historical Enquiry Team (HET), set up to review unresolved deaths in Northern Ireland resulting from the security situation between 1968 and April 1998. I also understand that the Police Ombudsman's office is carrying out an investigation into this case. I am sure the hon. Member will appreciate that it would therefore be inappropriate for Ministers to meet with Mr. McCord in advance of the Ombudsman's report.

Strategic Health Authorities

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Prime Minister what meetings he has held with the chief executives of strategic health authorities since 1 January 2006; for what reasons these meetings were held; and what the content of the discussions was. [66005]

The Prime Minister: My officials and I have meetings with a wide range of organisations and individuals on a wide range of subjects. Information relating to internal meetings, discussion and advice is not disclosed as to do so could harm the frankness and candour of internal discussion.

I also refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Northavon (Steve Webb) on 27 February 2006, Official Report, column 37W, and to the Health summit I held at Downing street on 12 April. Details of this can be found on the No. 10 website.

Suicide Bombings (Israel)

Mr. Amess: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list the occasions when he has condemned (a) suicide and (b) other terrorist attacks in Israel; and if he will make a statement. [67936]

The Prime Minister: This is a matter of public record and can be found in speeches and statements I have made, copies of which are available on the No. 10 website.

Trade Deals

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Prime Minister how many trade deals he signed in each of the last eight years; and with which countries. [66718]

The Prime Minister: The European Commission has competence for EU trade policy, and conducts all trade negotiations on behalf of EU member states.

Information on trade agreements can also be found on the Europa website:

http://europa.eu.int/comm/trade/issues/bilateral/index_en.htm

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Best Value Performance Indicators

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will list the best value performance indicators that have been collected from local authorities in relation to libraries in each year since 1997–98. [66305]

Mr. Woolas: Best value performance indicators (BVPIs) have been collected from local authorities since 2000–01. Details of BVPIs relating to libraries which have been collected since then are set out as follows:

	BVPI
2000–01	[1]115
	[2]117
	[3]118
2001–02	115
	117
2002–03	115
	117
2003–04	117
	118
2004–05	117
2005–06	[4]220

[1] The cost per visit to public libraries
[2] The number of visits per head of population to public libraries
[3] The percentage of library users who found the book/information they wanted, or reserved it, and were satisfied with the outcome
[4] Compliance with the Public Library Service Standards

Building Regulations

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister when the consultation for the changes to Part P Building Regulations due to come into effect in April 2006 (a) commenced and (b) finished. [66257]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Building Regulations Advisory Committee (BRAC) and the Local Authority Building Control (LABC) were consulted before the new edition of AD P was published, and BRAC approved the changes at the December 2005 meeting. The changes were not substantial but were minor ones covering procedure and clarification.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what changes will be made to Part P building regulations in April. [66267]

Jim Fitzpatrick: Approved Document P has not been altered significantly. There have been some minor amendments designed to clarify the definitions of notifiable and non-notifiable Part P work and to set out more clearly procedures to be followed by local authorities.

Capita

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what estimate he has made of the number of contracts Capita has with local government organisations. [66307]

Mr. Woolas: The information requested is not held centrally.

Departmental Staff Survey

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister pursuant to the answer of 10 March 2006, Official Report, column 1834W, on the departmental staff survey, when he will place in the Library a copy of the narrative report. [66313]

Jim Fitzpatrick: Eight paper copies of the report were sent to the deposited papers clerk, at the House of Commons Library on the 28 March 2006.

Domestic House Sales

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what estimate the Government has made of the number of domestic properties placed on the market for sale in England in each year since 1997. [66387]

Yvette Cooper: Information on the number of domestic properties placed on the market for sale is not collected centrally. However information on the number of properties sold since 1996 is available from the Land Registry and published on the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister website at:

http://www.odpm.gov.uk/pub/162/Table588Excel87Kb_id1156162.xls

Equal Pay

Dr. Cable: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what steps are undertaken within his Department to ensure that women are obtaining equal pay to men doing work of equal value. [65838]

Jim Fitzpatrick: It is our practice to equality proof annual pay awards and key inputs to pay awards.

Free Bus Travel

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will take steps to ensure that the money allocated to local authorities to cover the cost of the free bus travel policy announced in the Budget is spent solely for that purpose. [66846]

Mr. Woolas: Government funding for the cost of free bus travel, as for many other services provided by local authorities, is distributed through the unhypothecated formula grant. This enables councils to take their own decisions on local funding priorities, accountable to local people. The Government are considering the implementation of the national scheme for free bus travel, as announced by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer, and the whole issue of the efficiency and effectiveness of current arrangements for bus travel, in the context of the Comprehensive Spending Review 2007.

Home Inspection Packs

Mr. Drew: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the timetable is for the introduction of home inspection packs. [63180]

Yvette Cooper: Home information packs will be introduced on 1 June 2007.

Housing (Lettings and Allocations)

Andrew Stunell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of choice-based housing lettings policy by local authorities; if he will provide additional guidance on how councils should determine between housing choice and need in their allocation schemes; and if he will make a statement. [64060]

Yvette Cooper: An independent evaluation of the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister-funded choice-based lettings (CBL) pilot scheme was carried out and a report published in May 2004. The evaluation report showed that the pilots were successful in offering increased choice to social housing applicants and that applicants largely welcomed the move to CBL, feeling that it gave them greater choice and control and increased the transparency of the lettings process. Local authorities were also very positive about their experience of CBL. In order to build on the evaluation and assess the longer term impacts of CBL, ODPM has commissioned Heriot Watt University to undertake further research which is currently underway and scheduled to complete by summer 2006.

ODPM is committed to producing statutory guidance to local authorities on choice based lettings. This will include advice on how to frame a CBL scheme which offers applicants a choice of accommodation while continuing to meet the statutory obligation to ensure that priority for social housing goes to those in greater housing need. The guidance will also be issued for consultation later this year.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will enable local authorities to retain the additional income raised from abolishing the council tax discount on empty homes. [66273]

Mr. Woolas: When the Government introduced new powers for local authorities to reduce the council tax discount on long term empty homes in 2003 we concluded that, to ensure that any decision to reduce the discount was made on housing grounds not for financial reasons, the additional resources raised should be distributed nationally. We have no plans to change the current arrangements.

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many local authorities have used the discretionary powers contained in the Local Government Act 2003 to abolish the council tax discount on (a) second homes and (b) empty homes. [66284]

Mr. Woolas: As at 10 October 2005:

(a) 244 authorities (69 per cent. of billing authorities) were using their discretionary powers to reduce the council tax discount offered to second homes; and,

(b) 186 authorities (53 per cent. of billing authorities) were using their discretionary powers to reduce the council tax discount offered to long term empty homes.

These figures are generated using the CTB1(S) form, which was completed by 353 billing authorities (that is, all authorities with the single exception of Wandsworth, which has therefore been excluded from the figures).

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what funds have been allocated by the Government to each Greater London Borough Council in each of the last eight years. [67030]

Mr. Woolas: The information available is shown in the following table.

Government grant allocated to each greater London borough council from 1998–99 to 2005–06

Notes:

1. Government grant is defined here as the sum of specific grants inside Aggregate External Finance, formula grant (revenue support grant, redistributed business rates and police grant) and Greater London Authority (GLA) grant.
2. Changes in grants between years may be affected by changing local authority responsibilities.
3. The information excludes those grant programmes, such as European funding, where authorities are simply one of the recipients of funding paid towards an area.

Local Government White Paper

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister when the Local Government White Paper will be published. [66434]

Mr. Woolas: It is the Government's intention to publish a White Paper on the future of local government in England this summer.

Neighbourhood Renewal Projects

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what plans the Government have for neighbourhood renewal projects in (a) Romford and (b) Havering. [67012]

Mr. Woolas: Support under the Government's neighbourhood renewal initiative is targeted at the most deprived parts of England, as determined by indices of deprivation which were last updated in 2004. Havering does not rank sufficiently high on the indices to qualify. Nevertheless, Havering is now beginning to prepare its Local Area Agreement (LAA), to be implemented from April 2007. While this does not involve additional funding, it is a powerful tool for driving forward regeneration and renewal, and provides an opportunity to focus on the needs of priority areas within Havering.

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how much has been allocated to neighbourhood renewal schemes in (a) Romford, (b) Havering and (c) each London borough in each of the last eight years. [67013]

Yvette Cooper: Havering, incorporating Romford, does not qualify for support under the Government's neighbourhood renewal initiative.

Neighbourhood renewal funding received over the last eight years by the eligible London boroughs is contained in the following table. This shows aggregated figures for the following neighbourhood renewal elements: neighbourhood renewal fund, new deal for communities, neighbourhood management pathfinders, and the single community programme.

Ordnance Survey

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many requests Ordnance Survey has received for information under the Re-use of Public Sector Information Regulations 2005; and how many requests were refused (a) in whole and (b) in part. [66231]

Jim Fitzpatrick: Since the implementation of the Re-use of Public Sector Information Regulations 2005 on 1 July last year, Ordnance Survey has received four requests under the legislation. One request was granted in full. In line with published guidance, the other three were treated as requests for information under the Freedom of Information Act 2000 and were therefore not applicable under this legislation.

There have been no refusals in whole or part by Ordnance Survey under the Re-use of Public Sector Information Regulations 2005.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister pursuant to the answer of 22 March 2006, Official Report, column 401W, on Ordnance Survey, what the nature is of the contractual relationship with Getmapping. [66326]

Jim Fitzpatrick: Getmapping is a supplier of imagery to Ordnance Survey, and is also one of many licensed partners of Ordnance Survey who develop and market services that add further value to Ordnance Survey data and meet the diverse needs of users of geographic information.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what plans Ordnance Survey has to make public data freely available to the public. [66389]

Jim Fitzpatrick: Ordnance Survey has been making mapping and geographic information available to the public for over 200 years.

As a government trading fund focused on the collection, maintenance and dissemination of geographic information, it is a core component of Ordnance Survey policy to ensure that its data is readily available to all who wish to use it. In recent years, there has been a steady growth in the use of such data in commerce, government and leisure activities.

Ordnance Survey, like all trading funds, is charged with delivering a financial return to government. Consequently it charges for the provision and maintenance of its data. It is also expected to invest for the future to meet the increasingly sophisticated requirements of its customers and partners. Ordnance Survey does not receive any funds voted directly by Parliament. Instead it generates its revenue from the licensing of its data into the market place. This business model has helped underpin the efficiency, quality and service improvements that ensure the sustainability of the organisation.

Planning

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what planning guidance his Department has issued to local authorities on applications for change of use from reservoirs. [66976]

Yvette Cooper: The Office of Deputy Prime Minister has not issued any planning guidance for change of use from reservoirs specifically. Circular 03/2005, Changes of Use of Buildings and Land offers general guidance to local authorities on general applications for change of use.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister when he will publish the new Planning Policy Statement 3. [66439]

Yvette Cooper: Consultation closed on 27 February 2006. We will publish a revised statement later in the year.

Residental and Nursing Homes

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the weekly amount paid in each local authority towards adults in (a) residential homes and (b) nursing homes was in each of the last six years. [64767]

Mr. Byrne: I have been asked to reply.

Information is not held centrally in the form requested. The average gross weekly expenditure on residential and nursing care for older people for each local authority in England for the financial years 1999–2000 to 2004–05, the latest for which data is available, has been placed in the Library. These figures are provided by local authorities. The figures for 1999–2000 are not directly comparable to those for subsequent years because they are based on gross expenditure whereas later years are based on gross total cost. The difference is that gross total cost includes capital charges and certain types of income received such as income from joint arrangements with other local authorities.

Similar information for adults aged 18 to 64 with physical disabilities or sensory impairments, learning disabilities and mental health needs is available on the NHS and Social Care Information Centre's website at www.ic.nhs.uk/pubs/persocservexp2005.

Residential Development

Greg Clark: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assessment his Department has made of trends in the loss of privately-owned green space as a result of residential development. [67959]

Yvette Cooper: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 11 January 2006, Official Report, column 691W.

Valuation Office Agency

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister pursuant to the answer of 20 March 2006, Official Report, columns 73–4W, on the Valuation Office Agency (VOA), if the data supplied to the VOA from the National Register of Social Housing included information on the property attributes of individual homes. [66311]

Dawn Primarolo: I have been asked to reply.

The data supplied to the Valuation Office Agency from the National Register of Social Housing did not include any information on the property attributes of individuals' homes.

Valuebill local-egovt CD

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister (1) if he will place in the Library a copy of the latest version of the Valuebill local-egovt national project CD; [66353]

(2) when he will introduce the Valuebill project. [66440]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The development phase of the Valuebill project formally closed at the end of March 2005. Ownership and responsibility for sustainability has migrated to London Connects, the pan-London e-Government partnership. London Connects is currently involved in a number of initiatives to ensure roll out of the product set including distributing them on CD to all appropriate English local authorities. Copies of this CD have been placed in the Libraries of the House.

Warrington (Housing)

Helen Jones: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister (1) what assessment he has made of the effect of house prices in Warrington on the ability of first time buyers to purchase property in the area; [64742]

(2) what steps he is taking to encourage the provision of more affordable housing in Warrington. [64743]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 24 April 2006]: The North West Regional Housing Strategy recognised the impact of rising house prices in the region and made the provision of affordable houses its second priority after urban regeneration. The Government have allocated around 45 per cent. of the region's housing resources to providing affordable housing, which includes first time buyers. Within Warrington, the Housing Corporation has allocated £1.7 million to help provide affordable housing in the Robson street scheme. Warrington council has also made use of the Private Finance Initiative to provide affordable housing for rent.

HEALTH

"Every Child Matters"

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance she has given to primary care trusts on the priority which they should give in allocating their budgets to fulfilling their responsibilities under the "Every Child Matters" initiative; and if she will make a statement. [67676]

Mr. Byrne: The "Every Child Matters: Change for Children" programme is a joint programme between the Department and the Department for Education and Skills, which sets out the national framework for local change programmes to build services around the needs of children and young people.

Since the launch of the programme in 2004, a range of documents and guidance has been published to support local delivery. These set out primary care trusts' (PCTs) responsibilities under the Children Act 2004, the legislation underpinning the "Every Child Matters" programme. Chief executives in PCTs are alerted to relevant guidance published under the "Every Child Matters" programme through the Department's bulletin to chief executives. PCTs are responsible for deciding how to prioritise and allocate their budgets, taking into account the full needs of their local population.

All guidance issued under the "Every Child Matters" programme is available on its website at: www.everychildmatters.gov.uk

A&E Departments

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many hospitals in England have category (a) 1, (b) 2 and (c) 3 accident and emergency departments. [67560]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 2 May 2006]: National health service trusts self-report the number of accident and emergency (A&E) services they provide against definitions set by the Department for the three types of A&E. The information available is shown in the table and this was the position at the end of December 2005.

	Number of departments (England)
Type 1 (major) A&E departments	204
Type 2 (single specialty) A&E departments	85
Type 3 A&E departments (minor injury and illness services including minor injury units, including walk-in centres)	321

Alcohol

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average alcohol consumption per person, per visit to a pub or bar, was in (a) Southend-on-Sea, (b) Essex, (c) the Metropolitan police area of London and (d) England in each of the last five years for which information is available. [65184]

Caroline Flint: The information requested is not held centrally. However, data are available on the mean alcohol consumption (in units) among adults (aged 16 and over) from 1996 to 2002 for England, for each Government office region (GOR) and strategic health authority (SHA). Information on outlets where alcohol is purchased is also available.

Table 1 provides the mean alcohol consumption per week, in units for adults (aged 16 and over) for each Government office region, including London GOR, and SHAs (including Essex) from 1996 to 2002 using three-year moving averages. The results are taken from "Health Survey for England: Health & lifestyles indicators for Strategic Health Authorities 1994–2002".

Table 2 shows the percentage of adults (aged 16 and above) who had bought alcohol at the four main types of outlet in the last week: by sex and average weekly alcohol consumption in 2004, Great Britain.

David Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when her Department will publish the final report on models of care for alcohol misusers; and what assessment she has made of the merits of providing ring-fenced funding for tackling alcohol misuse. [66912]

Caroline Flint: The Department intends to publish models of care for alcohol misusers within the next few months. We are not considering ring-fenced funding for alcohol treatment services, funding of these services is part of the normal responsibilities of primary care trusts.

Alzheimer's Disease

Dr. Alasdair McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people in the mild stages of Alzheimer's disease will be affected by the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence draft recommendation on the three anticholinisterase drugs. [66141]

Jane Kennedy: The National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence's (NICE) appraisal consultation document on donepezil, galantamine, rivastigmine (review) and memantine for the treatment of Alzheimer's disease, does not constitute its formal guidance on this technology.

The recommendations in the draft guidance are preliminary and may change before final publication, and it would be therefore inappropriate to comment further at this stage. NICE is currently considering responses to its consultation and will issue final guidance later in the year. Until that time, NICE'S original guidance on drugs for Alzheimer's disease, published in 2001, continues to apply.

Ambulance Response Times

Mr. Jeremy Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average response time for ambulances to get to an emergency call-out in (a) England and (b) Taunton constituency was in the last year for which figures are available. [64258]

Jane Kennedy: The Department collects ambulance response time data by Ambulance Trust rather than by geographical area, and in relation to response time requirements rather than by average response time. Therefore, the information requested is not centrally collected in the required format.

The data that the Department does collect on ambulance response times is published in tables 5a, 5b, 6 and 7 of the statistical bulletin, Ambulance services, England: 2004–05, which is available in the Library and on the Department's website at: www.dh.gov.uk/assetRoot/04/11/36/79/04113679.pdf

This publication includes ambulance response time data for the Westcountry Ambulance Trust, which covers Taunton, and for the whole of England for 2004–05.

BCG Vaccination

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what advice she (a) has issued and (b) plans to issue to primary care trusts on the BCG vaccination screening programme in schools; and if she will make a statement. [66649]

Caroline Flint: The Chief Medical Officer's letter dated 6 July 2005 outlining changes to the Bacillus Calmette-Guerin (BCG) programme was sent to all primary care trusts (PCT) directors of public health. Further information was sent to PCT immunisation co-ordinators on 18 August 2005. This information is available on the Department's website at:

www.dh.gov.uk/PolicyAndGuidance/HealthAndSocialCare Topics/Tuberculosis/fs/en

Breast Cancer

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients could be treated with Herceptin for early stage breast cancer within existing capacity in English hospitals; and by how much she expects that capacity to be expanded within (a) six months and (b) 12 months. [67966]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department does not keep central figures on local national health service capacity to deliver particular treatments. The NHS is expected to consider local needs and priorities as part of its planning process, taking account national strategies/guidance such as that from the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence.

In the case of Herceptin, a HER2 test is needed to identify if a woman is HER2 positive and, as such, might benefit from treatment with Herceptin. Professor Mike Richards, the national cancer director, is working with cancer networks to ensure that testing arrangements are put in place to enable women who require it to be tested for HER2 status. This work is ongoing.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) which primary care trusts in England have refused to prescribe Herceptin to patients with early stage breast cancer except in exceptional circumstances; [67968]

(2) which primary care trusts in England have agreed to prescribe Herceptin to patients with early stage breast cancer. [67967]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department does not collect information on local primary care trust (PCT) prescribing policies for different drugs.

It is for individual clinicians, in discussion with a patient, to decide whether or not it is suitable to prescribe a specific drug. PCTs may also need to be involved to decide whether to support the clinician's decision and supply the drug at the National Health Service's expense. PCTs need to take a range of factors into account, including local factors, when considering the funding of drugs and other treatments.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients (a) funded by the NHS and (b) funded privately are being treated with Herceptin for early stage breast cancer in NHS hospitals in England. [67969]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department does not collect information on the numbers of patients treated with specific drugs, whether in the national health service or privately.

Care Homes

Kerry McCarthy: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what percentage of elderly and mentally infirm people cared for in care homes in (a) Bristol North primary care trust and (b) Bristol South and West primary care trust have their fees paid for by (i) the NHS or (ii) local authority; and what percentage have their personal care costs paid for by themselves, a relative or another third party; [65304]

(2) what percentage of the fees charged by care homes in (a) Bristol North primary care trust and (b) Bristol South and West primary care trust is paid for by the NHS or local authority. [65305]

Caroline Flint: The information is not held centrally in the form requested. However, table 1 shows expenditure on residential and nursing care placements made by Bristol City unitary authority in 2004–05 for the various adult client groups, including older people. This shows gross expenditure, income received from sales, fees and charges and the resulting net expenditure.

Table 2 shows the number of residents supported by the council as at 31 March 2005, some of whom will have been placed in care homes outside Bristol.

Information on the percentages of the various ways costs are paid is not collected. According to the 2005 market survey by the independent analysts, Laing and Buisson, approximately 67 per cent. of the cost of residential care in the United Kingdom is funded by social services, or by the national health service to cover nursing care. It is estimated that approximately 100,000, or around 25 per cent., of residents nationally are privately or self funded.

Colorectal Cancer

Derek Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence has approved cetuximab as a prescribed drug for colorectal cancer. [67683]

Jane Kennedy: The National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence (NICE) plans to publish its technology appraisal on bevacizumab and cetuximab for the treatment of metastatic colorectal cancer in November 2006. Further information on this appraisal can be found on NICE's website at www.nice.org.uk.

Derek Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many primary care trusts have prescribed cetuximab for colorectal cancer. [67684]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Data are not collected on the number of primary care trusts prescribing particular drugs.

Correspondence

Sir Michael Spicer: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she will reply to the letter from the hon. Member for West Worcestershire of 10 March. [67129]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 2 May 2006]: A reply to this letter was sent on 2 May 2006.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she expects to reply to letters from the hon. Member for North Shropshire of (a) 25 March, (b) 5 April and (c) 19 April. [67970]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Responses to these letters were sent on 2 May 2006.

Delayed Discharges

Ms Diana R. Johnson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many delayed discharges there were in acute hospitals serving the Kingston-upon-Hull area in the last 12 months; and how many acute hospital bed nights these represented. [65436]

Mr. Byrne: The information requested is shown in the table.

Acute delayed transfers of care, acute hospitals serving the Kingston-upon-Hull area

	Hull and East Yorkshire Hospitals NHS Trust
	Delayed transfers of care	Number of days delayed
April 2005	12	666

June 2005	20	999
July 2005	27	832
August 2005	18	668
September 2005	25	1,104
October 2005	21	661
November 2005	18	921
December 2005	13	906
January 2006	17	972
February 2006	21	804
March 2006	14	938

Notes:
1. Data in the table is taken from local monitoring of delayed discharges included in the situation reports (SITREPs) collection. The delayed transfers of care figures are based on a snapshot taken on the last typical Thursday in the month. This differs to the day used in the separate, quarterly, LDPR commissioner collections on which the figures published in the Statistical Supplement to the Chief Executive's Report to the NHS, December 2005 are based. The number of days delayed sums all delays in the month.
2. Due to the way the data is collected, the number of days delayed data for June 2005, September 2005, December 2005 and March 2006 are based on five weeks' data—all other months are based on four weeks' data.

Dentistry

Stephen Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many dentists have signed the new contract in dispute in (a) Greater London and (b) England. [66893]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Information on the number of dentists who have signed the new contract and the number who have signed in dispute is not available centrally.

We do however have some provisional information that covers contracts. A contract may well be for more than one dentist so cannot be broken down further to individual dentist level. These management estimates show that 488 contracts were signed in dispute in the five London strategic health authorities and 2884 in England.

Primary care trusts are working with dentists to resolve as many disputes as possible locally.

Peter Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the availability of NHS dental services in Gosport constituency; how many dentists are giving appointments for NHS treatment; what the average time patients waited for treatment was in the latest period for which figures are available; and if she will make a statement. [67151]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department has made no assessment of the availability of national health service dental services in Gosport constituency.

There were 35 NHS dentists with a general dental services or personal dental services contract within Gosport parliamentary constituency area as at 31 December 2005.

Information on average waiting times for treatment is not held centrally.

Departmental Advertising Costs

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much (a) her Department and (b) its agencies spent on advertising for job vacancies in each of the last five years. [65966]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 25 April 2006]: This information can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Diabetes

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to ensure that diabetes patients are provided with a fully informed choice of all available insulins and informed of their risks and benefits. [67671]

Jane Kennedy: The choice of insulin prescribed to a patient is a clinical decision made as a result of a joint decision-making process between the patient and their clinician taking into account all available evidence and the individual's specific clinical needs. From January 2006, the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence (NICE) has required all primary care trusts to implement NICE guidance on patient education by providing all people with diabetes with high quality, structured education which should include information on insulin use.

Drinking Water

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) when the consultation by the Food Standards Agency on natural mineral water, spring water and bottled drinking water will be completed; [64771]

(2) what specification applies to UK natural mineral waters that wish to carry the claim that they are suitable for infant feeding. [64772]

Caroline Flint: There is not yet a specification for United Kingdom natural mineral waters that would allow the claim that they are suitable for infant feeding. The Food Standards Agency has completed a consultation on draft criteria that would enable natural mineral water to carry such a claim. These criteria were based on advice from the committee on medical aspects of food and nutrition. The comments received during the consultation are being taken into account in the preparation of the final version of regulations.

Fluoridation

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research she has (a) assessed and (b) commissioned on the possible relationship between children drinking tap water with added fluoride and the risk of developing bone cancer as teenagers. [65196]

Caroline Flint: A number of studies regarding water fluoridation and bone cancer have been published. The weight of the scientific evidence, as assessed by independent committees of experts, comprehensive systematic reviews, and review of the findings of individual studies, does not currently support any association between water fluoridated at levels optimal for oral health and the risk for cancer, including bone cancer, in children.

We are aware that an observed association between exposure to fluoride in drinking water and the incidence (new cases) of osteosarcoma in young males has recently been reported in a paper in the United States (Age-specific fluoride exposure in drinking water and Osteosarcom (United States) Bassin et al., Cancer causes control (2006) 17: 421–428). No apparent association was observed in females. The author has described this research as an exploratory analysis and has acknowledged that further research is required to confirm or refute the observed association.

In 2000, the Government commissioned a systematic review of public water fluoridation from the University of York. In this study, no clear association between osteosarcoma and fluoridation was found. In 2002, the Medical Research Council (MRC), commissioned by the Government to consider further research requirements on water fluoridation, agreed with the York findings that overall, the evidence does not suggest that artificially fluoridated water increases the risk of cancer. The Department will keep any further publications from the recent United States study under review and is committed to a continuing programme of research in line with the MRCs recommendations.

Folic Acid

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what assessment her Department has made of the possibility that ingestion of folic acid masks vitamin B12 deficiency; and if she will make a statement; [66098]

(2) what assessment her Department has made of the effects on the elderly of ingesting folic acid. [66099]

Caroline Flint: The scientific advisory committee on nutrition (SACN) was asked by the Government to consider the evidence that has arisen since the committee on medical aspects of food policy report "Folic Acid and the Prevention of Disease" was published in 2000, and to advise on any gaps in the evidence base, with particular reference to the issue of folic acid masking vitamin B12 deficiency.

SACN published their draft report on "Folate and Disease Prevention" in November 2005 for stakeholder comment. The committee are now in the final stages of preparing the report, which is expected to be published this summer. The report will include an assessment of the effects of increasing folic acid intake on the elderly. The Department will consider SACN's recommendations carefully after the report is published.

General Practitioners

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the estimated annual cost per general practitioner is of the (a) employer's and (b) employees' contribution to the NHS superannuation scheme. [63936]

Mr. Byrne: The average estimated employer and employee pension scheme contributions in respect of general medical practitioners for the financial year ending 31 March 2004 were:

Employer's contribution per practitioner: £10,284;

Employee's contribution per practitioner: £4,407.

Under the new general medical services contract, general practitioners pay both the employer's and employee's contributions from a global sum that makes provision for these pension contributions.

Susan Kramer: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many of Greater London's primary care trusts met the 48-hour target for access to GPs in the latest period for which figures are available. [65067]

Jane Kennedy: In March 2006, all primary care trusts covered by North West London, North Central London, North East London, South East London and South West London Strategic Health Authorities reported that they met this target.

Genito-urinary Medicine

Mr. Holloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the future demand for genito-urinary medicine in the Dartford, Gravesham and Swanley Primary Care Trust area following the introduction of the chlamydia screening programme. [66414]

Caroline Flint: Chlamydia is the most common bacterial sexually transmitted infection in the United Kingdom. Reducing the prevalence of this infection is an important goal in the drive to improve sexual health, outlined in the White Paper, "Choosing Health: making healthier choices easier". The Health Protection Agency manages the national chlamydia screening programme. The programme aims to control chlamydia through early detection and treatment of asymptomatic infection; reduce onward transmission to sexual partners; and prevent the consequences of untreated infection.

It is the responsibility of primary care trusts (PCTs), working in conjunction with strategic health authorities (SHAs), to decide on local delivery and planning of services. Kent and Medway SHA has informed officials that the Dartford, Gravesham and Swanley PCT is currently meeting locally agreed performance targets, and the SHA is working to ensure that all PCTs and trusts have plans in place to ensure the 2008 target of maximum 48-hour waiting is achieved.

Mr. Holloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the funding available to the Dartford, Gravesham and Swanley NHS Trust (a) from other primary care trusts for the provision of a genito-unitary facility and (b) to fund the introduction of chlamydia screening. [66415]

Caroline Flint: It is the responsibility of primary care trusts (PCT), working in conjunction with strategic health authorities (SHA), to decide on local delivery and planning of services. In 2006–07, £91.5 million was allocated to PCTs for sexual health modernisation which includes funding for chlamydia screening and contraception and abortion services. In addition, a further £25 million for capital was allocated this financial year to PCTs for sexual health services.

In December 2005, the Department allocated £165,000 to the Dartford, Gravesham and Swanley PCT for start up costs for the national chlamydia screening programme. This funding is aimed at setting up a chlamydia screening office, funding information technology and laboratory developments and identifying premises for the chlamydia screening office before screening begins.

Health Reforms (Patient Care)

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the Answer of 2 March 2006, Official Report, column 915W, on health reform in England: update and next steps, whether the Tariff will apply to a patient requiring acute services for a potentially terminal illness, as opposed to palliative care for a patient in whom the same illness has progressed beyond a point where acute services can reasonably be expected to contribute to the patient's recovery; and whether it will be (a) the patient's GP, (b) the hospital consultant and (c) the primary care trust which makes the judgement that acute, rather than palliative care is required for a patient at any stage of the patient's care. [62229]

Mr. Byrne: The national tariff is structured around healthcare resources groups (HRGs), which represent clinically relevant groups of diagnoses and treatments that consume similar average levels of healthcare resource. In this way, the tariff applies on the basis of a patient's diagnosis and treatment combination rather than the severity of a patient's condition, for example terminal illness, albeit that these issues are related.

A list of treatments currently excluded from the tariff are set out in Payment by Results: Implementation support guide 2006–07 (Technical Guidance), which is available on the Department's website. Funding for treatments outside the scope of payment by results continues to be negotiated locally.

Whether, or when, a patient should be given acute care or palliative care is a matter for the clinical judgement of the doctor responsible for the patient's care.

Health Trainer Programme

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the primary care trusts which are in the early adopter phase of the health trainer programme. [65897]

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what mandatory core competences health trainers must satisfy before being employed by the NHS. [65948]

Caroline Flint: The mandatory core competences required to become a national health service health trainer has been placed in the Library.

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate she has made of the cost of training each health trainer; and if she will make a statement. [65950]

Caroline Flint: The Department has mandated a set of core competences to which all health trainers partnerships must adhere. Health trainer training is under the control of individual primary care trusts and costs will vary according to the locally designed training programmes.

Holly's Law

Mr. Ames: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if she will bring forward legislation similar to H.R. 1079, (Holly's Law), introduced into the United States House of Representatives in March 2006; and if she will make a statement; [65261]

(2) if she will set up an enquiry into the safety of RU-486; and if she will make a statement; [65482]

(3) what information she has evaluated on (a) complications and (b) deaths caused by RU-486; and if she will make a statement. [65483]

Jane Kennedy: I refer the hon. Member to my replies given on 20 December 2005, Official Report, column 2688W and 2726W.

Current evidence supports the safety of medical abortion in the United Kingdom, and this is a method of abortion recommended by the Royal College of Obstetricians and Gynaecologists.

The safety of all medicines in the United Kingdom is continuously monitored by the Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency. Since initial licensing in 1991, the safety of mifepristone (Mifegyne, RU-486)—a medicine used for abortion has been carefully monitored through review of reports of suspected adverse drug reactions and through periodic safety reports submitted by the manufacturer. Such reviews have evaluated both suspected complications and deaths relating to this medicine.

In 2005, following new advice from the United States Food and Drug Administration, where this product is used in combination with another medicine that is not licensed for this purpose in the UK, reports of suspected serious adverse reactions associated with mifepristone, including cases of serious bacterial infection, were thoroughly reviewed. The regulatory authorities within Europe, including the UK, did not identify any new safety issues in this review. No additional enquiry is necessary. Regulatory action to withdraw this medicine in the UK, equivalent to that proposed in H.R. 1079 (Holly's Law) in the United States, is not appropriate since European Union advice, including UK expert advice, is that the balance of risks and benefits of mifepristone remains positive.

Insulin Analogues

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action her Department is taking in response to the European Agency for the Evaluation of Medicinal Products' recommendations (document CPMP/SWP/372/01) on the investigation of the carcinogenic potential of insulin analogues. [67697]

Jane Kennedy: The safety of human insulin analogues in clinical practice is continually monitored by the Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency (MHRA) and the European Medicines Agency. Human insulin analogues are licensed through the European centralised licensing procedure. No pre-clinical studies have been specifically requested in relation to this issue by the MHRA.

Meat Hygiene Service

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what criteria were used to assess the need for each of the options for proposed changes to veterinary supervision arrangements within the Meat Hygiene Service. [66084] service (MHS) are as detailed in the MHS paper, Veterinary supervision arrangements within the MHS, and the July 2005 report by DNV Consulting, Review of options for provision of Veterinary Surgeons within the Meat Hygiene Service. Both of these papers were included as part of the 12-week public consultation on proposed changes to veterinary supervision arrangements, launched by the MHS on 11 April 2006.

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she last met representatives of the Meat Hygiene Service to discuss alteration of the arrangements for veterinary supervision. [67924]

Mr. Byrne: My hon. Friend, the Under-Secretary of State for Health (Caroline Flint) has not met with representatives of the Meat Hygiene Service (MHS) to discuss alteration of the arrangements for veterinary supervision.

Proposals for changes to veterinary supervision arrangements within the MHS, which are currently out to public consultation, fall within these delegated authorities.

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the options which were considered for the provision of veterinary inspections at meat plants; and why each option which was rejected was rejected. [67925]

Mr. Byrne: The options for proposed changes to veterinary supervision arrangements within the Meat Hygiene Service (MHS) are set out in the 12-week public consultation launched on 11 April 2006. These papers set out and discuss the various options. Copies are available in the Library.

The only option that has so far been rejected is the option to maintain current arrangements. This has been rejected since the existing veterinary structure will not deliver the changes required as a result of Professor Wall's independent inquiry into the MHS in 2004, nor will it meet the other drivers for change, as detailed in the consultation.

Comments on all the various options, but particularly the MHS's preferred option for change, are sought as part of the consultation process.

Medical Staff Redundancies

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the impact on patients of medical staff redundancies in hospitals in South East London; and if she will make a statement. [65689]

Jane Kennedy: The responsibility for commissioning, delivering and performance managing health services rests with the local national health service and so it is for the local strategic health authorities, primary care trusts and trusts to assess the local impact of changes in staffing levels.

Mental Health Services

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the effectiveness of assertive outreach teams in reducing the need for admissions to mental hospitals. [67440]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 2 May 2006]: The primary outcome measure for assertive outreach teams is not a reduction in hospital admissions. The principal purpose of assertive outreach teams is to provide intensive support for people with severe mental illness, and who might not otherwise engage with mainstream mental health services, in their own homes or in other community settings. In December 2005, 17,000 people were receiving care from 262 assertive outreach teams, representing a 14 per cent. increase in caseload compared to 2004.

In addition to assertive outreach teams, crisis resolution services are designed to respond promptly to people in crisis, providing assessment and effective home treatment, including medication in their own home or in other community settings. At the end of March 2005, there were 343 crisis resolution teams. In the first three quarters of the financial year 2005-06, crisis resolution teams provided 61,000 home treatment episodes for patients who would otherwise have been admitted.

MMR Vaccination

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether her Department has made estimates for the uptake of the MMR vaccination over the next five years. [67185]

Caroline Flint: The Department does not make projected estimates for the uptake of measles, mumps and rubella (MMR) vaccination. In line with World Health Organisation (WHO) recommendations, there is a national target of 95 per cent., uptake of two doses of MMR. This target, as well as effectively protecting individual children, their families and communities, is also part of an integrated immunisation approach to achieving measles and rubella control targets while maximizing programme efficiencies as detailed in the "Strategic plan for measles and congenital rubella infection in the European region of WHO, 2003."

Multiple Myeloma

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if she will make a statement on the availability of bortezomib for the treatment of multiple myeloma; [67497]

(2) when she expects guidance to be issued by the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence on bortezomib treatment; [67498]

(3) whether her Department has issued guidance to primary care trusts on the availability of bortezomib treatment for multiple myeloma. [67499]

Jane Kennedy: Bortezomib (velcade) is licensed for the treatment of adults with cancer of the bone marrow (multiple myeloma) who have received at least one prior treatment and whose disease is worsening on their last treatment.

Bortezomib has been referred to the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence (NICE) for appraisal. NICE plans to publish its single technology appraisal on bortezomib for multiple myeloma in September 2006. Further information on this appraisal can be found on NICE's website at www.nice.org.uk.

In the interim, there are no national restrictions on or guidelines for prescribing bortezomib on the national health service for patients who fit the licensed indication. Funding for licensed treatments should not be withheld because guidance from NICE is unavailable. In these circumstances, we expect primary care trusts to take full account of available evidence when reaching funding decisions. This is confirmed in "Health Service Circular 1999/176", which asks NHS bodies to continue with local arrangements for the managed introduction of new technologies where guidance from NICE is not available at the time the treatment or technology first became available.

National Blood Service

John Hemming: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 4 April 2006 to question 59146 on the National Blood Service, what estimate the National Blood Service has made of the number of calls made from call centres in her Department in 2004–05 using predictive dialling; and how many such calls resulted in silent calls. [64848]

Caroline Flint: Data for the year 2004–05 can be obtained only at disproportionate cost. However, the National Blood Service (NBS) has provided data for the past year.

The NBS made 1,467,382 calls between 1 March 2005 and 21 April 2006. Over this time period, 3.7 per cent. of these calls were abandoned, representing those occasions when the called person answers and it appears no-one is there, due to the slight delay before an operator comes on the line. The NBS continues to improve its abandonment rates, which have dropped to three per cent, in January 2006. These levels are within Ofcom's guidelines of no more than 5 per cent. silent calls.

NHS Accredited Health Trainers

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the availability of NHS accredited health trainers. [67418]

Caroline Flint: Following the successful completion of the early adopter phase, 88 spearhead primary care trust (PCTs) are now in a position to start recruiting, training and deploying health trainers.

Choosing Health money has been allocated to provide 1,200 national health service health trainers by the end of financial year 2006–07.

However, it is up to individual PCTs to make decisions about where they allocate resources and how many health trainers they will need to meet the needs of their local population.

Nuffield Speech and Language Unit

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions she has had with (a) the Royal Free Hampstead NHS Trust and (b) the Royal National Throat, Nose and Ear hospital about the form of the public consultation process on the future of the Nuffield Speech and Language Unit. [66669]

Jane Kennedy: No discussions have been held between Ministers and the Royal Free Hampstead National Health Service Trust or the Royal National Throat, Nose and Ear hospital about the form of the public consultation process on the future of the Nuffield speech and language unit.

However, my hon. Friend, the Parliamentary Under Secretary of State for Community Care (Liam Byrne) held a discussion with the hon. Member during a debate on this matter held on 25 April.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will place copies of letters she has received about the Nuffield Speech and Language Unit in the Library. [66670]

Jane Kennedy: Under the Data Protection Act, permission to make letters public would need to be sought from each correspondent. This can be carried out only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Bone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to her statement of 25 April 2006, Official Report, column 549, on the Nuffield Speech and Language Unit, how many patients waited more than six months for hospital in-patient treatment according to the February figures. [67279]

Jane Kennedy [holding answer 2 May 2006]: The Nuffield speech and language unit is part of the Royal Free Hampstead National Health Services Trust. The trust did not report any patients waiting over six months for inpatient admission at the end of February 2006.

Nurses

Justine Greening: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people training to become Registered General Nurses are enrolled on pre-registration nursing courses and will complete their courses in (a) the 2006–07 academic year, (b) the 2007–08 academic year and (c) the 2008–09 academic year, broken down by strategic health authority area; and if she will make a statement. [66398]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 27 April 2006]: It is not possible to say how many people will complete their training in a given year. Most students complete training in three years but each year a proportion either delay completion or leave the course.

Obesity (Taxation)

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations she has received on (a) a tax on foods with a very high fat content and (b) an obesity tax based on an individual's body mass index. [65177]

Caroline Flint: The Department has received representations on tax on foods with a very high fat content through the consultation processes on the Choosing Health White Paper and the Food and Health Action Plan.

We have not received any representations on an obesity tax based on an individual's body mass index.

Osteopaths

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to amend the arrangements for the regulation of osteopaths; and if she will make a statement. [67701]

Jane Kennedy: Changes to the structure, functions and number of regulators were considered as part of the recent review of non-medical professional regulation. An announcement about the review will be made shortly.

Prevenar

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations she has received concerning her consultation with experts on how to introduce Prevenar on the NHS. [40963]

Caroline Flint: A letter was sent to health professionals on 8 February 2006.

The Department's plans to introduce important changes to the childhood immunisation programme will start later this year. These changes will ensure that young children in this country are offered the best protection against serious vaccine-preventable diseases.

We propose to introduce these changes in the summer, and a firm date will be announced as soon as vaccine supply and other issues have been finalised. A further detailed Chief Medical Officer/Chief Nursing Officer/Chief Pharmaceutical officer letter, with supporting documentation, will follow as soon as possible.

Primary Care Trusts

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of dental practices are accepting new NHS adult registrations in each primary care trust in England. [67669]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information requested is not held centrally.

Recombinant Factor VII

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the three-year funding period for recombinant factor VII for adult haemophiliacs is due to come to an end; who is responsible for the decision on further funding; and what decisions have been made. [66731]

Caroline Flint: On 12 February 2003, the Government announced an extra £88 million over three years to extend the availability of recombinant clotting factors for adult haemophiliacs in England. We remain committed to the recombinant roll-out programme and I announced on 19 April that further funding for recombinant treatment will continue.

Smoking

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what consultations her Department has carried out with (a) the theatre, (b) film and (c) television industry regarding possible exemptions to the ban on smoking in public places for the purposes of artistic productions; and if she will make a statement. [65735]

Caroline Flint: During last year's consultation on proposals for the Health Bill we received representations that particular theatrical performances and television/film recordings should be exempted from the smoke-free provisions of the Bill.

We are minded to allow an exemption where smoking is an integral part of the storyline of a performance or recording.

I wrote to the Theatrical Management Association and Equity along these lines on 18 April. A copy of these letters is available in the Library.

Social Services

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the expected year-end financial position of social services departments in England is in 2005–06 (a) in total and (b) broken down by local authority area; and what the year-end outturn position has been in each year since 1997–98. [60394]

Mr. Byrne: The year-end financial position of social services departments in England in 2005–06 is not available.

The Department does hold social services expenditure data centrally and in answering this question, we have assumed that year-end outturn equates with total local authority expenditure on social services.

Forecast outturn figures for the 150 local authorities with social care responsibilities in 2005–06 will not be available until early in 2007. The most recent available expenditure information held by the Department is for 2004–05.

Full details of the outturn figures for 1997–98 to 2004–05 for social services departments are available on the NHS Health and Social Care information Centre's website at www.ic.nhs.uk/pubs/persocservexp2005. Summary tables of outturn figures are available in the Library.

Stroke

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps she is taking to ensure that patients admitted to hospital following a stroke have their higher cognitive function checked. [66951]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 2 May 2006]: The Royal College of Physicians' national clinical guidelines for stroke recommend that all stroke patients should be screened for the presence of cognitive impairments as soon as is practicable.

The Department has commenced work on an 18-month programme to develop a national stroke strategy. The work to develop the strategy will look at the measures that need to be put in place to ensure that patients receive high quality care when they are admitted to hospital.

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps she is taking to ensure that all healthcare staff are aware of (a) the risk of vascular dementia in stroke patients and (b) the action which should be taken if dementia is suspected. [66952]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The complex nature of dementia once it is diagnosed requires a whole systems approach across a range of health and social care providers. The National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence is currently working on dementia guidelines. The first consultation on this guideline is expected in May 2006. This is in addition to the ongoing work of the older people's mental health programme which includes guidance on the provision of services.

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps she is taking (a) to develop effective systems of identifying people at high risk of having a stroke and (b) to put in place ways to reduce that risk. [66953]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 2 May 2006]: The quality and outcomes framework (QAF) of the general practitioner contract includes points for setting up and maintaining a register of people who have had a transient ischaemic attack (TIA) or stroke, a key indicator that there is a high risk of a full, or more serious, stroke. The QAF also includes a range of points for managing that risk including for recording and managing of hypertension and cholesterol in patients who have had a stroke or TIA. In addition, the QAF includes points for managing other key risk factors such as treatment and care for atrial fibrillation, management of diabetes, recording smoking status and giving advice on smoking cessation, and setting up and maintaining an obesity register.

The Department has commenced work on an 18-month programme to develop a national strategy for stroke. One of the six key areas will focus on the improvement of primary and secondary stroke risk prevention, and raising public awareness, particularly the symptoms of stroke and the associated risk factors.

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research she has commissioned on the best ways of improving the management of patients who have had a (a) transient ischemic attack and (b) minor stroke. [66954]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department funds research to support policy and to provide the evidence needed to underpin quality improvement and service development in the national health service. Through the service delivery and organisation and health technology assessment programmes, the Department has funded a number of projects related to improving the management of patients who have had a transient ischaemic attack or minor stroke. These include:

a randomised controlled comparison of alternative strategies in stroke care;

a multi-centre randomised trial evaluating feeding policies in patients admitted to hospital with a recent stroke;

a systematic review and economic evaluation of the clinical effectiveness and cost-effectiveness of clopidogrel and modified-release dipyridamole in the secondary prevention of occlusive vascular events;

a systematic review of the effectiveness, cost-effectiveness and barriers to implementation of thrombolytic and neuroprotective therapy for acute ischaemic stroke in the NHS;

a multi-centre randomised trial to assess whether hypertension or hypotension immediately post-stroke can be therapeutically treated, and can improve post-stroke prognosis.

a randomised trial and health economic evaluation to assess the effectiveness of communication therapy in the North West of England; a multi-centre randomised controlled trial and resource utilisation study to evaluate the effect of botulinum toxin in the treatment of upper limb spasticity due to stroke; partnership and complexity in continuity of care: a study of vertical and horizontal integration across organisational and professional boundaries (relationships between organisations);

a cohort study to assess the effect of continuity of care in stroke and its relation to outcomes;

a study to determine what pattern of service delivery will best meet the needs of people who have a transient ischaemic attack.

The NHS national research programme projects listed above, either completed over the last three years or are currently under way, have been funded at a cost of £5.1 million. The Department has also invested £20 million over five years to set up a new stroke research network.

Voluntary Organisations

Mr. Vara: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much money was distributed to voluntary organisations through section 64 General Scheme of Grants in each year since 1997; and if she will list the organisations which received such funding in 2005–06. [67610]

Mr. Byrne: The table sets out the amount of grants to voluntary and community organisations from the section 64 General Scheme of Grants for each year from 1997 to 2005. Organisations that received a grant in 2005–06 are listed on the Department's website at: www.dh.gov.uk/section64

Financial year	Total value of approved grants (£ million)
1996–97	21
1997–98	21.4
1998–99	20.6
1999–2000	22.3
2000–01	22.7
2001–02	21.5
2002–03	22.1
2003–04	21.4
2004–05	17.8
2005–06	17.9

Note:
In 2004–05, £4.2 million was transferred to the Department for Education and Skills projects relating to children's social care policy following re-organisation of departmental responsibilities for children's social services.

Waiting Lists/Times

Peter Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information her Department holds on the waiting times for (a) different categories of operations and (b) rehabilitation for stroke patients in South Hampshire. [67152]

Mr. Byrne: The operation for stroke patients is the endarterectomy of the carotid artery and (patch repair of carotid—The median waiting time for patients with a primary diagnosis of stroke and a main operation of endarterectomy of the carotid artery and patch repair of the carotid artery covering the following primary care trusts:

New Forest,

Fareham and Gosport,

Portsmouth City,

Southampton City,

Eastleigh and Test Valley South and, Isle Of Wight, is 28 days.

This information is based on elective finished admission episodes. Information about rehabilitation waiting times is not held centrally.

Notes:

Finished admission episodes

A finished admission episode is the first period of in-patient care under one consultant within one Healthcare provider. Please note that admissions do not represent the number of in-patients, as a person may have more than one admission within the year.

Diagnosis (primary diagnosis)

The primary diagnosis is the first of up to 14 (seven prior to 2002–03) diagnosis fields in the hospital episode statistics (HES) data set and provides the main reason why the patient was in hospital.

Main operation

The main operation is the first recorded operation in the HES data set and is usually the most resource intensive procedure performed during the episode. It is appropriate to use main operation when looking at admission details, for example time waited, but the figures for all operations count of episodes give a more complete count of episodes with an operation.

Weighted Capitation Formula

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what the value of the weighting for (a) deprivation and (b) age is in the weighted capitation formula; [63915]

(2) what the average annual cost to the NHS is of a person (a) over 65 and (b) under 65 years in (i) deprived and (ii) non-deprived areas; [63916]

(3) what the average age of (a) population and (b) patients is for each primary care trust (PCT) area; and what the financial position of each PCT is estimated to be at the end of 2005–06. [63921]

Mr. Byrne: The weighted capitation formula has separate components for hospital and community health services (HCHS), prescribing and primary medical services to reflect the services for which primary care trusts (PCTs) receive funding. Each component has its own age and additional need weightings which are applied simultaneously to the population to produce a weighted population for each PCT, When expressed as an index centred around one for each PCT, the weightings in the HCHS component range from 0.85 to 1.25 for age and 0.71 to 1.52 for additional need.

Estimated expenditure in 2003–04 on HCHS was 2,073 for a person over 65 years and 517 for a person under 65 years. It is not possible to estimate this expenditure in deprived and non-deprived areas.

The mean and median age of the population at the time of the 2001 census and the 2005–06 month six forecast outturn position for each PCT has been placed in the Library. It is not possible to provide the average age for patients.

TREASURY

Average Earnings

Mr. Michael Foster: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the average earnings of full-time employees based on the annual survey of hours and earnings were for (a) Birmingham, (b) Sandwell, (c) Dudley, (d) Walsall, (e) Wolverhampton, (f) Solihull, (g) Coventry, (h) Worcestershire, (i) Herefordshire, (j) Shropshire, (k) Telford and Wrekin, (l) Staffordshire, (m) Warwickshire and (n) Gloucestershire in each year since 2000. [67401]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 3 May 2006:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking what the average earnings of full-time employees in (a) Birmingham, (b) Sandwell, (c) Dudley, (d) Walsall, (e) Wolverhampton, (f) Solihull, (g) Coventry, (h) Worcestershire, (i) Herefordshire, (j) Shropshire, (k) Telford and Wrekin, (l) Staffordshire, (m) Warwickshire and (n) Gloucestershire was in each year since 2000. (67401)

Average earnings are estimated from the Annual Survey of Hours and Earnings (ASHE), and are provided for full time employees on adult rates whose pay for the survey period was not affected by absence. This is the standard definition used for ASHE. The ASHE does not collect data on the self employed and people who do unpaid work.

I attach tables showing Average Gross Weekly Earnings by place of work for the years 2000 to 2005 for Full Time Employees on Adult Rates. These statistics are already published on the National Statistics website at: http://www.statistics.gov.uk/StatBase/Product.asp?vlnk=13101.

The ASHE, carried out in April of each year, is the most comprehensive source of earnings information in the United Kingdom. It is a one per cent. sample of all employees who are members of pay-as-you-earn (PAYE) schemes.

Guide to quality:

The Coefficient of Variation (CV) indicates the quality of a figure, the smaller the CV value the higher the quality.

The true value is likely to lie within ± twice the CV e.g. for an average of 200 with a CV of 5 per cent., we would expect the population average to be within the range 180 to 220.

Key

CV ⩽ 5%

* CV > 5% and ⩽ 10%

The median replaces the mean as the headline statistic. The weighted mean is the sum of the weighted values divided by the sum of the weights. The median is the value below which 50 per cent. of employees fall. It is preferred over the mean for earnings data as it is influenced less.

Birth Statistics

Shona McIsaac: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the birth rate was to those aged (a) 19, (b) 18, (c) 17, (d) 16, (e) 15, (f) 14 and (g) under 14 years in (i) North East Lincolnshire and (ii) North Lincolnshire in each of the past 10 years. [67055]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell dated 3 May 2006:

As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your question about what the birth rate was to females aged 19, 18, 17, 16, 15, 14 and under 14 in North East Lincolnshire and North Lincolnshire in each of the last 10 years. (67055)

The latest available figures are for 2004. Because there were very few births at younger ages some aggregation and suppression of the requested figures has been necessary in order to protect confidentiality. Rates shown in the table below are three-year rolling averages with ages under 15 being combined into a single age group. Where the rate was based on fewer than five cases it has been suppressed.

[1] Live births in the three-year period per 1,000 female population of the corresponding age for the three years. Rates for under 15 are per 1,000 females aged 14.

[2] Using boundaries as at 1/4/2005 throughout.

[3] Cells containing a dash (—) indicate rates based on fewer than five live births.

More detailed information is not available as disclosure of results at specific locations would provide information of value to those seeking to circumvent HM Revenue and Customs' controls, thereby prejudicing the prevention and detection of crime.

EU Institutions (Personnel)

Michael Gove: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will ensure the continuation of low rates of income tax for personnel working in the EU institutions. [66916]

Dawn Primarolo: The taxation of personnel employed by the EU institutions is governed by the Protocol on the Privileges and Immunities of the European Union. There are no current plans to amend this Protocol.

Council Tax

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the basis of the estimates for council tax receipts in (a) the 2006 Budget for 2006–07 and (b) the 2005 pre-Budget statement. [66660]

Dawn Primarolo: Local authorities, not the Government, determine council tax increases. The 2006–07 council tax figures in Table B14 of the 2005 pre-Budget report, column 6701W are projections based on stylised assumptions of average council tax growth since its introduction. The 2006–07 figures in Table C8 of Budget 2006 (HC 968) are based on latest available CIPFA forecasts of increases in that year.

Councillors

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what changes HM Revenue and Customs have made to the tax status and liability for councillors' incomes and pensions since 2001. [66693]

Dawn Primarolo: Guidance to local councils on the expenses and allowances payable to councillors and civic dignitaries is published by the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister (ODPM). The ODPM guidance includes advice provided by HM Revenue and Customs on tax and National Insurance issues. There have been no changes to the tax rules that affect this guidance.

Drugs Seizures

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what (a) weight and (b) estimated street value of illegal drugs was seized by HM Revenue and Customs in Devon and Cornwall in each of the past five years, broken down by type of drug. [65141]

Dawn Primarolo: The following table gives details of HM Revenue and Customs' national seizures of illegal drugs over the last five years for which figures are available.

HM Revenue and Customs

Philip Davies: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment has been made of the likely effect of putting out to private tender certain functions of HM Revenue and Customs. [64819]

Dawn Primarolo: HMRC regularly reviews its use of allocated public funds, including its current tendered services but there are no current plans to extend these. Taxpayer confidentiality is of paramount concern in all considerations.

John Barrett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what job opportunities are available with HM Revenue and Customs in Scotland for staff highly skilled in human resources. [66375]

Dawn Primarolo: HM Revenue and Customs is in the process of streamlining its HR organisation to meet its business needs. The Department is creating an HR Service Centre at Cumbernauld where there is a range of jobs available for skilled HR staff. The Department is also exploring what other job opportunities may be available in other Revenue and Customs business streams in the Edinburgh area that can utilise the skills of HR staff. A database of job opportunities in other Government Departments is also available to staff to help them secure suitable alternative employment.

John Barrett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the cost to the public purse has been of (a) the integration of human resources services within the Inland Revenue and (b) their subsequent integration with HM Customs and Excise. [66376]

Dawn Primarolo: The restructuring of the Inland Revenue HR service was to deliver a broad ranging reform of the HR function. Phase 1 was partially complete when announcements were made regarding the merger of Inland Revenue with Customs and Excise. The project has been subsumed within phase 2. The changes started in phase 1 made use of existing resources, in terms of both people and accommodation and was broadly cost-neutral.

The integration of the HR functions in Inland Revenue and Customs and Excise is only partially complete. The first phase of change was to implement a virtual service centre in three locations. These locations were selected as existing technology platforms could be utilised. The costs to date are related to the set up of a contact centre in two of the locations (the third already operated in this way) and are in the region of £100,000. The project, when completed in 2008, will lead to savings of 702 staff and an HR to total departmental staff ratio in line with Gershon proposals.

John Barrett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer why the decision was taken to restructure the human resources services of HM Revenue and Customs; and if he will make a statement. [66377]

Dawn Primarolo: Before HM Revenue and Customs was created, both the Inland Revenue and Customs and Excise were in the process of transforming their HR service delivery models. Both Departments were committed to changes with attendant improvements in both service delivery and efficiency. As the two legacy Departments had different supporting technology, processes and working practices a simple merger of the two HR functions would not provide the service required to support the business during a time of considerable change.

John Barrett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer why the decision was made to close the Edinburgh office of the human resources service of HM Revenue and Customs. [66379]

Dawn Primarolo: The closure of the Edinburgh office is part of a programme of wider change in HR in Revenue and Customs. The programme brings together HR from the two former Departments into a single HR structure that supports the new Department in delivering its challenging business objectives and commitments to efficiency savings as a result of the Gershon review and integration of the two former Departments.

John Barrett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer for what reasons a directorate of HM Revenue and Customs has not been located in Scotland. [66380]

Dawn Primarolo: In June last year HM Revenue and Customs moved to a new organisational structure based on functions rather than geography. The changes were made to improve quality and consistency and help HMRC deliver good service to customers.

Many of HMRC's 36 business unit directorates have a presence in Scotland, but where each director's office is based will depend on the needs of that part of the business. HMRC is continuing to develop its plans for restructuring and relocation to meet its efficiency targets.

John Barrett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer why HM Revenue and Customs has no human resources and learning managers in Scotland. [66381]

Dawn Primarolo: HM Revenue and Customs will have an HR Service Centre based in Cumbernauld in Scotland. There will be a 136 HR staff based in this office and there will be 26 management posts in the organisational structure at officer, higher officer and senior officer level.

John Barrett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps are being taken to retrain human resources staff within HM Revenue and Customs in Scotland following the recent reorganisation. [66385]

Dawn Primarolo: During the current transition period to a new structure of HR work in Revenue and Customs, both HR teams in Scotland are still actively employed on HR work. This situation is expected to continue until at least December 2006. Over the coming months, the Department will be working with staff in Edinburgh to secure new work for them that best utilises their skills. People will then receive training appropriate for their new work.

John McDonnell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the total expenditure by HM Revenue and Customs has been on the use of consultants employed on introducing the lean processing model into the Department. [58391]

Dawn Primarolo: LEAN processing techniques are designed to drive out waste and increase productivity in those areas that process large volumes of routine transactions, and is a key element in HMRC's plans to provide improved service to customers, and meet its efficiency targets.

The total expenditure by HM Revenue and Customs on the use of consultants introducing Lean Processing over the last two financial years from 2004-05 is £7.4 million.

Home Computer Initiative

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what consultations took place before his decision to terminate the Home Computer Initiative; and if he will make a statement. [62393]

BEST COPY AVAILABLE

Mr. Burrowes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment the Government have made of the effect of the abolition of the home computing initiatives on its digital strategy; and what further steps the Government are taking to increase access to computers and improve IT skills. [62730]

Chris Grayling: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what discussions he had with the Department of Trade and Industry on his plans to abolish Home Computer Initiative tax relief; [62657]

(2) what assessment was made of the likely effects on (a) businesses and (b) users before the decision was made to abolish the Home Computer Initiative scheme; [62658]

(3) what criteria he used in deciding that the abolition of Home Computer Initiative tax relief should have immediate effect. [62690]

Peter Luff: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) for what reasons he abolished the Home Computing Initiative in advance of the earliest date originally indicated; [62948]

(2) which factors led him to conclude that suppliers in the Home Computing Initiative should not be given greater notice of the decision to terminate the scheme at the end of the 2005–06 financial year; [62949]

(3) if he will discuss with the chief executive of the Office of Fair Trading what arrangements can be made to ensure an orderly run-down of the Home Computing Initiative; [62950]

(4) what assessment he made of the impact on (a) employers and (b) users before deciding to abolish the Home Computing Initiative; [62951]

(5) what discussions he had with (a) the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, (b) the Office of Fair Trading and (c) representatives of the computer industry about his decision to abolish the Home Computing Initiative; [62952]

(6) if he will meet the Chief Executive of the Office of Fair Trading (OFT) to discuss the implications for the OFT of the termination of the Home Computing Initiative in the Budget; [62947]

(7) if he will list each of the (a) meeting, (b) correspondence including electronic mail and (c) other contact between (i) Ministers and (ii) officials in his Department and their counterparts in the Department of Trade and Industry on the future of the Home Computing Initiative in the 10 days before the Budget; [63803]

(8) if he will place in the Library the evidence of abuse collected by HM Inland Revenue and Customs that led to the decision to abolish the tax exemption that underpinned the home computer initiative; [66509]

(9) if he will place in the Library communications from his officials to the Department of Trade and Industry on the Home Computing Initiatives relating to the abolition of the tax exemption in the Budget; [66510]

(10) whether his Department produced a regulatory impact assessment of the abolition of the home computing initiatives tax exemption. [66511]

Miss Kirkbride: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what estimate he has made of the impact on (a) employers and (b) employees of the abolition of the Home Computer Initiative scheme; [63232]

(2) what discussions he has had with the Department of Trade and Industry on his plans to abolish the Home Computer Initiative scheme; [63239]

(3) what discussions he had with businesses before he made the decision to abolish the Home Computer Initiative tax relief; [63241]

(4) on what basis the notice period for abolishing the Home Computer Initiative tax relief scheme was decided. [63255]

Greg Mulholland: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will make it his policy to retain the tax exemption offered as part of the Home Computing Initiative; [63917]

(2) what assessment his Department has made of the impact of the withdrawal of the Home Computing Initiative on levels of home computing in the UK; [63918]

(3) if he will compensate those people who invested heavily in anticipation of the Home Computer Bill and have been disadvantaged by its abandonment; [64481]

(4) if he will compensate those who invested in the Home Computer Initiative prior to the decision to abolish it. [65188]

Jo Swinson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what period of notice his Department gave to the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry on the ending of the Home Computing scheme. [64167]

Mr. Amess: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what discussions he had with businesses in Southend West constituency before he made the decision to abolish the Home Computer Initiative; and if he will make a statement; [65044]

(2) how much has been saved by the abolition of the Home Computer Initiative; and if he will make a statement. [65045]

Dawn Primarolo: The Government keep all taxes under review and have been looking at how they can focus their support on groups with the poorest access to technology, following the publication of the Digital Strategy paper in April 2005 which indicated that the Home Computer Initiative was poorly targeted.

In addition, HM Revenue and Customs has evidence to suggest that in some cases employees were buying the computer not borrowing it, and that some employees were being offered equipment that is clearly not a "computer" within the spirit of the legislation.

In view of these risks to the Exchequer, the Government took action at Budget 2006 to remove the exemption from benefit-in-kind tax charges and national insurance contributions for employer-provided computer equipment from 6 April 2006, and an RIA on this and the amendment to the tax exemption for mobile phones has been published.

HM Revenue and Customs has put in place transitional arrangements to ensure that where the employer and employee had agreed in writing before 6 April 2006 the terms on which the computer was to be made available the tax exemption would apply even if the employee had not physically taken possession of the computer by 6 April 2006. The Office of Fair Trading will continue to issue directions under the Consumer Credit Act, providing it is in the hirer's interest to do so, until 5 September 2006.

Further to the Digital Strategy, the Government published its 'Inclusion through Innovation' report in November 2005, which looked at where Information and Communication Technology (ICTs) might deliver most benefit to excluded groups and considered how that might be achieved. In addition, the Government have written to representatives from industry inviting suggestions on the best way of refocusing our support on these target groups. Over the next few months the DTI will review the options put forward and consider how they would meet the Government's objectives.

On 2 May, I announced two further measures which will:

set up a dedicated Digital Inclusion Team to ensure the best use of ICT in tackling social exclusion; change the aims and objectives of the Digital Strategy to focus on inclusion, to reflect the shift in the Government's focus to a more targeted approach.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many fraudulent claims have been submitted under the Home Computing Initiative; and how many consequent court cases (a) have been concluded and (b) are pending. [63333]

Dawn Primarolo: Employees do not claim tax relief under the Home Computer Initiative. The exemption applied to remove any benefit in kind charge arising when an employer loaned a computer to an employee for private use. Evidence collected by HMRC shows that the HCI was being used to enable employees to buy equipment out of their pre tax income, including in some cases leisure equipment such as game consoles and MP3 Players.

Illegal Meat Imports

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many passengers have been found to be in possession of illegal meat imports after being detected by meat detector dogs since 2001; and how many such passengers have been (a) prosecuted and (b) convicted of importing illegal meat. [58615]

Dawn Primarolo: Dogs trained to detect products of animal origin were introduced in September 2002. Since then they have been responsible for 597 detections in 2002–03, 1,532 detections in 2003–04 and 3,375 detections in 2004–05.

Central records do not show the number of passengers associated with each detection. There has been one prosecution as a result of a detection by the dogs. In November 2005 the importer was convicted of the illegal importation of 100 kilos of crayfish and fined £100.

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer which locations each meat detector dog has visited in each month since 2001; how many hours each UK (a) seaport, (b) airport and (c) border crossing point has had a meat detector dog working in each month since 2001; and how many hours each meat detector dog has worked in each month since 2001. [58616]

Dawn Primarolo: HM Revenue and Customs detector dogs are deployed on a flexible, mobile basis according to risk and where they will have the most impact. They may be deployed at any port, airport or border crossing point in Great Britain that handles traffic from outside the European Union. The meat detector dogs work full time and flexible hours according to operational requirements. Further information is not available: release of detailed information about deployment of anti-smuggling resources would put in the public domain information that would be valuable to those seeking to circumvent customs controls thereby prejudicing the prevention and detection of crime.

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how many tonnes of meat have been voluntarily handed over by passengers at each UK (a) seaport, (b) airport and (c) border crossing point in each year since 1997; [58617]

(2) if he will estimate the total amount of illegal meat seized at (a) each UK seaport, (b) each UK airport and (c) each UK border crossing point in each year since 2003. [58626]

Dawn Primarolo: Revenue and Customs began to record illegal meat seizures when they took on responsibility for tackling illegal imports of products of animal origin in April 2003. In the financial year 2003–04 HM Revenue and Customs seized 70,083 tonnes of meat at all seaports, airports and postal depots in Great Britain of which 3,066 tonnes had been voluntarily surrendered by passengers. In 2004–05 they seized 77,087 tonnes of meat of which 2,523 tonnes had been voluntarily surrendered. More detailed information is not available as disclosure of results at different locations would put in the public domain information that would be valuable to those seeking to circumvent customs controls thereby prejudicing the prevention and detection of crime.

Mortgages

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will take steps to limit the fees chargeable by mortgage lenders to people wishing to change their mortgage provider. [67204]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The charges imposed by mortgage lenders are principally a matter for commercial judgment in a competitive mortgage market.

The UK adopted statutory mortgage regulation in October 2004, under the Financial Services Authority (FSA). Under that regime charges must be clearly disclosed to customers before they conclude a contract with a lender.

Where these charges can be varied over the life of the mortgage, any change must be made in a way that is fair to the customer, the FSA is currently looking into increases to exit charges by certain lenders to ensure they have been made in a fair way.

National Insurance (Music Industry)

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to introduce class 1 national insurance liability for freelance musicians; whether he is seeking to claim back payments of class 1 contributions from musicians and orchestras; and what assessment he has made of the impact of this policy on orchestras. [66514]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave the hon. member for East Antrim (Sammy Wilson) on 8 December 2005, Official Report, column 992.

Off-shore Trusts

Mr. Evans: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the annual tax revenue which would be payable if all off-shore trusts held by British residents were repatriated to the UK. [66982]

Dawn Primarolo: No such estimate has been made.

Online Goods Declaration

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the development cost has been of the free online service by which traders can declare goods to HM Revenue and Customs; what the set-up cost of the service was; and what the expected annual cost is of (a) staff and (b) infrastructure for the service. [65861]

Dawn Primarolo: The information requested could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the expected cost is of updating CHIEF and the free declaration service by which traders can declare goods to HM Revenue and Customs to conform with the new requirements determined by the EU. [65862]

Dawn Primarolo: HMRC is currently working to clarify and document the full requirements of the EU Change Programme, technical options for delivery and associated timescales for implementation. CHIEF is likely to be the system used to implement most (but not all) of the Change Programme but until our preparatory work is complete it is by no means certain, and therefore it is not possible to provide accurate costs for updating CHIEF at this time. Each project within the EU Change Programme will be subject to a full and robust Business Case, which will include identification of the most appropriate VFM technology for delivery, reducing the compliance burden and improving customer experience.

Parliamentary Questions

Peter Luff: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he will reply to Question (a) 63803, (b) 62950, (c) 62951, (d) 62952, (e) 62948 and (f) 62949, on the home computing initiative, tabled by the hon. Member for Mid-Worcestershire. [67812]

Dawn Primarolo: I have done so today.

Pension Funds

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer which former state-owned companies have received Crown guarantees in respect of their pension fund deficits. [66344]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: It is a matter for the Department that provided the Crown guarantee to report any obligations created by the Crown guarantee to Parliament in accordance with the Requirements of Government Accounting and in its Departmental Resource Accounts in accordance with the Government's Financial Reporting Manual, which complies with generally accepted accounting practice.

Tax Credits

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the answer of 30 March 2006, Official Report, column 1116W, on tax credits, how many and what proportion of tax credit claimants received manual payments as a result of (a) delays in processing changes in circumstances, (b) the termination of claims because the award notice had not been signed and subsequent reinstating of the claim, (c) an error resulting in a child or children no longer being shown on the award notice and (d) other reasons in (i) 2003–04, (ii) 2004–05 and (iii) 2005–06; and what the total amount of these manual payments was broken down by reason for the manual payment in each year. [66094]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 30 March 2006; Official Report, column 1116W.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the performance management data on tax credits which is available on a (a) monthly, (b) quarterly and (c) annual basis; and if he will make a statement. [63375]

Dawn Primarolo: HMRC maintains a wide range of management information data to help them manage tax credits business, monitor performance and ultimately inform the Department's annual report.

Collection of data will vary across the year.

Teenage Pregnancy

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the levels of teenage pregnancy were in each county in each year since 1997. [67417]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 3 May 2006:

As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your recent question asking what the levels of teenage pregnancy were in each county in each year since 1997. (67417)

Available figures are estimates of the number of pregnancies that resulted in a live birth, stillbirth or termination.

Teenage conception numbers and rates from 1997 to 2004 (the most recent year for which figures are available) are given in the attached table, which I am also placing in the House of Commons Library. Figures for 2004 are provisional.

Valuation Office Agency

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will place in the Library a copy of the Valuation Office Agency's (a) best practice guide and (b) Certificate of Value manual on the taking and adding of photographs for valuation purposes. [62296]

Dawn Primarolo: The Valuation Office Agency's (VGA) (a) IT Systems Best Practice—Digital Photography Summary and IT Systems Best Practice—Digital Photography are purely technical guides for its staff on how to take and store photographs using a digital camera, (b) The VOA does not have a Certificate of Value manual as requested.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will place in the Library a copy of the Valuation Office Agency's Data Strategy. [66655]

Dawn Primarolo: The Valuation Office Agency's Forward Plan 2005–2008 and Annual Report and Accounts 2004–2005, both of which are available on its website www.voa.gov.uk. cover the strategy for improving its data and exploiting new technology with examples.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to his Answer of 23 March 2006, Official Report, column 506W, to the hon. Member for Meriden (Mrs. Spelman), on the Valuation Office Agency, whether the performance appraisal system, performance rewards and performance-related pay for any staff member conducting valuations is linked to the volume, frequency, accuracy or size of the valuations. [66673]

Dawn Primarolo: In line with guidance from the Cabinet Office, the Valuation Office Agency's performance appraisal system and performance-related rewards are linked to the delivery of its key business objectives and targets (including timeliness, quality, value for money and customer satisfaction) which are set out in detail in the Agency's Forward Plan, available on its website www.voa.gov.uk.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many cameras the Valuation Office Agency owns. [66695]

Dawn Primarolo: The Valuation Office Agency has replaced 2,126 conventional cameras in the last five years on cost saving grounds. The Valuation Office Agency has used camera since the 1980s and has a total of 2,355 cameras.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the Answer of 6 February 2006, Official Report, column 1038W, to the hon. Member for Meriden (Mrs. Spelman) on the Valuation Office Agency, when he will place a copy of the staff intranet announcement notice in the Library. [66761]

Dawn Primarolo: I have been assured by officials that the intranet announcement was deposited in the Library of the House on 6 February 2006, the day I answered the question from the hon. Member for Meriden (Mrs. Spelman). The Library has confirmed that it is available to Members.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the answer of 30 March 2006, Official Report, columns 1117–8W, on the Valuation Office Agency (VOA), which foreign trips staff from the VOA undertook that were funded by public funds in (a) 2004–05 and (b) 2005–06. [66762]

Dawn Primarolo: There is nothing I can usefully add to my earlier answer. The information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

VAT

Lynne Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the answer of 30 March 2006, Official Report, column 1118W, on VAT relief, whether within an existing zero rate of VAT category it is permitted to alter the detailed arrangements with respect to an item or service to which the zero rate applies. [67585]

Dawn Primarolo: Under our agreements with our European partners we are not permitted to extend the scope of our existing zero rates to include supplies on which VAT is currently chargeable.

War Loan Repayments

Anne Moffat: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether the UK Government continue to pay interest and capital reduction to the US in connection with lend lease and war loans; and if he will make a statement. [67695]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Government intends to meet its obligations under the 1945 Agreement by repaying the United States Government in full the amounts lent in 1945. Repayment of the war loans to the United States Government are expected to be completed on 31 December 2006.

Western Gray Whales

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assurances he received during discussions on the European Bank for Reconstruction and Development's funding for Shell's proposed Sakhalin II development that none of the remaining western gray whales will die as a result of the project. [67174]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The European Bank for Reconstruction and Development, together with the other potential lenders to the Sakhalin II project, have undertaken an extensive and detailed assessment of the risks to the western gray whales. This assessment has drawn on the views of an independent panel of world-renowned whale experts, convened by the World Conservation Union (IUCN). This panel produced a series of recommendations on whale protection measures relating to noise, construction schedules, vessel movements, monitoring and other relevant issues, and it is hoped that these measures, together with Sakhalin Energy's own whale protection plans, will minimise the level of disruption to the whale's habitat. To date there is no evidence of Sakhalin Energy's activities resulting in any whale deaths, and recent research has indicated that the whale population is showing signs of recovery.

Further comfort is drawn from the establishment of an independent western gray whale Advisory Panel that will oversee and advise on ongoing whale conservation activities and research. Sakhalin Energy has agreed to implement all reasonable recommendations that this panel produces.

Whale protection measures and commitments would be contractual obligations under any loan agreements between Sakhalin Energy and the potential lenders, and these commitments would be monitored and publicly reported on.

Written Answers to Questions

Thursday 4 May 2006

LEADER OF THE HOUSE

Media Briefing

Norman Baker: To ask the Leader of the House pursuant to his answer of 30 March 2006, Official Report, column 771W, whether paragraph 7.1 prohibits the issuing of embargoed statements to media outlets; and what rules govern the issuing of embargoed statements to the media. [68509]

Mr. Hoon: There is no reference in paragraph 7.1 which prohibits the release of material under embargo. It has been the practice of successive Governments to release specific reports and other documents under timed embargo to assist the media in their coverage.

There are no specific rules governing the issue of embargoed statements to the media, but Departments and their press offices are made aware of the need to observe the importance of Parliament being informed in the first instance.

Ministerial Cars (Fuel Costs)

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Leader of the House what the fuel costs were for ministerial cars used by the Department in each of the last five years. [67126]

Nigel Griffiths: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 27 April 2006, Official Report, column 1226W, by my hon. Friend the Minister of State, Department for Transport.

HOUSE OF COMMONS COMMISSION

Air Quality

Mr. Robathan: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission what steps are taken to enforce the air quality management areas regulations inside the House of Commons precincts; and if he will make a statement. [65855]

Nick Harvey: Westminster city council has declared an air quality management area which covers the whole borough. It has produced an air quality action plan which sets out the main measures that Westminster will implement in working towards meeting the objectives. In order to reduce emissions, steps are also being taken to remind those responsible for vehicles using the estate on a regular basis that engines should be turned off when stationary.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Anthrax (Wales)

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions she has had with her counterpart in Wales on the incidence of anthrax; and what measures she has taken to prevent spread of the disease to England. [66624]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Chief Veterinary Officer for Wales has responsibility for the control of the incidence of anthrax in Wales and she is working closely with the Chief Veterinary Officer (UK). Officials in the Department have been in close, direct daily contact with their counterparts in the Welsh Assembly Government. Since the outbreak was confirmed on 22 April, the CVO Wales has convened three telephone conferences, involving partner organisations including representatives from the Environment Agency, relevant local authority, public health officials and the State Veterinary Service who have advised on environmental sampling, public health protection and animal health aspects accordingly.

A movement restriction was placed on the affected premises on 19 April 2006 and will continue until it is considered safe for it to be lifted. Investigations are continuing.

Avian Influenza

Mr. Vara: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what measures are in place for the inoculation of the population in the event of an outbreak of avian influenza in Britain. [65767]

Mr. Bradshaw: The vaccination of poultry offers potential benefits in disease control, but currently available vaccines are too limited to provide a general solution. Crucially, although these vaccines protect against disease, they will not prevent birds from becoming infected and shedding virus, hiding the symptoms of disease.

We remain convinced that early detection, application of rapid and robust control measures, and enhanced biosecurity and surveillance are key to the successful eradication of avian influenza in poultry.

We recognise that there are specific circumstances in which vaccination could play a role. For example, we have ordered 2.3 million doses of vaccine as a contingency reserve for zoo birds. The present situation concerns one dead wild bird and to date there is no evidence of any associated disease in UK commercial poultry.

In these circumstances we do not see any role for vaccination.

Policy for human vaccination is the responsibility of the Department of Health.

Cetaceans

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs pursuant to the answer of 17 March 2006, Official Report, column 2506W, on cetacean by-catch, how much Government funding for the Cetacean and Turtle Strandings Scheme (a) has been spent in each year since it was established and (b) has been allocated for future years. [67077]

Mr. Bradshaw: Defra (and previously DETR) has funded the Cetacean and Turtle Strandings Scheme since its inception in 1990. From 2005–06 onwards the Scottish Executive and Welsh Assembly Government have provided a financial contribution to the scheme.

(a) Funding figures for the current year, along with the previous 10 years are:

2006–07	[1]305,000
2005–06	[1]454,752
2004–05	455,761
2003–04	361,265
2002–03	351,371
2001–02	392,094
2000–01	337,548
1999–2000	204,257
1998–99	189,072
1997–98	159,374
1996–97	182,703

[1] Includes SE/WAG contribution.

(b) Defra are currently reviewing requirements for research into cetacean strandings. Until this review is completed, budgets have not been allocated for 2007–08 and future years.

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs pursuant to the answer of 17 March 2006, Official Report, column 2506W, on cetacean by-catch, what estimate she has made of common dolphin by-catch in the 2005–06 season. [67116]

Mr. Bradshaw: Estimates of by-catch for the 2005–06 season are not yet available. Results of observer schemes which monitor cetacean by-catch will be used to meet the obligations of Council Regulation (EC) 812/2004, which requires the UK Government to report to the Commission by 1 June 2006 on by-catch monitoring in particular fisheries.

Fly-tipping

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many incidents of fly-tipping have (a) been reported and (b) led to a prosecution in (i) South East Essex and (ii) Southend-on-Sea since April 2004. [66878]

Mr. Bradshaw: Defra and the Environment Agency have established a national database on fly-tipping (Flycapture), operational since April 2004.

Flycapture collects data at local authority level only. It is important to note that the following data are probably an underestimate and will increase as authorities get better at collecting and reporting information.

Southend-on-Sea borough council reported 1,736 incidents of fly-tipping between April 2004 and March 2005 (an average of 157.8 per month) and 1,591 incidents between April 2005 and February 2006 (an average of 132.6 per month). Waste collection authorities across the whole of Essex reported 25,083 incidents in 2004–05 (an average of 2,090.3 per month) and 21,741 incidents in 2005–06 (an average of 1,811.8 per month).

Prosecutions data are available only from April 2005 to February 2006. During this period no prosecutions were reported by Southend-on-Sea borough council. Local authorities in Essex took forward 9 prosecutions in this time period.

The following table shows the relevant data broken down by individual local authorities in Essex.

Herdwick Indigenous Sheep Flock

Tim Farron: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what funding her Department has made available for the protection of the Herdwick indigenous sheep flock in each year since 1997. [67481]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 3 May 2006]: In 2001, Defra granted £10,000 to create the Heritage Gene Bank which was set up to preserve semen and embryos from breeds considered to be at-risk due to the FMD outbreak of the time. The Herdwick was one of those breeds considered to be at-risk because the majority of its breeding population were in or near to areas heavily affected by FMD.

Defra recognises the need to have a long term view on managing the genetic health of our livestock breeding population and the need for a co-ordinated effort to support initiatives that will encourage the characterisation, conservation and utilisation of our livestock genetic resources—which includes rare, mainstream and heritage livestock breeds. The National Steering Committee for Farm Animal Genetic Resources is about to report to Ministers with a national action plan to identify what the Government, industry stakeholders and other organisations can do to improve the management of Farm Animal Genetic Resources and this plan will help inform our future policy in this area.

Import of Seal Skins Regulations

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the operation of the Import of Seal Skins Regulations 1996. [66879]

Jim Knight: The Import of Seal Skins Regulations 1996 prohibit the commercial importation of skins (and other listed products) of White coat, Harp and Blueback Hooded seal pups, as required by European Council Directive 83/129/EEC (as amended). These Regulations are enforced at the border by HM Revenue and Customs.

Fisheries

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much money the Moroccan Army has received from the issuing of fishing licences in Western Sahara under the last EU-Morocco Fisheries Partnership Agreement; how much it is expected to receive under the currently proposed agreement; and if she will make a statement. [67176]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Department does not hold this information.

Television Disposal

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate she has made of the number of analogue televisions which will be sent to landfill as a result of switching off the analogue television signal; and what steps she is taking to find means by which televisions can be reused or recycled. [67765]

Mr. Bradshaw: Digital switchover does not require any equipment to be thrown away. However, as the regulatory impact assessment on the timing of digital switchover acknowledges, there may be a temporary acceleration in the disposal of some secondary televisions that people choose not to adapt after switchover in each region. In light of this, Defra and the Department for Trade and Industry (DTI) have jointly commissioned the Market Transformation Programme to establish and quantify any changes in patterns of disposal of consumer equipment, including televisions, due to digital switchover. This project is due to report in June.

Televisions disposed of following digital switchover will be subject to regulations implementing the EU Waste Electronic and Electrical Equipment (WEEE) Directive, which aims to prevent electronic and electrical waste and promote reuse, recycling and other forms of recovery in order to reduce the amount of such waste going to landfill. The directive requires producers, or those acting on their behalf, to set up systems for treatment, recovery and environmentally sound disposal of WEEE.

Transposition of the majority of the WEEE directive is the responsibility of the DTI. However, Defra is drawing up regulations amending the Waste Management Licensing Regulations 1994, to transpose the treatment-permitting requirements of article 6 of the directive. Defra also intend to introduce exemptions from the need to obtain a waste management licence for those storing waste electrical equipment prior to its recovery and those repairing such equipment to promote its reuse.

These regulations will help ensure that less waste electrical equipment ends up in landfill. They will also help to ensure that more of it is either reused or recycled in an environmentally sound manner.

The DTI plan to consult on the draft regulations and accompanying guidance later this spring.

Water Conservation/Resources

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans she has to use the planning system to promote water conservation; and if she will make a statement. [54708]

Yvette Cooper: I have been asked to reply.

The prudent use of natural resources is set out in PPS 1, "Delivering sustainable development"; this includes the sustainable use of water.

Water use in buildings is also related to design and installation. Consequently the promotion of water conservation can also be served through building or water regulation.

Water conservation is a key element of sustainability. We intend to regulate to increase water efficiency in new homes and will consult on proposals late this year. Proposals for water conservation are set out in the consultation paper for the Code for Sustainable Homes that was published on 6 December; the Code sets out a base line target that water used in homes should be 20 per cent. less than the current norm. The Code will have a range of performance standards with a five star rating system. Housing schemes that are publicly funded or built on sites released or assembled by Government will have to achieve a three star rating.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs pursuant to the answers to the hon. Member for Meriden (Mrs. Spelman) of 28 March 2006, Official Report, columns 844–5W, on water, if she will place in the Library a copy of the (a) joint sustainability impact study, (b) incidence effects of charging for domestic water and sewerage services (DETR, June 1998) (c) cross-Government review of water affordability

(DEFRA, December 2004) and (d) current 25 year water resource plan for each water company in England. [66792]

Mr. Morley: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is placing copies of (a) sustainability impacts study of additional house building scenarios in England in the House Library.

The Department is placing copies of (b) Incidence Effects of Charging for Domestic Water and Sewerage Services, and (c) the Cross-Government Review of Water Affordability in the House Library.

The Department does not hold copies of the companies' water resource plans, which are currently produced voluntarily. I will, however, place in the Library, a copy of the Environment Agency report to Ministers on those plans, Maintaining Water Supply. Summaries of plans are also available on company websites. When these plans are made statutory under the Water Act 2003, the non-commercially confidential aspects of both draft and final plans will be publicly available.

TRANSPORT

Airport Security

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport pursuant to the answer of 26 April 2006, Official Report, column 1089W, whether any of the incidents referred to were deemed to be a threat to the lives of passengers, staff or the general public. [68104]

Derek Twigg [holding answer 3 May 2006]: If an incident involves circumstances indicating that an accident nearly occurred, it is defined as a serious incident under the Civil Aviation (Investigation of Air Accidents and Incidents) Regulations 1996. Of the 43 occurrences referred to in my earlier answer, four were either accidents or serious incidents. All serious incidents and accidents are investigated by the Department's air accidents investigation branch. The reports of all AAIB investigations are published on their website.

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport pursuant to the answer of 26 April 2006, Official Report, column 1089W, how many incidents there were at each of the airports in each of the three preceding years. [68105]

Derek Twigg [holding answer 3 May 2006]: The number of incidents investigated by the Civil Aviation Authority at or in the locality of Belfast international airport, Belfast city airport and Londonderry airport in each of the years 2002, 2003 and 2004 is set out in the following table:

	Belfast international	Belfast city	Londonderry
2002	8	11	1
2003	115	13	3
2004	12	15	4

Of these, four were accidents or serious incidents as defined in the Civil Aviation (Investigation of Air Accidents and Incidents) Regulations 1996.

British Transport Police

Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the financial position is of the British Transport Police pension fund. [50760]

Derek Twigg: The latest valuation of the British Transport Police Superannuation Fund was carried out as at 30 June 2004 and completed on 31 December 2004. For valuation purposes the fund is split into three parts and the results were:

	£ million
1970 Section—Preserved Part	[1]1.1
1970 Section—Contributory Part	[2]9
1968 Section	[1]0.3

[1] Surplus
[2] Shortfall

Climate Change

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has (a) made and (b) plans to make of the effects of (i) English local authorities' local transport plans and (ii) the road schemes included in those plans on the Government's Public Sector Agreement target for greenhouse gas emissions. [64478]

Dr. Ladyman: Statutory Local Transport Plans are subject to Strategic Environmental Assessment, and the implications for greenhouse gas emissions will be carefully considered as part of this process. All new major road schemes proposed by local authorities within Local Transport Plans will remain subject to normal approval processes. Decisions on schemes will take account of climate change impacts alongside other environmental, economic and safety factors.

Colin Challen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessments have been made of the impact on climate change of decisions taken by his Department since it assumed joint responsibility for the Public Service Agreement target on reducing climate change emissions in April 2005; and if he will publish those assessments. [67833]

Dr. Ladyman: The transport measures included in CM6764 "Climate Change: The UK Programme 2006" were subjected to analysis on a number of measures including cost-effectiveness, distribution and air quality and other environmental impacts. Details of this are available at: http://www.defra.gov.uk/environment/climatechange/uk/ukccp/pdf/ukccp06-ria.pdf.

In addition, Statutory Local Transport Plans and Regional Transport Strategies are subject to Strategic Environmental Assessment, and the implications for greenhouse gas emissions are carefully considered as part of this process. Ministers' decisions on schemes will take account of climate change impacts alongside other environmental, economic and safety factors.

Dartford Crossing

Derek Conway: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will undertake a review of traffic delays related to the Dartford Crossing, the method of toll collection at the crossing and the part which the method of toll collection plays in the creation of vehicle tailbacks. [67958]

Dr. Ladyman: The Highways Agency keeps journey times and journey time reliability under review for all its roads, including the Dartford Crossing.

Paying to use the crossing is not the limiting factor on traffic at the crossing, but rather the capacity of the crossing itself, particularly the tunnels. The toll plazas perform an important safety role in controlling the demand and speed of vehicles both through the tunnels and away from the bridge.

Government Vehicles

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many cars are available for (a) Ministers and (b) officials (i) through the pool and (ii) through individual assignment. [67449]

Dr. Ladyman: There are 85 cars and drivers permanently allocated to Ministers and 25 cars and drivers permanently allocated to senior officials. The Government Car Service (GCS) also operates 35 pool cars. Official cars and drivers are provided by the GCS in accordance with the Prime Minister's guidance "Travel by Ministers".

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the total expenditure on motor vehicles for Ministers and senior officials was in 2005–06. [67450]

Dr. Ladyman: The contracted cost of providing allocated cars and drivers to Ministers and senior officials in 2005–06 was £7,079,400.

Railways

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what changes rail passengers may expect to (a) their expectation of a seat, (b) the availability of cheap day returns and (c) fare levels as a result of the Great West Franchise being awarded to First, with particular reference to the service between Cardiff and Portsmouth; and if he will make a statement. [65399]

Derek Twigg: The franchise agreement requires First Great Western (FGW) to use reasonable endeavours to minimise the need for passengers to stand on off-peak services, and for no more than 20 minutes on peak services. Rises in commuter fares and long-distance Saver Return fares are regulated in accordance with the Department's current policy, which limits annual rises in each category to an average of 1 per cent. above inflation. Other fares are unregulated, and FGW is free to set them on a commercial basis FGW are investing £200 million across the franchise to upgrade trains and stations. Trains on this route will benefit from this investment.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many passengers used (a) the St. Ives Bay line, (b) the Looe Valley line, (c) the Tamar Valley line, (d) the St. Albans Abbey Branch, (e) the Grantham to Skegness line, (f) the Penistone line and (g) the Esk Valley line in each of the last five years. [61281]

Derek Twigg: Statistics for passenger journeys are generally presented on the basis of railway financial year which runs from April to March. The figures for the last five financial years are set out in the following tables.

All of these lines have been chosen to demonstrate aspects of the Community Rail Development Strategy and most of them have long established community rail partnerships to promote and develop them (partnerships were established during 2005–06 for the Skegness Line and St. Albans Line). The figures need to be treated with caution (see following notes), but demonstrate that there has been growth on all lines over the last five years.

[1] Passenger figures for the Skegness Line include all passengers on the Nottingham—Grantham—Skegness service.

Notes:

1. The date of the Easter holidays can impact on the carryings of lines dependent on tourist traffic and in some financial years, there is no Easter (e.g. financial year 2005–06).

2. Data based on ticketing system supplied by the train operator. All such data may be subject to adjustment.

3. The Esk Valley line was used by passengers on trains run by the North Yorkshire Moors Railway during the summer of 2005 this adds approximately 5,000 to the total passengers shown in the table).

4. The St. Ives line figures as presented have been adjusted to account for a ticketing system error which led to an under-reporting of journeys in financial years 2003–04 and 2004–05.

5. Several lines have had periods of closure for engineering work. These include closures of a week or more on the Esk Valley and West Country branches and a closure to allow the commissioning of the new link between the Skegness Line and the East Coast Main Line last Autumn. These closures can reduce loadings significantly.

6. The number of trains used to calculate the average number of passengers per train is based on an analysis of the public timetable and generally reflects trains running the whole length of the line with the following exceptions:

St. Ives includes trains terminating at Lelant Saltings

Tamar Valley includes trains terminating at Calstock

Skegness is based on all trains on the section of line east of Grantham (some start/terminate at Boston or Sleaford) (as the Middlesbrough—Nunthorpe services do not run the whole length of the Esk Valley these are also excluded).

7. No allowance is made for engineering closures or other similar disruption. Where buses are included in the public timetable rail tickets are valid on the bus, these are included trains for the purposes of calculating the averages.

Road Construction

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the average cost was of constructing a mile of (a) motorway and (b) trunk road in the latest period for which figures are available. [68098]

Dr. Ladyman [holding answer 3 May 2006]: The average cost of constructing a mile of three lane motorway was £28.4 million per mile and for constructing a mile of dual carriageway was £15.3 million per mile, based on prices at the end of 2005.

Transport Subsidies

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) whether he plans to review the rate of the Bus Service Operators Grant; and if he will make a statement; [63504]

(2) what recent assessment he has made of (a) the appropriateness of the rate of the Bus Service Operators Grant and (b) its impact on local bus operators; and if he will make a statement. [63505]

Dr. Ladyman: We will be reviewing the rate of Bus Service Operators Grant in the light of the changes to fuel duty from 1 September this year contained in the Budget Statement on 22 March and will make an announcement in due course.

For the Comprehensive Spending Review 2007 we are of course considering all transport spending, including spending on bus subsidies and concessionary fares, and the various impacts of that spending.

Travel Costs

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the percentage change in real terms has been of the costs of travelling by (a) private car, (b) bus and (c) train since 1997. [68057]

Dr. Ladyman: Between 1997 and 2005 the real cost of motoring declined by 9 per cent. Bus and coach fares increased by 15 per cent., and rail fares increased by 5 per cent.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

Crown Prosecution Service

Mr. Amess: To ask the Solicitor-General how many (a) males and (b) females in each branch of the Crown Prosecution Service have been (a) disciplined and (b) dismissed in the last 10 years as a result of a complaint against them of (i) bullying and (ii) sexual harassment being upheld; and if he will make a statement. [67943]

The Solicitor-General: Data setting out the reasons for leaving the Crown Prosecution Service (CPS) prior to 1 April 2001 are not available. This date coincides with the change of the HR database. Since that date, one male has been disciplined—in February 2002—for sexual harassment. No males have been disciplined for bullying and no females have been disciplined for either bullying or sexual harassment. No staff have been dismissed as a result of a complaint of bullying or sexual harassment being upheld against them. All complaints of bullying and sexual harassment are investigated in accordance with the CPS' Equality and Diversity Complaints Procedure.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Solicitor-General how much compensation the Crown Prosecution Service has paid out in each the last 10 years as a result of complaints of (a) bullying and (b) sexual harassment being upheld; and if he will make a statement. [67944]

The Solicitor-General: Complaints of bullying and sexual harassment are investigated by the Crown Prosecution Service in accordance with its equality and diversity complaints procedure. If a complaint is upheld, a disciplinary authority is appointed who will decide on what action would be appropriate. That does not include the payment of compensation and it therefore follows that no compensation has been paid in the last 10 years.

SCOTLAND

Corporate Hospitality

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland on how many occasions he has accepted corporate hospitality in the last 12 months. [67528]

David Cairns: Paragraph 5.28 of the ministerial code sets out the rules on the registration of hospitality.

Departmental Staff

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many (a) EU foreign nationals and

(b) non-EU foreign nationals have been employed in his Department in each of the last five years; what vetting procedures are in place for each category of staff; and whether these include liaison with foreign law enforcement agencies. [68020]

David Cairns: The staff in the Scotland Office are employees of the Scottish Executive or the Department for Constitutional Affairs and it is the responsibility of those Departments to undertake any necessary vetting. The Office does not hold information on the nationality of staff.

Departmental Televisions

Jo Swinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many television sets are in operation in the Department (a) in total, (b) in Ministers' private offices and (c) in each building in the Department; and how many television licences are held by the Department. [62810]

David Cairns: The Scotland Office has 10 television sets; five in Melville Crescent, Edinburgh and five in Dover House, London, of which two are in the ministerial private offices.

Regarding licences, I refer the hon. Member to the answer she received on 13 March 2006, Official Report, column 1920W from the Minister for Creative Industries and Tourism.

Equal Pay

Ms Katy Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many (a) women and (b) men are employed in the Department; what the average pay was for (i) women and (ii) men in the Department in (A) 1997 and (B) 2006; what women's average pay is as a percentage of men's average pay; and how many (1) women and (2) men the Department employed in each of the last five years, broken down by grade. [67779]

David Cairns: The Scotland Office was established on 1 July 1999.

The Cabinet Office collects and publishes annually statistical information on the civil service by Department. These include data on the employment of men and women. Information on the numbers of women and men employed in the civil service broken down at 31 December 2005 is available in the Library and on the civil service website at:

www.civilservice.gov.uk/management/statistics/employment/index.asp

The staff in the Scotland Office are on loan from the Scottish Executive and the Department for Constitutional Affairs and information on average salaries and percentages is not available. The percentages of women in each grade have been published in the Office's departmental and annual reports since 2002.

PRIME MINISTER

Honours (Prevention of Abuses) Act

Mr. Amess: To ask the Prime Minister what recent representations he has received from (a) hon. Members, (b) Members of the House of Lords, (c) Members of the Scottish Parliament and (d) members of the public about (i) the operation of and (ii) reform of the Honours (Prevention of Abuses) Act 1925; and if he will make a statement. [66176]

The Prime Minister: The information is not held in the format requested. However, since January I have received over 400 letters and cards about the issue of honours. Given the volume of correspondence I receive, thousands of letters each week covering a broad spectrum of issues, my office records letters by subject rather than by the view expressed.

Ministerial Code of Conduct

Derek Conway: To ask the Prime Minister on which dates the Cabinet Secretary advised him of the application of the ministerial code of conduct in relation to the relationship between the Deputy Prime Minister and a civil servant. [67792]

The Prime Minister: I have regular meetings and discussions with ministerial colleagues and others on a wide range of subjects. Information relating to internal meetings, discussion and advice is not disclosed as to do so could harm the frankness and candour of internal discussion.

TREASURY

Budget 2006

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many copies of the summary leaflet Budget 2006 were distributed to (a) hospitals, (b) doctors' waiting rooms, (c) libraries and (d) other public places following the Budget; how many (i) hospitals, (ii) doctors' waiting rooms and (iii) libraries requested such leaflets; and what the total cost was of printing and distribution of these leaflets. [66844]

John Healey: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for South-West Hertfordshire (Mr. Gauke) on 24 April 2006, Official Report, column 8710W.

Some 175,000 copies of the summary leaflet were distributed to libraries in the UK.

EU Accession States

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the potential impact on (a) employment trends and (b) public expenditure in (i) the UK and (ii) Peterborough and Cambridgeshire of the accession of Bulgaria and Romania to the European Union after 1 January 2007; and if he will make a statement. [67506]

John Healey: Based on the UK's experience of the recent accession of eight countries in May 2004, the accession of Bulgaria and Romania to the European Union is likely to make a positive contribution to growth of the UK labour force and employment. It is very difficult to estimate the exact impact on employment trends and public expenditure of potential migration flows from Bulgaria and Romania, and even more difficult to estimate these impacts at the sub-regional level. However, some assessment can be made based on UK experience, particularly from the accession of the Czech Republic, Estonia, Hungary, Poland, Latvia, Lithuania, Slovakia, and Slovenia in May 2004.

With respect to the labour market, since May 2004 employment levels in the UK have risen to record highs, in part due to the expansion of the work force from immigration. A paper entitled "The Impact of Free Movement of Workers from Central and Eastern Europe on the UK Labour Market" (2006) published by the Department for Work and Pensions, suggests that the impact of migration from the new EU member states has been broadly positive, reflecting the flexibility and speed of adjustment of the UK labour market. The authors also found no discernible statistical evidence supporting the view that the inflow of A8 migrants is contributing to a rise in claimant unemployment in the UK.

With respect to potential effects on public expenditure, evidence from the most recent Home Office Accession Monitoring Report suggests > "nationals from the Accession 8 countries continue to come to the UK to work, contributing to the success of the UK economy, whilst making very few demands of our welfare system or public services."

Financial Exclusion

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the number of people in Tamworth constituency who did not have access to a bank account on 31 December (a) 2005 and (b) 1997. [68365]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The most recent information available that allows assessment to be made of the number of households with no access to a bank account is the family resources survey from 2002–03. This indicates that 8 per cent. of households in the United Kingdom had no bank account of any kind. This equated to 1.9 million households containing around 2.8 million adults. The data are broken down to Government Office regional level. This shows 10 per cent. of households in the West Midlands were unbanked.

In 1997–98, the family resources survey was collected on a Great Britain basis, excluding Northern Ireland. 9 per cent. of households in the West Midlands were unbanked at that time compared to 8 per cent. of households in Great Britain as a whole.

In December 2004, the Government and the banks agreed to work together towards the goal of halving the number of adults in households with no access to a bank account of any kind and of making significant progress within two years. The Financial Inclusion Taskforce has been asked to monitor progress. The taskforce recently made its first annual report, which concluded that steady progress has been made towards the goal but also encouraged banks to continue to address the difficulties faced in opening a bank account.

Fiscal Autonomy (Scotland)

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what discussions he has had with (a) the Secretary of State for Scotland and (b) the First Minister of Scotland on fiscal autonomy for Scotland. [67103]

Mr. Des Browne: Treasury Ministers meet Scottish Ministers from time to time to discuss matters of common interest.

Free Bus Travel

David Howarth: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the effects on (a) service users and (b) local authorities of the proposal he announced in the Budget of introducing funding for cross-district free off-peak bus travel for pensioners from April 2008 instead of (i) immediately and (ii) from April 2007. [64802]

Mr. Des Browne [holding answer 24 April 2006]: No assessment has been made of the effect on (a) service users or (b) local authorities of the Budget 2006 announcement of free off-peak nationwide bus travel for all pensioners and all disabled people, in England from April 2008 instead of (i) immediately or (ii) from April 2007. This is because legislative change is necessary to enact the announcement. The scheme could therefore not commence until April 2008.

Fuel Duty (Northern Ireland)

David Simpson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the impact of fuel duty levels on the Northern Ireland economy. [65149]

John Healey: Fuel duty rates were announced in the Budget, the Government continues to attach a high priority to tackling fraud. Northern Ireland's economy is continuing to grow and benefits from the range of Government economic policies set out in the Budget.

Ministerial Cars (Fuel Costs)

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the fuel costs were for ministerial cars used by his Department in each of the last five years. [67017]

John Healey: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Minister of State, Department of Transport on 27 April 2006, Official Report, column 1226W.

Non-fossil Fuels

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the answer of the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry to the hon. Member for Leominster (Bill Wiggin) of 31 January 2006, Official Report, column 331W, on non-fossil fuels, if he will place in the Library a copy of the legal advice advising that funds in the non-fossil fuel obligation fund were hereditary revenues. [68111]

John Healey: It would not be appropriate to release the legal advice concerned, as it is confidential and subject to legal professional privilege.

Nursery Places

Mr. Kemp: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many nursery and crèche places are provided for people working in his Department; what charges are made for the provision of such services; and what other facilities are provided for the children of employees of his Department. [67366]

John Healey: The Treasury does not provide any nursery or crèche facilities. The Department is a member of the Westminster holiday play-scheme, which operates during school holidays and is open to children aged four years and nine months up to 12 years of age. The Treasury has two bespoke play-scheme rooms, which can cater for up to 18 children. The cost per child is £24.89 per day and the Treasury subsidises the costs by 51.78 per cent. The total subsidy to Treasury parents using the play-scheme from February 2005 to February 2006 inclusive has been £8,947.

The Treasury also supports the child care cost of eligible staff. Staff who work full-time receive child care vouchers up to the value of £40 per week per family, part-timers receive a pro-rated amount. Currently 103 members of staff receive child care vouchers. The cost of child care vouchers, since the scheme was introduced in January 2004 up to and including April 2006 is £354,300.

Overseas Aid

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether the target of 0.7 per cent. of gross domestic product to be allocated to overseas aid will include the £8.5 billion for education in Africa and Asia announced by the Chancellor in April 2006. [67693]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: In 2005 the international community, under the leadership of the UK presidency of the G8, made substantial promises to increase the amount of aid. The £8.5 billion announced for education is part of the UK's commitment to delivering these aid promises, which means that it will be included in our target of 0.7 per cent. of GDP for overseas aid.

Pensions

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment the Government Actuary has made of contingent public sector liabilities in respect of employee pension funds of privatised companies. [67630]

Mr. Des Browne: The Government Actuary has not been asked to make any assessment of these liabilities.

Plastic Bags

Lynne Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will make it his policy to introduce a tax on plastic carrier bags; and if he will make a statement; [67880]

(2) what discussions he has had with his counterpart in the Republic of Ireland on the operation of their plastic bag tax. [67881]

John Healey: The Chancellor continues to keep all taxes under review. The Government currently has no plans for a plastic bag tax.

The Treasury carried out an assessment of the Irish plastic bag tax following its introduction in 2002. A copy of this assessment is available in the Library of the House.

Poverty Reduction (Developing Countries)

Mark Hunter: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what progress was made at the recent International Monetary Fund/World bank meeting in Washington towards poverty reduction in developing countries; and if he will make a statement. [68117]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: At the spring meetings the World bank governors confirmed the 100 per cent. debt cancellation for the heavily indebted poor countries, matching the debt relief which the IMF has been providing since January. The Development Committee of Board of Governors of the bank and fund called on all donors to fully implement the commitments they have made for substantial increases in aid volumes. The Committee emphasised the importance of universal access to primary education and sustained support for good quality education plans, and the key role the education for all—fast track initiative could play in all qualifying low income countries. The Development Committee also called on donors to fill the current financing gap. The UK has announced that it will provide an extra £100 million to the fast track initiative over the next two years which represents a downpayment to meet our share of the current financing gap.

Public Sector Charges/Fees

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the impact on the competitiveness of the United Kingdom economy of higher than inflation increases in public sector charges and fees to private sector businesses. [66913]

John Healey: None.

Suggestion Schemes

Philip Davies: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what suggestion schemes are available for employees of HM Revenue and Customs to pass on their ideas; and what rewards are given for suggestions implemented. [64817]

Dawn Primarolo: HM Revenue and Customs (HMRC) have established a Recognition Bonus Scheme (RBS) to recognise and reward work-related suggestions, which was launched in March 2006. This replaces a number of schemes previously used in the Inland Revenue and HM Customs and Excise.

The RBS specifically recognises an individual or team contribution to the promotion and delivery of innovation in working arrangements. Payments made under the RBS can range from £100 to £1,000 gross, depending on the value and impact of the suggestion.

HMRC is also developing a new scheme to encourage ideas for small changes, which will help people to develop them and see them through to completion, and enable decisions about them to be made quickly. Financial recognition within this scheme will also be supported by the RBS.

Tax Credits

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer in how many cases in (a) 2003–04 and (b) 2004–05 where HM Revenue and Customs contacted child care providers to verify the details that had been provided by the claimant, the child care element of child tax credit was (i) reduced and (ii) stopped. [48439]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 6 February 2006]: I refer the right hon. Member to my response of 28 February 2005, Official Report, column 946W, which gave the number of child care providers HMRC contacted. As a result of this work 9,541 adjustments were made to tax credit claims in 2003–04 and 18,274 in 2004–05. All adjustments reduced the amount of tax credits paid, but it is not possible to say how many of these were stopped.

Valuation Office Agency

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will place in the Library a copy of the presentation or handouts produced by Valuation Office Agency staff for its session at the Integrating GIS and CAMA Conference held from 19 to 22 February in Disney's Coronado Springs Convention Center, Orlando, Florida. [56193]

Dawn Primarolo: A copy of the Valuation Office Agency's presentation for the Integrating CIS and CAMA 2006 Conference entitled "improving Efficiency by Estimating the Confidence in Property Valuations" has been placed in the Library.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will place in the Library a copy of the presentation or handouts produced by Valuation Office Agency staff for its session at the International Property Tax Institute conference between 6 and 7 February in Vancouver, British Columbia, Canada. [56194]

Dawn Primarolo: A copy of the Valuation Office Agency's presentations and handouts for the International Property Tax Institute conference between 6 and 7 February 2006 entitled "Training in the valuation of specialised properties in the UK" and "Valuation for Taxation Public Infrastructure" have been placed in the Library.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will place in the Library a copy of the presentation or handouts produced by Valuation Office Agency staff for its session at the 8th International Conference of the Institute of Revenues Rating and Valuation which took place from 22 to 25 February 2005 in Alicante, Spain. [56212]

Dawn Primarolo: A copy of the Valuation Office Agency's presentation for the 8th International Conference of the Institute of Revenues Rating and Valuation entitled "Valuation Specialist Properties for Rating" has been placed in the Library. This was part of a joint presentation on "Valuing Specialist Properties".

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Nuclear Fusion Plants

1. Mr. Binley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will increase future investment in the development of nuclear fusion plants. [67722]

Alan Johnson: The UK is making a significant investment in fusion through the Engineering and Physical Sciences Research Council (EPSRC) totalling around £56 million over four years from 2004. This is in addition to the very significant EU investment in fusion research through participation in the International Thermonuclear Experimental Reactor (ITER) which will have a construction cost of around €5 billion.

Manufacturing (South Wales)

14. Julie Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans he has to help manufacturing industry in South Wales. [67737]

Alun Michael: Manufacturing is vital to the UK economy and Government are taking action through the Manufacturing Strategy to help manufacturers in all parts of the UK to move to high value added production through the application of science and innovation, best practice and skills development. We work closely with colleagues at the Welsh Assembly on these matters. For example, we have set up the Manufacturing Advisory Service which has generated £213 million of added value throughout the UK, including £15 million in Wales.

Unfair Dismissal Claims

15. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what percentage of unfair dismissal claims which were upheld by an industrial tribunal resulted in reinstatement of the claimant in each of the last four years. [67738]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The percentage of unfair dismissal claims upheld by an Employment Tribunal which resulted in an order for reinstatement in each of the last four years ranges consistently from 0.1 to 0.2 per cent. of cases.

Sunday Trading

16. Mr. Ellwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans he has to change Sunday trading laws. [67739]

Mr. Sutcliffe: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer given earlier today by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State to the hon. Member for Banbury (Tony Baldry).

Gas Storage

17. Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will review the arrangements for gas storage in the UK. [67740]

Malcolm Wicks: Some 10 new commercially-funded gas storage facilities are under development; subject to regulatory consents, they could more than double GB's gas storage capacity by 2012.

The Government are pursuing a number of initiatives to improve the regulatory framework in order to facilitate new gas storage facilities.

Business Bankruptcies

18. Mark Pritchard: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many small businesses in England went bankrupt in 2004–05. [67741]

Mr. Sutcliffe: It is not currently possible to identify the size of business in the official bankruptcy statistics published by the Insolvency Service.

Arms Trade Treaty

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions he has had with his counterparts in the (a) Foreign and Commonwealth Office, (b) Ministry of Defence and (c) Department for International Development regarding the Arms Trade Treaty; and if he will make a statement. [67834]

Malcolm Wicks: Given my responsibilities for export control, I am fully engaged in the Government's policy, led by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, of securing support for an international Arms Trade Treaty.

Assisted Area Status

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry at what stage his Department's consultation on which areas will be covered by assisted area status is; and what representations he has received in favour of maintaining the status quo in Merseyside. [67603]

Alun Michael: On 15 February 2006, the Department for Trade and Industry invited responses to the first stage of the Assisted Area Review by 19 April. These responses are currently being assessed and the government's response to the first stage of the consultation will be published this summer when stage 2 is launched. We received a total of 203 written replies within the deadline and almost all addressed the extent to which Merseyside and South Yorkshire should be covered.

Business Regulations

Mrs. Dorries: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps his Department is taking to reduce the burden of regulation on UK businesses. [67731]

Barry Gardiner: The Department has published a draft Simplification Plan which sets out our programme for reducing the burden of regulation on UK business. It delivers more than £1 billion in regulatory savings for business by 2010. We will be updating and improving on this shortly.

Central and Eastern Europe

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the level of the UK's international trade with Central and Eastern Europe was in 2005–06; and if he will make a statement. [67736]

Ian Pearson: UK trade in goods and services with Central and Eastern Europe in 2004 was over £15 billion, more than double the 1997 figure. From 2004 to 2005 there was a further 8 per cent. increase in trade in goods.

Coal Pension Properties Ltd

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what (a) direct and (b) indirect communication his Department has had with Coal Pension Properties Ltd. in the last five years. [66680]

Malcolm Wicks: The Department has no record of any communication with Coal Pension Properties Ltd.

Companies' Business Reviews

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when the Government will announce the findings of its consultation on the proposed content of companies' business reviews. [67492]

Alun Michael [holding answer 2 May 2006]: Yesterday we laid amendments to Chapter 6, Part 15 of the Bill in order to give effect to changes to the content of companies' business reviews. As part of our proposals, we also intend to clarify the position on liability for disclosures under the Companies Act and for implementation of the EU Transparency Obligations Directive. Draft clauses on a proposed regime for liability have been published via the DTI website (at http://www.dti.gov.uk/cld/facts/clr.htm) for a short period for public comment. This package of proposals represents consistent and balanced policy after considering carefully the responses to the consultation and engaging in discussion with interested parties on the whole range of options for narrative reporting.

The requirements for narrative reporting have been streamlined so that the requirements for quoted companies are closely aligned to those for unquoted companies. The proposed new narrative reporting arrangements include the requirement that all companies will need to produce a business review, as required by the EU Accounts Modernisation Directive. The amendments make clear that the purpose of the review is to inform shareholders of the company and help them assess how the directors have performed their duty under section 156 (duty to promote the success of the company). Quoted companies will need to ensure that, to the extent necessary for an understanding of the development, performance or position of the company's business, their business review includes:

(a) the main trends and factors likely to affect the future development, performance and position of the company's business; and

(b) information about:

(i) environmental matters (including the impact of the company's business on the environment),

(ii) the company's employees, and (iii) social and community issues, including information about any policies of the company in relation to those matters and the effectiveness of those policies.

Directors will need to state in their Review if they do not think it necessary to include information about (i), (ii) or (iii) above.

The new system will also mean that for all companies:

Auditors will continue to be required to report on the consistency of the directors' report with the annual accounts (as is required by the Accounts Modernisation Directive) but there will not be any additional requirement to check for other inconsistencies;

All companies will be exempted from disclosing in the business review information which is seriously prejudicial to the company's interests. This exemption was previously only provided for companies that had to produce an OFR; and

There will be no statutory reporting standards for the Business Review.

The draft clauses on liability cover:

Provision for liability under Part 15 of the Bill for directors' reports, directors' remuneration reports or summary financial statements derived from them;

Provision for liability for disclosures under Transparency Obligations Directive implementation;

Liability for untrue or misleading statements or omissions made in bad faith or recklessly or where there is deliberate and dishonest concealment.

The Government's aim has always been to encourage meaningful strategic, forward-looking information to assist shareholder engagement, while avoiding disproportionate burdens on business. The Government have decided that the additional burden imposed by the statutory OFR requirement is not justified in light of the competitiveness of UK businesses. The changes to narrative reporting requirements announced yesterday will add value to the quality of reporting without imposing unnecessary costs.

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what his plans are for bringing forward proposals to Chapter 6, Part 15 of the Company Law Reform Bill. [67594]

Alun Michael [holding answer 2 May 2006]: I refer the hon. Member to my response to his parliamentary question number 67492 answered today.

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when his Department will publish the proposed new Table A of the Company Law Reform Bill. [68089]

Alun Michael [holding answer 3 May 2006]: The Company Law Reform Bill contains a power to enable my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State through secondary legislation, to prescribe, stand-alone model articles for different types of company. The model articles are to replace the Companies Act 1985 Table A for companies formed under the Bill and we intend to make sure that regulations made under this power will be in place by the time that the Bill comes into force.

A draft of the model articles for private companies limited by shares, and draft guidance notes on those model articles, was published in the March 2005 White Paper and we will shortly publish a draft of the model articles for public companies. We will then turn to the draft model articles for private companies limited by guarantee.

We look forward to receiving comments on the draft model articles for public companies and are working with interested parties to make sure that the final versions of the various model articles are both useful and relevant to people who rely on the model articles: the owners and managers of companies. There will be full public consultation before regulations are made.

Compensation Claims (VAT)

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry on how many occasions his Department has agreed to pay VAT as part of a costs settlement for (a) noise induced hearing loss claims, (b) vibration white finger claims and (c) chronic obstructive pulmonary disease claims. [66681]

Malcolm Wicks: All cost settlement made in noise induced hearing loss, vibration white finger and chronic obstructive pulmonary disease claims will include VAT as part of that settlement.

Defence Exports

Mr. Crausby: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the value was of defence equipment sold by UK defence manufacturers to (a) Iran, (b) China and (c) Turkey in 2005. [68076]

Malcolm Wicks: The DTI Export Control Organisation (ECO) is responsible only for holding information on the export licences it has issued, not on the value of UK defence equipment sales. However, the Government publish detailed information on its strategic export licensing decisions which include defence equipment. The total value of Standard Individual Export Licences (SIELs) issued, by destination, is available in its Annual and Quarterly Reports on Strategic Export Controls. HM Revenue & Customs collects some data on exports of Military List items, which is published, by destination, in the Annual Reports.

The Annual Reports are available from the Libraries of the House, and the Quarterly Reports, from the DTI Export Control Organisation website at:

www.dti.gov.uk/export.control.

We expect to publish the 2005 Annual Report by June 2006.

EU Directives (Organ Pipe Manufacturing)

Dr. Blackman-Woods: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what progress the Government have made in discussions on the exemption of the organ pipe manufacturing industry from EU Directives on restrictions on hazardous substances and waste electrical and electronic equipment. [67159]

Malcolm Wicks: The Department has been working with the pipe organ industry for some time and will continue to do so in order to secure a favourable outcome on this issue.

The UK Government do not consider that pipe organs fall within the scope of this Directive, a view widely accepted within the E.C. The DTI is working closely with the European Commission, and our aim is to reach a successful conclusion before the Directive comes into force on 1 July.

EU Energy Shortages

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether the UK is under an obligation to share national oil (a) stocks and (b) reserves in the event of energy shortages in the EU. [68571]

Malcolm Wicks: The UK is obliged as a member state of the European Union to hold emergency stocks of oil equivalent to 67.5 days' annual consumption for use in the event of disruption, and as a member of the International Energy Agency to take part in any collective response to disruption. The purpose of both these obligations is to enable a release of stocks onto the global oil market when there is collective agreement that this is necessary. The release of stocks following Hurricane Katrina by EU and other states, co-ordinated through the IEA, showed that the system was able to respond well to the disruption which occurred.

Export Control Act

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when the proposed review of the Export Control Act 2002 is expected to commence; and which body he plans to ask to carry out the review. [67835]

Malcolm Wicks: In line with Cabinet Office guidance, my intention is to start the review of the regulations introduced under the Export Control Act after they have been in force for three years—from May 2007. The review will be carried out by DTI's Export Control Organisation, which has responsibility for the legislation, in consultation with other interested Departments and parties.

Fuel Prices

Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the average price of a gallon of (a) unleaded and (b) diesel fuel was in (i) Milton Keynes and (ii) the UK in each week since May 2005. [68144]

Malcolm Wicks: Weekly prices for Milton Keynes are not available. Average weekly prices for the UK as a whole are as follows.

Gas Supplies

John Hemming: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to the answer of 19 April 2006, Official Report, column 675W, on gas supplies, if he will provide his Department's detailed calculations based on the IMF data and the Royal Bank of Scotland data which were used as the basis for the statement on German gas prices. [67468]

Malcolm Wicks: The information is as follows:

	As at December
	2004	2005

Miners' Compensation

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry on how many occasions his Department has agreed to pay a fee to Vendside as part of the costs settlement for a noise-induced hearing loss claim. [66679]

Malcolm Wicks: The Department pays Vendside the costs incurred by the Union of Democratic Mineworkers in handling hearing loss claims. To date, 9,377 hearing loss claims have been settled by payment and a payment will have been made to Vendside in each of these.

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to the answer of 26 January 2006, Official Report, column 2355W, on Union of Democratic Mineworkers/Vendside, if he will place in the Library the minutes of these meetings. [67769]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 3 May 2006]: It would not be appropriate for the Department to publish the minutes of these meetings without the prior consent of the other parties.

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will place in the Library copies of agreements between his Department and (a) the Union of Democratic Mineworkers and (b) Vendside. [67770]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 3 May 2006]: The agreement are commercially confidential so it would not be appropriate for the Department to publish them.

Ministerial Cars (Fuel Costs)

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the fuel costs were for ministerial cars used by the Department in each of the last five years. [66958]

Alan Johnson: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 27 April 2006, Official Report, column 1226W by my hon. Friend the Minster of State for Transport.

Mobile Telephone Tracking

Margaret Moran: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps he intends to take to ensure informed consent is obtained from children under the Privacy and Electronic Communications Directive in respect of mobile telephone tracking. [67750]

Alun Michael: The Privacy and Electronic Communications Directive (2002/5 8/EC) applies a number of privacy safeguards to value added services based on traffic and location data, including a requirement for informed consent from subscribers or users of the communications service involved. In the case of location data services, there is a requirement that subscribers or users must be able to withdraw their consent on a temporary as well as a long term basis, each time they connect to the network or make a phone call or other form of communication. The directive was implemented in the UK by the Privacy and Electronic Communications (EC Directive) Regulations 2003, which came into force on 11 December 2003.

Mobile phone location services are regulated under the Privacy and Electronic Communication (EC Directive) Regulations 2003 and the Data Protection Act 1998. Enforcement is the responsibility of the Information Commissioner. My officials will be working closely with the Information Commissioner's Office to consider any issues as they arise. They are aware of concerns raised by representatives of Children's Charities and will be arranging meetings to discuss these further.

Post Offices

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for North Shropshire of 6 March 2006, Official Report, column 1160, on post offices, whether he plans to assist the Post Office (a) to advertise and (b) to promote the facility to withdraw cash from bank accounts and the link network in post offices. [67500]

Barry Gardiner [holding answer 3 May 2006]: The advertising and promotion of post office facilities are operational matters for Post Office Ltd. (POL). My officials are in regular contact with POL to discuss ways of encouraging people to take up bank accounts accessible at post offices.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many sub-post offices there are in Wales; and how many there were in 1997. [67397]

Barry Gardiner [holding answer 2 May 2006]: Historic information on the network of Post Office branches by individual country area is only available from the year 1998–99, as this level of data was not maintained prior to this.

For the year ending 1998–99, Post Office Ltd.'s records show that there were a total of 1,501 branches operating in Wales, made up of 1,473 agency branches and 28 branches that were directly managed by the company. The last published figures up to the end of December 2005 show 1,182 branches operating in Wales, 1,157 agency branches and 25 directly managed branches.

The full year figures for the end of 2005–06 will be available in the next few weeks and will be placed in the Libraries of the House.

TVR

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assistance he is giving to TVR to find a new business location in Lancashire. [67805]

Alun Michael: The Northwest Regional Development Agency is working with Blackpool borough council to retain TVR within the immediate vicinity. They are working on the latest requirements outlined by the company. A previous specific offer of new premises was rejected and a more suitable location has now been identified. TVR has indicated that this offer is more in line with their future operational requirements and further discussions will take place next week, when Mr. Smolenski, the owner of TVR, next visits Blackpool.

Utilities (New Developments)

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has received on delays by utility companies in providing connections to utility supplies for new developments. [66276]

Alun Michael: Ministers are periodically contacted on matters relating to connections in relation to gas, electricity and telecommunications. However, these are ultimately matters for the relevant regulators, Ofgem and Ofcom.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Art Collection (Security)

Mr. Mark Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport whether she plans to increase security for items in the Government's art collection located outside the UK. [66825]

Mr. Lammy: Nearly all of the works of art from the Government art collection that are located outside the UK are in British Government buildings and are subject to existing high levels of security. The security arrangements for Government buildings are kept under constant review.

BBC

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how she will ensure value for money from the BBC's proposed licence fee settlement. [68069]

Tessa Jowell: We are currently conducting an open and robust review of the BBC's funding, drawing on independent advice from PKF and others on a range of issues including the value for money of the BBC. The final settlement will deliver a strong BBC, independent of Government, and value for money for the licence fee payer. Under the new Charter and Agreement, the BBC Trust, as steward of the licence fee, will have a clear responsibility to ensure that the BBC delivers value for money.

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what research she has commissioned on the BBC licence fee; and if she will publish it. [68070]

Tessa Jowell: We are commissioning survey research on the public's willingness to pay for the BBC; the findings of which will be published in due course. This survey research will be in addition to the financial analysis conducted by PKF which was published on 26 April 2006.

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment has been made in the context of the BBC's licence fee bid of the value for money and efficiency savings expected to be achieved following the BBC's proposed move to Greater Manchester. [68071]

Tessa Jowell: In line with the commitment in the Green Paper, the Government are currently conducting a funding review to determine the level of the licence fee to apply from April 2007. It will take all relevant issues into account.

Correspondence

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when Carolyn Warner of the Right to Swim campaign will receive an answer to her letter to the Secretary of State of January 2006. [67144]

Tessa Jowell [holding answer 2 May 2006]: My officials have responded to Mrs Warner advising her that we are currently awaiting the formal report of the initial results of research by the National Water Safety Forum into the correlation between adult/child ratios at swimming pools and incidences of drowning.

This report will be available by the end of May, at which point I will be a position to respond substantively to Mrs Warner's letter.

MINISTER FOR WOMEN

Single Mothers

22. Mr. Bone: To ask the Minister for Women and Equality what steps the Government have taken to enable single mothers to return to work. [67746]

Meg Munn: The Government have a range of measures to help single mothers move into work such as new deal for lone parents, the national child care strategy, the national minimum wage and tax credits which are making work possible and making sure that work pays.

Civil Service (Pay Levels)

23. Miss McIntosh: To ask the Minister for Women and Equality what representations she has received on levels of pay for women in the civil service. [67747]

Meg Munn: Representations have been received from civil service unions and their members about equal pay issues. The Government continue to have regular strategic discussions with key stakeholders, including civil service organizations and the civil service unions on taking the equal pay agenda forward.

25. Tony Baldry: To ask the Minister for Women and Equality if she will make a statement on the gender pay gap in the civil service. [67749]

Meg Munn: The median gender pay gap in the civil service is 25 per cent. but does not compare work of equal value. When the gender gap is compared by responsibility level the pay gap is around 5 per cent.

Commission for Equality and Human Rights

24. Keith Vaz: To ask the Minister for Women and Equality when she plans to appoint the members of the Commission for Equality and Human Rights. [67748]

Meg Munn: We hope to appoint the chair of the new commission by summer this year, with commissioners and the chief executive to follow in late autumn.

Equality Audits

Anne Moffat: To ask the Minister for Women and Equality what her assessment is of the merits of equality audits. [68063]

Meg Munn: Equal pay audits or reviews can identify unlawful pay inequalities between men and women. The Equal Opportunities Commission has developed a useful toolkit which describes a model equal pay review process. This is available on their website at www.eoc.org.uk.

The merits of equal pay reviews in addressing the gender pay gap were most recently independently examined by the Women and Work Commission. The commission found that there were pros and cons to undertaking an equal pay review depending on the issues or activities which have most potential impact on women's opportunities and pay in a particular company or sector. For example, there may not be any unlawful inequality in pay between men and women but greater access to flexible working could enable more women to reach higher and better paid positions in an organisation or company.

Job Sharing

Anne Moffat: To ask the Minister for Women and Equality what steps she is taking to encourage employers to provide job shares. [68062]

Meg Munn: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given to my hon. Friend the Member for Coventry, South (Mr. Cunningham) on 28 February 2006, Official Report, column 658W.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Advanced Skills Teacher Programme

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what financial support the Department has committed to the advanced skills teacher programme. [66036]

Jacqui Smith: Since the introduction of the Advanced Skills Teacher (AST) grade in 1998 the Department has provided grant funding for AST posts through the Standards Fund.

By the end of 2007–08 the Department will have committed £455 million through the standards fund to the AST programme, made up of £310 million in government grant and £145 million in required local authority contributions.

Since April 2004 the level of grant funding specifically for ASTs has been fixed nationally to reflect the number of posts in existence in each local authority at the start of that financial year. New local funding flexibilities mean that schools and local authorities can chose to fund additional AST posts either using delegated funding or other appropriate grant funding.

In addition to this the Department funds the external assessment of teachers against the AST standards which applicants for AST posts must meet. Total funding for AST assessment up to and including financial year 2004–05 is £3.4 million. Figures for 2005–06 are not yet available.

Arson

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the total number of arson attacks was for the 100 (a) primary and (b) secondary schools with the (i) highest and (ii) lowest percentage of children receiving free school meals in each of the last 10 years. [66093]

Jacqui Smith: The requested information is not available.

Children's Centres

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many children's centres have been established in each month since November 2004; what the location is of each; and if she will make a statement. [67411]

Beverley Hughes: I have placed in the Library copies of a table listing the numbers of children's centres designated in each month since November 2004. The figure for each month is broken down by local authority.

The first phase of children's centres from 2004–06 focused on creating children's centres in the most disadvantaged areas of the country, building largely on existing provision. Children's centres were offering services to over 650,000 children by the end of March 2006.

For phase 2 (2006–08), centres will begin to be established in the relatively less disadvantaged areas, to meet the interim objective of creating 2,500 children's centres by March 2008. Our aim is to have 3,500 children's centres across the country by 2010, one for every community.

Creationism

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will make a statement on the teaching of creationism in schools in England. [67195]

Jacqui Smith: Creationism is not taught as a subject in schools, and is not specified in the science curriculum.

The National Curriculum for science clearly sets down that pupils should be taught that the fossil record is evidence for evolution, and how variation and selection may lead to evolution or extinction.

Creationism could be discussed in RE lessons as one of the many religious views on how the world was created.

Education Expenditure

Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what the total public expenditure per head of population on (a) capital and (b) running costs of education was for the Metropolitan area of (i) Greater Manchester, (ii) West Yorkshire, (iii) South Yorkshire, (iv) West Midlands, (v) Merseyside, (vi) Tyne and Wear and (vii) South Tyneside in each of the last 10 years; [67280]

(2) what the total public expenditure per head of population on (a) capital and (b) running costs of education was in (i) London and (ii) each of the English regions in each of the last 10 years. [67321]

Jacqui Smith: Information on education expenditure is not collected on the basis requested. Annual expenditure returns are made on the basis of current local authority areas, and do not relate expenditure to general population. It would be possible to aggregate local authority figures to give overall figures for current Government Office regions, but these would again not be related to population.

Equal Pay

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what steps are undertaken within her Department to ensure that women are obtaining equal pay to men doing work of equal value. [65850]

Maria Eagle: The Department carries out equal pay reviews. The gender analysis, covering the three-year pay settlement from April 2003 to March 2006, did not identify any inequality in the pay of women.

EU Students (Loans)

Mr. Bone: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many students from other EU member states who received loans for study at a higher education institution in England defaulted on repayment of those loans in each of the last five years. [66429]

Bill Rammell: For the past five years students from other EU member states have not been entitled to student loans.

Exclusions

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the exclusion rates were for the 100 (a) primary and (b) secondary schools with the (i) highest and (ii) lowest percentage of children receiving free school meals in each of the last three years. [65992]

Jacqui Smith: The requested information has been placed in the Library. Figures relate to children educated in schools in England only.

Exclusions data for the 2004/05 academic year are expected to be available in June 2006.

Ed Balls: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many pupils in (a) Wakefield District and (b) Normanton constituency have been permanently excluded from school in each of the last five years. [66025]

Jacqui Smith: The requested information is given in the tables.

Figures for the number of permanent exclusions during 2004/05 academic year are expected to be available in June 2006.

Maintained primary and secondary schools: Number of permanent exclusions 1999/2000 to 2003/04

Extended School Hours

Kitty Ussher: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what funding is available to ensure extended school hours are available to children in Burnley and Padiham. [66484]

Beverley Hughes: Over 2003–08 we are making available £840 million nationally to support the development of extended services accessed in or through schools. £9,871,039 of this will go to Lancashire over the period 2005–08. Local authorities are responsible for the distribution of funding in their area so that they can plan services across schools and communities. We do not breakdown funding by parliamentary constituency.

Lancashire has to date received £1.8 million, and will receive £3,531,061 in 2006–07 and £4,515,291 in 2007–08. Funding will be released to schools in accordance with each local authority's strategy for extended services.

Looked-after Children

Andrew Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the total number of looked after children was in each local authority in each year since 1997. [65451]

Maria Eagle: The information requested is provided in a table entitled "Children looked after at 31 March by local authorities, 1997–2005" which can be accessed on the DfES website at:

http://www.dfes.gov.uk/rsgateway/DBA/VOL/v000646/index.shtml.

Andrew Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many children have been taken into care in each local authority in each year since 1997. [65452]

Maria Eagle: The information requested is provided in a table entitled "Children who started to be looked after by local authorities in the years ending 1997 to 2005" which can be accessed on the DfES website at:

http://www.dfes.gov.uk/rsgateway/DBA/VOL/v000646/index.shtml.

Ministerial Cars (Fuel Costs)

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the fuel costs were for ministerial cars used by her Department in each of the last five years. [67023]

Maria Eagle: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Minister of State, Department for Transport on 27 April, Official Report, column 1226W.

Nuffield Speech and Language Unit

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what discussions she has had with the Secretary of State for Health about the future of the Nuffield Speech and Language Unit. [65289]

Ruth Kelly: None.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will place in the Library copies of letters she has received about the Nuffield Speech and Language Unit. [66671]

Ruth Kelly: I have not received any letters about the Nuffield Speech and Language Unit.

Prison Education

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) if she will list the mentoring programmes run by charitable organisations in prisons; [65575]

(2) if she will increase the role of mentoring in prison education. [65576]

Phil Hope: Information is not collected on the individual programmes run by the voluntary and community sector in prisons. The use of mentors is promoted in the 'Offender's Learning Journey' that sets out the offer to prisoners.

Plans to increase the role of mentoring are set out in our recent Green Paper 'Reducing Re-Offending through Skills and Employment'. This will play an important part of our new and stronger focus on employment for prisoners as well as supporting the delivery of literacy, numeracy and communications skills.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what research has been undertaken by her Department into the impact of education and training on reconviction. [65805]

Phil Hope: Research on reconviction rates is a matter for the Home Office and they are undertaking a research study 'Surveying Prisoner Crime Reduction' (SPCR). In our recent Green Paper 'Reducing Re-Offending Through Skills and Employment' we outlined that there is research evidence to indicate that improving skills and employment for offenders can have a positive impact on the incidence of re-offending. In particular, evidence strongly suggests that employment and offending are linked, although this relationship is complex.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what steps her Department has taken to inform the general public of the purpose and importance of prison education. [65806]

Phil Hope: A communications campaign is being conducted to inform the public about the importance of learning and skills for all offenders, whether in prison or under supervision in the community. This is promoted through the DfES website, newsletters, conferences and seminars.

The recently published Green Paper 'Reducing Re-offending through Skills and Employment' set out our future plans and its launch was covered in local, sectoral and national media.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what estimate she has made of education staff turnover rates in prisons in each year since 1997. [66551]

Fiona Mactaggart: Educational staff are generally employed under contract by educational providers. The information requested is not held by the Prison Service or by Department for Education and Skills or could be collated only at disproportionate cost.

Pupils (Lincolnshire)

Shona McIsaac: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what percentage of pupils attending Lincolnshire county council schools reside in North East Lincolnshire; and if she will make a statement. [67032]

Jacqui Smith: The information requested has been provided in the following table.

Percentage of pupils[4] attending schools maintained by Lincolnshire local authority (LA) residing within North East Lincolnshire LA

	Number of pupils in schools maintained by Lincolnshire LA	Number of pupils in residence in North East Lincolnshire LA attending schools maintained by Lincolnshire LA	Percentage of pupils in residence in North East Lincolnshire LA attending schools maintained by Lincolnshire LA
Primary[1]	45,145	77	0.2
Secondary[2]	41,741	486	1.2
Special[3]	1,116	2	0.2
Total	88,011	565	0.6

[1] Includes middle deemed primary

[2] Includes middle deemed secondary.

[3] Includes special and non-maintained special.

[4] Includes pupils aged 5 to 15 years, solely registered or main registration of dually registered pupils, excludes boarders.

Faith Schools

Colin Challen: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what requirements are placed on maintained faith schools in relation to respecting the wishes of non-religious pupils and parents; [65144]

(2) what the legal responsibilities of (a) faith and (b) non-faith trust schools are in relation to (i) discrimination by religion in the employment of staff, (ii) the religious education syllabus, (iii) the holding of a daily act of worship and (iv) parental excusal from religious education and collective worship. [65174]

Jacqui Smith: Religious education must be provided for all registered pupils in maintained schools, including trust schools.

All maintained schools, including trust schools, are under a statutory duty to provide a daily act of collective worship for all pupils. This will be of a general Christian nature unless the school is designated as having a religious character in which case the collective worship will be in the tenet of the faith school.

Parents of pupils at all maintained schools can request that their children be withdrawn from any or all parts of religious education and collective worship and the school is expected to comply with the request.

All schools, including trust schools but excluding voluntary aided schools with a religious designation, will follow the locally agreed syllabus for religious education as drawn up by Standing Committee on Religious Education and agreed by the local authority.

Trust schools are foundation schools with a foundation. Where this is a religious foundation and the school is designated as having a religious character the Governing Body, as employers, may take into account any candidates' suitability and ability to preserve and develop the religious character of the school in the appointment of the headteacher and reserve teachers in the schools.

The aforementioned flexibilities do not apply to non-faith schools. There are no such provisions for the appointment of other teaching staff or non-teaching staff.

In addition, all employers need to have regard to their responsibilities under employment and European law relating to equal opportunities.

Service Children's Education

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what percentage of key stage 3 pupils from service children's education schools achieved levels (a) 3, (b) 4, (c) 5, (d) 6, (e) 7 and (f) 8 in (i) English, (ii) mathematics and (iii) science during the academic year 2004–05. [65439]

Jacqui Smith: The requested information is shown as follows:

	Percentage of pupils achieving:
	3	4	5	6	7	8	Total[1]
English
Boys	0	20	50	21	3	—	100
Girls	0	9	51	29	5	—	100
All	0	14	51	25	4	—	100
Mathematics
Boys	2	13	18	36	23	5	100
Girls	3	9	22	39	20	4	100
All	2	11	20	38	21	5	100
Science
Boys	0	15	38	33	10	—	100
Girls	1	19	43	29	5	—	100
All	1	17	40	31	8	—	100

[1] The total includes absent pupils (A), pupil below the level assessed by the test (B) and pupils not awarded a test level (N). This analysis is based on approximately 500 pupils who sat the 2005 KS3 tests.

Sexual Acitivity (Under-16s)

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will estimate the number of individuals under the age of 16 years who were sexually active in each of the last five years. [66909]

Beverley Hughes: We estimate that between a quarter and a third of young people have sex before age 16. This estimate is based on figures from NATSAL 2000 (National Survey of Sexual Attitudes and Lifestyles), which showed that 30 per cent. of boys and 26 per cent. of girls had sex under-16 and the Teenage Pregnancy Strategy Evaluation Tracking Survey for each year between 2000 and 2004, which shows on average 27 per cent. of boys and 29 per cent. of girls have had sex before age 16. The Teenage Pregnancy Strategy Evaluation Tracking Survey reports no change in the proportion of young people having sex before age 16 over the first 4 years of the strategy.

Specialist Schools

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many specialist schools there are in England, broken down by specialism; and how many of such schools are electing to select up to 10 per cent. of their intake by aptitude. [67276]

Jacqui Smith: There are currently 2502 designated specialist schools (2378 operational): 408 Arts; 217 Business and Enterprise; 47 Engineering; 72 Humanities; 216 Languages; 222 Maths and Computing; 18 Music; 282 Science; 345 Sports; 583 Technology; 80 Combined and 12 with a Special Educational Needs (SEN) specialism.

Specialist schools are bound by the school admissions code of practice. Relatively few specialist schools select by aptitude, our figures suggest that 45 schools or 6.5 per cent. of schools that were specialist in summer 2001 did so.

Teacher Selection

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what action her Department takes to prevent advocates of terrorism obtaining positions as teachers. [66060]

Jacqui Smith: While the ultimate responsibility for considering the professional suitability of recruits lies with the individual governing bodies and with the local authorities as the employers of teachers, the Department plays a key role in supporting them in this process. We have provided comprehensive guidance highlighting the importance of thorough checks on anybody who will be working in schools, emphasising the need for governing bodies and local authorities to employ appropriate rigour in ensuring unsuitable people cannot obtain positions in our schools.

All initial teacher training providers are required to interview applicants for teacher training, enabling them to explore their personal qualities and potential to meet the professional values and practices of those aspiring to teach. These values include respect for other people, a positive attitude towards learning, respect for cultural diversity and social responsibility.

The Terrorism Act which gained royal assent on 30 March makes it an offence to 'encourage terrorism' and we have made it clear in successive guidance that CRB checks are strongly recommended as part of the appointment process on anybody who will be working in schools. In addition, the Secretary of State recently announced that existing arrangements will become compulsory for schools through proposed amendments to regulations to be made under sections 35 and 36 of the Education Act 2002 (and section 72 of the School Standards and Framework Act (SSFA) 1998)—this will affect amendments to the current School Staffing (England) Regulations 2003 and will make an 'on appointment' CRB check compulsory for all new appointments to the schools workforce.

We place great trust in the professionalism and dedication of teachers and the wider school workforce and expect that they will leave personal prejudices at home. Where we find that teachers have not behaved professionally the General Teaching Council (GTC) has the necessary power to remove those teachers from schools. Through their Statement of Professional Values and Practices and their Code of Conduct and Practice for registered teachers they have the means to ensure that a person espousing support for terrorism could be prevented from entering the profession or, if already a registered teacher, called before a disciplinary hearing. The sanctions available to the GTC include prohibition from practice as a registered teacher.

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what restrictions there are on individuals who have been sentenced to a term of imprisonment obtaining employment as teachers. [66061]

Maria Eagle: A decision by an educational establishment on whether or not to appoint an individual into its workforce should take into account, in addition to a list 99 check, the standard previous employers' references, qualifications check and (in the case of teachers) General Teaching Council for England registration, as well as a criminal records check from the Criminal Records Bureau (CRB).

Individuals who have been convicted of certain offences will be automatically barred from working with children in an education setting, under the Department's list 99. In other cases, the Secretary of State, taking advice from Sir Roger Singleton's expert panel, may decide to bar an individual convicted of other offences, even if those offences do not result in an automatic bar.

Where an individual is not barred from working with children in an education setting, and following receipt of the CRB disclosure, an offer of employment is at the discretion of the employer. The Department cannot advise employers whether or not they should employ a particular person but in deciding the relevance of convictions current guidance[1] states a number of points should be considered:

The nature of the offence

In general, convictions for sexual, violent or drug offences will be particularly strong contra-indications for work with children.

The nature of the appointment

Often the nature of the appointment will help to assess the relevance of the conviction. For example, serious sexual, violent, drug or drink offences would give rise to particular concern where a position was one of providing care. Driving or drink offences would be relevant in situations involving transport of children.

The age of the offence

Offences which took place many years in the past may often have less relevance than recent offences. However, convictions for serious violent or sexual offences or serious offences involving substance abuse are more likely to give cause for continuing concern than, for instance, an isolated case of dishonesty committed when the person was young. The potential for rehabilitation must be weighed against the need to protect children.

The frequency of the offence

A series of offences over a period of time is more likely to give cause for concern than an isolated minor conviction.

The CRB has also produced guidance for employers on judging the suitability of applicants.

Teachernet Website

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many hits the teachernet website received in each month of the last two years. [67275]

Bill Rammell: The Department has reduced the number of websites for schools over the last 2 years. It now manages just three main portals (TeacherNet, GovernorNet and the Standards Site) which contain important information and resources for members of the schools workforce. Extensive work is currently being undertaken to rationalise and migrate these three portals into a single new online service. This is due to be fully completed in mid-2007.

The following table shows the number of hits received by the TeacherNet website each month for the last two years.

March 2006	37,363,271	March 2005	27,501,009
February 2006	31,494,483	February 2005	26,440,032

Teachers (Preparation Time)

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment she has made of progress on the implementation of the scheme for allowing time for all teachers for planning, preparation and assessment. [66279]

Jacqui Smith: We, our partners on the Workforce Agreement Monitoring Group and the Training and Development Agency for Schools-Development Directorate (TDA D-formerly the National Remodelling Team) have been working, and continue to work, with schools and local authorities in England to make sure that planning, preparation and assessment (PPA) time for teachers is both introduced successfully and sustained.

The latest information we have indicates that almost every school has successfully introduced PPA time, using a range of strategies including greater use of support staff. The TDA-D is actively supporting those schools that have yet to fully implement PPA through its extensive network of local remodelling advisers and is also working to ensure that all schools have sustainable PPA solutions.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Financial Assistance Scheme

Ms Gisela Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much public money the Government estimate, in net present value terms, will be required for the Financial Assistance Scheme over the next 40 years to cover benefits promised to all those within three years of scheme pension age as at May 2004. [63861]

Mr. Timms: We estimate that the Financial Assistance Scheme will cost £280 million in net present value terms over the next 40 years.

Pathways to Work

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what proportion of Pathways to Work participants have made use of (a) job brokering, (b) the condition management programme and (c) return to work credit. [59801]

Margaret Hodge: The information is in the following table.

Proportion of Pathways to Work participants and of Choices starts in Pathways

HEALTH

Blood Products

Jenny Willott: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether her Department has carried out an internal review into the use of blood and plasma products infected with HIV and hepatitis C; and if she will make a statement. [65513]

Caroline Flint: The Department has not carried out an internal review into the use of blood and plasma products infected with HIV and hepatitis C. However, on 27 February the Department published a report, 'Self-Sufficiency in Blood Products in England and Wales'. This report was the result of an internal review of papers on self-sufficiency in blood products.

The review was commissioned following suggestions that the policy of self-sufficiency in blood products during the 1970's and early 1980's might have prevented haemophilia patients being treated with infected blood products. The report makes clear that self-sufficiency in blood products would not have prevented the infection of haemophilia patients.

Care Homes

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the Government's policy is on care homes. [66682]

Mr. Byrne: The Government believe that care homes provide an important part of the social care service. They are one of a range of options that should be available for supporting people with long-term care needs. The Government recognise that most people want to live in their own home for as long as possible, but that there will always be some whose needs are such that care in a care home will be best for them.

Service users should have a choice about where and how the receive they care they need. No one should be admitted into a care home until all other options have been explored and discussed with the service user, their carers and relatives. To enable people to have real choice about the type of care they receive, the Government have encouraged substantial investment in care settings, such as domiciliary care and extra care housing.

Under the Care Standards Act 2000 and the Health and Social Care Act 2003, the Government have set up an independent inspection and regulation regime. All care homes in England are registered and inspected by the Commission for Social Care Inspection (CSCI).

CSCI regulates care homes in accordance with statutory regulations and national minimum standards. CSCI has strong enforcement powers and will take action to raise the quality of care and ensure a high level of protection for vulnerable people.

Carers (Respite)

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what steps her Department has taken to provide respite support for carers as set out in paragraph 5.55 of the 'Our Health, Our Care, Our Say' Health White Paper; [65997]

(2) by what date she expects carers to be able to call upon respite support as set out in paragraph 5.55 of the 'Our Health, Our Care, Our Say' Health White Paper, broken down by local authority area; and what criteria will be used to allocate such support. [65998]

Mr. Byrne: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given on 2 May 2006, Official Report, columns 1532–33W.

Chiropody Care

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many general hospitals provide free chiropody care for patients who require such treatment other than as part of other clinical treatment. [67972]

Mr. Byrne: The information requested is not collected centrally. It is for primary care trusts to commission services to meet the needs of their local population.

Continuing Care

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people received fully funded NHS continuing care in each year since 2002, broken down by strategic health authority; and if she will make a statement. [64770]

Mr. Byrne: The information requested is not available in the format requested.

A count of the numbers of people receiving national health service continuing care on 31 March of each year is reported in local delivery plan reports, and the available information for each strategic health authority (SHA) is in the table.

Number of people receiving continuing care as at 31 March

Note:
Data are only collected annually in Q4 of each year (LDPR, line 8228)

Later this month we plan to publish for consultation a national framework for NHS continuing care which will give further clarity and consistency on the responsibilities of NHS and social services for long term care. The national framework will include guidance on the processes and considerations to take into account when making decisions on the responsibility of the NHS and social services for long-term care.

Contraception

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health under what legislation RU 486 is regulated in the United Kingdom; and if she will make a statement. [66881]

Jane Kennedy: RU 486 (Mifegyne, mifepristone) is an anti-progestogenic steroid medicine, which is licensed for use in medical abortion. The legislation under which RU 486 is authorised for marketing in the United Kingdom is the Medicines for Human Use (Marketing Authorisations Etc.) Regulations 1994. These regulations implement Directive 2001/83/EC, the European Community Code relating to Medicinal Products for Human Use. The sale and supply of RU 486 is also subject to restrictions in Part III of the Medicines Act 1968 and orders and regulations made under that Part. Clinical trials of RU 486 are subject to the Medicines for Human Use (Clinical Trials) Regulations 2004, which implement Directive 2001/20/EC.

As with all medicines, the safety of RU 486 is continuously monitored by the Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency.

Debt Recovery

Miss Kirkbride: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the merits of using private debt collection agencies to recover debts owed to her Department. [67872]

Mr. Byrne: As most of the Department's debtors are other national health service bodies it is not deemed appropriate to use a debt collection agency.

Dentistry

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what arrangements exist under the new dentists' contract to ensure that domiciliary treatment is provided to patients in cases where there is a medical need for it. [67398]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Domiciliary services are one of the additional services, under a general dental services contract or personal dental services agreement, which the primary care trust may commission separately to meet the need for domiciliary services in its area.

Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many dentists in Milton Keynes have (a) signed and (b) declined to sign the new NHS contract. [68156]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Information on the number of dentists who have signed the new contract and the number who have not signed is not available centrally. We do however have some provisional information that covers contracts. A contract may well be for more than one dentist so cannot be broken down further to individual dentist level.

	Number/percentage
Contracts signed
Number	24
Approximate units of dental activity (UDA) value	245,600
Contracts still in discussion
Number	0
Approximate UDA value	0
Contracts rejected
Number	5
Approximate UDA value	19,982
UDAs (percentage)	7.5
Contracts signed
Number signed without dispute	8
Number signed in dispute	16
Disputes (percentage)	66.7

Note:
The information provided is not validated. It represents a snapshot of the position in early April 2006.

A contract may be for either a practice or an individual dentist.

Primary care trusts are working with dentists to resolve as many disputes as possible locally.

Departmental Leave (Stress)

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many staff have been on sick leave suffering from stress in the Department in each of the last three years; and what percentage of the total staff number this represents. [63536]

Mr. Byrne: The Department records stress related sickness absence under the umbrella category of mental illness and therefore figures reflecting absences from stress are not available.

A new sickness absence management policy has been launched that provides managers with guidance and support in their management of sickness within their teams.

A monthly workforce information report is published identifying the main areas of absence encouraging senior managers to focus their attention on the critical areas.

East Sussex Primary Care Trust

Michael Jabez Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the representations received by Surrey and Sussex Strategic Health Authority from organisations and individuals who supported (a) a single East Sussex Primary Care Trust (PCT) and (b) two PCTs within East Sussex to include a separate PCT for Hastings and Rother. [64664]

Caroline Flint: This information requested is not held centrally, however Surrey and Sussex Strategic Health Authority (SHA) have been asked to provide details to my hon. Friend directly.

The local consultation on primary care trust reconfiguration in East Sussex was managed by Surrey and Sussex SHA and it is for them to provide information about respondents to the local consultation.

Easter Celebrations

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the cost was of Easter celebrations in NHS hospitals in 2006. [67098]

Mr. Byrne: The Department has no central record of this information which cannot be obtained without incurring disproportionate cost.

End of Life Care

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent discussions she has had on improving end of life care; and who participated in those discussions. [67441]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 2 May 2006]: The public's views about end of life care were sought as part of the consultation leading up to the publication of "Our health, our care, our say" White Paper (Cm 6737). The Secretary of State and other members of the ministerial team attended regional consultation events in Gateshead, Leicester and London and a national citizen's summit in Birmingham which was attended by nearly 1,000 people.

The Secretary of State is due to meet Marie Curie Cancer Care, the National Council for Palliative Care and the Association for Children's Hospices to discuss the White Paper commitment on end of life care in the near future.

Endometriosis

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what funding has been made available for endometriosis research in each of the last 10 years. [60480]

Jane Kennedy: The main agency through which the Government supports medical and clinical research is the Medical Research Council (MRC). The MRC is an independent body funded by the Department of Trade and Industry via the Office of Science and Innovation.

MRC expenditure in the 10 years of research into endometriosis started from 1997–98 and is shown in the table.

	Amount (£ million)
1997–98	1.7
1998–99	1.8
1999–2000	1.8
2000–01	1.2
2001–02	1.2
2002–03	1.0
2003–04	1.2

The MRC does not normally allocate funds to particular topics. Research proposals in all areas compete for the funding available. When appropriate, high quality research in particular areas of strategic importance may be given priority in competition for funds, but research excellence and importance to health continues to be the primary considerations in funding decisions. The MRC always welcomes high quality applications for support into any aspect of human health and these are judged in open competition with other demands on funding.

The Department funds research to support policy and to provide the evidence needed to underpin quality improvement and service development in the NHS. The Department's national research programme has, since 1997, funded one project related to endometriosis at a cost to 31 March 2004 of £320,000.

Over 75 per cent. of the Department's total expenditure on health research is devolved to and managed by national health service organisations. Details of completed and ongoing projects, including a number concerned with endometriosis, can be found on the national research register on the Department's website at www.dh.gov.uk/research.

Equal Pay

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps are undertaken within her Department to ensure that women are obtaining equal pay to men doing work of equal value. [65851]

Mr. Byrne: The Department is committed to reviewing our pay systems on a regular basis and to prepare action plans to close any equal pay gaps. Any equality proofing is undertaken in consultation with our trade unions. Departmental managers are asked to consider equal pay issues when setting starting pay and awarding pay flexibilities.

We undertook an equal pay analysis of our current systems in 2005 which did not indicate gender issues.

Fluoridation Schemes

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 29 March 2006 to the hon. Member for Central Ayrshire (Mr. Donohoe), Official Report, column 1062W, on fluoridation schemes, if she will add hon. Members for relevant constituencies to the list of those whom strategic health authorities are advised to notify of proposals for water fluoridation. [66348]

Caroline Flint: The Department will amend the Chief Dental Officer's letter of September 2005 to advise strategic health authorities to notify Members of Parliament with constituencies that would be affected when they are undertaking a consultation about a fluoridation scheme.

Folic Acid

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations her Department has received in the last 12 months on the effects of folic acid ingestion on the elderly. [66097]

Mr. Byrne: Over the last 12 months, there were 32 responses to the Scientific Advisory Committee on Nutrition's consultation on its draft report on folate and disease prevention, Of the 32, 13 responses covered vitamin B12 deficiency in the elderly. The Department, together with the Food Standards Agency, has also received parliamentary questions as well as letters from hon. Members and from members of the public on the subject.

Food Supplements

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what estimate she has made of (a) the number of food supplements on the market which contain boron and (b) the value of (i) wholesale and (ii) retail annual sales of such supplements; and whether she plans to have discussions with industry representatives about the potential impact of decisions by the European Union not to permit the use of boron in food supplements; [66728]

(2) what assessment she has made of the implications for the setting of maximum permitted levels for nutrients in food supplements of the decision of the General Food Law section of the European Union's Standing Committee on the Food Chain and Animal Health on 9 February not to permit the addition of boron to the list of ingredients permitted under the provisions of the Directive on Foods for Particular Nutritional Purposes; whether she plans to make representations to (a) the European Commission and (b) the German Government on this matter; and if she will make a statement; [66729]

(3) what Government policy is on boron in food supplements; and what assessment she has made of the implications of this decision for objectives for the setting of maximum permitted levels of nutrients in food supplements; [66730]

Caroline Flint: A decision has not yet been taken at the standing committee on the food chain and animal health on the addition of boron to the list of ingredients permitted under the provisions of the directive on foods for particular nutritional purposes or of the food supplements directive. An assessment of the number or market value of food supplements containing boron that are available in the United Kingdom has not been made.

The Government supports the addition of boron to the positive list in the food supplements directive, and supplements containing boron are permitted on the UK market.

The outcome of recent discussions at the European Commission (EC) standing committee on the food chain and animal health on the use of boron in food supplements was discussed at a meeting with industry representatives on 15 March 2005.

Representations have been made to the EC and the German authorities regarding the UK position on the addition of boron to the positive lists of the directives on food supplements and foods for particular nutritional uses.

Any substance on the positive list in the food supplements directive will be subject to the provisions of the directive. This includes making provisions for establishing maximum levels of vitamins and minerals in food supplements. The EC has indicated that it will bring forward discussion documents at the end of 2006 to consult stakeholders and member states on this issue.

Freedom of Information

Greg Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance her Department issues to primary care trusts on charges made for freedom of information requests. [67170]

Mr. Byrne: The Department has not issued any guidance to primary care trusts (PCTs) on charges made for freedom of information requests. PCTs are public authorities in their own right in terms of the Act and therefore have the option to charge in accordance with the Freedom of Information and Data Protection (Appropriate Limit and Fees) Regulations 2004 and following the guidance on the regulations provided by the Department for Constitutional Affairs.

General Practitioners

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many general practitioners in each primary care trust are participating in out-of-hours work in the same area as they are registered as a general practitioner. [65973]

Mr. Byrne: The information is not collected by the Department. It is for individual primary care trusts to ensure that out-of-hours provision in their areas continue to be improved and developed into a better service for patients.

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the effect of the new general practitioner contract on clinical outcomes. [66830]

Mr. Byrne: The new general medical services contract was introduced in April 2004. Part of the contract is the quality and outcomes framework (QOF), which rewards practices for the work they do rather than simply the number of patients they treat. High achievement in the first year of the QOF (over 91 per cent., average achievement of points) means that patients are receiving a higher standard of care and treatment from their local general practitioner practices.

Research by the national primary care research and development centre at the University of Manchester (published in the Journal of Quality and Satisfaction in Healthcare in 2004) shows that significant health gains could result from achieving the quality targets in the QOF. The research estimated the amount of cardiovascular events, including heart attack and death, which could be prevented over five years in a general practice population of 10,000.

Reaching the cholesterol reduction targets could prevent, in an average practice, 15 events in people with coronary heart disease, seven events in people with a history of stroke and seven events in people with diabetes. Achieving blood pressure control targets in hypertensive patients without those conditions could prevent 15 cardiovascular events.

The amount of health gain is sensitive to current quality of care, prevalence of conditions and risk factors. Nevertheless, it is clear that achievement of QOF targets across the country could prevent thousands of serious events, including deaths, from cardiovascular disease.

Health Care Staff

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action her Department is taking to ensure placements and employment for medical and other health care staff at all levels who will be completing their training in 2006. [66059]

Mr. Byrne: The Department has provided the national health service with funding to provide more than enough foundation programme year 1 posts, for all graduates from English medical schools in 2006–07.

There are still lots of job opportunities within the NHS, with NHS Jobs advertising between 3,000 and 4,000 jobs at any given time.

The NHS still needs newly qualified staff to replace those who retire or take career breaks. However there is now more competition and new staff may not always be able to find the job they want in the location they want and may need to be more flexible.

Strategic health authorities and NHS trusts are working proactively to find slots for both clinical placements and newly qualified staff within their overall work force plans.

Imported Blood Products

Jenny Willott: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether her Department (a) asked and (b) required individuals with haemophilia to sign a waiver in 1991 intended to block legal redress in the event of infection with hepatitis C from NHS blood products after a hepatitis C test was completed; and if she will make a statement. [64130]

Caroline Flint: In 1988, a special payments scheme was introduced for haemophiliacs infected with HIV through blood products. This scheme is administered by the Macfarlane Trust. In 1991, as part of a settlement of court proceedings a further lump sum payment was made under the scheme for haemophilia patients infected with HIV. From that time, all beneficiaries of the Trust have been required to sign a waiver undertaking not to take legal action against the Department or any other public body in respect of infection from HIV, or hepatitis viruses. It is usual in litigation that when a settlement is reached, claimants cannot then reopen the proceedings.

We deeply regret that so many people with haemophilia were infected with HIV and hepatitis C through blood products. In 2004, the Government set up the Skipton Fund to administer the ex-gratia payment scheme for people infected with hepatitis C from national health service blood or blood products.

Malnutrition

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations her Department has received on nutrition, under-nutrition and malnutrition in each year since 2000. [64287]

Caroline Flint: Since 2000, the Department has received Parliamentary Questions, letters from hon. Members and letters from members of the public on nutrition, under nutrition and malnutrition. Letters have also been sent to the Chief Medical Officer, Deputy Chief Medical Officer and Chief Executive, as well as Departmental officials in the nutrition team. Similar representations on these subjects have also been received by the Food Standards Agency. These representations are from a wide variety of sources.

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she will specify nutrition standards for meals supplied to patients and service users by (a) nursing homes, (b) residential homes, (c) hospitals and (d) meals on wheels and lunch clubs. [64288]

Mr. Byrne: Food and nutrition in nursing and residential homes is extensively covered in the existing 'Care Homes for Older People—National Minimum Standards', which is available in the Library. The national minimum standards, which the Commission for Social Care Inspection has to take into account when it inspects homes against the Care Homes Regulations 2001, address food and nutrition from various perspectives, including nutritional content, religious or cultural requirements, preparation and hygiene and the social value of meals and mealtimes.

'Standards for Better Health', which is available in the Library, requires health care organisations, including hospitals, to offer patients a choice of food, which is safely prepared, provides a balanced diet and meets their individual nutritional, personal and clinical dietary requirements. Compliance with these requirements is mandatory for any provider treating national health service patients and is measured via the Healthcare Commission's annual health check process.

Nutritional standards in hospitals are also included in the Essence of Care framework for clinical governance, launched in February 2001. The Essence of Care benchmarking guidance and toolkit was published in April 2003. This includes guidelines that all hospital patients should be screened and assessed to identify their nutritional needs and that further assessment will take place for all patients identified as at risk. Plans of care, based on ongoing nutritional assessments, will be devised, implemented and evaluated for those patients who need them.

'Essence of Care' is available at:

www.modern.nhs.uk/home/key/docs/Essence%20of%20Care.pdf.

A copy has been placed in the library.

The Food Standards Agency (FSA) is contributing to improving the nutrient and food intake as provided by major public institutions, including nursing homes, residential homes, hospitals and meals on wheels or lunch clubs across the United Kingdom. This will include the development of nutrient and food-based guidance as well as example menus to assist caterers in menu planning, both of which will meet nutritional guidance.

The FSA has met with the National Association of Care Caterers and the Women's Royal Voluntary Services and they are supportive of this work.

Medicines and Healthcare Products Regulatory Agency

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether applications to the Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency for European procedures in handling product licence applications are given priority over national procedure applications; and if she will make a statement. [67298]

Jane Kennedy: Applications to the Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency (MHRA) for product licences should be handled within the timescales established by legislation. The medicines directive implemented into United Kingdom legislation requires us to take all appropriate measures to ensure that authorisation procedures are completed within 210 days of submission of a valid application.

However, the legislation also establishes additional timescales, which must be met where the authorisation is to be granted following European procedures amongst one or more other member states or within the entire community. For example, within the so-called mutual recognition procedure, we must make sure to have completed our scientific evaluation within 90 days. And within the community-wide centralised procedure, we must complete our scientific assessment within 80 days.

These tighter European procedural timescales do dictate that such applications receive some priority within the MHRA since to do otherwise might mean that we were obliged to allow marketing of the product in the UK regardless of any concerns we may have for its quality, safety or efficacy.

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the length of time taken by the Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency to acknowledge an application for a product licence (a) is measured and (b) is included in the processing time reported by the agency. [67299]

Jane Kennedy: The Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency (MHRA) has included the time it takes to receive and acknowledge applications for product licences in its overall processing times. However, for incomplete or potentially invalid applications the time taken by the company to correct the application is not included in the processing times. Incomplete or potentially invalid applications include those not accompanied by appropriate data or documents, submitted under the wrong legal basis or without payment of the correct fee.

The MHRA information management system sends the applicant a notification of receipt letter as soon as the application is entered into the database and showing the date on which the application was received. A subsequent acknowledgement of submission letter is sent to the applicant as soon as the application has been validated and is ready for the start of assessment.

The MHRA measures the time taken to enter submissions onto the database and to complete their validation as part of its internal monitoring of business processes.

Misoprostol

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent research her Department has evaluated on the (a) uses and (b) effects of the drug misoprostol; and if she will make a statement. [66882]

Jane Kennedy: Misoprostol is a synthetic analogue of a naturally occurring hormone (prostaglandin). As a licensed medicine, the uses and effects of misoprostol are evaluated by the Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency (MHRA).

Misoprostol is licensed for the treatment and prevention of gastrointestinal ulcers induced by non-steroidal anti-inflammatory drugs (NSAIDs). It can be given alone, or combined with NSAIDs such as diclofenac or naproxen, and is effective in reducing gastric acidity, which may be the cause of ulcers. Misoprostol is especially suitable for the frail and elderly who need to take long-term NSAIDs for arthritic conditions, and who are therefore at risk of ulcers.

As with all medicines, misoprostol may be associated with side effects in some patients, and safety is continually monitored by the MHRA. The known side effects of this drug are described in product information for healthcare professionals and patients. When used for the treatment or prevention of gastrointestinal ulcers, the recognised adverse effects of misoprostol include diarrhoea, abdominal pain, dyspepsia (indigestion), flatulence, nausea and vomiting, skin rashes and dizziness. As prostaglandin hormones also have effects on the lining of the uterus in women, misoprostol can also lead to vaginal bleeding.

Doctors may decide to use a medicine outside the terms of the marketing authorisation, on their own responsibility, if they consider that it is in the best interests of their patients. Unlicensed uses of misoprostol include the induction of labour and medical abortion, where it is sometimes used in combination with other drugs such as mifepristone. This is in line with the advice of the Royal College of Obstetricians and Gynaecologists in its evidence based clinical guideline. Side effects of misoprostol in unlicensed indications have been documented to include abnormal uterine contractions and haemorrhage, retained placenta, release of amniotic fluid into the circulation (embolism), incomplete abortion and premature birth.

NHS Appointments Commission

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 20 December 2005, Official Report, column 2726W, on the Public Appointments Annual Report, when the NHS Appointments Commission will publish a list of the appointments to the bodies for which it is responsible. [67445]

Mr. Byrne: Information on appointments to local national health service boards has been published by the NHS Appointments Commission and can be found on their website at: www.appointments.org.uk/publications.asp.

Information on appointments to national bodies will be published shortly.

NHS Direct

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 10 March 2006, Official Report, column 1824W, on NHS Direct, if she will make a statement on the growth in the cost of NHS Direct. [66722]

Mr. Byrne: Since its inception in 1998, NHS Direct has grown from small-scale pilot sites to a substantial national service. The increased funding reflects the increased popularity of the service and the wider range of services provided. For example, the NHS Direct telephone service, launched in 1998, and nationally available from 2000, is now complemented by the NHS Direct Online website (1999) and the NHS Direct Interactive digital TV service (2004). This multi-channel service now handles around 2 million patient contacts each month compared to around 9,000 per month in 1998–99.

In addition to the nationally directed service, NHS Direct now provides primary care trusts with a range of telephone-based solutions to support the delivery of their service objectives, including out of hours and unscheduled care; long-term care; outpatient services; and health information and access to local services.

NHS Pension Scheme

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the employer contribution rates to the NHS pension scheme are; what assumed rate of return underlies those contribution rates; and what the contribution rate would be if the assumed rate of return were in line with current redemption yield on index-linked gilts. [61397]

Mr. Byrne: Current employer contribution rates to the national health service pension scheme are 14 per cent. of pensionable payroll, and the last actuarial valuation on which this recommendation was based assumed a rate of return of 3.5 per cent. The information on the impact of different actuarial and accounting assumptions can be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

NHS Recruitment

Steve Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will place a duty on NHS bodies not to discriminate in their recruitment practices against applicants who have previously acted as whistle-blowers within the NHS. [51906]

Mr. Byrne: Recruitment of staff in the national health service is a local matter. NHS employers are expected to have fair and transparent recruitment processes in place which comply with relevant legislation.

The Department issued updated guidance in 2003 to support the development and remedy of whistle-blowing policies in the workplace.

Overseas Doctors

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many and what percentage of doctors, who are non-European Economic Area citizens work in the NHS; and if she will make a statement. [67007]

Mr. Byrne: The number of doctors employed in the national health service who qualified in non-European Economic Area countries is shown in the following table. No information is collected relating to the country of origin of NHS staff.

General and personal medical services and hospital community health services (HCHS): All doctors[1,2,3] by specified country of primary qualification group, England as at 30 September 2005

Number (headcount) and percentages

	All countries of qualification	All EEA countries	EEA countries (percentage)	All non-EEA countries	Non-EEA countries (percentage)
All doctors	119,017	86,057	72.3	32,960	27.7
All HCHS medical staff[2,3]	83,073	55,762	67.1	27,311	32.9
All GPs[1]	35,944	30,295	84.3	5,649	15.7
Of which:
GPs (excluding retainers and registrars)	32,738	27,990	85.5	4,748	14.5
GP registrars	2,564	1,684	65.7	880	34.3

[1] Practitioners includes contracted GPs, QMS Others, PMS Others, GP registrars and GP retainers
[2] Excludes medical hospital practitioners and medical clinical assistants, most of whom are GPs working part time in hospitals
[3] Excludes ail dental staff. Information about country of qualification is derived from the General Medical Council. For staff in dental specialties, with a General Dental Council registration, the country of qualification is therefore unknown.

Pharmacies

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate she has made of the number of pharmacists who are being held liable by an oxygen supplier for the loss or damage of oxygen cylinders. [67883]

Jane Kennedy: The supply of oxygen cylinders to pharmacies is a matter for agreement between the pharmacy and the oxygen supplier concerned. The Department does not hold information on these business arrangements and therefore cannot provide an estimate of the number of pharmacists held liable for loss or damage to cylinders.

Primary Care Trusts

Chris Huhne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the revenue allocation per head of population is for each primary care trust in (a) 2007–08 and (b) 2006–07; and what the out-turn figures were in (i) 2004–05 and (ii) 2005–06. [64853]

Mr. Byrne: Information showing the revenue allocation per head of population for each primary care trust in 2007–08 and 2006–07 has been placed in the Library.

I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for South Cambridgeshire (Mr. Lansley) on 10 March 2006, Official Report, column 1828W, in respect of 2004–05 expenditure per head. Expenditure per head figures for 2005–06 will be available in the autumn.

Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the expected final outturn position is of Milton Keynes Primary Care Trust for the 2006–07 financial year. [68154]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The financial plans for 2006–07 have not yet been finalised.

Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Health from which (a) frontline staff and (b) support staff posts Milton Keynes Primary Trust is considering removing funding. [68155]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Funding is allocated directly to primary care trust (PCTs). It is for PCTs in partnership with strategic health authorities and other local stakeholders to determine how best to use their funds to meet national and local priorities for improving health, tackling health inequalities and modernising services.

Sexual Health

Laura Moffatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what measures her Department is implementing to encourage women aged between 16 and 24 to practise safer sex. [66486]

Caroline Flint: Our current plans are to aim to launch the next sexual health campaign later this year. This will target 16 to 34-year-old men and women but with a concentration on the key 16 to 24 year age bracket. The campaign will focus on the risks of unprotected sex and the benefits of using condoms to avoid sexually transmitted infections including HIV and unintended pregnancies.

Also, the national chlamydia screening programme provides opportunistic screening for genital chlamydia infection and is offered to all sexually active women and men aged between 16 and 24 years old attending a variety of health and non health care settings in England. Every young person who accepts a chlamydia test is given an information leaflet which explains that using condoms every time they have sex can reduce the risks of getting or passing on chlamydia and other sexually transmitted infections including HIV.

This programme is linked to the implementation of the teenage pregnancy strategy, led by Department for Education and Skills, which seeks to both encourage young people to delay early sex and to improve their access to sexual health advice and services when they do become sexually active.

The teenage pregnancy strategy is achieved through a national media campaign; improved delivery of sex and relationships education in schools, and by making services more young people friendly and delivered closer to the point of need—in schools, further education colleges and other youth settings. Since the start of the strategy, the under-18 conception rate has fallen by 11.1 per cent., to its lowest level since the mid-1980s.

Unsocial Hours Payments

Steve Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether unsocial hours payments are paid to (a) existing NHS Direct and (b) new NHS Direct staff; and if she will make a statement. [64182]

Mr. Byrne: This information is not centrally held. It may be available from NHS Direct Special Health Authority and you may wish to contact the chairman of NHS Direct for details.

Voluntary Sector

Mr. Vara: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how her Department is seeking to encourage further voluntary sector involvement in the provision of health services. [66910]

Mr. Byrne: The Department is encouraging further voluntary third sector involvement in the commissioning and provision of health services as part of the implementation of commitments made in the recent White Paper, 'Our health, our care, our say', working with partners and agencies across the statutory and voluntary sectors at regional and national levels. The ministerial third sector commissioning task force, which was set up to strengthen the commercial relationship between the third sector and the public sector will be publishing a report in the summer. The report will make recommendations on removing obstacles to the third sector in the provision of health and social care.

Mr. Vara: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the effect of the time taken to announce decisions on the allocation of section 64 funding to voluntary sector organisations in the health field on the work of these organisations. [66911]

Mr. Byrne: The Department recognises the implications of the delay in notifying voluntary and community organisations of the result in their Section 64 applications. Those organisations with a second or third year project will receive an interim amount equivalent to the first quarter payment, which will enable them to continue the project without interruption. Organisations still awaiting the outcome of the application for 2006–07 have been regularly informed of the situation by email and telephone for those organisations that have directly contacted the Department.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Child Soldiers

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what sanctions his Department has taken against countries in breach of UN conventions on the employment and use of child soldiers. [65887]

Mr. Straw: I have been asked to reply.

The UK has signed and ratified both the UN Convention on the Rights of the Child and its Optional Protocol on the involvement of children in armed conflict and encourages all other states to do likewise.

The UK actively supports work in the UN Security Council on this issue. UN Security Council resolution 1612 of July 2005 on children and armed conflict established a mechanism to monitor and report on grave violations against children, including the recruitment and use of child soldiers and a Security Council Working Group to make recommendations to the Council on possible measures to promote the protection of children.

Security Council resolution 1612 also reaffirms the Security Council's intention to consider imposing multilateral sanctions against parties to situations of armed conflict which are on its agenda and are in violation of applicable international law relating to the rights and protection of children in armed conflict. Multilateral sanctions are usually applied taking into account a broad range of factors and have already been applied in relation to several conflict situations where the recruitment of child soldiers is a serious concern, such as those arising in the Democratic Republic of Congo (DRC), Sudan and Cote d'Ivoire. Relevant Security Council resolutions also call for those responsible for violations of international humanitarian law to be brought to justice, including where appropriate by the International Criminal Court (ICC). I welcome the transfer of the first individual indicted by the ICC, Thomas Lubanga Dyilo, a national of the DRC, to The Hague on 17 March. He is charged with conscripting and enlisting children under the age of 15 and using them to participate actively in hostilities. The UK also works through the EU to promote the protection of children affected by armed conflict, including through Troika démarches.

Development Objectives

Mark Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assistance the Government are providing to developing countries in producing their 10 year plans on achieving their development objectives. [66836]

Mr. Thomas: The international community agreed at the 2005 World Summit that all countries would adopt and implement comprehensive national development strategies to achieve the millennium development goals.

Many developing countries already have poverty reduction strategies or other national poverty plans, which set the agenda for development assistance from donors. We are working with the Development Assistance Committee of the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD), the World Bank and the United Nations Development Programme both to encourage developing countries to build these poverty plans into 10-year strategies for achieving the millennium development goals by 2015; and to ensure that donors agree with partner countries the increased development assistance necessary to finance them.

Longer-term planning by developing countries and support by donors is particularly important in education and health. On 10 April, I and my right hon. Friend, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, announced that the UK Government will provide $15 billion (approximately £8.5 billion) funding for education by 2015. This will help to give our partner countries confidence to prepare 10 year plans to achieve the education goals. DFID will be working with governments and through existing collective donor arrangements to support the development of these plans. In particular the Fast Track Initiative for education provides assistance with education planning and long-term predictable finance in support of plans to achieve education goals. DFID has doubled the UK's contribution to the Fast Track Initiative's Programme Development Fund to £5 million, and will be providing an additional £100 million to the Fast Track Initiative for education over the next two years.

EU Water Initiative

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many people have received sanitation and clean water as a result of the implementation of the EU Water Initiative in the four years since its inception. [67579]

Mr. Thomas: The 25 EU member states and the European Commission are together the largest donors in Africa and in 2003–04 spent over £1.4 billion on water and sanitation. The EU Water Initiative (EUWI) was created to increase the impact of this aid, by co-ordinating efforts to ensure that the sector receives appropriate political profile and increased levels of investment. This is why we have been keen to make the Initiative work.

DFID has been actively involved since the outset with the EUWI but like others, has been disappointed with slow progress. We are currently working with Tearfund and WaterAid to strengthen commitment to the Initiative across the EU and in particular to improve monitoring and accountability.

One of the aims of the EUWI was to catalyse additional funding for water and sanitation and the African, Caribbean and Pacific Countries (ACP)—EU Water Facility (EUWF), was established in 2004 in response to this aim. In contrast to the EUWI, the EUWF is a funding mechanism. Although progress has been slow, mainly due to lengthy procurement procedures, approximately €230 million is now committed to co-fund 97 projects in ACP countries, which are valued at €412 million. An initial analysis of these selected proposals by the EUWF has found that by 2010 approximately 10 million people will benefit from access to drinking water and approximately 5 million people will benefit from access to basic sanitation. A second call for proposals has been launched this year and the full €500 million of the EUWF will be committed by 2007.

Governance

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development (1) what recent discussions he has had with the Governments of (a) India, (b) Bangladesh, (c) Pakistan, (d) Sri Lanka, (e) Botswana, (f) Cameroon, (g) Ghana, (h) Kenya, (i) Lesotho, (j) Malawi, (k) Mozambique, (l) Namibia, (m) Nigeria, (n) South Africa, (o) Tanzania, (p) Uganda and (q) Zambia on (i) strengthening Government-business relations, (ii) supporting free media, (iii) ensuring that justice is consistent and reliable, (iv) providing efficient administration and (v) ensuring effective government; [65712]

(2) what recent discussions he has had with the Governments of (a) Botswana, (b) Cameroon, (c) Ghana, (d) Kenya, (e) Lesotho, (f) Malawi, (g) Mozambique, (h) Namibia, (i) Nigeria, (j) South Africa, (k) Tanzania, (l) Uganda, (m) Zambia, (n) India, (o) Bangladesh, (p) Pakistan and (q) Sri Lanka on (i) corporate governance, (ii) industrial relations, (iii) human resources, (iv) infrastructure, (v) the financial framework and (vi) business regulation; [65716]

(3) what recent discussions he has had with the Governments of (a) Botswana, (b) Cameroon, (c) Ghana, (d) Kenya, (e) Lesotho, (f) Malawi, (g) Mozambique, (h) Namibia, (i) Nigeria, (j) South Africa, (k) Tanzania, (l) Uganda, (m) Zambia, (n) India, (o) Bangladesh, (p) Pakistan and (q) Sri Lanka on (i) environmental protection, (ii) corruption reduction, (iii) tax policy and (iv) competition policy. [65953]

Mr. Thomas: My right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for International Development has had recent discussions with the Governments of most of the countries mentioned. The discussions were wide ranging and included governance, infrastructure, the environment, human resources and trade and growth. In addition, DFID officials engage in regular policy dialogue with the various Governments on a number of topics. They include: public sector reform, public financial management, Government accountability, access to justice and corruption, the importance of infrastructure links and business regulation for improved trade and growth, and management of human resources in areas such as health and education. In pursuing our growth and poverty reduction goals, DFID also attaches importance to the reform of tax policy and administration and to fostering a more competitive market environment. Jointly with other donors, DFID is supporting a number of country and regional projects in Africa and Asia that address these two issues.

Botswana and Namibia

Neither I nor my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for International Development have had discussions with the Governments of Botswana and Namibia on the issues raised in the recent past. Both are middle income countries and DFID does not have significant programmes in either country.

Cameroon

I met the Prime Minister of Cameroon in London on 8 March. We discussed Cameroon's progress towards reaching heavily indebted poor countries completion point and prospects for debt relief and also reviewed Cameroon's progress on tackling corruption. DFID is supporting the Government of Cameroon's Forestry Programme to tackle illegal logging and improve sustainable forest management.

Ghana

My right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for International Development recently met the Ghanaian Minister for Finance and Economic Planning in Washington. They discussed a wide variety of topics relating to the development of Ghana including how to deepen democracy and the importance of a well regulated business environment.

Kenya: DFID officials have regular dialogue on many of the subjects raised in relation to a number of sectoral programmes which DFID supports in Kenya. These include the Public Sector Reform programme, Public Finance Management programme, Governance Justice Law and Order Sector programme and the Political Empowerment programme.

Lesotho

My right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for International Development met recently with the Government of Lesotho's Minister of Finance. The discussions concentrated on education, HIV/AIDS, infrastructure and trade and investment in Lesotho. DFID supports Lesotho's revenue authority to improve tax collection and management.

Malawi

My right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for International Development met the Malawian Minister for Finance in London in November and discussed the response to Malawi's food shortages and progress by the Government to achieve economic stabilisation and tackle corruption. I visited Malawi in October to monitor progress on health and HIV/AIDS programmes which aim to address human resources constraints in the health and education sectors in Malawi. DFID and other development partners are finalising a review which has covered a broad range of development issues including the economy, the social sectors and governance.

Mozambique

Mozambique has recently completed its second poverty reduction strategy plan following consultations with civil society and donors, including DFID. Strengthening Government, improving efficiency of the public sector and its administration, improving the justice sector and enhancing business relation were all key issues for discussion.

Nigeria

My right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for International Development met the Nigerian Minister of Finance, Dr. Ngozi Okonjo-Iweala in April at the World Bank (WB) and the International Monetary Fund (IMF) spring meetings in Washington. Their discussion covered the Nigerian debt relief deal, recent economic events, and Nigeria's economic reforms. The UK Government strongly supports the reforms in Nigeria which focus on improving governance, stimulating private sector development and improving basic services.

South Africa

Recent discussions with the Government of South Africa have focused on the follow-up commitments made at the G8 Summit in Gleneagles in July 2005, to improve infrastructure in Africa, support good governance and tackle corruption, to address human resource constraints, to boost trade and growth and tackle climate change and water resources.

Tanzania

My right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for International Development spoke to President Kikwete of Tanzania last month. They discussed a variety of issues relating to Tanzania's development and welcomed President Kikwete's commitment to reducing poverty and fighting corruption. My right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for International Development also met with the Tanzanian Minister of Finance at the International Monetary Fund (IMF)/World Bank (WB) annual meetings from 22–23 April. Among the issues discussed was Tanzania's progress on development. DFID has supported Tanzania to assess the impact of its revenue authority on small businesses and the investment climate.

Uganda

My right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for International Development met President Museveni in the margins of the Commonwealth Heads of Government Meeting in Malta in November. A wide ranging discussion covered a number of our concerns about recent governance developments. DFID's programme in Uganda includes direct support for more accountable and effective Government.

Zambia

In February, my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for International Development met Zambia's Minister of Commerce, Trade and Industry Dipak Patel, who is the current chair of the least developed countries group in the World Trade Organisation (WTO) trade negotiations. They discussed a range of issues concerning trade and in particular the Hong Kong WTO trade negotiations. I met with the Minister of State for Health Services in October 2005 and discussed Zambia's human resource strategy.

In March, DFID co-hosted the Asia 2015 conference in London with the World Bank and the Asian Development Bank. The conference brought together many senior politicians, officials and business leaders from the across the Asia region. Among the main topics discussed were the importance of tackling climate change and the need to ensure growth and effective Government. My right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for International Development and I had a number of discussions about how to increase state capacity and effectiveness in order to increase access to services and reduce poverty.

India

DFID is engaged in regular policy dialogue with the Government of India and state governments across on policies and programmes to improve Government effectiveness and efficiency. DFID has been supporting a Centre for Good Governance in Andhra Pradesh for several years and has now been asked to assist in the establishment of a national centre. These initiatives provide a clear framework for discussion and planning for enhancing Government effectiveness.

Pakistan

My right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for International Development has had two recent discussions with the Prime Minister of Pakistan. The first in Islamabad in October last year following the tragic earthquake, and the second during the Asia 2015 conference. Their discussions were wide ranging and focused on the UK's £128 million response to the earthquake. My right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for International Development also reiterated the UK's continued commitment to support Pakistan's poverty reduction efforts. They discussed plans for a development partnership with Pakistan; Pakistan's economic growth and progress in Pakistan's social sectors and in water and sanitation.

Bangladesh

My right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for International Development met with the Bangladesh Minister of Finance and Planning, Saifur Rahman, during a visit to Dhaka in December and more recently during the Asia 2015 conference. On both occasions they had wide ranging discussions which touched on many of these issues.

Sri Lanka

Our main priorities in Sri Lanka are recovery actions after the tsunami and improving prospectus for peace. We have also agreed to provide £41 million of Debt Relief to Sri Lanka over the next 10 years, in order to release Government finances for tsunami recovery and poverty reduction. Key to recovery is rebuilding infrastructure and a regulatory framework so that small enterprises can re-establish their businesses. I visited Sri Lanka last year and discussed many of these issues with the Government.

HIV/AIDS

Mr. Hunt: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what estimate his Department has made of the percentage of aid promised to developing countries at the G8 Gleneagles Summit that will go towards tackling HIV/AIDS. [67884]

Mr. Thomas: At the G8 Gleneagles Summit; commitments were made to increase aid to developing countries by US$50 billion per year by 2010. The percentage of this aid that will go towards tackling HIV and AIDS for all developing countries was not specified.

Of the additional $50 billion per year by 2010, $25 billion will go to Africa. The best resource needs estimates have only considered global needs to 2008 and these suggest a resource gap of around $18 billion from 2006–2008 for AIDS-related programmes.

Mr. Hunt: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what estimate his Department has made of the cost of implementing the Gleneagles commitment to achieve universal access to anti-retroviral treatment for all HIV/AIDS sufferers by 2010. [67885]

Mr. Thomas: The Joint United Nations programme on HIV/AIDS (UNAIDS) reports on global resource needs estimates for AIDS. Anti-retroviral treatment resource needs alone are not available. However, the UNAIDS have produced global resource needs estimates of the costs of scaling up a comprehensive response to AIDS, to get as close as possible to universal access by 2010. These estimates propose total global annual needs of US$15 billion in 2006, US$18 billion in 2007 and US$22 billion in 2008. The estimates include a range of services covering treatment, prevention and care for people made vulnerable by AIDS.

Global resource needs estimates have not yet been published for 2009 onwards.

Mr. Hunt: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what recent discussions his Department has had with the UN General Assembly Special Session on HIV/AIDS on interim targets towards the Government's G8 commitment to achieving universal access to anti-retroviral treatment for all HIV/AIDS sufferers by 2010. [67886]

Mr. Thomas: Since Gleneagles, the UK has taken a number of steps to advance the commitments on AIDS. These will be a central part of discussions at the UN General Assembly high level meeting (31 May-2 June 2006). In establishing the UN General Assembly high level meeting, the General Assembly resolution (23 December 2005), established a Global Steering Committee (GSC) on scaling up towards universal access which DFID co-chaired. Building on the recommendations of more than 100 national and seven regional consultations, the GSC advised the Joint United Nations programme on HIV/AIDS (UNAIDS) on the priority actions required to scale up access to treatment, prevention and care for HIV and AIDS. These recommendations were incorporated in the UNAIDS report "Towards Universal Access" published on 21 April 2006 for consideration at the UN General Assembly high level meeting. This report includes a recommendation that countries should set both interim targets for 2008, and 2010 targets in the areas of treatment, prevention and care.

The UK is now working with UNAIDS, the presidency of the General Assembly and other governments to press for a strong and ambitious Political Declaration at the UN General Assembly high level meeting on 2 June. We are working to agree a Declaration which incorporates the recommendations of the UNAIDS report; promotes and protects human rights, women's rights, sexual and reproductive health and rights, and harm reduction as central components of an effective response; and endorses the principle that no credible, sustainable country plan should go unfunded. We will continue these discussions in the run-up to the high level meeting in June.

Iraq

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what action the UK Government are taking to assist in the provision of clean drinking water for the people of Halabja in Iraq. [67178]

Mr. Thomas: Since 2003, DFID and other donors have worked hard to restore water supplies in Iraq. We estimate that 4 million more Iraqis have access to safe drinking water than before the conflict. In most cases, the main barrier to access to safe drinking water is the condition of the pipelines, rather than the water supply itself. This is partly due to the tendency for insurgents to target water, electricity and oil pipelines, as well as the reconstruction staff working to repair them. However, the poor condition of many pipelines is primarily the result of decades of underinvestment under Saddam's regime, which has left Iraq with crumbling infrastructure in desperate need of maintenance, and a shortage of trained engineers who know how to carry out repairs.

DFID's bilateral support for improving water and sanitation has been provided in southern Iraq, where our regional office is located and where UK military efforts to provide security are also focused. As Halabja is in the north of Iraq, DFID has not been directly involved in supporting projects in the city. DFID's funding to the water sector in central and northern Iraq has been provided through the United Nations Trust Fund for Iraq, to which we contributed £30 million in 2004.

Significant donors in the water sector have been the United States Agency for International Development (USAID), the United Nations Development Programme, and UNICEF. The US recently completed a water well project to restore water supply to Halabja. They have also recently completed a broad assessment of the water and sewage services in Sulaymaniyah province, where Halabja is situated, to help plan future assistance to this sector.

In the south of Iraq, DFID is providing the following assistance to improve water and sanitation systems:

We have built a water training centre in Basra, which I opened in March this year. The training centre will help train water engineers from all four southern provinces. The expertise they gain will strengthen the ability of the local water directorates to deal with the huge amount of maintenance that is now required.

We are building three water towers in one of the poorest areas of Basra. These will ensure a steady availability of water to over 250,000 people.

We are co-funding, with UNICEF, the refurbishment of a desalination plant that will provide the people of Basra with 500,000 litres of clean drinking water per day.

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what recent reports he has received of the discussions between the International Monetary Fund and the Government of Iraq concerning oil policy; and if he will make a statement. [66772]

Mr. Thomas: While the UK is not party to discussions between the International Monetary Fund (IMF) and the Iraqi Government, we understand that officials from the IMF and the Iraqi Ministry of Finance have held numerous discussions on economic policy since 2004. They have continued to meet with representatives of the Iraqi government, both in the region and in Washington, following the approval of the Stand-by Arrangement on 23 December 2005.

So far, most of their discussions have focussed on the implementation of the Iraqi Government's economic programme supported by the Stand-by Arrangement. The programme includes commitments to reorganise and improve governance of the oil sector. More details of the programme, as well as reports from IMF staff and the Government of Iraq's memorandums on economic and financial policies, are available on the IMF's website (www.imf.org).

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what role UK officials had in the International Monetary Fund technical assistance to Iraq on petroleum sector policies, dated January 2005; and if he will make a statement. [66773]

Mr. Thomas: The International Monetary Fund (IMF) does not assist the Government of Iraq directly on petroleum sector policies. Indirectly they do provide technical assistance in related areas e.g. the Iraqi Ministry of Finance have asked for assistance on how to tax natural resources, including a proposed 10 per cent. levy on oil imports.

In July 2003, the IMF established the £3.7 million Technical Assistance Sub-Account for Iraq at the request of the Governments of Australia, Canada, Italy, Sweden, India and the United Kingdom. The purpose of this programme is to provide training and advice to the Government of Iraq to help restore macroeconomic stability, and thus long-term sustainable economic growth. To date the IMF has delivered training to key staff in the Ministry of Finance on issues of fiscal management, monetary, foreign exchange and financial policy, as well as macro-economic and financial statistics. So far, DFID has made a contribution of £787,500 to the sub-account.

Poliomyelitis (Nigeria)

Mark Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many cases of poliomyelitis there were in Nigeria in each of the last five years; and what steps the Government are taking to reducing incidences of the disease in Nigeria. [66840]

Mr. Thomas: Confirmed cases of wild polio virus (WPV) in Nigeria by year are shown in Table 1 as follows:

Table 1: Annual cases of wild polio virus in Nigeria

	WPV cases
2001	56
2002	202
2003	355
2004	782
2005	801

Surveillance was poor up to 2001, and so the 2001 figure may not be very accurate. The figures for 2002 and subsequent years can be assumed to be accurate. Despite the rising number of cases, recent World Health Organisation (WHO) virological surveillance, which tracks the genetic sequencing of the virus, indicates a restriction of the circulation of WPV. (This means that the number of subtypes of the virus in circulation is steadily decreasing, indicating that the immunity of the general population is increasing.) The geographical spread has also been restricted, as evidenced in Table 2.

There are two main reasons why progress on interrupting transmission of the polio virus in Nigeria is so slow. First, over decades of military rule the routine immunisation services, which should be a central component of the primary health care system, were allowed to collapse. The polio eradication effort has therefore had to depend on supplementary immunisation activities alone, with door-to-door campaigns repeated five or six times every year. However, the second reason for slow progress is that these door-to-door campaigns are not well accepted by the general population in northern Nigeria and so large numbers of children are missed by every campaign as their parents refuse to allow them to be immunised.

The Government of Nigeria is firmly committed to eradicating polio and DFID is working intensely with the WHO, UNICEF and other international partners to help Nigeria address the current problems. DFID lobbied successfully for a greater emphasis to be placed on rebuilding routine immunisation services that address several childhood diseases, instead of the exclusive emphasis on polio campaigns. Routine services provided from fixed sites are much more acceptable to the general public than single- disease door-to-door campaigns. DFID Nigeria has designed a £20 million project to support the reviving of routine immunisation in several low-coverage northern states. This project is expected to go live later this year.

DFID also financed a consultative workshop in Kano in January this year which was very successful in getting key opinion leaders from across northern Nigeria to give their full support to polio eradication activities in the context of greater attention being paid to other childhood diseases at the same time.

Another recent development is the decision to convert polio-only national immunisation days into what are being termed "immunization plus days". DFID and other international partners, especially the European Commission, the US Government and UNICEF, had been pressing for this for some time. During "immunization plus days" BCG[1], DPT[2] and measles vaccines will be provided alongside the polio vaccine, and children will also be given vitamin A and anthelmintic[3] tablets.

These tactics are necessary in order to increase the acceptability of the polio vaccine among the general population, especially in northern states where the transmission of the wild virus has not been checked. Children cannot be immunised against their parents' will and so it is necessary to win over people's hearts and minds so that they accept the polio vaccine. DFID is financing various advocacy initiatives in this regard, and has also funded anthropological research by the Institute of Development Studies in Sussex into the reasons for non-acceptance of the oral polio vaccine in northern Nigeria. The results of this research are now informing Nigerian government strategy at national, state and local levels.

Water and Sanitation

Mark Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many UN agencies are working to provide water and sanitation to the developing world; and what steps are being taken to harmonise their activities. [66838]

Hilary Benn: The UN currently has 23 agencies working on some aspect of water and sanitation. The agencies have different functions and only a handful have significant programmes in the provision of water and sanitation services to developing countries. Both UN agencies and donors recognise the need to improve harmonisation and have agreed a proposal for a co-ordinating body, "UN Water". This will provide a mechanism for co-ordinating the work of the existing agencies. DFID is working with others to establish UN Water, and will be providing financial support to a Secretariat in the United Nations Department of Economic and Social Affairs (UNDESA).

DFID is also proposing that, in discussion with national governments, the UN should decide which UN agency is best placed to lead on water and sanitation in any country. This lead agency, and not others, should be the channel for donor money allocated to the UN in this sector.

In light of the World Summit Outcome document, the UN Secretary General is considering proposals for improving UN coherence across its development operations including the environment.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what recent assessment he has made of the ability of the (a) EU Water Initiative and (b) EU water facility to deliver clean water and sanitation to those who need it; and if he will make a statement. [66947]

Mr. Thomas: The 25 EU member states and the European Commission are together, the largest donors in Africa and in 2003–04 spent over £1.4 billion on water and sanitation. The EU Water Initiative (EUWI) was created to increase the impact of this aid, by co-ordinating efforts to ensure that the sector receives appropriate political profile and increased levels of investment. This is why we have been keen to make the initiative work.

DFID has been actively involved since the outset with the EUWI but like others, has been disappointed with slow progress. We are currently working with Tearfund and WaterAid to strengthen commitment across the EU and in particular to improve monitoring and accountability.

The EU Water Facility (EUWF), in contrast to the EUWI, is a funding mechanism. It was established in 2004 in response to the clear need for more money in the water sector. Although progress has been slow, mainly due to lengthy procurement procedures, approximately €230 million is now committed to co-fund 97 projects, which are overall valued at €412 million. A second call for proposals has been launched this year and the full €500 million of the EUWF will be committed by 2007.

World Bank (Oil Revenue)

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment his Department has made of the ongoing dispute between the World Bank and the Government of Chad regarding frozen Chadian oil royalties; what discussions he has had with members of the US Administration regarding their offer of mediation in this dispute; and if he will make a statement. [66637]

Mr. Thomas: Chad is one of the poorest countries in Africa. UK development aid is provided indirectly through multilateral organisations. When oil reserves were discovered in the 1990s, the industry asked the World Bank to invest in the building of a 1,070 km pipeline to carry Chad's petroleum to the Atlantic coast for export. The World Bank saw this as a unique opportunity for Chad to climb out of extreme poverty. Before it became involved, the World Bank obtained assurances that the new revenues would be used to lift the population out of deprivation.

On 6 January 2006, the World Bank announced that it would withhold new loans and grants to the Government of Chad and suspend disbursement of International Development Association (IDA) funds allocated to the country. The value of funds suspended was approximately $124 million. This action followed passage of amendments to the country's Petroleum Revenue Management Law by the National Assembly. These changes substantially weakened programmes to improve the lives of poor people, which the World Bank had been supporting.

The World Bank offered to assist the Government to address their financial difficulties by analysing and helping to address them, including how public finances had been managed. It had also proposed a review of how the Petroleum Revenue Management Law had been implemented to identify which, if any, amendments to the law might be warranted. The World Bank has remained open to dialogue with the Government on the best ways to address their current financial crisis while protecting poverty reduction programmes. On 26 April, the World Bank and the Government announced that they had completed a third round of discussions and reached an interim agreement. Based on this, the World Bank has agreed to resume some loan disbursements for education, health, community development, HIV/AIDS, agriculture, electricity, water and infrastructure.

The Government of Chad have agreed to pass a 2006 budget law specifying that 70 per cent. of the oil revenues will be used for priority poverty programmes. This allocation excludes security spending, which is to be funded from general revenues. If the Bill does achieve this, as soon as the oil consortium submits payments owed, the World Bank will release one third of the total amount on deposit in the escrow account over each of the next three months, with the understanding that the World Bank and the Chad Government will work on a further, more permanent agreement during that period. The Chad authorities have also agreed to parallel actions to strengthen the monitoring, transparency and accountability of direct and indirect oil revenues and development aid.

We welcome the steps which the Government of Chad have taken to restore the confidence of the international donor community. While a final agreement is still to be reached, we welcome the Government's efforts to address the issues. We believe the steps agreed provide a way forward to ensure that the people of Chad see the benefits of the aid and oil revenue their country receives.

I have not discussed with the US Administration its offer of mediation in this dispute.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development (1) what assessment his Department has made of the oil revenue management measures promoted by the World Bank in Africa; and if he will make a statement; [66638]

(2) what assessment his Department has made of the oil fund established by the government of East Timor and the oil revenue management measures promoted by the World Bank in Africa; and if he will make a statement. [66639]

Mr. Thomas: On 12 January 2006 in Sydney, Australia and East Timor concluded the terms of a "Treaty on Certain Maritime Arrangements in the Timor Sea" (CMATS Treaty) which provides for an interim agreement to allow exploitation of the Greater Sunrise gas reservoirs to proceed while suspending maritime boundary claims for 50 years and maintaining the current treaty arrangements in place. Under this creative solution, Australia has agreed to share equally (50:50) the upstream revenues from the resource.

DFID has not made a direct assessment of the impact of the discovery of oil on poverty reduction in East Timor, apart from noting that once the Greater Sunrise project proceeds, it could result in transfers of revenue to East Timor of as much as US$4 billion over the life of the project. The revenue will be paid to East Timor's Petroleum Fund, the balance of which is already around $330 million derived from the 90 per cent. share of production East Timor receives from the Joint Petroleum Development Area (JPDA). The exact benefit to East Timor will depend on the economics of the project but we hope that it will assist in securing East Timor's development and economic stability.

From the outset the Government of East Timor has pursued a rigorous approach to transparency with revenues and contracts in the public domain. The Government have conducted thorough public consultations on several initiatives on transparency and management of oil and gas revenues. Prime Minister Mari Alkatiri stated Timor's official support for the Extractive Industries Transparency Initiative (EITI) at the Lancaster House conference in June 2003. He also set out a policy to ensure transparency. We encourage this approach which will help promote poverty reduction along with good governance and transparency.

Within Africa, DFID has assessed the oil revenue management measures promoted by the World Bank in Chad and supports the Bank's efforts to ensure that these revenues are used to improve the lives of poor people.

The World Bank has also promoted the adoption of the EITI in a number of resource rich African countries. We encourage this since effective implementation of the Initiative will help promote poverty reduction along with good governance and transparency.

CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

Consultants

Keith Vaz: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs pursuant to the answer of 28 March 2006, Official Report, column 873W, on consultancy fees, what each of the consultants were used to accomplish; and how much was paid in fees to each organisation. [64078]

Ms Harman: My Department used consultants during 2004–05 to support its programme of modernisation and change, to increase efficiency, and to provide better customer service and value for money for the taxpayer. Information on what each of the consultants was used to accomplish is not held centrally, and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

A list of the consultancy companies and individuals, and the fees paid to each of them, is as follows.

Legal Aid

Mrs. James: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what progress is being made in reducing claimant legal aid fraud; and if she will make a statement. [65079]

Ms Harman: The Legal Services Commission (LSC) has powers to investigate where doubts arise about whether a funded client is financially eligible for civil legal aid. The LSC takes action to deal with people who abuse the system, including referring them to the police where appropriate.

In order to improve the verification of means of applicants for civil legal aid, the LSC set up the Special Investigations Unit (SIU) in 1996. This unit considers cases of apparently wealthy individuals applying for civil legal aid. Following the successful introduction of the SIU for civil legal aid, its role was extended to cover Criminal Legal Aid from 1998.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Business Rates

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister (1) what the average business rates liability of a small firm in England was (a) before and (b) after claiming small business rate relief in 2005–06; [66261]

(2) how many and what proportion of eligible small firms claimed small business rate relief in England in 2005–06. [66262]

Mr. Woolas: This information is not held centrally, and can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

City Regions

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what plans he has to introduce city regions in (a) England and (b) the West Midlands. [66275]

Mr. Woolas: Ministers visited the eight English 'Core Cities', in a series of city summits during autumn of last year. Following these summits, the 'Core Cities', in partnership with surrounding areas, have been developing business cases which set out their strategic vision, and their case for change to enable improved economic performance and social cohesion. Representatives from the West Midlands metropolitan authorities and their partners met with the Minister of Communities and Local Government (Mr. Miliband) on 23 March to discuss their business case.

These discussions will inform the forthcoming Local Government White Paper.

Council Tax

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many written representations he has received since January protesting about council tax; and if he will make a statement. [66444]

Mr. Woolas: Between 1 January and 25 April 2006 the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister received approximately 3,260 written representations about council tax. The Office has also received just over 3,000 copies of council tax bills without a separate written representation.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what plans the Government has to provide assistance specific to pensioners with their council tax bills in 2006–07. [66327]

Mr. Woolas: Council tax benefit is available to pensioners on a low income. When pension credit was introduced in October 2003, the Government invested almost £½ billion a year in increasing the amounts on which housing benefit and council tax benefit are based: this meant that around 2 million pensioner households became either entitled to council tax benefit for the first time or qualified for more help. The Government has also announced an extension of winter fuel payments for the remainder of this Parliament at a cost of around £700 million a year.

Departmental Staff

David Simpson: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many people in his Department have been (a) disciplined and (b) dismissed for (i) inappropriate use of the internet while at work and (ii) using work telephones to access premium rate numbers in each of the last five years. [68003]

Jim Fitzpatrick: None

Departmental Staff Handbook

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will place in the Library a copy of his Department's most recent staff handbook. [66328]

Jim Fitzpatrick: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 20 March 2006, Official Report, column 818W to the hon. Member for Meriden (Mrs. Spelman).

Euro

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister when the local authorities Euro preparation group last met. [66306]

Mr. Woolas: A meeting between local authorities and central Government officials to discuss Euro preparations took place on 21 February 2006.

Gypsy and Traveller Sites

Andrew George: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister under what legislation he published the Planning Circular 01/06: Planning for Gypsy and Traveller Caravan Sites. [66075]

Yvette Cooper: The Government publish planning policy in various forms such as through circulars, planning policy statements and policy guidance notes. These documents build on the framework set out in legislation, and provide guidance on different aspects of land use planning and the delivery of sustainable development through the planning system.

Government planning guidance does not require the formal backing of legislation, but it is considered material considerations and must be taken into account when an authority is making a decision on a planning application.

The draft circular was subject to 13 weeks formal consultation in 2005. The circular was issued on 2 February 2006.

Home Working

David Simpson: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many people in his Department have been enabled to work from home in each of the last three years; and if he will make a statement. [68004]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister (ODPM) does not collect such data. Staff in ODPM may work at home subject to the agreement of their line manager and the business needs of ODPM. In making such arrangements full account is given to the rights of staff with children under the age of six under the Employment Act 2002 to request a flexible working pattern. ODPM supports such arrangements which assist staff maintain a satisfactory work/life balance, subject to there being a business justification for the arrangement.

Housing

Helen Southworth: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will take steps to increase the number of shared equity homes in (a) Warrington and (b) other housing hot spots in the North West. [67848]

Yvette Cooper: The Government are committed to tackling affordability. It has extended its range of housing options to include Homebuy, an equity sharing scheme, which will extend the opportunity for home ownership to 100,000 households by 2010. In support of this, HomeBuy agents will provide a 'one stop shop' and gateway to low cost home ownership opportunities in 37 Zones across the nine English regions. Already in the North West £9.7 million has been allocated to the Open Market Homebuy scheme, delivering 340 units.

Furthermore, the Government have increased investment of £970 million through the Housing Corporation's Affordable Housing programme to deliver 35,000 homes by registering social landlords over the next two years. In the North West £201 million has been allocated for the Affordable Housing programme for 2006–08 delivering 2,248 affordable homes for rent, 1,573 low cost home ownership options with an additional 205 improved homes for rent. In Warrington £1.7 million over the same period has been allocated, providing 40 units and affordable housing in one of the most deprived wards.

The scale of the task is not underestimated and that is why the Chancellor announced the establishment of a joint Office of the Deputy Prime Minister/Treasury Shared Equity Task Force in the Budget. The taskforce, led by myself and my hon. Friend financial secretary John Healey, will consider the case for Government intervention in the housing market to assist 'intermediate' households into home ownership using shared equity products. The taskforce will report at the end of the year, to inform comprehensive Spending Review decisions in summer 2007.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the Government's definition is of affordable housing. [66266]

Yvette Cooper: Current planning policies, in Planning Policy Guidance Note 3: "Housing" (PPG3) and Department for Environment, Transport and the Regions Circular 6/98 "Planning and Affordable Housing", require a local planning authority to define what it considers to be affordable in its areas in terms of the relationship between local income levels and house prices or rents for different types of households.

Draft Planning Policy Statement 3 (PPS3): "Housing" (PPS3), published for consultation in December 2005 and which will, once finalised, replace PPG3 and Circular 6/98, has a new draft definition of affordable housing:

> "Non-market housing provided to those whose needs are not met by the market, for example homeless people and key workers. It can include social rented housing and intermediate housing. Affordable housing should:
> Meet the needs of eligible households, including availability at low enough cost for them to afford, determined with regard to local incomes and local house prices.
> Include provision for the home to remain at an affordable price for future eligible households, or, if a home ceases to be affordable, any subsidy should generally be recycled for additional affordable housing provision."

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister which councils have stock transferred (a) some and (b) all of their council housing; and when they did so. [66437]

Yvette Cooper: A table containing the information requested has been placed in the Library of the House.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how much additional revenue has been raised by local authorities using their discretionary power to abolish the council tax discount on second homes since 2004. [66285]

Mr. Woolas: The amount of additional revenue raised by local authorities using their discretionary powers to reduce the council tax discounts on second homes was:

£84 million in 2004/05; and

£92 million in 2005/06.

These figures are estimates based on information reported by local authorities on the CTB1 and CTB1(S) forms.

Local Government Strikes

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many man-hours have been lost as a result of recent industrial action in connection with the Local Government Pension Scheme. [66436]

Mr. Woolas: This information is not held centrally, and can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Ministerial Cars (Fuel Costs)

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the fuel costs were for ministerial cars used by his Department in each of the last five years. [67022]

Jim Fitzpatrick: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Minister of State for Transport (Dr. Ladyman) on 27 April 2006, Official Report, column 1226W.

Muscular Dystrophy

Anne Milton: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what Government grants are available to people with muscular dystrophy to adapt their home environment to their needs. [46667]

Yvette Cooper: Social service authorities have a duty under the Chronically Sick and Disabled Persons Act 1970 to arrange for a disabled person, practical assistance in the home, and any works of adaptation or the provision of additional facilities designed to secure greater safety, comfort or convenience. The social services have a duty to ensure that any assistance required by the disabled person is secured and they may charge for any services they provide.

One principal way in which such assistance is available is through the Disabled Facilities Grant (DFG) programme which is the responsibility of my Department and administered by local housing authorities. This is a mandatory entitlement for eligible disabled people in all housing tenures which provides financial assistance up to a maximum of £25,000 per application for adaptations to make the home safe and to secure access for the disabled person to all the main facilities in the home. This grant is also means-tested.

Community care equipment which a disabled person has been assessed to need by social services and which costs less than £1,000 is provided free-of-charge.

New Deal

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what arrangements there are for governance and scrutiny of the new deal for communities programmes. [66303]

Mr. Woolas: New deal for communities (NDC) partnerships are governed by boards comprising elected resident members and representatives of delivery partners such as the council, providers of local services (e.g. health, housing, community safety, education), and the commercial sector and are therefore directly accountable to the community.

The NDC partnerships operate within a legal framework involving their accountable body (usually the local authority) and the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister (largely through the Government office). Grant is paid to the accountable body pursuant to a funding agreement between the accountable body and ODPM.

The NDC partnerships work with their accountable body to develop delivery plans which are approved by Government offices on behalf of Ministers. The accountable body is responsible for ensuring that they and the NDC comply with the terms and conditions of NDC grant including financial reporting requirements. The Government office monitors the performance of the accountable body (AB) and ensures that it properly monitors the partnership.

Guidance on governance issues are set out in the NDC programme notes on the website at www.neighbourhood.gov.uk (particularly programme notes 20 on codes of conduct and 27 on board effectiveness).

Pathfinder Programme

Mr. Rogerson: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what average amount has been spent on household improvements in each pathfinder scheme area; and how many houses have been subject to improvements in each area. [64433]

Yvette Cooper: Provisional figures from pathfinders to end March 2006 are in the following table.

Pathfinder	HMRF spent on household improvements (£ million)	Number of properties improved	HMR spend by property (£000)
Birmingham Sandwell	11.3	6,125	1.8

This is in addition to the decent homes programme which is also refurbishing social housing in many areas.

Planning

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Meriden of 16 February 2006, Official Report, column 2248W, on planning, when he will place a copy of the publication referred to in the Library. [66319]

Yvette Cooper: My officials have confirmed with the Library that a copy of the 1992 version of Planning Policy Guidance Note 3 : "Housing" referred to in my earlier answer has now been registered and is available for viewing in the Library of the House.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what plans his Department has to revise Planning Policy Guidance Note 13. [66438]

Yvette Cooper: It is not proposed to replace PPG13 at present.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister whether Planning Policy Statement 3 imposes any obligation on local authorities to sell their own land to meet housing demand; and if he will make a statement. [66339]

Yvette Cooper: Draft Planning Policy Statement 3: "Housing" (PPS3), published for consultation in December last year, does not impose any obligation on local authorities to sell their own land to meet housing demand.

Mr. Soames: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will publish a new planning policy statement on water. [64447]

Yvette Cooper: Water issues are already covered extensively in existing planning guidance. Over 300 separate references to water ensure that planning authorities take account of the availability of water in their planning decisions, making more efficient use and re-use of water to minimise the need for new resources and avoid placing additional demands on the environment. We have no plans to publish a separate planning policy statement on water.

CABINET OFFICE

Correspondence

Sir Gerald Kaufman: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster when he will answer the letter to him dated 14 March from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton with regard to Mr. N. McHugh. [67485]

Mr. Jim Murphy: I apologise for the delay in replying to the right hon. Member. A reply was sent on 3 May.

Legislative Programme Committee

Mr. Amess: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make a statement on the work of the Legislative Programme Committee. [67164]

Mr. Jim Murphy: Information relating to internal meetings, discussion and advice and the proceedings of Cabinet and Cabinet committees is generally not disclosed as to do so could harm the frankness and candour of internal discussion.

Details of the membership and terms of reference of the Committee are available in the Library and on the Cabinet Office website.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH OFFICE

International Arms Trade Treaty

Mr. Crausby: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he has taken to promote the Arms Trade treaty amongst the UK defence industry. [68075]

Dr. Howells: In May 2005 defence industry representatives attended an inaugural meeting organised by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office in London to discuss the concept of an International Arms Trade treaty. Since then we have engaged with industry groups as part of our regular briefings on export control issues, and in meetings to specifically discuss work towards a treaty. We will continue to do so as this initiative progresses. The industry remains supportive, judging that a treaty will create a more level playing field for export control standards.

Iraq (Oil Policy)

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether Government officials consulted the private sector during discussions on Iraqi oil policy (a) between March and December 2003 and (b) after December 2003; and if he will make a statement. [66823]

Dr. Howells: Yes. There have been frequent contacts between Government officials and private sector staff in the period since March 2003. The Government of Iraq has been fully responsible for policy on the development of its oil sector since it assumed sovereignty in June 2004. All decisions on the future of the Iraqi oil sector will be taken by the elected Government of Iraq.

The UK is keen to play a role supporting the Iraqi Government as it moves forward with oil sector development. To do this we need to consult a wide range of views in order to understand the workings of the sector and the challenges it faces. To this end, we maintain contact with a range of stakeholders in order to form a UK Government view. These include non-governmental organisations, parliamentary groups, technical and constitutional experts as well as private sector groups.

Israel

Sir Gerald Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the answer of 3 March 2006, Official Report, column 10027W, on Israel, what further representation he has made to the Israeli government with regard to their failure to respond to his original representations of November 2005 in respect of the anti-semitic harassment of the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton by an Israeli official at Tel-Aviv airport. [67493]

Dr. Howells: The Israeli authorities have now completed their investigation. My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary expects to receive a reply addressing my right hon. Friend's concerns within two weeks. On receipt of the reply, my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary will write to my right hon. Friend.

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what interventions he has made with the Israeli government regarding the case of James Miller. [67867]

Dr. Howells: Between May 2003 and March 2006 my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary raised the case of James Miller with the Israeli authorities on 13 occasions. Most recently, he wrote to the Israeli Foreign Minister on 1 March 2006 expressing the Government's disappointment that no one has been held accountable for James Miller's killing and supporting the family's request for compensation. The Foreign and Commonwealth Office has also made an additional 27 interventions on this case with the Israelis, at ministerial and official level.

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he plans to participate in further discussions with the Israeli government regarding the deaths of James Miller and Tom Hurdnall and the coroner's verdict on both cases. [67868]

Dr. Howells: The St. Pancras Coroner has formally written to my noble and learned Friend the Attorney-General and my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary about these two cases. The Attorney-General will be meeting both the Miller family and the Hurndall family later this week. My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary will also meet both families this month. We will decide on the next steps once the Attorney-General has assessed the Coroner's findings and Ministers have discussed the cases with the families.

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he next plans to meet the families of James Miller and Tom Hurdnall. [67869]

Dr. Howells: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary will be meeting the family of Tom Hurndall on 8 May and the family of James Miller on 11 May.

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether the Government (a) funds and (b) supports co-existence projects in (i) Israel and (ii) the West Bank; and if he will make a statement. [65725]

Mr. Straw: My department supports co-existence projects in Israel and the West Bank. In the 2005–06 financial year funding from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and the Global Conflict Prevention Pool allocated approximately £174,000 to promote peaceful co-existence between the Palestinians and the Israelis. This supported projects such as the Executive Action Team water project, which works with Israeli, Palestinian and Jordanian officials to manage shared water resources to limit pollution.

Kyoto Protocol

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the application to overseas territories of the Kyoto protocol and the clean development mechanism, with particular reference to the possible benefits accruable from projects that reduce carbon emissions; to what extent carbon reductions associated with a project in an overseas territory would be eligible for carbon credits; and who would receive such credits. [66716]

Dr. Howells: The United Kingdom ratified the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change in 1993. The United Kingdom ratified the Kyoto protocol in 2002. It is open to the Government to extend the ratification of the convention and the protocol to include overseas territories. In practice the Government would do so only at the request and with the consent of the territory concerned.

The Kyoto protocol's flexible mechanisms, international emissions trading, clean development mechanism (CDM) and joint implementation (JI), would be available to an overseas territory (OT) that had the UK's instrument of ratification extended to it and would therefore become part of an Annex I Party. As part of an Annex I Party it cannot host CDM projects and therefore be eligible for carbon credits since these are only available to non Annex I Parties, generally developing countries. However, it may invest in non Annex I countries and purchase credits that it could sell on the international carbon market.

There is also the possibility that an OT could take part in JI projects between two Annex I Parties, but the detailed arrangements to provide for this would peed to be agreed between the Government and relevant OT.

Palestine

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the status is of the EU Police Mission in the Palestinian territories following the January 2006 Palestinian legislative elections. [65727]

Mr. Straw: The EU is currently reviewing the status of the EU Police Mission in the occupied territories and I will write to the right hon. Member once the results of the review are known, and place a copy in the Library of the House.

Spain

Mark Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions (a) he and (b) diplomatic and consular staff in Spain have had with Spanish authorities on child custody cases in Spain where British parents experience restrictions on legitimate access. [67901]

Dr. Howells: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) provides appropriate consular assistance, when requested, to British nationals involved in disputes over child residence and contact, in conjunction with the Department for Constitutional Affairs (DCA) as the central authority handling cases brought under the 1980 Hague Convention on the Civil Aspects of International Child Abduction. A delegation of FCO and DCA officials visited the Spanish Ministry of Justice on 26 March 2005 as part of ongoing discussions on how to resolve residence and contact disputes. These issues were raised by my noble and learned Friend the Lord Chancellor at a recent meeting with the Spanish Justice Minister. My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary and FCO Ministers have had no recent discussions with the Spanish authorities on such issues.

Mark Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many British parents have contacted his Department since 2003 regarding assistance with cases relating to access to children involved in custody disputes in the Spanish courts. [67902]

Dr. Howells: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office's Child Abduction Section, which was established in 2003, has records of 52 cases concerning child residence or contact disputes in Spain.

UK-South East Europe Forum

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much funding the UK-South East Europe Forum has received (a) from (i) central and (ii) regional government and (b) via the British Council in each year since its creation. [66310]

Mr. Straw: The British Council provided £355,000 to the Forum in 2004–05 and £360,000 to the Forum in 2005–06. All of this funding came from the British Council's grant in aid, which it receives from central government. No further funding was received from either central or regional government.

Visas

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) on what basis the UK embassy in Amman, Jordan, granted Iraqi citizen Mr Nabeel Sami Fathallah (HO Ref 10776940) a UK visa within 24-hours of his application; and if he will make a statement; [67351]

(2) what background checks were carried out following the receipt of a visa application from Iraqi citizen Mr Nabeel Sami Fathallah (HO Ref 10776940) at the UK Amman embassy; whether inquiries were made about (a) his links with the former regime in Iraq, (b) his financial position, (c) the reasons he was denied a visa by other countries and (d) the refusal of protection by the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees; and if he will make a statement. [67395]

Dr. Howells: In accordance with Exemption 5 of Part 2 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government information, I regret that I cannot provide details of any individual entry clearance case in a public forum.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the scale of charges for visas to enter to the UK is at (a) Amman, Jordan and (b) other UK embassies in the Middle East. [67352]

Dr. Howells: UKvisas is mandated by HM Treasury guidelines to recover its costs without burdening the UK taxpayer. Therefore, the applicant must meet the full cost of processing an entry clearance application. The visa application fee for each category of entry clearance is the same, wherever in the world an individual applies. The application fee is payable in local currency at the consular rate of exchange, which is within 10 per cent. of the commercial rate. The visa application fees in the Middle East, in local currencies and Pound Sterling, are as follows.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs in what circumstances a UK visa section may issue a visa within 24 hours of application in (a) Amman, Jordan and (b) other UK embassies. [67354]

Dr. Howells: UKvisas' target, under its public service agreement, is for 90 per cent. of straightforward non-settlement visa applications to be processed and available for return to the applicant within 24 hours from the date of receipt by a visa section of the application and all supporting documents including the fee. This target is currently being met, both in Amman and worldwide.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many visas to the UK have been issued in Amman, Jordan, to non-Jordanian residents in each of the last five years; and from which countries those issued with visas were from. [67358]

Dr. Howells: The figures on the numbers of visas to the UK issued in Amman to non-Jordanian residents by nationality in each of the last five years is as follows:

DEFENCE

Afghanistan

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence under what circumstances political clearance is required by UK forces in Afghanistan before engaging in military action. [67537]

John Reid: The Chief of Defence Staffs Directive, along with secondary directives and the Rules of Engagement, provide the political guidance and clearance under which UK forces operate in Afghanistan.

Clearance for a particular course of military action is delegated down to the lowest appropriate level.

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what evidence he has of co-operation between Afghans engaged in the opium trade and insurgents. [67538]

John Reid: There are reports that Taliban have been encouraging Afghan farmers to grow opium poppy and offering protection to farmers against eradication of their poppy crop. I am not however aware of conclusive evidence of a direct link between drug traffickers and the Taliban leadership in Afghanistan, although both benefit from instability.

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether UK armed forces in Afghanistan have authority to seek to prevent insurgents and terrorists crossing the Pakistan-Afghanistan border. [67540]

John Reid: Responsibility for the security of national borders rests with the Pakistan and Afghanistan security forces respectively. I am withholding details of authorised support by UK forces for border operations as it would risk operational security and could endanger the lives of our forces.

Children's Services

Mr. Kemp: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many nursery and creche places are provided for people working in his Department; what charges are made for the provision of such services; and what other facilities are provided for the children of employees of his Department. [67370]

Mr. Touhig: The Ministry of Defence provides the following childcare support for its civilian and military employees:

46 work place nurseries offering circa 1,750 full day care places for children aged three months to five years.

36 creches (benefiting 700 children) providing occasional care and 70 pre-schools (benefiting over 2,000 children) providing education on a sessional basis, primarily for Service families.

14 wrap-around care schemes for five to 12 year olds (benefiting 350 children) providing after school care to match the working day.

15 holiday play schemes providing full day care for five to 12 year olds during school holidays (three are shared with other government departments) benefiting 550 children.

Four salary plus childcare voucher schemes for civilian employees at the Army Pay Centre Glasgow, Defence Science Technology Laboratory (DSTL) staff, Warship Support Agency Rosyth and Defence Bills Agency Liverpool. The schemes benefit circa 240 parents.

Within MOD responsibility for childcare is delegated to the main budget areas. Initial funding can be from a variety of sources:

the central budget allocation;

MOD's grant from the Civil Service Modernisation fund;

local authorities;

benevolent funds or raised by the parents themselves.

The business case then determines how much direct or indirect subsidy the MOD gives.

MOD nurseries are usually run by contractors, as commercial enterprises. Charges vary and competitive rates occur where indirect subsidies in the form of a peppercorn rent are provided. In addition about 10 per cent. of the nurseries offer direct subsidies, which can reduce the fees by around a third. Some play schemes also receive direct subsidies.

MOD's four voucher schemes provide employees with varying amounts of support, ranging from a flat rate £50 for after school care and £75 for pre-school care per month in Liverpool to around a third of actual costs on a sliding scale for the registered care of their choice in Glasgow, Rosyth and for DSTL staff. These schemes offer the advantage of supporting parents to make their own choices about where and what type of childcare support they want for their child. In total the four voucher schemes cost the Department circa £30,000 a month.

No further information regarding the charges to parents and MOD's contribution towards the costs of childcare schemes is held centrally and it could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Iraq

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether his Department pays a contract premium to civilian people who face daily risks when trying to deliver the reconstruction effort in troubled parts of Iraq; and if he will make a statement. [66767]

John Reid: All defence contracts in Multi-National Division (South East) are subject to a rigorous application procedure to ensure that we obtain the best value for money. The decision on whether or not to pay contract workers a risk premium is entirely a matter for the individual companies concerned.

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence under what conditions civilian personnel serving in Iraq are eligible for the Operation Telic medal. [67775]

Mr. Touhig: The Iraq medal is a Ministry of Defence medal. Civilian personnel serving in Iraq are eligible to receive the medal, provided they are sent to Iraq by the Ministry of Defence; work in direct support of the military, and meet the stipulated eligibility criteria.

Rules of Engagement

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish the Rules of Engagement or equivalent instructions for troops engaged in (a) counter-insurgency, (b) counter-terrorism and (c) peacekeeping operations indicating the (i) similarities and (ii) differences between them. [67536]

John Reid: Rules of Engagement (ROE) govern the use of force by UK forces. ROE are provided for all operations and tailored to the specific task and operational environment to ensure a proportionate response to events. It is a long-standing policy that we do not release the details of ROE. To do so could hand an advantage to opponents and prejudice the safety and capabilities of UK forces.

Troop Deployment (Iraq/Afghanistan)

Mr. Crausby: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many UK troops in (a) Iraq and (b) Afghanistan have been (i) injured in action, (ii) not in action and (iii) removed from active duty as a result of illness or disease. [66281]

John Reid: The best centrally available records for TELIC casualty statistics are published on the Ministry of Defence website:

http://www.mod.uk/DefenceInternet/FactSheets/OperationsInIraqBritishCasualties.htm.

Work is underway to collate casualty statistics for Afghanistan. As my right hon. Friend, the Minister of State for the Armed Forces, made clear in his answer of the 27 February 2006, we have undertaken to provide casualty statistics for Afghanistan from 1 January 2006 to the same conventions as Iraq. I will write to my right hon. Friend when it is complete, and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Antisocial Behaviour

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people in Northern Ireland were found to be in breach of antisocial behaviour orders during 2005. [68103]

Mr. Hanson: The relevant authorities have notified the Northern Ireland Office of two persons being found in breach of their antisocial behaviour orders during 2005.

Community Differentials

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether any taskforces have been established to tackle disadvantage in (a) Protestant and (b) Catholic working class areas in the last five years. [66384]

Mr. Hanson: The information is as follows.

The Taskforce to Address the Needs of Protestant Working Class Communities was established in March 2004 and included senior civil servants from all Government Departments. The report of the taskforce was published on 4 April 2006.

The North Belfast Community Action Project was established in December 2001 to report on the social, economic and community problems in Protestant and Catholic communities in North Belfast. A report of the project's findings was published in May 2002.

The West Belfast and Greater Shankill Task Forces were established in May 2001 to identify practical actions which could be taken quickly to improve employment prospects and reduce poverty in the respective task force areas.

Departmental Contracts

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland which contracts let by his Department in each of the last three years ran beyond their original completion date; what the estimated additional cost was of the delay in each case; what company each overdue contract was with; what financial penalties were included in each contract; which financial penalties were enforced; and what the total cost was of financial penalties enforced, (a) in total and (b) broken down by (i) contract and (ii) company. [66461]

Mr. Hain: The information requested is provided in the following table:

	Contract title	Company	Financial penalties included in contract	Financial penalties enforced	Estimated additional cost (£)
2003–04	Provision of Consultancy Services on pensions provision for police lateral entry scheme	Deloitte Total Reward and Benefits Ltd.	None	None	1,692
2004–05	Independent element of the operational review of the section 75 equality duty	Eithne McLaughlin and Neil Faris	None	None	14,000
2005–06	—	—	—	—	—
Total					15,692

Departmental Websites

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list (a) the websites operated by his Department and (b) the reports placed on the internet in March 2006, indicating in each case whether paper copies were also made available. [65203]

Mr. Hain: The Department operates three websites, the Northern Ireland Office (NIO) website, the Organised Crime Task Force (OCTF) website, and the Criminal Justice Services NI (CJSNI) website.

The Ninth Report of the Independent Monitoring Commission was published on the 8 March 2006 and placed on the NIO website, along with the "Police and Criminal Evidence (Northern Ireland) Order 1989—Draft Codes of Practice 2006 Edition". Paper copies of both of these documents are also available.

The "Public attitudes to crime and recovered assets in Northern Ireland", was published on the OCTF website on 7 March 2006. While paper copies of this report were not routinely issued a hard copy would be provided on request.

Domestic Rates

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what period of time will be allowed for domestic ratepayers who wish to appeal against the new rating valuation of their homes in Northern Ireland; [66988]

(2) what appeal mechanism is being put in place for domestic ratepayers wishing to challenge the new rating valuation of their homes. [66989]

Angela E. Smith: The Valuation and Lands Agency (VLA) are currently putting procedures in place in an attempt to be as helpful as possible to all ratepayers and will form part of a full-scale exercise in openness, transparency and accessibility.

The capital values will be published on a phased basis during July and August this year and each individual ratepayer will receive a detailed notification of his or her valuation assessment. This will provide householders with an unprecedented period of around eight months advance notice of their values, before billing commences in April 2007.

At the same time, all of the capital values will be published on the VLA website, together with supporting information such as size and type of property. This will enable householders to compare their value with others in their area. A free-phone service will also be available to deal with initial inquiries.

During this eight-month period, a ratepayer may initiate an 'Informal Review' with the district valuer. This is a new process being set up by VLA, providing ratepayers with an opportunity to have their assessment reviewed, and changed as necessary, before rate bills are issued in April 2007.

The statutory appeals process will come into effect in April 2007 and this will comprise:

Review by the district valuer (those ratepayers who have availed of the "Informal Review" in the previous year will be given the option of fast tracking to the next stage).

Further review by the Commissioner of Valuation for Northern Ireland.

Appeal to the Northern Ireland Valuation Tribunal (NIVT), which is a new tribunal to be set up.

Further limited appeal to the Lands Tribunal for Northern Ireland.

Recourse to the Court of Appeal on point of law only.

Domestic Violence

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people were successfully prosecuted in domestic violence cases in crimes investigated by the Police Service of Northern Ireland in each of the last five years, (a) in total and (b) by District Command Unit; and how many victims of such incidents were (i) women in a heterosexual relationship, (ii) men in a heterosexual relationship, (iii) women in a same sex relationship, (iv) men in a same sex relationship and (v) children. [66460]

Mr. Hanson: Current sources of prosecutions and convictions data do not include the necessary background information to facilitate the identification of offences relating specifically to domestic violence. The PSNI have continued to improve the methods by which domestic incidents and crimes are recorded; clearance rates by PSNI District Command Unit for recorded crimes with a domestic motivation were published for the first time in June 2005 in the PSNI Statistical Report 2004–05. The report is available on the PSNI website address www.psni.police.uk In 2004–05 there was a total of 8,508 recorded crimes with a domestic motivation; the clearance rate was 72.9 per cent.

Civil measures can also be taken in relation to domestic violence cases, that is, an individual can obtain a non-molestation or occupancy order. These are protective orders and not offences in their own right; however breach of such an order is an offence though it is again not possible in such instances to identify solely those which relate to domestic violence. In 2003, the most up-to-date information currently available, there were 239 persons convicted for breach of a non-molestation order and 39 convicted for breach of an occupation order.

Free School Meals

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many and what percentage of children in each (a) grammar school and (b) other secondary school in Northern Ireland receive free school meals. [67815]

Angela E. Smith: The requested information has been placed in the Library.

Government Car Fleet

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what progress is being made on increasing the use of environmentally friendly vehicles used by Government Ministers and senior civil servants in Northern Ireland. [66993]

Angela E. Smith: In line with the greening Government and Sustainable Development initiatives, the Department of Finance and Personnel's Central Transport Unit (CTU), is replacing all its ministerial and senior civil servant vehicles with fuel efficient modern diesel models or hybrid vehicles as and when they are due for replacement.

The Department currently has two hybrid vehicles (petrol/electric) which it uses for short haul journeys.

Greater Shankill/West Belfast Task Forces

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the implementation of the recommendations of the (a) Greater Shankill and (b) West Belfast Task Forces. [66406]

Angela E. Smith: The West Belfast and Greater Shankill (WBGS) Task Forces produced a joint report in February 2002 detailing over 150 recommendations covering a wide range of issues. Early progress was made in a number of areas including work by Invest NI to regenerate the Forth River (former Mackies) complex. The Department for Employment and Learning also piloted the Targeted Initiatives programme in the task force areas, working closely with a local stakeholders' forum, the Employment Services Board.

In 2004, through the Integrated Development Fund (IDF), £21.7 million was allocated, subject to positive economic appraisal, to support 17 projects aimed specifically at addressing the social and economic problems in the task force areas. The economic and social environment has changed since the Task Force Report was published and, apart from the IDF initiative, there have also been a number of other policy initiatives, not least the Neighbourhood Renewal Strategy, which will have had a positive impact on the task force areas.

Through its Belfast Regeneration office the Department for Social Development continues to work with all sectors associated with the task force areas to tackle disadvantage in a strategic and integrated way primarily through Neighbourhood Renewal and, more recently the Renewing Communities initiative with the aim of achieving tangible outcomes in terms of community, economic social and physical renewal. The Department also continues to deliver a variety of other programmes which, while not specific to the task force area do nevertheless, impact on the Greater West Belfast and Shankill areas.

Housing

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the change in the number of households in Northern Ireland was for the period between March 2005 and February 2006. [67542]

Angela E. Smith: There are no official statistics available to answer this question directly. However, based on the 1991 and 2001 censuses and official population projections produced by the Government Actuary's Department, it is projected that there were 660,900 households in June 2005 and 668,800 households in June 2006—a projected increase over one year of 7,900 households.

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people of (a) Catholic and (b) Protestant community background have been (i) waiting for and (ii) awarded public housing in (A) Northern Ireland, (B) Belfast, (C) Derry, (D) North Belfast, (E) South Belfast, (F) West Belfast and (G) East Belfast in each of the last five years. [66979]

Mr. Hanson: Housing is allocated on the basis of need and not religious affiliation. It is dependent on existing stock becoming available for re-letting and the provision of new build social housing which can vary from area to area due to high demand and low turn over as well as the availability of land. The information is not available in the format or time span requested. However the tables set out the information that is available. This does not include transfers between Northern Ireland Housing Executive properties, nor does it include allocations made by Housing Associations. In respect of the waiting list figures no information is available before the 2001–02 financial year and figures for the 2005–06 year are not yet compiled. In respect of houses that have been awarded, information is only available from the 2003–04 financial year. The figures for the 2005–06 year are not yet compiled. In addition figures for the Belfast area reflect the Housing Executive Districts that approximately cover the four geographic areas of the city.

The information provided should also be considered in the context:

The religious composition of households is based on 'self reported' answers to the question held within the General Housing Application Form. The religion of the applicant is assumed to be the same for all individuals within the household.

The Equality Unit is currently unable to readily identify 'mixed' religion households although we are aware that a number of households currently described as 'Roman Catholic' or 'Protestant' would clearly fall into a 'mixed' category.

The breakdown of the waiting list is a snapshot of applicants for Housing Executive properties on the waiting list on the last day of the month shown.

The Housing Executive does not hold complete records prior to June 2002.

Investment Strategy

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps will be taken in the context of the investment strategy to tackle (a) community and (b) geographic differentials in (i) economic inactivity, (ii) unemployment and (iii) housing allocation. [67212]

Angela E. Smith: Targeting social need, along with equality and promoting good relations, are central to the work of government. This is fully reflected in the process for determining our overall expenditure priorities and allocations through Priorities and Budget, which is consistent with the first three years of the Investment Strategy for Northern Ireland (ISNI) published in December 2005.

In formulating investment priorities during the development of the Strategy, departments gave due consideration to these principles to ensure that opportunities were taken to tackle disadvantage, and to promote equality including in the labour market and in health, education and housing.

As the ISNI is delivered, the opportunities to tackle disadvantage and promote equality will be kept under review as programmes and projects are rolled out. The Investment Strategy itself will be reviewed in parallel with the Comprehensive Spending Review, and in line with the development of the government's approach to tackling poverty and social need.

Literacy Levels

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will collect and collate statistics on literacy levels in Northern Ireland at (a) ward and (b) sub-ward level. [68034]

Angela E. Smith: There are no plans to collect and collate statistics on literacy levels in Northern Ireland at (a) ward and (b) sub-ward level. Measurement of literacy scores involves the administration of specific tests, and estimates of literacy levels in the population have depended on sample surveys (for example, the International Adult Literacy Survey which was carried out in Northern Ireland in 1996). Sample sizes for this type of survey are not large enough to enable the reporting of results at ward level or lower. Proxy information such as the proportion of the population with no qualifications is available at this level of detail for Northern Ireland (e.g. 2001 Census).

Local Government Finance

Mr. Donaldson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what have been the total annual (a) commercial and (b) domestic rates collected in each of the last five years in (i) Lisburn city council, (ii) Antrim borough council, (iii) Newtownabbey borough council and (iv) Carrickfergus borough council. [67618]

Angela E. Smith: The following table shows the rates collected for domestic and non-domestic (commercial) rates for the period 2001–02 to 2004–05. Figures for 2005–06 are not yet available.

Figures used have been extracted from the un-audited summary of rate collection (annex A) contained in the agency's annual report and financial statements.

Planning Area Enforcement Orders

Dr. Alasdair McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many planning enforcements against houses of multiple occupancy have been issued in each planning area in Northern Ireland since the legislation came into force. [66140]

Angela E. Smith: No enforcement notices have been issued in respect of houses in multiple occupation since the new legislation came into force in November 2004. Approximately 30 cases are currently under investigation and may lead to further enforcement action in due course.

Property Tax Reform

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will place in the Library a copy of the paper produced by the head of rating policy division of the Northern Ireland Department for Finance and Personnel, on property tax reform, for the IRRV International Conference in Alicante, Spain on 24 February. [66696]

Angela E. Smith: I can confirm that arrangements have been made to place a copy of the paper in the Library. It may be helpful to note that the paper was published last year on the IRRV website along with other papers presented at that conference.

Public Prosecution Service

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many proposals were received in the public procurement exercise for a Public Prosecution Service Regional Office in Derry. [14489]

Mr. Hain: 11 proposals were received in response to the public procurement exercise for a Public Prosecution Service Regional Office in Londonderry.

Review of Public Administration

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what strategic role the Northern Ireland Housing Executive will have after the implementation of the programme for the Review of Public Administration in 2009. [68253]

Mr. Hanson: The Housing Executive remains Northern Ireland's strategic housing authority and continues to have an extremely important role to play not only in implementing the Government's housing policies, but also in working with a range of agencies as part of the Government's overall efforts to address poverty and social exclusion.

As implementation of the Review Public Administration moves forward and the new local councils are established, the Housing Executive will have to work in close partnership with those councils, particularly as they take on new housing-related functions. It will be appropriate at some stage in the future to consider how the new arrangements are working in practice and in particular how efficiently and effectively the new councils are discharging their housing-related functions. It would only be on foot of such a careful and thorough review, particularly in view of the sensitivities that continue to surround housing issues, that consideration would be given to further housing-related functions transferring to the councils.

For the foreseeable future, therefore the Northern Ireland Housing Executive, as Northern Ireland's strategic housing authority, has an extremely important role to play as a key partner in developing and implementing the Government's policies.

Riding for the Disabled

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what Government support is available for those involved in riding for the disabled activities in Northern Ireland. [67135]

Mr. Hanson: The Riding for the Disabled Associations (RDA) is responsible for the development and promotion of horse riding for people with disabilities in Northern Ireland. The Association offers people with disabilities the opportunity to become involved in riding and carriage driving. It is part of RDA National and is a registered charity.

The Riding for the Disabled Association is a member club of Disability Sports Northern Ireland (DSNI) who receive £125,000 per year in public funding through the Sports Council for Northern Ireland. DSNI provides support to a range of sport's organisations on improving access and opportunities under its Community Access Grants scheme to help improve access to existing facilities provided by voluntary and community organisations.

There is also support available for equestrian sport, including horse riding, for people with disabilities from the Building Sport programme (BSp), which is run by the SCNI lottery unit.

Sewerage Stations

Sammy Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland which sewerage stations in Northern Ireland are not meeting standards set out in EU directives. [67407]

Angela E. Smith: During 2004—the most recent year for which verified compliance data are currently available—the following seven waste water treatment works did not meet the requirements of the Urban Waste Water Treatment Directive (UWWTD) as they did not have secondary treatment:

Bangor (Briggs Rocks)
Carrickfergus
Culmore
Donaghadee
Larne (Sandy Bay)
Newtownabbey
Portrush

In addition the 13 works below failed to meet either the effluent quality standards or the monitoring requirements of the UWWTD:

Armagh
Ballyclare
Ballymena
Ballymoney (Glenstall)
Ballynacor
Banbridge
Bullays Hill
Coleraine
Cookstown
Magherafelt
Moygashel
Omagh Tandragee

Initial assessment of 2005 data indicates an improvement in compliance compared with 2004.

Over the three year period to 2007–08 some £290 million is being invested in upgrading WWTWs to ensure compliance with EC Directive standards. Since the compliance assessment of 2004, the Water Service Capital Works Programme has delivered new WWTWs at Culmore, Omagh, Cookstown and Ballyclare, all of which are now capable of producing UWWTD quality effluent. The new works at Larne was completed in early 2006 and, in addition, Carrickfergus and Newtownabbey are scheduled for completion in mid-2006.

In addition work has commenced on the new North Coast WWTW to resolve compliance requirements at Portrush, Portstewart and Coleraine. In addition, Water Service is pursuing the use of Public Private Partnership investment to complement conventionally funded programmes. Initial PPP programmes for wastewater and sludge treatment, currently estimated at some £122 million, are being taken forward for detailed planning and procurement.

Social Economy Companies

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will collect and collate information on the distribution of social economy companies at ward level in Northern Ireland. [67822]

Angela E. Smith: There are no plans to collect and collate information on the distribution of social economy companies at ward level. DETI, as the Department with lead responsibility for developing a more integrated approach to the sector, plans to undertake and publish the results, at NI level, of the first biennial survey of social economy enterprises in NI in 2006–07.

Special Educational Needs

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what percentage of children in each (a) ward, (b) county and (c) constituency in Northern Ireland (i) have special educational needs and (ii) are statemented. [68036]

Angela E. Smith: Information in relation to statemented pupils has been provided to the hon. Member on 6 March 2006, Official Report, column 1129W.

Information on pupils with special educational needs at primary, special and nursery schools in Northern Ireland is not available at ward level. Analysis based on the location of schools is not available in respect of counties, but is provided in the following tables for Education and Library Board areas and constituencies. The distribution of pupils with special educational needs pupils is affected by the location of special schools and special units attached to mainstream schools.

Percentage of pupils with special educational needs (SEN) in Northern Ireland, by Education and Library Board area, 2005–06

Education and Library Board	Percentage of pupils with SEN

Percentage of pupils with special educational needs (SEN) in Northern Ireland, by parliamentary constituency, 2005–06

Parliamentary constituency	Percentage of pupils with SEN
South Antrim	13.1
South Down	16.5
Strangford	18.6
Upper Bann	14.0
West Tyrone	17.2
Total	16.1

Note:

1. Figures relate to pupils in nursery, primary, post primary and special schools only.
2. Figures for SEN pupils relate to those pupils at stage 1 to stage 5 on the Special Educational Needs Code of Practice.
3. Figures provided relate to the location of schools attended.

Speech Therapy

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many primary school pupils were referred for speech therapy in each of the past five years, broken down by postcode. [67183]

Angela E. Smith: DE does not hold information on the number of children of primary school age referred for Speech and Language Therapy (SLT) as the referral is the responsibility of General Practitioners, Community Paediatricians or other medical professionals, generally as a result of parental concerns. However, through the School Census, DE does collect details of the number of children in Primary Schools with a Statement of Special Educational Needs, where the Statement records their special educational needs as speech and language difficulties, although not by postcode. The total of such children in Northern Ireland at October 2005 was 1,145.

St. Patrick's Day

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much public funding was spent on the celebration of St. Patrick's Day in Northern Ireland. [67058]

Angela E. Smith: The Northern Ireland Office and the NI Departments do not hold records of all public funding spent specifically on the celebration of St. Patrick's Day in 2006. However, the Community Relations Unit in the Office of the First Minister and Deputy First Minister provides annual funding to each of the 26 District Councils through its District Councils Community Relations Programme. In the current year, eight of the Councils indicated in their claims that some of their funding was used for St. Patrick's Day events. This amounted to £85,466.

The Community Relations Unit also provides Grant in Aid to the Community Relations Council, which provided £5,000 to Armagh City Council towards the cost of St. Patrick's Day events.

In addition, the Northern Ireland Tourist Board (NITB) has committed to providing financial support of £30,000 per annum to an extended St. Patrick's Day/Week Festival in Down/Armagh area for 2006 and 2007. This funding is being provided through NITB's core budget and funds administered on behalf of the International Fund for Ireland.

Town Centre Retail Development

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps are being taken by the Planning Service in Northern Ireland to assist town centres to compete with out of town retail developments. [65877]

Angela E. Smith: The Planning Service will continue to seek to protect the vitality and viability of existing town centres in line with regional policy contained in Planning Policy Statement 5 "Retailing in Town Centres". The Department for Regional Development is currently reviewing this Policy Statement.

In relation to Belfast City Centre, the Department for Social Development published in April 2004 a Regeneration Policy Statement (RPS) which sets out Government's objectives and approach to achieving the regeneration of Belfast City Centre by strengthening the City Centre as Northern Ireland's premier regional shopping destination. The RPS has facilitated the development of a major retail-led regeneration scheme at Victoria Square and plans for a further major retail-led scheme in the North East Quarter of the City Centre were announced on 28 March 2006.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Animal Procedures

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of the use of primates in scientific procedures; and if he will make a statement. [67705]

Andy Burnham: The Government's assessment of this important issue is that the responsible, limited use of non-human primates for experimental and other scientific purposes continues to play an essential part in producing new knowledge and insights that underpin advances in healthcare and bring other benefits not currently achievable by other means. There is in our view no immediate prospect of an end to this use whilst the benefits to humans, animals and the environment outweigh the costs to the animals involved and until there are suitable alternatives available.

At the same time, the Government remains committed to ensuring that non-human primates are only used where it is considered fully justified and to ensuring that the highest standards of animal welfare are applied. In recognition of this, primates are given special protection under the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act1986 and may only be used where no other species is suitable, when the likely welfare cost to them has been carefully weighed against the expected benefits of the research, and when everything possible has been done to minimise their numbers and suffering.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many visitors to the UK travelling on visas issued in Amman, Jordan, have applied for asylum following arrival in the UK, in each of the last five years; what their country of origin was; and if he will make a statement. [67394]

Mr. McNulty: Information on how many visitors to the UK travelling on visa issued in Amman (Jordan) have applied for asylum following arrival in the UK is not available.

Information on the asylum applications by nationality is published quarterly and annually. Copies are available from the Libraries of the House.

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum seekers from Iraq have had support withdrawn by the National Asylum Support Service since the commencement of flights to Erbil airport returning failed asylum seekers to Iraq. [66518]

Mr. McNulty: Scheduled flights to Erbil commenced on 18 June 2005 and charter flights returning unsuccessful asylum seekers began on 16 August 2005 to Erbil and now also to Sulaymaniyah.

NASS has withdrawn section 95 support, under the Immigration and Asylum Act 1999, from 1,650 Iraqis since 18 June 2005, 1,207 since 16 August 2005. Section 95 support is withdrawn at the end of the asylum process and occasionally before the asylum claim has been determined, due to a breach in the conditions of support.

After the resumption of air services to Iraq, from one September 2005 the National Asylum Support Service has withdrawn support from 5,148 unsuccessful asylum seekers who were claiming support under section four of the same Act, as they were not fully satisfying the eligibility criteria, for example by not taking reasonable steps to leave the United Kingdom.

A discontinuation of section 95 support can lead to a successful application for section four support as an unsuccessful asylum seeker. This, in turn, will lead to another withdrawal of support, as section four is designed to be limited and temporary in nature. There will be individuals who have had a withdrawal of both types of support during this period and in the figures above.

Cannabis

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many arrests have been made for possession of cannabis in each of the last 10 years in (a) Romford, (b) Havering, (c) Greater London and (d) England and Wales. [63019]

Hazel Blears: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Charities Bill

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the evidential basis is for the statement by Lord Bassam of Brighton in the House of Lords on 28 June 2005, Official Report, column 231, that there has been a fair measure of agreement on the thresholds in the Charities Bill, with particular reference to the charge for charities to register with the Charity Commission. [66891]

Paul Goggins [holding answer 2 May 2006]: The Joint Committee on the draft Charities Bill, in commenting on the evidence submitted to it, said (at paragraph 113 of Volume 1 of its Report):

"The majority of evidence supported the proposal to raise the threshold for registration to £5,000."

The Joint Committee made no recommendation for any change to the proposed £5,000 threshold.

Charity Commission

Helen Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many schools the Charity Commission has (a) reprimanded and (b) closed for inadequate performance in the last five years. [67333]

Paul Goggins: The Charity Commission has not closed any charitable schools in the last five years for inadequate performance and neither is it competent to do so. The Commission is concerned with the governors' compliance with their legal obligations in exercising control and management of the school under charity law. It is not competent to judge the quality and standard of education and care. The Commission has made recommendations on relevant matters to school governors in the course of visits it has undertaken to schools and has taken other action to secure compliance with governors' duty to provide the Commission with their annual accounts in appropriate cases.

Helen Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many schools Charity Commission staff visited in the last 12 months. [67334]

Paul Goggins: Charity Commission staff have visited nine charitable schools in the past 12 months as part of the Commission's structured visits programme. The Commission does not keep information on the number of visits that it undertakes in the course of its general regulatory case work but it estimates that it has made about four such visits to schools.

Crime Reduction (Hillingdon)

Mr. Hurd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the (a) agencies and (b) partnerships responsible for the reduction of crime in (i) Ruislip-Northwood constituency and (ii) the London Borough of Hillingdon. [40246]

Hazel Blears: There are two partnership groups within the Ruislip-Northwood constituency boundary which have some responsibility for crime reduction:

1. The Anti-Social Behaviour Reduction Forum covers the Ruislip-Northwood constituency including the Ickenham Ward in the Uxbridge constituency;

2. The Hillingdon Community and Police Consultative Group has a number of local Community and Police Liaison Groups and the following cover the Ruislip-Northwood constituency: Eastcote and East Ruislip; Harefield; Northwood; Ruislip and Ickenham.

There are two partnerships responsible for crime reduction across the borough of Hillingdon:

1. The Hillingdon Community Safety and Drug Strategic Partnership is the primary partnership body responsible for crime reduction in the borough.

2. There is a separate Hillingdon Criminal Justice Board, which includes the Crown Prosecution Service, the Police, Probation Service and the magistrates' court and deals with operational issues within the judicial system.

Criminal Convictions

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many persons aged (a) 11 to 15, (b) 16, (c) 17 and (d) 18 years were (i) prosecuted for and (ii) convicted of a criminal offence in (A) Southend-on-Sea, (B) Essex, (C) the Metropolitan Police area of London and (D) England and Wales in each year since 1990. [64705]

Fiona Mactaggart: Data from the Court Proceedings database held by the Office for Criminal Justice Reform on the number of persons aged (a) 11 to 15, (b) 16, (c) 17 and (d) 18 years proceeded against at the magistrates' courts for all offences, in (A) Southend-on-Sea, (B) Essex, (C) the Metropolitan Police area of London and (D) England and Wales, 1990–2004 are contained in the following table.

Statistics for 2005 court proceedings will be available in the autumn of 2006.

Number of persons prosecuted at magistrates court and found guilty at all courts, for all offences[1] by age group breakdown, in (a) Southend-on-Sea (South East Essex)[2], (b) Essex, (c) Metropolitan Police area, (d) England and Wales, 1990 to 2004

Departmental Policies

Emily Thornberry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will set out, with statistical information relating as directly as possible to Islington South and Finsbury constituency, the effects on Islington South and Finsbury of his Department's policies and actions since 2 May 1997. [60733]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Government have put into place policies in the areas of crime reduction, antisocial behaviour, policing and active communities that are yielding considerable benefits for the constituency.

Between March 1997 and March 2005 the number of police officers in the Metropolitan Police area increased by 4,396 from 26,677 to 31,073. The Government's introduction of community support officers (CSOs) in 2002 has put 2,053 CSOs on the streets in the Metropolitan Police Service area to tackle crime and antisocial behaviour. Metropolitan Police will receive £1,818 million in general grants for 2006–07, an increase of 3.1 per cent. (£54.7 million) over the comparable figure for 2005–06. General grants funding to Metropolitan Police has increased by 20.8 per cent. between 1997–98 and 2006–7 (Figures are not directly comparable, due to boundary changes, adjustments to pay centrally for NCS and NCIS, and the transfer of pensions and security funding from general grant to specific in 2006–07. All have reduced general grant for Metropolitan Police Authority compared with 1997). In addition to general grants, Metropolitan Police will also receive an estimated £394.5 million in specific grants funding for targeted initiatives and capital provision in 2006–07. The Metropolitan also gains £5.3 million from the amending reports for 2004–05 and 2005–06. The distribution of resources locally is a matter for the Police Authority and the Chief Officer.

The Crime Reduction programme (CRP) was a £340 million intervention programme running for three years from April 1999. Figures are not available for constituency or local level.

In Islington a total of 20 Antisocial Behaviour Orders (ASBOs) have been issued (The latest figures available).

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will set out with statistical evidence relating as closely as possible to West Lancashire constituency the effects in West Lancashire of changes to his Department's policies since 1997. [64237]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Government have put into place policies in the areas of crime reduction, antisocial behaviour, policing and active communities that are yielding considerable benefits for the constituency.

Between March 1997 and March 2005 the number of police officers in the Lancashire Police area increased by 339 from 3,247 to 3,586. The Government's introduction of Community Support Officers (CSOs) in 2002 has put 159 CSOs on the streets in the Lancashire Police Service area to tackle crime and antisocial behaviour.

Lancashire Police will receive £187 million in general grants for 2006–07, an increase of 3.1 per cent. (£5.6 million) over the comparable figure for 2005–06. General grants funding to Lancashire police has increased by 27.3 per cent. between 1997–98 and 2006–07. (Figures are not directly comparable, as adjustments to pay for NCS and NCIS centrally, and the transfer of pensions and security funding from general grant to specific in 2006–07 have reduced General Grant for Lancashire Police Authority compared with 1997). In addition to general grants, Lancashire police will also receive an estimated £33.8 million in specific grants funding for targeted initiatives and capital provision in 2006–07. Lancashire will also gain £0.6 million from the Amending Reports for 2004–05 and 2005–06. The distribution of resources locally is a matter for the Police Authority and the Chief Constable.

The Crime Reduction Programme (CRP) was a £340 million intervention programme running for three years from April 1999.

Figures are not available for constituency or local level. In West Lancashire a total of 14 antisocial behaviour orders (ASBOs) have been issued. (The latest figures available).

Departmental Expenditure

Mrs. Villiers: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much was spent by his Department on refreshments in each year since 1997. [41248]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Costs for refreshments and working lunches are combined and the total since 1997 is provided in the following table. Refreshments and working lunches are offered as courtesy to visitors or to facilitate the efficient management of meetings. The rise in expenditure reflects an increase in training courses and implementation of new policies and systems. Overall expenditure for 1998 was artificially reduced by a one-off VAT credit.

	Working lunches
1997	346,685
1998	92,916
1999	457,147
2000	511,610
2001	572,279
2002	727,354
2003	1,330,997
2004	1,047,330

Departmental Fuel Efficiency

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps have been taken in the last 12 months to make his Department more fuel efficient. [67454]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Home Office is committed to achieving the Framework for Sustainable Development on the Government Estate energy targets; namely to reduce absolute carbon, from fuel and electricity used in buildings on our estate, by 12.5 per cent. by 2010–11, relative to 1999–2000 and to increase the energy efficiency of the buildings on our estate, measured in terms of kWh of fuel and electricity use per square metre of buildings floor area by 15 per cent. over the same period. To meet these targets the Department is benchmarking key office sites to identify those buildings which are high energy users.

The contract at our London HQ building at 2 Marsham street requires our PFI partner to operate the building at 10 per cent. below the best practice benchmark contained in the Government's Energy Efficiency Best Practice Programme Energy Use in Offices Guide.

In 2005–06 the Prison Service funded a number of energy saving projects with a total value of £512,760. Work included extension of building management systems at the following establishments; Askham Grange, Belmarsh, Castington, Coldingley, Lewes and Preston. Automatic lighting controls were installed at Belmarsh, Brockhill, Cardiff, Hewell Grange, Parkhurst and Swansea.

A number of business groups on the core office estate have undertaken awareness raising programmes on energy conservation and improving energy efficiency. Specific actions have been taken by local property centre managers including replacement of lighting with energy efficient bulbs in large office buildings; reducing the number of lighting units required; and requiring security personnel to ensure lights are switched off when they conduct their evening patrols.

Overall, the Department has achieved an 11 per cent. reduction in total energy consumption since the baseline year.

Departmental Tendering Policy

Martin Horwood: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what his policy is on including (a) ethical and (b) environmental factors in tenders for services. [33334]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Home Office expects to let all its contracts in accordance with ethical principles and would consider any case where evidence to the contrary was presented. There is published internal guidance on principles of ethical behaviour in procurement, which all staff engaged in tendering for services and other contracts must follow.

Under EU procurement rules there is scope to incorporate requirements covering sustainable development and environmental factors, such as Green production methods, into specifications. Award criteria may include environmental characteristics if linked to the subject matter of the contract.

In contracts let by the Department, environmental factors are considered on a case by case basis relative to the subject matter of the contract, and the requirements of EU law. The Department will consider the use of the "Sustainable Procurement Toolkit" due to be issued by DEFRA which will aid the consideration of environmental factors in public sector tenders for services.

Departmental Vehicles

Mrs. Villiers: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many cars are (a) owned and (b) leased by his Department; what models the cars are; what type of petrol each model requires; and what the fuel efficiency is of each model. [41357]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The total number of cars owned or leased by the Department as at the end of February 2006 was:

	Total owned	Total leased
Diesel	384	39
Petrol	2	4
MPG range	22–59	8–54.30

Full details of make, model and fuel efficiency are shown in the following table.

DNA Databases

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the likelihood of chance matches of DNA samples from degraded or limited samples; and if he will make a statement. [63146]

Andy Burnham: The National DNA Database (NDNAD) currently uses SGM Plus profiling technology which tests for 10 areas of DNA (known as short tandem repeats or STRS) at each of which there are two markers (i.e. a total of 20 markers). The Government have every confidence in the SGM Plus profiling system but recognises that it should keep its reliability and level of discrimination under review.

The NDNAD contains the profiles of over 3 million individuals. We are not aware of any chance match between two full SGM Plus profiles for unrelated individuals having been obtained to date. However, as the size of the NDNAD grows and as more international comparisons are made with other countries' DNA profiles, the probability, although remaining very small, will increase.

Subject samples taken from persons on arrest are very unlikely to be degraded or limited in quantity. The probability of a chance match between full SGM Plus profiles from samples from two unrelated subjects is less than one in a thousand million. If the subjects are related, the likelihood of a match by chance is higher; for siblings it is of the order of one in 10,000.

Approximately half of all crime scene samples yield a partial profile i.e. a profile with less than 10 STR areas. This is because the DNA collected at crime scenes is either limited in quantity or degraded. Developments in DNA technology now allow DNA profiles to be obtained from small amounts of DNA although these may often prove to be partial profiles. The probability of a chance match of a partial crime scene sample profile with a profile from someone other than the true offender will vary, depending on how many markers are present in the partial crime scene profile and whether the innocent person involved in the chance match is related to the offender.

Recent research studies by the European DNA Profiling Group (EDNAP) and the European Network of Forensic Science Institutes (ENFSI) have demonstrated that the success rate for analysis of degraded samples (which yield partial profiles) improved by using recently developed tests for markers based on shorter lengths of DNA (mini STRs).

The international scientific community have agreed that the best way forward would be to develop a new test system using 13 or 16 STR areas, including some mini STRs. This would also need to take account of the divergent requirements of the different European countries. The time scale for the development and introduction of a new test system would be a commercial decision by the companies that make the new test system and it is estimated that this development could take around two years. Home Office officials are actively involved in taking forward this work which will help in obtaining fuller profiles from limited or degraded samples, hence reducing the probability of chance matches occurring.

Drug Users (Illegal Income)

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the average annual illegal income of arrested (a) heroin and (b) crack users. [47717]

Mr. Charles Clarke: We do not have the information requested.

However some information on illegal income among arrested drug users in a sample of 16 custody suites is provided in research published by the Home Office in 2004 from the New English and Welsh Arrestee Drug Abuse Monitoring Programme (NEW ADAM). The report of the survey is available on the Home Office website (http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/pdfs04/rdsolr1904.pdf)

Easter Celebrations

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the cost was of Easter celebrations in prisons in England and Wales in 2006. [67099]

Fiona Mactaggart: The Prison Service—Public Sector Prisons—does not routinely capture the costs of celebrating religious festivals. An answer to this question could be obtained only at a disproportionate cost.

Equal Pay

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps are taken to ensure that women in his Department receive equal pay for work of equal value. [65711]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Home Office has since 2003 undertaken regular equal pay audits of its pay systems. These audits are undertaken on an annual basis following the implementation of pay awards. In addition, a more comprehensive equality proofing exercise of reward policies and practices are undertaken every three years. The findings of the equal pay audits and equality proofing exercises are shared with employee representatives. Where there are any equal pay concerns or issues, these are addressed through an equal action plan which in turn provides a direct input into the normal pay determination process with employee representatives.

EU Nationals

Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the number of nationals of the new EU member states who (a) have worked in the UK since 1 May 2004 for periods of less than 28 days and (b) have spent some time working in the UK since 1 May 2004 and have subsequently left the UK; and if he will make a statement. [67113]

Mr. McNulty: All European economic area (EEA) nationals have a right of free movement and residence in the United Kingdom. Accession state nationals are not subject to immigration control, and if they are working for less than 30 days, have no requirement to register with the workers registration scheme (WRS). As such there are no reliable estimates of the numbers of accession state nationals who have worked for less than 28 days.

The WRS does not measure net migration (inflows minus outflows). Rather, it gives gross figures for the number of workers applying to the scheme. An individual who has registered to work and who leaves employment is not required to de-register, so some of those counted will have left employment and some are likely to have left the UK.

Extradition Act

David Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether applications to extradite British citizens to the United States under the terms of the Extradition Act 2003 are required to be accompanied by prima facie evidence. [63193]

Andy Burnham: Under the Extradition Act 2003, and the Extradition Act 2003 (Designation of Part two Territories) Order 2003, extradition requests by the United States are not required to be accompanied by prima facie evidence. Instead, requests from the US are required to show information that would justify the issue of a warrant for the arrest of the person concerned. There is no distinction in the Extradition Act 2003 nor in its predecessor legislation between British citizens and those of other nationalities.

Family Deportations

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many families with children detained as a family unit in centres were removed from the UK (a) as a family unit and (b) with some family members on different flights in (i) 2005 and (ii) 2006; [66515]

(2) in how many cases where a family with children was detained some family members were removed from the UK and others remained in the UK in (a) 2005 and (b) 2006. [66516]

Mr. McNulty: IND does not have a central record of the number of people detained and removed from the UK as part of a family unit. However, given the sensitive nature of family cases, all family removals are handled carefully. Since 23 November 2005, the Immigration Service has sought ministerial authority on every case when the removal of a family or individuals would result in a family unit being separated. Since that date we have sought ministerial authority on five occasions.

Human Trafficking

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what resources of his Department have been allocated to combat human trafficking. [64050]

Paul Goggins: In March 2000 a multi-agency Government taskforce 'Reflex', chaired by the National Crime Squad, was set up to deal with organised immigration crime. Its remit is to co-ordinate the enforcement response to such issues, both nationally and internationally, and to develop the intelligence and strategic planning to underpin this. Reflex continues to receive an annual allocation of £20 million from the Home Office.

Also in March 2003 a Home Office-funded pilot scheme was launched in partnership with Eaves Housing for Women (the POPPY scheme) to provide safe accommodation and tailored one-to-one support for adult female victims who have been trafficked into the UK and into prostitution. The POPPY scheme was established as a small-scale pilot project and has recently been formally evaluated. On the basis of the positive evaluation findings, Ministers announced on 7 April 2006 additional funding of £2.4 million over two years to expand the excellent service provided through the POPPY scheme.

MI5 (Northern Ireland)

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many informers made redundant by the Police Service Northern Ireland since its creation have been recruited by MI5. [66523]

Mr. Charles Clarke: It is the longstanding policy of successive Governments not to comment on the operational activities of the Security Service.

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures are in place to ensure the sharing of information between MI5 and the Police Service Northern Ireland; and what recent steps he has taken to test these arrangements. [66528]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Information is routinely shared between the Security Service and Police Service Northern Ireland at all levels. The Secretary of State for Northern Ireland and I are satisfied that the information sharing arrangements work well and will continue to do so.

Nabeel Sami Fathallah

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much in benefits has been granted to Mr. Nabeel Sami Fathallah (HO Ref 10776940) since his arrival in the UK; and if he will make a statement. [67392]

Mr. McNulty: Information relating to an individual is not routinely disclosed.

Northamptonshire Police Force

Mr. Bone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will provide additional funding to bring the per capita spending for Northamptonshire police force up to the national average. [59190]

Hazel Blears: Government funding for police authorities is chiefly allocated using a funding formula that distributes resources on the basis of relative policing need. Damping is also applied to improve stability of funding by reducing year-on-year grant variations. Grant is not, and never has been, distributed purely on a per capita basis.

Northamptonshire police authority will receive its fair share of resources next year. Its 3.1 per cent. (+£2.1 million) increase in general grant is in line with the broadly flat rate increase of 3.1 per cent. for all police authorities in England and Wales. If the funding formula had been strictly applied, Northamptonshire would have received £0.8 million less. On top of general grant a range of other funding will also be available, including £1.9 million in special formula grant, a consolidation of four former specific grants that will enable the authority to operate more flexibly, and an estimated £7.7 million in specific grants and capital provision.

O'Connor Report

Mr. Gauke: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will establish a national policing agency dedicated to countering terrorism and domestic extremism to address the findings in these areas of the O'Connor report. [40966]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Regional and national CT structures are already in place. The Association of Chief Police Officers' Committee on Terrorism and Allied Matters sets policy and strategic direction for counter-terrorism policing at a national level. Police counter-terrorist efforts are co-ordinated regionally and nationally through the regional intelligence cells, the work of the national co-ordinator of special branch and the national co-ordinator of terrorist investigations while ensuring that force special branches maintain the essential link to local policing and local communities. The Metropolitan Police Service has national counter-terrorism responsibilities including a number of specialist units which provide support to forces. As with other aspects of policing, these structures are kept under constant review.

Omagh Bombing

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will seek the resignation of (a) the head of MI5 and (b) members of her staff in connection with the Omagh bombing. [67213]

Mr. Charles Clarke: No.

Operation Trident

Anne Main: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much has Operation Trident cost. [54473]

Hazel Blears: Expenditure allocated to specific enforcement operations in the Metropolitan Police Service is a matter for the Metropolitan Police Authority (MPA) and the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis.

The MPA will receive £1,818 million in general grant next year, an increase of 3.1 per cent. (£54.7 million) over the comparable figure for 2005–06. This is in line with the broadly flat rate increase of 3.1 per cent. for all police authorities in England and Wales. The MPA also gains £5.3 million from amending reports for 2004–05 and 2005–06 bringing the overall increase in general grant in 2006–07 to 3.4 per cent. In addition to this, it will receive £54.7 million in special formula grant, a consolidation of four former specific grants, as well as a range of other funding in specific grants, capital provision and to tackle terrorism.

Passports

Mr. Alan Reid: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to provide premises in Argyll and Bute, which first time passport applicants can attend for their interview. [68084]

Andy Burnham: I have placed a document in the Library setting out the planned provision for such interviews throughout the United Kingdom.

John Penrose: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate his Department has made of the costs of replacing lost or damaged biometric chips in passports and ID cards; who will be responsible for these costs; and from what sources funding will be drawn. [66889]

Andy Burnham: The current policy for replacing lost or damaged passports is that the customer makes a fresh application and pays the full cost for renewing the passport unless the document was clearly faulty at issue, there are no plans to change this policy for biometric passports. Every biometric passport goes through a vigorous quality assurance process before issuing to the public which ensures the passport reaches the public in full working order. Broadly comparable arrangements will be put in place for identity cards in due course.

Police Restructuring

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much he has spent on consultants' fees in evaluating the costs of the reorganisation of police forces; and which consultants he has engaged for this work. [62490]

Hazel Blears: Consultants from a number of organisations have been employed to assist in the process of assessing the financial case for change, including:

Deloitte

Avail (Tribal Vale)

Ernst and Young

KPMG

Accenture

IBM

Mott MacDonald

Methods-Walker-Cox

Mentis

Due to the ongoing nature of this work, as some of the consultants are still working on this project, it would be premature to disclose costs at this stage.

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what role his Department will play in the appointment of members of the new merged Yorkshire police authority. [65791]

Mr. Charles Clarke: We envisage that any order made under section 32 of the Police Act 1996 amalgamating the Humberside, North Yorkshire, South Yorkshire and West Yorkshire police areas would provide for each of the four precursor police authorities to appoint a specified number of their members to be members of the combined police authority. As such, there would be no role for the Home Secretary. The precise terms of the order are the subject of ongoing discussions with the police authorities concerned. The making of such an order is subject to our consideration of any objections received in response to the notice given by the Home Secretary of his intention to amalgamate the four forces.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what mechanism the Government will adopt to equalise the council tax precepts in Wales to take into account the proposed merger of the four Welsh police forces. [60356]

Hazel Blears: The financial implications of amalgamating different levels of council tax precept remain under consideration. No final decisions have yet been taken.

Prisons

Dr. Vis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of which of the projected prison population scenarios outlined in Home Office Statistical Bulletin 10/05 is most likely to occur; and if he will make a statement. [67348]

Fiona Mactaggart: Figures for 10 scenarios can be found in Home Office Statistical Bulletin 10/05 "Updated and Revised Prison Population Projections, 2005–2011, England and Wales". Of the 10 published scenarios, scenario one has been the closest to the observed total prison population over the 11 months since the projections were made. NOMS and HMPS continually monitor the prison population against the projections. In the longer term, it is more difficult to predict which scenarios may be closer to actual prison populations.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the impact on the (a) mental and (b) physical health of prisoners of too few hours of purposeful activity and too many hours of incarceration in cells. [65614]

Fiona Mactaggart: The Prison Service makes every effort to ensure that as much purposeful activity as possible is available to prisoners and the additional workshops that are coming on stream in establishments are one example of increasing levels of activity hours available to prisoners.

Purposeful activity in prisons consists broadly of education, work and resettlement activity. Specific activities include basic skills and vocational education, workshop activity, tackling substance abuse, offending behaviour programmes and pre release training. These activities reflect the work that is taking place in establishments to rehabilitate prisoners and prepare them for release.

There is currently little information about the impact of imprisonment on people with mental health problems. The National Forensic Mental Health R&D Programme is currently funding a research project on factors mediating the effect of prison on mental health. This is due for completion in summer 2008. Further details are available on the programme's website at http://www.nfmhp.org.uk.

On physical health, the National Audit Office (NAO) report Serving Time: Prisoner Diet and exercise (HC 939) found that prisons met their statutory obligations to provide opportunities for exercise, and that prisoners' average level of physical exercise is close to the number of hours recommended by the Chief Medical Officer. A copy of the report is available in the Library, and on the NAO website at http://www.nao.org.uk/publications/nao_reports/05-06/0506939.pdf.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the (a) running costs of each establishment in the Prison Service and (b) average number of people held at that establishment (i) was in 2005–06 and (ii) is expected to be in 2006–07. [66885]

Fiona Mactaggart: The average population and respective provisional resource costs for prisons in England and Wales in 2005–06 is shown in the following table. Final figures will be included in the Prison Service annual report and accounts which will be published in July 2006. The Prison Service is unable to give an indication of costs for 2006–07 at this stage. Costs for contracted prisons are commercial in confidence and therefore not included.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the (a) availability and (b) take-up of correspondence courses in prisons in the last 12 months. [66565]

Phil Hope: I have been asked to reply.

This information is not collected centrally. However, the existing prison service and the new Learning and Skills Council development regions do fund distance learning as part of the existing funding arrangements and the "learning journey" for offenders—as appropriate to individuals' needs.

Mr. Wills: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what percentage of prisoners' time in prison was spent on education and training in the last period for which figures are available; [66923]

(2) what methodology is used to calculate the percentage of prisoners' time in prison spent on education and training. [66924]

Fiona Mactaggart: Data in the specific format requested are not available. The proportion of prisoner time undertaking education and training compared with overall purposeful activity is therefore given. According to provisional data for 2005–06, prisoners spent 25.2 hours per prisoner per week undertaking purposeful activity. Time spent in education and training was 5.1 hours per prisoner per week representing 20.1 per cent. of the total purposeful hours.

Data relating to purposeful activity is reported on a weekly basis. The weekly purposeful hours figure is based on the total hours prisoners have spent undertaking each of the 30 activities listed as purposeful divided by the average prisoner population and converting to a weekly average. Education and training hours are calculated in the same way based on five education and training activities.

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the total cost to public funds was of anger management courses offered to prisoners in the prison service in the last 12 months; and what recent assessment has been made of the efficacy of such courses; and if he will make a statement. [67503]

Fiona Mactaggart: Accredited anger management programmes delivered in prison cost about £1.75 million a year. Other anger management work is undertaken locally for which the costs are not available.

There has been one evaluation in England and several evaluations internationally examining the efficacy of anger management programmes for offenders. International and UK evidence shows promising but inconclusive results (due to the limited quality of research design) in terms of reducing recidivism.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the prisons which the Prison Inspectorate judged as good overall in the provision of education in the last 12 months. [66567]

Phil Hope: I have been asked to reply.

Of the 14 prisons that have been inspected since April 2005, and who have had an inspection report published by the Adult Learning Inspectorate, one prison, HMP and YOI Usk and Prescoed, has been given an overall effectiveness grade of 'good' for its education provision.

Mr. Pelling: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the rates are for telephone calls made by prisoners in each prison. [64170]

Fiona Mactaggart: The national call rates for British Telecommunications and Global Communications and Consultancy Ltd are identical at 11 pence per minute. Tables detailing international call rates have been placed in the House Library.

Safe Countries

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many countries of the world he has judged to be sufficiently under the rule of law to offer no threat of torture or abuse to their nationals. [67462]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Secretary of State for the Home Department does not make assessments about whether foreign countries are sufficiently under the rule of law to offer no threat of torture or abuse to their nationals. As is the case with other Departments, when the Home Department interacts with foreign countries on issues relating to torture and the abuse of their nationals, it proceeds on the basis of case-specific assessments.

Special Branch

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 6 February 2006, Official Report, columns 954–55W, on special branch, whether the special branch national training unit referred to in the Special Branch Summary of Responsibilities document of August 2004 has been disbanded. [50212]

Hazel Blears: The special branch national training unit has not been disbanded. It is based in the Metropolitan Police Service and provides three national special branch training courses: special branch initial training, the special branch ports course and a course for heads of special branch. In addition, it provides a range of more detailed and specific courses for the Metropolitan police special branch.

Terrorism

Patrick Mercer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people in the UK are suspected of having attended jihadist terrorist training camps abroad. [66871]

Mr. Charles Clarke: It is not our policy to comment on operational and intelligence matters.

Travellers

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on law enforcement in Travellers' camps. [33869]

Hazel Blears: Equal standards of behaviour are expected from both the settled community and the Gypsy and Traveller community, and the police are responsible for the investigation of crime and antisocial behaviour wherever this occurs. The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister and the Home Office have jointly published several documents which deal with enforcement against Gypsy and Traveller sites, and a specific document addressing antisocial behaviour will be issued later this year.

Young Offenders

Dr. Vis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the reasons are for the change in the cost of a place in Ashfield young offenders institution between 2003–04 and 2004–05. [67347]

Fiona Mactaggart: When HMYOI Ashfield opened in 1999 it held both young offenders and juveniles. In February 2004 the establishment was re-roled to hold juveniles only. The increased cost per place since that time is a reflection of the more intensive regime and level of intervention that juveniles receive.
